2005. Milk is a secretion in the female body, like other secretions, but more specialised. Is it not wonderful that the same food, eaten by males and females, produces in the latter, when they have young, the wholesome and complete food, known as milk? Then, when cattle are tamed and specially bred for milk, the supply of milk is vastly greater than is necessary for their young and lasts for a longer time than during the period they give suck to their young. And it is a wholesome and agrecable diet for man. It is pure, as typified by its whiteness. Yet'lt is a secretion the when the excretions which the body rejects as worthless and the precious blood-stream which circulates within the body and is the symbol of life itself to the animal which produces it.

2096. There are wholesome drinks and foods that can be got out of the date-palm and the vine:

expensive form-alcoholo drinks from the date and the grape, vinegar, date-sugar, grape-sugar, and dates and grapes themselves for eating. If saker must be taken in the sense of fermented wine, it refers to the time before intoxicants were prohibited: this is a Meccan SPra and the prohibition came in Mediua.

- 68. And thy Lord taught the Bee 2007
  To build its cells in hills,
  On trees, and in (men's) habitations;
- 69. Then to eat of all
  The produce (of the earth), we had find with skill the spacious can paths of its Lord: there issues
  From within their bodies
  A drink of varying colours,
  Wherein is healing for men:
  Verily in this is a Sign
  For those who give thought.
- 70. It is God Who creates you And takes your souls at death; And of you there are Some who are sent back To a feeble age, so that "" They know nothing after Having known (much): For God is All-Knowing, " All-Puerful.

2097. Auhā: ucakyun ordinarily means inspiration, the Message put into the mind or heart by God. Here the Bee's instinct is referred to God's teaching, which it undoubtedly is. In xcix, 5, it is applied to the earth: we shall discuss the precise meaning when we come to that passage. The honey-comb, itself, with its hexagonal cells, geometrically perfect, is a wonderful structure, and is well called buyst, homes. And the way the bee finds out inaccessible places, in the hills, in the trees, and even among the habitations of men, is one of the marvels of nature, ie, of God's working in His Creation.

2008. The bee assimilates the juice of various kinds of flowers and fruit, and forms within its body the honey which it stores in its cells of wax. The different kinds of food from which it makes its honey give different colours to the honey; e.g., the stark-brown, light-brown, yellow, white, and so on. The taste and flavour also varies, as in the case of heather honey, the honey formed from scented flowers, and so on. As food it is sweet and wholesome, and it is used in medicine. Note that while the instinctive individual acts are described in the singular number, the produce of "their bodies" is described in the junual, as the result of their collective effort.

2009. §ululus: two meanings are possible: (1) ways easy and spacious, referring to the unering way in which bees find their way from long distances to their combs; and (2) the idea of humility and obedience in them. From both we can derive a metaphorical and spiritual meaning.

2100. Besides the mystery and beauty of the many processes going on in the working of God's Creation, there is the wonderful life of man himself on this earth: how he is created as a child; how he grows in intelligence. and knowledge; and how his soul, is taken back and his body suffers dissolution. In some cases he lives so long that he falls into a feeble old age like a second child-hood: he forgets what he learnt and seems almost to go back in Time. Is not all this wonderful, and evidence of the Knowledge and Power of God?

2101. Our attention having been called to the remarkable transformations in life and nature, by which the Knowledge and Power of God work our His beneficent Plan for His creatures, we are reminded that man at best is but a feeble creature, but for the grace of God. We then pass on in the next Section to the differences in the gifts which men themselves enjoy, distinguishing them into so many categories. How much greater is the difference between the created things and their Creator?

SECTION 10

  Of sustenance more freely on some

- And worship others than God,— Such as have no power Of providing them, for sustenance. **God

۞ وَاللَّهُ فَضَلَ الْمِصْتَكُمْ عَلَىٰ بَعْضِ فِي الزِزْقِ فَمَا الْذِيرَ فَضِلْوا بِرَاْقِي رِذْفِرْمُ عَلَامًا مَلَكَثْ أَيْنَهُ مُنْفُوْفِهِ بِسَوَاةً أَفْهِيْفَمَةُ اللَّهِ يَجْمُدُونَ

۞وَيَمْبُدُونَ مِن دُونِ اللّهِ مَا لَا يَمَلِكُ لَمَـُمْ رِنْدَةًا

2102. Even in the little differences in gifts, which men enjoy from God, men with superior gifts are not going to abandon them so as to be equal with men of inferior gifts, whom, perhaps, they hold in subjection. They will never deay then own supernority. How then (as the argument is pursued in the two following verses), can they ignore the immense difference between the Creator and created things, and make the latter, in their thoughts, partners with God!

2100. Of your nature; or of yourselves. Cf, iv. 1 and n. 504. Self, or Personality, or Soul, all imply a bundle of attributes, capacities, predicticitions, and dispositions, which we may sum up in the word Nofs, or nature. Woman was made to be [1] a mate or companion for man; (2) except for sex, of the same nature as man, and therefore, with the same moral and religious rights and utiles; and (3) she is not to be considered a source of all evil or sin, as the Christian monks characerised her but rather as a blessing, one of the favours (Xi mat) of God.

2104. Hafadat: collective, plural, daughters, grandchildren, and descendants. The root hafada also implies obedient service and ministration. Just as the sons (first mentioned) should be a source of strength, so daughters and grandchildren should serve and contribute to the happiness of fathers and grandparents, and are to be looked upon as further blessings.

2105. "Sustenance" (freq) in all this passage (xvi. 65-44), as elsewhere, implies all that is necessary for man's file and growth, physical, mental, moral, and spiritual. Milk, fruit, and honey are examples of physical grits, with a metaphonical reference to mental and moral health; family life is an example of moral and social and fullimately) spiritual opportunities in the life of man; and in xvi 65 is an example of fram in the physical world as a type of God's revelation in the spiritual world.

2106. Cf. xvi 60 above, and n 2086. One instance of false similitudes is where Pagans say their gods are mere types or symbols, or where men pray to men as Intercessors.

2109. The gist of the argument is that those who deviate from the worship of the true God commit twofold treason. (1) They do not recognise the immense difference between the Creator and created things, although, in their own little selfsh lives, they are tenacious of any little differences there may be between themselves and other fellow-creatures not so gifted. (2) They are guilty of gross ingratitude in forgetting that the source of all goodness and power is God, to Whom alone they owe all the glifts they enjoy in life.

2110. The key to all things—not only those which we see and understand, but those which we do not see or of which we have no idea—is with God, Whose knowledge and power are supreme.

2111. We must not imagine the Day (or Hour or Moment) of Judgment like a prolonged trial in an open court. It is independent of Time. Even "the twinkling of an eye" is not an adequate figure of speech.

2112. Literally, 'hearts,' which are considered the centres of the affections, and in Arabic idiom, of intelligence also We should therefore give thanks to God, not to imaginary detites or powers or forces.

2113. All the wonderful things in creation are due to the artistry, power, and wisdom of God. Such is the flight of birds in mid-sir. So also are the inventions and discoveries, due to man's intelligence, in the next verse; for man's intelligence is a gril direct from God. 80. It is God Who made your

- 2114. Man's social, intellectual, and spiritual gifts make, of his permanent dwellings, homes of rest and quiet, of refinement and the purer affections, which are the types, in this earthly life, of the highest spiritual Good, the love of God. The pure Home thus becomes the type of the highest sorticual Destiny of man. And these canacities in man are the gifts of God.
- 2115. When man travels, he wants temporary dwellings, tents, which he can make of the skins of animals, or of the fabrics of vegetable fibres, similar to the skins of animals. These tents are easy to carry when moving, and easy to pitch during halts.

2116. Sūf, wool, is what we get from sheep. Sha'r, hair, is what we get from goats or similar animals, for weaving into fabrics. Wabar is the soft camel's hair of which, also, fabrics are woven; they may be considered intermediate between the other two: by extension and analogy the term may be apolied to furs and such things, by way of illustration.

- 2117. All such articles of refined luxury, and useful articles of comfort and convenience only last for a while, but they must be considered as God's gifts.
- 2118. For example, trees, gardens, the roofs of houses; also from another point of view, the fact that sun's rays at various times and in various parts of the earth, come obliquely, thus causing shadow along with sunshime. In the hills there are caves and grottoes.
- 2119. Our clothes protect us from heat and cold, just as our armour protects us from the hust which we might otherwise receive in battle.
- 2120. All these blessings, which have both a physical and (by promoting the good of man) a spiritual purpose, should teach us to rally to God and tune our will with His Universal Will, which is another name for Islam.

- 82. But if they turn away. Thy duty is only to preach The Clear Message.
- 83. They recognise the favours sist Of God; then they deny them; And most of them Are (creatures) ungrateful.

C. 126 .- God's apostles, if rejected, will be witnesses (xvi. 84-100.) Against those who reject God's Truthl And all false gods will disappear. A life of justice and righteousness is enjoined By God, and the strictest fidelity, in intent And action. For God will judge us By our faith and deeds, and no evil Shall have power over those who believe And put their trust in God their Lord.

SECTION 12.

- 84. One Day We shall raise From all Peoples a Witness: 8188 Then will no excuse be accepted From Unbelievers, nor will they Receive any favours.
- 85. When the wrong-doers (Actually) see the Penalty, 9125 Then will it in no way Be mitigated, nor will they Then receive respite.
- 86. When those who gave partners To God will see their "partners".

2121. 'Arafa is distinguished from 'alima in implying a specific discernment (or recognition) of various qualities and uses. All mankind recognises the value of the blessings they enjoy, but in forgetting or disobeying their Author, the wicked show gross ingratitude; for in practice they deny their obligation to Him for those blessings,

2122. To each People is sent God's Messenger or Teacher, to point out the right way. There may be one, or there may be many. Such a Messenger (Rasul) will be a witness that God's Truth was preached to all peoples in express terms, in addition to the Signs of God everywhere in nature. There will then be no room for excuses of any kind. Those who rejected God after repeated warnings cannot reasonably ask for more respite, as they have had every kind of respite during their life of probation; nor can they now take refuge behind God's Grace, which they had repeatedly

2123. When the terriple Penalty is actually on them, it is too late for repentance and for asking for Mercy. Justice must take its course

They will say: "Our Lord!
These are our 'partners,' those Whom we used to invoke sai
Besides Thee." But they will Throw back their word at them
(And say): "Indeed ye are liars!"

90. God commands justice, the doing Of good, and liberality to kith

2124. The worshippers of false gods will try to shift the responsibility from their own shoulders to that of the false gods. They will suggest (though they will not have the courage for such a bare-faced liet that they were misled by the false gods. But their fying suggestion will be contradicted and thrown back at them as explained in the next note.

2125. In so far as the false gods were real things, such as desfied then or forces of nature, they will openly disclaim them and then (as always) show their submission to God. In so far as the false gods were the inventions of the fancy of the idolaters, they will be shown as non-existent.

2126. To the thought expressed in xvi 84 above, is added another detail here. Not only will there be witnesses from Peoples, but the witnesses will be men from amongst the Peoples themselves, men of their own kith and kin, who understood them and explained God's Message in their own language. The Apositle Muhammad will be witness against the Araba who rejected him. For those who believe in him (of all races and peoples), the Book which he brought will be an Explanation, a Guide, a Mercy and a Gospel.

And kin, and He forbids All shameful deeds, and injustice And rebellion: He instructs you, That ye may receive admonition.

- 91. Fulfil the Covenant of God When ye have entered into it. And break not your oaths After ve have confirmed them; Indeed ve have made 1138 God your surety; for God Knoweth all that ve do.
- 92. And be not like a woman Who breaks into untwisted strands The varn which she has spun, After it has become strong. 2120 Nor $180 take your oaths to practise Deception between yourselves, Lest one party should be More numerous than another : 451 For God will test you by this; And on the Day of Judgment

2127. Justice is a comprehensive term, and may include all the virtues of cold philosophy. But religion asks for something warmer and more human, the doing of good deeds even where perhaps they are not strictly demanded by justice, such as returning good for ill, or obliging those who in worldly language "have no claim" on you; and of course à fortions the fulfilling of the claims of those whose claims are recognised in social life. Similarly the opposites are to be avoided everything that is recognised as shameful, and everything that is really unjust, and any inward rebellion against God's Law or our own conscience in its most sensitive form

2128. The immediate reference may or may not be to the oath of fidelity to the Prophet taken at 'Aqaba fourteen months before the Hijra and repeated a little later; see v 8, and n. 705. But the general meaning is much wider. And this may be viewed in two aspects (1) Every oath taken, or covenant made, is a Covenant before God, and should be faithfully observed. In this it approaches in meaning to v. 1. (2) In particular, every Muslim makes, by the profession, of his Faith, a Covenant with God, and he confirms that Covenant every time he repeats that profession. He should therefore faithfully observe the duties taught to him by Islam.

2129. The Covenant which binds us in the spiritual world makes us strong, like strands of fluffy cotton spun into a strong thread. It also gives us a sense of security against much evil in this world, It costs a woman much labour and skill to spin good strong yarn. She would be foolish indeed, after she has spun such yarn, to untwist its constituent strands and break them into filmsy

2130. Nor: I construe tattabhizana with la takana in the previous clause.

<sup>2133.</sup> Cf xiv.4 and n. 1875. God's Will and Plan, in allowing limited free-will to man, is, not to force man's will, but to give all guidance, and leave alone those who reject that guidance, in case they should repent and come back into Grace. But in all cases, in so far as we are given the choice, we shall be called to acrount for all our actions. "Leaving to stray" does not mean that we can do what we please. Our personal responsibility remains.

<sup>2135.</sup> Any possible gain that you can make by breaking your Covenant and thus breaking God's Law must necessarily be miserable; while your own benefit is far greater in obeying God's Will and doing right.

C. 127.—God's Truth may come in stages, but it gives (xvi. 101-128.) Strength, guidance, and glad tidings, and should Be held fast when once received. Be not Like those who get puffed up with pride

2136. What comparison can there possibly be between spiritual Good, which will endure for ever, and any temporal advantage which you may snatch in this world, which will fade and vanish in no time? And then, God's generosity is unbounded. He rewards you, not according to the very best of your actions.

2137. Faith, if sincere, means right conduct. When these two confirm each other, God's grace transforms our life. Instead of being troubled and worried, we have peace and contentment: instead of being assailed at every turn by false alarms and the assaults of evil, we enjoy calm and attain purity. The transformation is visible in this life itself, but the "reward' in terms of the Hercafter will be far beyond our deserts.

2139. Evil has no authority or influence on those who put their trust in God. It is good to express that trust in outward actions, and a formal expression of it—as in the formula, "I seek God's protection from Evil"—helps us. Redailing or recting the Qurean should be understood both literally and figuratively, as the symbol of the earnest desire of the soul to know and understand God's Will and act in accordance therewith. Man is weak at best, and he should seek strength for his will in God's help and protection.

In worldly good, and scorn the Truth.
Enjoy the good things of life, but rerder
Tharks to God and obey His Law.
Be true in faith, and proclaim His Word
With gentle, patient wisdom: for God
Is with those who live in self-restraint
A pure, good, and righteous Life.

- 101. We hen We substitute one revelation was For another,—and God knows best What He reveals (in stages),—They say, "Thou art but a forger":

  But most of them understand not.
- 102. Say, the Holy Spirit 244 has brought
  The revelation from thy Lord
  In Truth, in order to strengthen
  Those who believe, 248 and as a Guide
  And Glad Tidings to Muslims.
- 103. We know indeed that they Say, "It is a man that Teaches him." The tongue Of him they wickedly point to Is notably foreign, while this Is Arabic, pure and clear.

وبسرى مسيوير ۞ وَلَقَدْ مَسَّمُ أَنَهُمْ يَقُولُونَ إِنِّسَا يُسِلُهُ بَسَرُ يُسَانُ الَّذِى لِمُدُونَ إِلَيْهِ أَغَينُ وَهُذَا لِسَانُ عَلَى * ثُنُّ مُنُ مِنْ

2140. See ii, 106, and n. 107. The doctrine of progressive revelation from age to age and time to time does not mean that God's fundamental Law changes. It is not fair to charge a man of God with forgery because the Message as revealed to him is in a different form from that revenled before, when the core of the Truth is the same, for it comes from God.

2141. The title of the Angel Gabriel, through whom the revelations came down.

214. The People of the Book, if they had true faith, were themselves strengthened in their faith and cleared of their doubts and difficulties by the revelations brought by Muşafa'; and all-whether People of the Book or not-who came within the fold of Islam, found the Quran a Guide and a Gospel, i.e., a substitute for the Mosaic Law and for the Christian Gospel, which had both been corrupted.

2143. The wicked attribute to men of God just such motives and springs of action as they themselves would be guilty of in such circumstances. The Pagais and those who were hostile to the revealation of God in Islam could not and cannot understand how such wonderful words could flow from the tongue of the Holy Prophet. They must needs postulate some human teacher, Unfortunately for their postulate, any possible human teacher they could think of would be poor in Arabic speech if he had all the knowledge that the Quran reveals of previous revelations. Apart from that, even the most eloquent Arab could not, and cannot, produce anything of the eloquence, width, and depth of Quranic teaching, as is evident from every verse of the Book.

- 104. Those who believe not In the Signs of God,— God will not guide them, And theirs will be A grievous Penalty.
- 105. It is those who believe not In the Signs of God, That forge falsehood: It is they who lie! 844

<sup>2144.</sup> It is clearly those who raise the cry of forgery that are guilty of falsehood, as there is not the least basis or even plausibility in their suggestion.

<sup>2145.</sup> The exception refers to a case like that of "Ammār, whose father Yāsir and mother Sumayya, were subjected to unspeakable tortures for their belief in Islam, but never recanted. "Ammār himself and his mind acted on by the suffering under tortures himself and his mind acted on by the sufferings of his parents, uttered a word construed as recentration, though his heart never wavered and he came back at once to the Prophet, who consoled him for his pain and confirmed his faith. There is no permission in this for weakness or dissembling under torture or persecution.

2148. When the Reckoning comes, each soul will stand on its own personal responsibility. No one else can help it. Full justice will be done, and all the seeming inequalities of this world will be redressed.

2149. The reference may be to any of the cities or populations in ancient or modern times, which were favoured with security and other blessings from God, but which rebelled from God's Law and tasted the inevitable penalty, even in the midst of their iniquities. Some Commentators see here a reference to the city or Meccia under Pagan control. See next note.

2150. There is a double metaphor: (1) the tasting of hunger and terror after the abundant supplies and the full security which it had enjoyed; and (2) the complete enfedding of the City as with a garment, by these two sourges, hunger and a state of subjective alarm. If the reference is to Mecca shortly before its fall to the Muslims, the "hunger" was the seven years' severe famine which afflicted it, and the alarm was the constant fear in the minds of the Pagans that their day was done. Peace and prosperity were restored after the re-entry of the Apostle.

2158 Cl. il. 130,

213. If Abraham's Way was the right way, the Jaws were ready with the faunt, "Why don't you then observe the Sabbath?" The answer is twofold. (J The Sabbath has nothing to do with Abraham. It was instituted with the Law of Moses because of Israel's hardness of heart (ii. 74); for they constantly disputed with their Prophet Moses (ii. 108), and there were constantly among them afterwards men who broke the Sabbath (ii. 65, and n. 79). (2) Which was the true Sabbath 10x)? The Jews observe Saturday. The Christians, who include the Old Testament in their inspired Scripture, observe Saturday and a sect among them (the Seventh Day Adventisty) disagree, and observe Saturday. So there is disagreement among the People of the Book. Let them dispute among themselves. Their dispute will not be settled till the Day of Judgment. Meanwhile, Muslims are emancipated from such stringent restrictions. For them there is certainly the Day of United Prayer on Friday, but it is in no sense like the Jewish or the Soctoh Sabbath!

2160, Ct. ii, 143.

2151. In this wonderful passage are laid down principles of religious teaching, which are good of all time. But where are the Teachers with such qualifications? We must invite all to the Way of God. and expound His Universal Will; we must do it with wisdom and discretion, meeting people on their own ground and convincing them with illustrations from their own knowledge and experience, which may be very narrow, or very wide. Our preaching must be, not dogmatic not self-regarding; not-offensive, but gentle, cosniderate and such as would attract their attention. Our manner and our arguments should not be acrimonious, but modelled on the most courteous and the most gracious example, so that the hearer may say to himself, "This man is not dealing merely with dialectics: he is not trying to get a rise out of me; he is sincerely expounding the faith that is in him, and his motive is the love of man and the love of God.

2163. In the context this passage refers to controversies and discussions, but the words are wide enough to cover all human struggles, disputes, and fights. In strictest equity you are not entitled to give a worse blow than is given to you. But those who have reached a higher spiritual standard do not even do that. They restrain themselves, and are patient. Lest you should think that such patience only gives an advantage to the adversary, you are told that the contrary is the rase; the advantage is with the patient, the self-possessed, those who do not lose their temper or forget their own principles of conduct.

21.64. In the previous verse are laid down the principles of conduct in controversy for all Muslims: if you catch them out, you are not entitled to strike a heavier blow than you received, but it is better to restrain yourself and be patient. There patience was recremented. In this verse a command is directly addressed to the Prophet, 'Do thou be patient.' It is a command: it is standard as the Great Teacher is much higher: and he carried it out in his life. His patience and self-restraint were under circumstances of extraordinary provocation. In his human wisdom it may sometimes have seemed questionable whether forbearance and self-restraint might not be human weaknesses; he had to defend his people as well as himself against the enemy's persecutions. He is told here that he need not entertain any such fears. Patience (with constancy) in these circumstances was in accordance with God's own command. Nor was he to grieve if they rejected God's Message; the Prophet had done his duty when he boldly and openly proclaimed it. Nor was his heart to be troubled if they hatched severe joils a grainst himself and his people. God would protect them.

2165. And the Süra ends with the highest consolation which the righteous can receive: the assurance that God is with them. A double qualification is indicated for so high an honour,—(1) that they should not yield to human passion or anger or impatience, and (2) that they should go on with constancy doing good all around them. To attain to the Presence of God in the sense of "I am with you" is the cultination of the righteous man's aspiration.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XVII (Bant Isra-W).

In the gradation of spiritual teaching (see Introduction to Sūra viii), we saw that the first seven Sūras sketched the early spiritual history of man, and led up to the formation of the new Ummat of Islam. Sūras viii to xvi formed another series dealing with the formation of the new Ummat and its consolidation, and God's dealing with man taken as an Ummat and considered in his social relations in organised communities (see Introduction to Sūras viii, x, and xvi). We now come to a fresh series, (Sūras xvii-xxix), which may be considered in three parts. Sūras xvii-xxi begin with an allusion to the Hi'rāj (of which more later), and proceed to spiritual history as touching individuals rather than nations. The old prophets and stories of the past are now referred to from this point of view. Sūras xxii-xxv refer to Hajj (pilgrimage), worship and prayer, chastity, privacy, etc., as related to a man's individual spiritual growth. Sūras xxvii-xxis go back to the old prophets and stories of the past, as illustrating the growth of the individual soul in its reactions against the lives of the communities and the reactions of the communities to the lives of its great individual souls.

Let us now consider S. xvii. by itself. It opens with the mystic Vision of the Ascension of the Holy Prophet: he was transported from the Sacred Mosque (of Mecca) to the Farthest Mosque (of Jerusalem) in a night and shown some of the Signs of God. The majority of Commentators take this Night Journey literally, but allow that there were other occasions on which a spiritual Journey or Vision occurred. Even on the supposition of a miraculous bodily Journey, it is conceded that the body was almost transformed into a spiritual fineness. The Hadith literature gives details of this Journey and its study helps to elucidate its mystic meaning. The holy Prophet was first transported to the seat of the earlier evelations in Jerusalem, and then taken through the seven heavens, even to the Sublime Throne, and initiated into the spiritual mysteries of the human soul struggling in Space and Time. The Spaniard, Miguel Asin, Arabic Professor in the University of Madrid, has shown that this Miraj literatue had a great influence on the Mediæval literature of Europe, and especially on the great Italian poem, the Divine Comedy (or Drama) of Dante, which towers like a landmark in mediæval European literature.

The reference to this great mystic story of the Mi'rāj is a fitting prelude to the journey of the human soul in its spiritual growth in life. The first steps in such growth must be through moral conduct—the reciprocal rights of parents and children, kindness to our fellow-men, courage and firmness in the hour of danger, a sense of personal responsibility, and a sense of God's Presence through prayer and praise.

The Mi'raj is usually dated to the 27th night of the month of Rajab (though other dates, e.g., 17th of Rabi' I, are also given) in the year before the Hijra. This fixes the date of the opening verse of the Sūra, though portions of the Sūra may have been a little earlier.

Summary.—The spiritual experiences of the men of God are given in order that God's Signs may be made clear to men: man is misted into evil, and must be guided to a sense of personal responsibility (xvii. 1-22, and C. 128).

Our service to God is shown also in our human relations, goodness to parents and kinsmen and strangers in want, as well as kindness to children, purity in sex relations, justice and respect for human life, protection of orphans, probity in all dealines, and avoidance of arrogance (xvii. 23:40, and C. 129).

God's glory is above all comparison, and the reception of His revelation marks off the man of faith from those who do not believe. But the Believers should speak fair and avoid dissensions, for God doth encompass all men (xvii 41-60, and C. 130).

Pride caused the fall of Iblis, but the children of Adam have been raised in excellence above other Creation. They will be judged by their deeds. Prayer is good at stated times and at night, and the Qur-an is offered as healing and mercy (xvii. 61-84, and C. 131).

Inspiration (the Qur-an) is a Sign of God's grace, and men should accept it without making carping excuses. Be humble in prayer and praise (xvii. 85-111, and C. 132).

C. 128.—It is the privilege of the men of God
(xvii. 1-22.) To see the sublimest mysteries
Of the spiritual world and instruct men
In Righteousness; they warn and shield men
Against Evil. But nothing can lessen
Each soul's personal responsibility
For its own deeds. It carries its fate
Round its own neck. God's gifts
Are for all, but not all receive
The'same gifts, nor are all gifts
Of equal dignity or excellence.

2166. The reference is to the Mira, for which see the Introduction to this Sura.

2167, Mesjid is a place of prayer: here it refers to the Ka'ba at Mecca. It had not yet been cleared of its idols and rededicated exclusively to the One True God. It was symbolical of the new Message which was being given to mankind.

2169. God's knowledge comprehends all things, without any curtain of Time or any separation of Space. He can therefore see and hear all things, and the Mtraj was a reflection of this knowledge without Time or Space.

In this and the subsequent verses, the reference to God is generally in the first person and plural. But in the first and the last clause of this verse it is in the third person singular: "Glory to God Who did take His Servant..."; "He is the One......" In each of these two instances, the clause expresses the point of view of God's creatures, who glorify Him, and whose hearing and seeing are ordinarily so limited that they can do nothing but glorify Him when one of His creatures is raised up to hear and see the Mysteries. It is fixey who glorify Him.

2170. The Bibb: the revelation that was given to Moses. It was there clearly laid down that those who followed Moses must consider God as Alin-iall. "Thou shall not not but on other gods before me it thus shall not make unto thee any graven image.....; thou shall not how down thyself to them nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God....;"etc. (Exod. xx. 3-5). These are the words of the English Bible. As a matter of fact the spirit of the Mosauc teaching went further. It referred all things to the Providence of God: God is the Disperer of all affairs, and we are to look to none but Him. This is Islam, and the Mi'rīj showed that it was the teaching of God from most ancient times, and yet it was violated by the very people who claumed to be its custodians.

S. xvn. 3-5.1

To the Children of Israel; (Commanding): "Take not Other than Me sun As Disposer of (your) affairs,"

 خِلَالُ الذِيارِ وَكِانَ وَعُكَامَهُ مُولًا

2172. After the Deluge of the time of Noah the only descendants of Noah were those who were saved in the Ark with him. They had special reason to celebrate the praises of God. But they relapsed into idolatry, sin, and abominations. They are reminded of the true and sincere devotion of Noah himself, as contrasted with the unworthiness of Noah's descendants, especially the Children of Israel.

2174. What are the two occasions referred to? It may be that "twice" is a figure of speech for "more than once", "often". Or it may be that the two occasions refer to (1) the destruction of the Temple by the Babylonian Nebuchadnezari 1868 B.C., when the Jews were carried off into captivity, and (2) the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in A.D. 70, after which the Temple was never re-built. See n. 2168 above. On both occasions it was a judgment of God for the sins of the Jews, their back-slidings, and their arrogance.

4715. A good description of the war-like Nebuchadnezzar and his Babylonians. They were servants of God in the sease that they were instruments through which the wrath of God was poured out on the Jews, for they penetrated through their lands, their Temple, and their homes, and carried away the Jews, men and women, into captivity. As regards "the daughters of Zion" see the scathing condemnation in Isaish, hij 16-26.

2176. The return of the Jews from the Captivity was about 50 B.C. They started life afresh. They retwit their Temple. They carried out various reforms and built up a new Judaismi coannection with Ezra. See appendix II foliowing S. v. For a time they prospered. Meanwhile their old oppressors the Babytonians had been absorbed by Persia. Subsequently Persia was absorbed in Alexander's Empire. The whole of western Asia was Hellenized, and the nex school of Jews was Hellenized along the nex school of Jews was Hellenized along the properties of the Asmonizen Dynasty (B.C. 167-63), they had a national revival, and the names of the Maccabees are remembered as those of heros. Another dynasty, that of the Idumeans, (B.C. 63 to B.C. 4), to which Herod belonged, also enjoyed some semi-independent power. The sceptre of Syria (including Palestine) passed to the Romans in B.C. 65, and Jewish feeddatory Kings held power under them. But the Jews-again showed a stiff-necked resistance to God's Messenger in the time of Jesus, and the inevitable doorn followed in the complete and final destruction of the Temple under Titus in 70 A,D.

2177. This is a parenthetical sentence. If anyone follows God's Law, the benefit goes to himself: he does not bestow a favour on anyone else. Similarly evil brings its own recompense on the doer of evil.

219. Titus's destruction of Jerusalem in 70 A.D. was complete. He was a son of the Roman Emperor Vespasian, and at the date of the destruction of Jerusalem, had the little of Cæsar as heir to throne. He ruled as Roman Emperor from 79 to 81 A.D.

2180. Merivale in his Romast Under the Empire gives a graphic account of the siege and final destruction (ed. 1890, vii. 221-255). The population of Jerusalem was then 200,000. According to the Latin historian Tacitus it was as much as 600,000. There was a famine and there were massacres. There was much fanatteism. The judgment of Merivale is: "They" (the Jews) "were judicially abandoned to their own passions and the punishment which naturally awaited them" (vii. 221).

2181. Now wecome to the time of our holy Prophet. In spite of all the past, the Jews could still have obtained God's forgiveness if they had not obstinately rejected the greatest of the Prophets also. If they were to continue in their sins, God's punishment would also continue to visit them.

Notice that the allegorical reference to Jewish history, when brought into relation with the myster meaning of Miris), refers to the constant struggle of the individual soul against evil. It has its setbacks and its punishments. But if it is true to itself and is true to the Faith in God. God will give it strength and make it successful in its fight against evil. For God's Merry is unbounded and comes to suffering humanity again and again.

2183. The instability and crookedness of the Jewish soul having been mentioned, the healing balm which should have cured it is now pointed out. The Alessage of the Qui-an is for all. Those who have Faith and show that Faith in their conduct must reap their spiritual reward. But those who reject Faith cannot escape punishment. Apart from what is past, apart from questions of national or racial history, there is a spiritual Hope—and a spiritual Dange—for every soul.

2184. Man in his ignorance or haste mistakes evil for good, and desires what he should not have. The wise and instructed soul has patience and does not put its own desires above the wisdom of God. He receives with contentment the favours of God, and prays to be rightly guided in his desires and petitions.

2186. By the physical light we see physical facts. And this physical gift of God is good for us in ways: (1) we can arrange for our livelihood, or we can attain the knowledge of the physical sciences and gain some control over the physical forces of nature; and (2) the duly issuing and setting of the sun gives us the computation of days and years, for the physical natural year is the solar year. But there is a spiritual light even more precious; by it we can similarly attain two objects, nes: (1) our spiritual livelihood and knowledge, and (2) our computation of the stages we reach in our spiritual livelihood and knowledge, and (2) our computation of the stages we reach in our spiritual years. Let us be patient and seek everything as from God,—in gy and in sorrow, in knowledge and in want of knowledge of those things which are above us. Let us reporce in what God has given us, and not be impatent about those things which He in His windom has thought fit to withhold from us. 2187. Fair: Târ, literally a bird, hence an omen, an evil omen, fate. C/, xxxvi. 19 The Araba, and the ancient Romans, sought to read the mysteries of human fate from the flight of birds. And many of us in our own day seek to read our future fortunes by similar supersitions. We read in the previous verse that there are Signs of God, but they are not meant to subserve the vulgar purpose of disclosing our future destiny in a worldly sense. They are meant to quite other purposes, as we have explained. Our real fate does not depend upon birds or omens or stars. It depends on our deeds, good or evil, and they hang round our necks. Man is the maker of his own fortune.

2188. These deeds, good or evil, will be embodied in a scroll which will be quite open to us in the light of the Day of Judgment, however much we may affect to be ignorant of it now or waste our energies in prying into mysteries that do not concern us.

2190 The doctrine of personal responsibility is insisted on, and the basis of ethics is shown to be our own good or evil as furthering or obstructing our highest development,

219. God's Mercy gives every chance to the wicked to repent. When wickedness gets so rampant that punishment becomes inevitable, even then God's Mercy and Justice act together. Those who are highly gifted from God—it may be with tacht to position, or it may be with talents and opportunities—are expected to understand and obey. They are given a definite order and warning. It they still transgress there is no further room for argument. They cannot plead that they ware ignorant. The command of the Lord is proved against them, and its application is called for beyond doubt. Then it is that their ounsiment is combeted.

2196. An explanation is now given of how it is that prospenty sometimes seems to aftend the wicked. The explanation is threefold: (1) the transitory things of this life are worth little in the eternal scheme of things; (2) even they are provided, not just because their recipients wish for them, but according to a definite Plan of God; and (3) in the end there is for the wicked the eternal Misery and deprivation of grace,—the Hell which is worse than destruction in the terms of this world.

2197. All the pride and insolence will then be brought low. The disgrace and the exclusion from the "sight of the Face of God" will by themselves be punishments of which the magnitude cannot be measured in the terms of our present material life.

2200. God's favours are showered on all,—the just and the unjust, the deserving and the undeserving. But there is a difference as explained in the last two verses. S. XVII. 22-23.]

2201. Nor should man suppose that all gifts are of equal value. The spiritual ones rank far higher in dignity and real worth than the transitory ones. Therefore it is altogether wrong to compare the worldly prosperity of a wicked man with the apparent want of it to a man of spiritual worth. There is no comparison between them when measured by right standards.

2202 The seeming inequality of gifts to men might make short-sighted men impugn the impartiality of God. But the fault lies with such men's own want of knowledge and want of Faith. There is no excuse for them to seek other objects of worship than God. For there is none worthy of worship except God.

2204. The spiritual and moral duties are now brought into juxtaposition. We are to worship none but God, because none but God is worthy of worship, not because "the Lord thy God is a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Me" (Exod, xx. S).

Note that the act of worship may be collective as well as individual; hence the plural fabudu. The kindness to parents is an individual act of piety; hence the singular taqui, qui, etc.

2205. Cf. xv. 88 and n. 2011. The metaphor is that of a high-fixing bird which lowers her a high out of tenderness to her offspring. There is a divible apiness. (1) When the parent was strong and the child was helpless, parental affection was showered on the child; when the child grows up and is strong, and the parent its helpless, can be do less than bestow similar tender care on the parent? (2) But more: he must approach the matter with gentle humbity: for does not parental love remind him of the great love with which Good cherishes His creatures? There is something here more than simple human gratitude: it goes up into the highest spiritual region.

2206 Note that we are asked to honour our father and mother, not "that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth.thee "(Exod, xx. 12), but upon much higher and more universal grounds, such as befor a perfected reverlation. In the first place, not merely respect, but cherishing kindness, and humility to parents, are commanded. In the second place, this command is bracketed with the command to worship the One True God: parental love should be to us a type of divine love: nothing that we can do can ever really compensate for that which we have received. In the third place (see next verse) our spiritual advancement is tested by this: we cannot expect God's forgiveness if we are rude or unkind to those who unselfably brought us up.

2207. It is the heart, and its hidden and secret motives, by which we are judged : for God knows them all.

2208. In the Jewish Decalogue, which was given to a primitive and hard-hearted people, this remement of kindness,—to those in want and to wayfarers life, total strangers whom you come across) finds no place. Now vas there much danger of their wasting their substance out of exuberance. Even the command "to honour thy father and mother "comes after the ceremonial observance of the Sabbath. With us, the worship of God is linked up with kindness—to parentle, kindred, those-lawant, those who are far from their homes though they may be total strangers to us. It is not mere verbalk kindness. They have certain rights which must be fulfilled.

2209. All charity, kindness, and help are conditioned by our own resources. There is no merit if we merely spend out of bravado or for idle show. How many families are ruined by extravagant expenses at weddings, funerals, etc., or (as they may call it) to "oblige friends or relatives," or to give to able-bodied beggars? To no one was this command more pecessary than it is to Muslims of the present day.

2210. Spendthrifts are not merely fools. They are of the same family as the Evil Ones. And the chief of the Evil Ones (notice the transition from the plural to the singular)—Satan himséif—fell by his ingratitude to God. So those who misuse or squander God's gifts are also ungrateful to God.

2211, You may have to "turn away" from people for two reasons (I) You may not have the wherewithal with which to entertain them and give them their rights; or (2) you may have to give them a wide berth because their thoughts are not as your thoughts. In either case there is no need to speak harshly to them. Your words should be those of "easy kindness", i.e., the sort of kindness (not merely frigid politeness) which flows from pity and understanding and smooths over unnecessary difficulties in human intercourse.

2212. Cf, the phrase for niggardliness in v. 67. We are not to be so lavish as to make ourselves destitute and incur the just censure of wise men, nor is it becoming to keep back our resources from the just needs of those who have a right to our help Even strangers have such a right, as we saw in xvii. 26 above. But we must keep a just measure between our capacity and other people's needs.

2213. If a foolish spendthrift pretends that his generosity, even if it rules himself, is good for other people, he is reminded that God will take care of alt. He knows every one's true needs and cares for them. He gives in abundance to some, but in all cases He gives in just measure. Who are we to pretend to greater generosity? A foolish Hindi saying was current in Oudh: pis No nā de Maulā, itis No de Āspi-sud-daula: "To those to whom the Lord gives not, hasū-ud-daula gives." It was extravagance that ruined his family and wipbed his kingdom of Oudh off the map.

2215. Literally, "it is evil as a road (or a way)". Adultery is not only shameful in itself and inconsistent with any self-respect or respect for others, but it opens the mad to many evils. It destroys the basis of the family; it works against the interests of children born or to be born; it may cause murders and feuda and loss of reputation and properly, and also loosen permanently the bonds of society. Not only should it be avoided as a sin, but any approach or temptation to it should be avoided.

216. On the subject of Qisas see ii, 178 and the notes thereto. Under the strict limitations there laid down, a life may be taken for a life. The heir is given the right to demand the life; but he must not exceed due bounds, because he is helped by the Law. Some Commentators understand "he "in "he is helped by the Law)" to refer to the heir of the person against whom Qisas is sought. He too will be helped by the Law, if the heir of the first slain exceeds the bounds of Law.

Zh7, C, vi. 152, and other passages relating to orphans, s.g., ii. 220. If an orphan's property is touched at all, it should be to improve it, or to give him something better than he had before,—never to take a personal advantage for the benefit of the guardian. A bargain that may be quite fair as between two undependent persons would be, under this verse, unfair as between a guardian and his orphan ward until the latter attains the full age of understanding.

(١٧) سود و الاسراء (بني اسرائيل) مه المنها من المرائيل مه تختي المنه ال

2218. Ashuddur means the age when the orphan reaches his full maturity of strength and understanding, say between the ages of 18 and 30. The age of legal majority may be 18 (as for certain purposes in India) or 21 (as in England). For certain purposes in Muslim law it may be less than 18. In the orphan's interest a much stricter standard is required in his case.

2219 The definite article of has here a generic meaning, and is best translated by "every".

2220. From the context the engagements referred to would relate to beneficial contracts connected with the orphan's property or promises or undertakings given by the guardian or implied in the terms of his appointment. But the words are general and may be interpreted in the general sense. Note that this sentence does not occur in the similar passage in vi. 152, where there was a discussion of social laws: it is appropriate here, where the discussion is about the guardian's personal and individual responsibility in a spiritual sense.

2222. Idie currosity may lead us to nose into evil, through our "gnorance that it is evil. We must guard against every such danger. We must only hear the things that are known to us to be of good report, and see things that are good and instructive, and entertian in our hearts feelings or in our minds ideas that we have reason to expect will be spritually profitable to us. We shall be called to account for the exercise of every faculty that has been given to us. This goes a little farther than a famous sculpture on a Japaness temple in which three monkeys are shown as putting their hands to their ears, eyes, and mouths, respectively, to show that they were not prepared to hear any evil, or speak any evil. Here idle curiosity is condemned. Futility is to be avoided even if it does not reach the degree of positive evil.

2234. The moral law, as expounded in xvii. 23-91 is far in advance of the bare Decalogue in that it searches out motives, and draws pointed attention to the weak and helpless if we are to reach any spiritual understanding of God. It begins with a mention of the worship of the One True God and ends with a similar mention to close the argument, thus emphasizing the fact that the love of God embraces the love of man and practical help to our fellow-creatures.

2225, "Blamsworthy" carries us back by reminiscence to xvii 29, between which and this verse there is mention of crimes committed out of covetousness and a selfsh disregard of other people's rights. "Rejected" carries back our reminiscence to xvii. 18, from which to here we have a reference to crimes that lead to deprivation of God's grace. The latter is of course wider than the former. Note how subly the two streams of thought are beer conjoined.

2227. Things are explained in the Qur-an from all points of view, individual and national, by means of stories, parables, and figures of speech, and by way of categorical commands. But those who are evil, instead of profitting by such instruction, often go farther and farther away from the Truth.

2228. There is only One True God. But if, as polytheists say, there had been subsidiary gods, they would yet have had to go to the Throne of the Supreme God, for they could have done nothing without Him. Thus the Islamic idea of the unity of the Godhead is quite different, from polytheistic ideas of a supreme god, as in the Greek Pantheon, where Jupiter was often defied by the minor delites I But such ideas are absurd, as stated in the next verse.

2229. All Creation, animate and inanimate, sings God's praises and celebrates His glory,—animate, with consciousness, and inanimate, in the evidence which it furnishes of the unity and glory of God. The mystics believe that there is a soul in inanimate things also, which declares forth the glory of God. For all Nature bears witness to His power, wisdom, and goodness. It is only "ye", is, those who reject the whole trend of your nature and deep Faith simply because ye have been given a limited amount of choice and free-will,—it is only such as "ye" that understand not what every other creature understands and proclaims with joy and pride. What must be your degradation 1 And yet God bears with you and forgive you! Such is His goodness!

2230, Vell invisible; Some Commentators understand mastar here as equivalent to satir; a veil that makes invisible, a thick or dark veil. But I think that the meaning of mastar (in the passive voice) as "hidden or invisible" is more consonant with the mystic meaning of the whole passage. If all nature, external and within ourselves, declares God's glory, those unfortunates who cut themselves off from their better nature are isolated from the men of God and the revelation of God, because (I) they are unfit for being in their company, and (2) because the men of God and the revelation of God must be protected from the pain which blasphemy or rebellion must cause to their unsullide nature. The veil is none the less real because it is invisible.

2231. The invisible veil being put against the ungodly on account of their deliberate rejection of Truth, the result is that their minds are fogged so that they cannot understand and their ears are clogged so that they cannot hear. In other words the effects of Evil become cumulative in shutting out God's grace.

223. See last note. That being so, the only motive for the ungodly to listen to God's Truth is to sood at it instead of to be instructed by it. They may make a show of listening, but when they meet together in private, they show themselves in their true colours. Cf. in. 13. They cannot help seeing that there is singular charm and attractiveness in God's Word, and that it consoles, helps, and elevates many people who receive it in the right spirit. So they pretend that they are superior to such people and lawph at them for listening to some one who is only under the influence of something which they call magic!

2233. Note that the word used is "Sabilan" "a way", not "fix way". In going astray they have lost the way; but never can they find any means of getting back to that way, or of justifying themselves or making good their wicked similes.

2235 The sceptic shifts his ground when he is cornered in argument. It is no longer tenable for him to say that it cannot happen or that there is no one who can bring him back to life and memory. He now gets shaky, and says, "Well, when is that going to happen?" The actual time no man can tell. Indeed that event will be on a plane in which there will be no Time. Our relative ideas of time and place will have been completely overthrown, and it will appear to us then, not that it has been postponed too long, but that it has come too soon! See the next verse and note.

2237. Whatever may have been your spiritual blindness in this life, the "new creation" will have opened your eyes to the Truth. No one will any longer be in any delusion as regards the Reality of God, and all will be forced, by their new circumstances, to recognise the Truth and sing God's praises. And all will be surprised at the seemingly short flight of time since they had their blittle enhemeral life on this earth. They will now apportase its true worth.

2238. This command refers to two situations. (1) Even to your enemies and the enemies of you should speak fair: who are you to judge others? Judgment belongs to God alone, for He knows you lie, all mankind) best, and your personal knowledge is at best imperfect. And Satan is always it yin, g to divide mankind. (2) Amongst yourselves, also, you should not entertain suspicions, but speak politiely according to the hest standards of human speech. A false or unkind word may destroy all your efforts at building up unity, because the forces of disruption are more nimerous than the forces of unity.

2239. Man should never for a single moment entertain a thought that would imply that he was waser than God. God's knowledge is all-embracing. If He grants mercy to spine that you consider wicked or punishment to some that you consider in ghteous, it is your knowledge or your deductions that are at fault, not God's righteous Plain. Even men of God are not sent to arrange or dispose of men's affairs but only to teach God's Riessage. How much less can ordinary men presume to judge other men? The Maskiyat-Williand Plain of God-is above all human wisdom.

220. Not only are we not to judge other ordinary linen and carp at them. We are not to set plate standards for judging the men of God. If one was horn of the unlearned Arab race, he yet was a merry to all the worlds. If one spoke to God as Kolfswalah or another's life as Rêga-Rlah began with a spiritual miracle; it does not imply superiority. It only means that God's wisdom is more profound than we can fathom.

221. The spiritual gifts with which the prophets came may themselves take different forms, according to the needs of the world and the times in which they lived, as judged by the wisdom of God. A striking example here given is the gift of song and music as given to David, but it implies no superiority of David over others. David was given the Zabūr, the Psalter or Psalms, intended to be sung for the worship of God and the celebration of God's praise. For the Book of Psalms, see the last part of n 609 to iv. 163, where exactly the same words are used about David.

- 58. Not a population But We shall destroy it Before the Day of Judgment Or punish it with A dreadful Penalty: 1944 That is written In the (eternal) Record.
- 59. And We refrain from sending The Signs, only because The men of former generations Treated them as false: 2045

2242. Men's suspicions of each other or of the prophets have been condemned in the previous verses. We now have the strongest condemnation of all, that of imagining any other being as being equal or in the same cas, gory with the One True tiod. God has all power: they have no power. They cannot remove men's troubles. They cannot even mitigate or change them so as to afford the least relief. Why indulge in false worship?

2243. Where men or heroes, or prophets or angels are worshipped, the worship is futile; because (1) even if they are good and boly, and ever so near to God, yet the nearest of them have need to seek means of access to God, and they do seek such means, rut.: the hope of God's Graces (2) though by their very nature it is impossible for us to suppose that they will incur the Wrath of God, yet they are but creatures and are subject to the law of personal responsibility.

2244. These verses are a commentary on the last clause of the last verse. "The Wrath of thy Lord is something to take heed of." The goddess thoughtesty challenge God's Wrath, but do they realise its nature? Even-the best of us must be moved with terror when we think of its consequences, were it not for His unbounded Mercy. Those who deny the Hereafter fail to realise its terrible Portents. They ask for Portents and Miracles now, but do they realise that their coming means destruction and misery to those who reject faith? They will come soon enough. The whole world will be convigied before the Day of Judgment. The part of the wise is to prepare for its prepare fo

2245. Past generations treated Signs and Portents with contempt or rebellion, and brought about their own undoing. It is only Uod's Mercy that gives them Grace for a time and prevents the coming of those Portents and Punishments which would overwhelm them if they were put to their trial at once,

(١٧) سبورة الاسراء (بني اسم اثبا

2246. An example is cited from the story of the Thamüd. A wonderful She-camel was sent among them as a Portent and a Symbol. In their wickedness they ham-strung her. So instead of their reclaiming them she was a cause of their destruction, as their sin and rebellion were laid bare. For the story of the She-camel and the references to the passages in which she is mentioned, see n. 1044 to vii.

2247. Signs, Miracles, and Portents are sent by God as a warning, to strike terror into the hearts of evil-doers and reclaim them to the right path. I have discussed Fear as a motive for reclaiming certain kinds of hard hearts, in my note 82 to it. 74. But some hearts are so hard that even this motive does not work. As they have a limited free-will given by God, they are to that extent free to choose. But when they actually choose even!, God in His infinite Mercy delays their punishment and removes the occasion for their immediate self-destruction by withholding the Signs which might make them transgress all the more and compass their total destruiction.

2248. The reference may be to laxii 28, probably an earlier Meccan revelation. But the argument is followed by the results of time. This verse falls naturally into three divisions. Warnings and Portents and Signs are sent or not sent according to God's All-Wise Plan of Mercy and Justice: this is in no wise inconsistent with the apparent freedom given to the wicked: because (1) in any case God is all round all His creatures, and His delay as a Sign of Mercy in no way diminishes His power; (2) the Visions of Truth vouchsafed to men of God are themselves Signs by which they can warn the ungodly; and (3) sometimes it is more merciful to give them time by not immediately bringing the matter to judgment.

2230. The tree Zaqqim, a bitter and pungent tree described as growing at the bottom of Hell, a type of all that is disagreeable. See xxxvii 62-65; xiiv, 43-46; and Ivi, 52. All these are Suras chronologically earlier than this Sura. The application of the name to a tree of the myrobalan kind in the region of Jericho is, I think, of post-Quranic date.

It is a trial for wrong-doers. See xxxvii, 63 and n, 4073,

C. 131.—Arrogance, jealousy, spite, and hatred (xvii. 61-84.) Were the cause of the fall of Iblis. Man were the cause of the fall of Iblis. Man Was given pre-eminence above Much of God's Creation, and owes Higher responsibilities. He should give thanks For God's mercies, and remember The Day of Account. Not all the scheming Of Evil will deflect God's righteous Plan To protect His chosen ones. They should pray Without ceasing, and seek His true Guidance; For Truth will last, but Falsehood will perish.

﴿ قَالَانُ مُثِ فَنَ نَيْعِكَ مِنْهُمْ فَالِكَ جَهَنَهُ جَنَاؤُكُمْ جَنَاآَةً تَوْفُورًا

231. Cf. vii. 11-18, which deals, as is the case here, with the temptation of the individual human soul, while ii. 30-38 deals with the collective race of man through Adam. Arrogance, jealousy, spire, and hatred are the ingredients in the story of Ibils.

225. The power of Evil over man is due to man's limited free-will. In other words man hands himself to Evil. As to those who loyally worship and serve God, Evil has no power over them. This is expressly mentioned in verse 65 below, and in other places.

2233. The power of Evil is summarily dismissed, but not without a clear warning. "Do thy was if any of them misuse their bimited free-will and deliberately follow thee, they must take the consequences with thee; all of you must answer according to your personal responsibility."

- 64. "Lead to destruction those Whom thou canst among them, esset With thy (seductive) voice; sees Make assaults on them esset With thy cavalry and thy Infantry; mutually share With them wealth and children; and And make promises to them."

2254, "Do thy worst: but we are both warned that that path leads to destruction."

2255. Evil has many snares for mankind. The one that is put in the foreground is the voice.—
the seductive personal appeal, that "makes the worse appear the better part".

2256. The forcible assault of Evil is next mentioned under the metaphor of ravalry and infantry, It within capolery and tempting fair-seeming seem to fail that an attack is made in force with wagons of violence, of all Kinds, like the different arms in an organised army.

2257 If the first assaults are resisted. Evil has other weapons in its armoury. Tangible fruits are dangled before the eyes, ill-gotten gains and children of sin, that follow from certain very alluring methods of indulgence in passions. Or it may be children dedicated to sin or worldly gains, etc. And then there are all kinds of promises for the future

2259 This verse should be read along with the two preceding ones to complete their meaning. Evil has no power except over those who yield to its solicitations, 2280. As Evil has no authority over the sincere servants of God, they should put their trust completely in Him. For He is All-Sufficient to carry out their affairs, and by His grace, to save them from all harm and danger.

2261. This illustration of the sea, and the skill with which, by God's grace, men pass through it with case in order to earn material gains by commerce, social gains by human intercourse, and spiritual gains by knowledge, it frequently used to enforce God's goodness to man Cf. in 164

70. We have honoured the sons
Of Adam; provided them
With transport on land and sea;
Given them for sustenance things

Of Our Creation.

2262. Against God's gracious gifts and mercies is contrasted man's ingratitude. In danger he remembers the One True God, but relapses into his own fancies when the danger is past. Cf. also x. 22-23.

2264. If a man flees from the Wrath of God, there is no place secure for him. He may flee from set to land, and back again from land to sea. But his life depends on the Disposer of all affairs. He may go again and again to sea, and perhaps finally end by being drowned.

2865. The distinction and honour conferred by God on man are recounted in order to enforce the corresponding duties and responsibilities of man. He is raised to a position of honour above the brute creation; he has been granted talents by which he can transport himself from place to place by land, sea, and now by air; all the means for the sustenance and growth of every part of his nature are provided by God, and his spiritual faculties (the greatest gift of God) raise him above the greater part of God's Creation. Should he not then realise his noble destiny and prepare for his real life in the Hereafter?

226. I have discussed the various meanings of I mām in ii. 124, n. 124. What is the meaning here? The Commentators are divided. Some understand the meaning to be that each Peopler or Group will appear with its Leader, who will bear witness to its virtues or sins: Cf. xvi. 84. Another view is that the Imām is their revelation, their Book. A third is that the Imām is the record of deeds spoken of in the next clause. I prefer the first.

2267. Literally, by the value of a fatil, a small skin in the cleft of a date-stone : this has no value.

2289 It happens with men of God, and it happened with the holy Prophet, that they are tempted by the world with many things which appeal to the world generally, if they would make some small concession in their favour. The "small concession" may hold the key of the position, and neutralise the whole teaching sent by God. 'If the Prophet had accepted wealth and position among the Quraish and "only respected" their idols I The Quraish would have taken him into their inner circle! A dishonest liar like Musaliama would have jumped at the opportunity and been hailed as a frend and associate and made much of. But men of God are made of sterner stuff. They are given special strength to resist all plausible deception.

2271. If such a thing was possible for a true Apostle of God, viz.: a compromise with evil and a deterlection of his mission, he would be no exception to the law of personal responsibility. Indeed, as the power and the responsibility were greater, the punishment would have been greater too. It would have been double,—an exposure in this life and the usual punishment in or after death for a desertion of the Truth

2272. The motive held out by the world for a compromise with Truth is itself fallacious. The motive is that the compromise may bring influence, position, and opportunity, if not wealth and the other good things of life. But ness themselves (if attained) would be of no use or help if pitted against the command of God.

2273. As happened in the case of the holy Prophet, the enemies try to frighten the man of God away from their midst, so that, once away, they could expel him and keep him out. But they are counting without the Plan of God. If they persecute the righteous, they dig their own graves!

2274 This was no new thing in history. God protects His own, and the ungodly cannot long enjoy the fruits of their unrighteousness even if their punishment be delayed a little white.

2275. The Commentators understand here the command for the five daily canonical pravers, viz: the four from the declination of the sun from the zenith to the fullest darkness of the night, and the early morning prayer, Fajr, which is usually accompanied by a reading of the holy Qur-ān. The four afternoon prayers are: Zwhr, immediately after the sun begins to decline in the afternoon; 'Aarr, in the late afternoon; Magrib, immediately after sunset; and Isha, after the glow of sunset has disappeared and the full darkness of the night has set in. There is difference of opinion as to the meaning of particular words and phrase, but none as to the general effect of the passage.

2276. The morning prayer is specially singled out for separate mention, because the morning is a "holy hour" and special spiritual millioneces are on the soul awaking from the night's rest. Special testimony is borne to the prayers of this hour by the angelic host.

2277 This is held to be addressed specially to the holy Prophet who usually prayed more than the five canonical prayers. The Tahajjud was a prayer after midmight, in the small watches of the morning.

2278 To the Prophet was to be assigned in the Hereafter the highest Post of Honour and Glory —the Magām Maḥmād. There is much mystic meaning in this, implying his excellence above all other Prophets. The immediate reference may be to the hope that the Mercan persecution will soon be over and the glorious work in Medina will begin.

2279 The entry and exit here referred to may be interpreted in four senses: (1) entry into death and exit at the resurrection: for the righteous, who have purified their souls by prayer (last verse) and spiritual teaching from the Qur an (next verse), there is on each occasion a fuller and fuller realisation and enjoyment of truth and honour; for those who are estranged from God, the effect is the opposite; the truth becomes bitter and there is ignominy and exposure instead of honour; (2) entry for the holy Prophet into the new life at Medina, which was still in the womb of futurity, and exit from the life of persecution and the mileu of falsehood, which surrounded him in his native city of Mecca still given up to idolatry: (3) referring to the impending Hijnat again, the prayer may mean, "Let it be from pure motives of truth and spiritual honour, and not from motives of anger against the city of Mecca or its presecutors, or of ambition or worldly power from the city of Medina; which was ready to lay everything at the Apostle's feet": (4) generally, entry and exit at every stage of ble. *

2280. All prayer must be for God's aid and authority. However much we may plan, our success must depend on His aid. However nobler our motives, we have no right to imperal any lives unless there is authority in the Word of God. The Apostle only acts on God's commission and inspiration.

- 81. And say: "Truth has (now)
  Arrived, and Falsehood perished:
  For Falsehood is (by its nature)
  Bound to perish." "***
- 82. We send down (stage by stage)
  In the Qur-an that which
  Is a healing and a mercy
  To those who believe:
  To the unjust it causes
  Nothing but loss after loss.***
- 83. Yet when We bestow
  Our favours on man,
  He turns away and becomes Remote on his side (instead Of coming to Us), and when Evil seizes him he Gives himself up to despair!

C. 132.—Who can define the Spirit of Inspiration?

(xvii. 85-111.) Its gift is the highest of God's Mercies

To man. The Qur-an is divine, and no carpings

Can affect its greatness or the greatness

Of the Messenger who brought it to men.

Those who reject it will be called

To account on the Day of Judgment. Let not Pride and Ignorance rush, like Pharaoh,

To the Punishment of the Hereafter.

The Qur-an as revealed by stages teaches

The Truth: learn it and chant it, and praise

The Beautigin Names of God for ever!

<sup>2281.</sup> From its nature falsehood must perish, for it is the opposite of Truth, and Truth must ever prevail,

<sup>2282,</sup> In God's revelation there is healing for our broken spirits, hope for our spiritual future, and joy in the forgiveness of our sins. *All who work in faith will share in these privileges. It is only the rebels against God's Law who will suffer loss. The more they will oppose Truth, the deeper down will they go into the mire—the state of sin and Wrath, which is worse than destruction.

<sup>2283.</sup> Truth saves us from two extremes: when we are happy, we are saved from being puffed up, for we realise that everything comes from God; and when we suffer misfortunes, we are not in despair, for we know that God is our sure refuge and help.

2285. What is the nature of inspiration? Who brings it? Can it ask its Bringer questions? Can we ask anything which we wish? These are the sort of questions always asked when inspiration is called in question. The answer is given here. Inspiration is one of those high spiritual mysteries which cannot be explained in the terms of our every-day human experience. It is spiritual. The Spirit (Qabriel) does not come of his own will. He gomes by the command of God, and reveals what God commands him to reveal. Of the, sum-total of true spiritual knowledge what a small part it is that ordinary mortals can understand! They can be only given that which they can understand, however dimly. We are not in a position to ask anything that we wish. If we did so, it would only make us look foolish, for the guidance comes from God's Wisdom, not from our worldly knowledge.

2286. Even the spiritual knowledge that comes to us comes because of the favour and mercy of God. If He were to withhold it, who can call Him in question?

2287. In that case the only one who can plead for us is the Mercy of God. We can interpret the phrase in its widest abstract sense, as well as in the concrete sense of the title which is applied to the holy Prophet Muhammad, the Mercy of God. Thus we come from the abstract question to the concrete question of the Qur-an, which is referred to by name in the verses that follow.

١٧١) سورة الاسراء الني أسرائمل

2289. The proof of the Qur-an is in its own beauty and nature, and the circumstances in which it was promulgated. The world is challenged to produce a Book like it and has not produced one. It is the only revealed Book whose text stands pure and uncorrupted to-day. Cf., for a similar challenge, if 23, x 38, and xi. 13.

2290. In the Qur-an everything is explained in detail from various points of view, by commands, situitudes, examples, stories, parables, etc. It does not merely narrate stories or lay down vague abstract propositions. It gives-every detailed help in outward and inner life.

2291. One form in which it can be received with ingratitude is to pay verbal tributes to it but not study it as it ought to be studied (ii. 121, haqqa lilāwalihi), or to disobey its precepts or standards.

2292. Cf. ii. 60.

2293. This ill-assorted and crude jumble of the sort of miracles which the Unbelievers wanted is 10 very appropriate contrast to the sober and reasoned argument which is begun in the last sentence of verse 93 and continued in sections 11 and 12, which close this Stra. It is throughout reminiscent of the materialistic imagination of Jewish sceptics, which was mainly responsible for the fall of the Jewish nation (see verse 100 below). For a thirsty people sojourning in a dry land, the finding of a spring of water as in the story of Moses or of the well of Zamzam is an appropriate miracle. But miracles are not for faithless crowds to gape at: A beautiful well-watered Carden is a symbol of Felicity; but a sceptic cannot order God to produce it for his pleasure. The same may be said about a house adorned with gold, except that its symbolism is even more materialistic. The fail of the sky or producing God face to tace or climbing to the skies by a ladder, or bringing down a book of parchment which men could handle, are all irreverent suggestions that make no distinction between splittual and material things.

2294. Contrast the sublime passages like that beginning with lxxxii. 1, or that in xxv. 25, where the final breaking up of the firmaments as we know them is referred to in the world's catastrophe with the ridiculous demand that it should be done for the sport of the sceptics!

(١٧) سبورة الاسراء (بني اسرائيل) 721

Or thou bring God And the angels before (us) Face to face: 5005

93. "Or thou have a house Adorned with gold, Or thou mount a ladder Right into the skies. "So No, we shall not even believe In thy mounting until thou Send down to us a book That we could read." "So Say: "Glory to my Lord! Am I aught but a man,—An apostle?" "So."

2295. Cf. ii. 35 and iv. 153 about the desire of the Israelites to see God face to face; and vi 8-9, about angels coming down to convince men.

2296. Cf. vi. 35 about a ladder to the skies.

2198. An apostle of God is a man at the command of God, and not to satisfy the disingenuous when and fancies of Unbelievers. Miracles greater than any that their foolsh fancies could devue were before them. The Qur-in was such a miracle, and it is a standing miracle that lasts through the ages. Why did they not believe? The real reason was spite and jealousy like that of lblis. See next verse.

2300. The argument is that if angels inhabited this earth, an angel from heaven could be sent down as an aposite to them, as they could mutually understand each other, and the Message of God could be explained without difficulty. But the earth is inhabited by men, and the men themselves are divided into races, or groups, or nations. To each Group is sent an aposite from among their bethern: 0.0 At, their brother Hid (xi. 50; 10 Thamüd, their brother Bülly (xi. 61): and so on. As a matter of fact, with wicked men, constituted as they are, the appearance of an angel causes disturbance and an unseemly riot, as in the case of the angels that came to Lot (xi. 77-80). In any case they cannot carry out an effective mission among men (vi. 8-9).

In peace and quiet, We should Certainly have sent them Down from the heavens An angel for an apostle."

2301. 'If you want a real witness, it is not these sorts of fancy miracles, but the witness of the true ever-living God., God is always everywhere—and with you. Purify your hearts, and ask Him in true contrition and tepeniance, and the will guide you and show you the Way.'

2302. 'All your insincere subtleties are of no use. The only real guidance is the guidance of God. If you do not seek His grace, you will be lost Besides Him, there is no true friend or protector.'

2303. 'If you still persist in your evil ways, what is to be your evil end? You will become men and more identified with the Company of Evil. You will come to shame and gnominy, like men thrown down prone on their faces. You will lose the use of all the faculties of judgment with which God has endowed you. Instead of seeing, you will be blind to God's Signs. Instead of having the power of seeking Him in prayer and rejoicing in His grace, you will be dumb. Instead of hearing the harmony and music of the spheres, as typited in the pure and harmonious lives of men, you will hear inothing or only hear dull or confused sounds like deaf men. The scoreting fire of your punishment will not grow less, but grow more faces as you go deeper into Hell.'

2304. This phrase is repeated from xvii. 49. The reminiscence rounds off the argument. After certain moral precepts to which Faith was linked, we have had a discussion of Unfaith. Its various motives have been analysed, and its penalties have been allegorically shadowed forth. After this, the example of Pharaoh is held as a type of Unfaith in the next section, and the Sûra closed with an exhortation to faith and a declaration of the glory of God.

2305 God, Who created all that is in the heavens and on earth, has surely the power to revive the life of individual souls after their bodies have persibled,—and revive them with memories of their past life and for a continuation of their spiritual history. Only He has fixed a term for each stage of our existence, which we can neither prolong for shorten,

2306. This phrase carries us back to xvii 89, after we began the argument about the real motives for the rejection of the Qur-An by sceptics. That argument is now closed in a sort of minor circle within the major circle secteded in a 2304 above

2307. A fresh argument is now addressed to those who would confine God's revelations to a limited circle of men, such as they themselves belonged to. The immediate reference was to the Jews, who could not understand how any Gentiles could receive revelations and guidance even superior to what they considered their own birth-right. But the tendency is widespread in the human race. A particular knoe, or caste, or a particular knot of culture, claims to be the custodian of God's Message, whereas it is universal. God's Mervy is universal, and He scatters the priceless Treasures of His Mercy broadcast among His creatures. They are not exhausted by spending. It is only the misers who hoard their wealth for fear it should be used up by spending. 'Are you spritual misers going to keep back God's holy Message from the multitude?' Is that the reason why you deny the advent of the new Teacher, who comes as a Mircy to all mea-to-old ICreation?'

2308. Nine Clear Signs.: see.vii, 133, n. 1091. The story of Pharaoh (or a phase of it) is here told with a view to exhibiting the decline of a soul on account of pride in outward power and dignity.

2309. To them: i.e. to Pharaoh. as sitting in his Council, with the Chiefs of his People. Cf. vii. 1. The whole scene is described in some detail from the point of view of nations or Ummats in vii. 103-133. ١٧١) سبورة الاسراء الني اسرائيل) 724

- 2310. At a different and later stage in the scene, Pharaoh's Chiefs call Moses a "sorcerer wellversed" (vii. 109). Here Moses, who had come with the Nine Signs but had not yet shown them, is reproached with being the object of sorcery; he is practically told that he is mad!
- 231. We can well suppose Mouses to ask Pharachi to recall all the past history of Moses, for Moses had been brought up in Pharachi's palace in all the learning of the Egyptians. He could not therefore be mad, or a simpleton worked on by Egypti-n magic. What he was going to show was something far greater: it was not the deceptive magic of Pharach's sorcerers, but true Signs that came from the God of all power. They were to open the eyes of his people, and if Pharach crasted faith, Moses warns him that Pharach in .that case was doomed to destruction. This is the course of the soult hat sinks down by Pride!
- 2312. Pharaoh on this tries various subterfuges and plans for removing not only Moses but all his people by doing away with them. The detailed story is not told here but may be read in S. vij. But God's Wrath descended on Pharaoh and those who were with him in body and mind. The Egyptians who repented were subject to Pharaoh's wrath but were saved from the Wrath of God (vij 121-126).
- 2313. The Israelites were taken to the Promised Land in Palestine, and they established their own kingdom there, but they forfeited God's favour by their sins and backslidings and will have to answer like all souls by the law of personal responsibility at the Day of Judgment.

Some Commentators understand the second warning to be the Day of Judgment, the Promise of the Hereafter, 2317 The marvel is that these parts, revealed at different times and in different circumstances, should fit together so closely and consistently as they do. All revelation is progressive. The previous revelations were also progressive. Each of them marked a stage in the world's spiritual history. Man's mind does not take in more than his spiritual state will have prepared him for God's revelation comes as a light to illuminate our difficulties and show us the way in actual situations that arise.

2318 No one's belief or unbelief affects the beauty or grandeur of God's revelation. But those endowed with spiritual knowledge or insight know at once when they hear God's holy Word, and fall down and adore God. Those endowed with knowledge include those who had received previous revelations and had kept themselves free from corrupt ideas.

2319. Those who had received previous revelations find in the Quran and in the Apostle who brought it, the promise of God flufilled. Those who were spirtually prepared for it found in the same way the satisfaction of their spiritual yearnings: to them, also, God's promise was sent to be flufilled.

2320. A feeling of earnest humility comes to the man who realises how, in spite of his own undrhines, he is brought, by God's Mercy, into fouch with the most sublime Truths. Such a man is touched with the deepest emotion, which finds its outlet in tears.

231. Cf. vil. 180. Rahmān describes one of the attributes of God,—His Grace and Mercy which come to the sinner even before he feels conscious of the need of it,—the preventive Grace which saves God's servants from sin See n. 19 to i, 1, God can be invoked, either by His simple name, which includes all attributes, or in the highest Sqf philosophy, rises above all attributes, or by one of the names implying the attributes by which we try to explain His nature to our limited understanding. The attribute of Mercy in Raḥmār was particularly repugnant to the Pagan Araba (see xxx. 60, and xxi. 36): that is why special stress is laid on it in the Qur-an.

2322. These Beautiful Names of God are many. For tablit purposes a list of 99 is made out in Badith literature: that in Tirmizi is considered authoritative. Qadith Muhammad Sulaiman has published an Urdu monograph on the subject, published by the Daftar Rahmatun-ili-Alamin, Patiala, 1930. Those who wish to see a poetic Commentary on the names in the form of stories in English may consult Sir Edwin Arnold's Pearls of the Faith. Sir Edwin's stories are of unequal merit, but a fine example is furnished by No. 4, a-Madik, "The King".

233. Cf. vii, 205. All prayer should be pronounced with earnestness and humility, whether it is congregational prayer or the private outpouring of one's, own soul. Such an attitude is not consistent with an over-loud pronunciation of the words, though in public prayers the standard of permissible loudness is naturally higher than in the case of private prayer. In public prayers, of course, the 1 no r call to prayer will be in a loud votice to be heard near and tar, but the chants from the Sacred Book should be neither so loud as to attract the hostile notice of those who do not believe nor so low in tone as not to be heard by the whole congregation.

2234. A first step towards the understanding of God's nature is to clear our mind from superstitions, such as that God begot a son, or that He has partners, or that He is dependent upon other beings to protect Him from barm and jumiliation. We must realise that He is the One and Only Reality: His greatness and glory are above anything we can conceive: but using our highest spiritual ideas, we must declare forth His greatness and glory.

The SDra began with singing the glory and praises of God: it ends on the same note, concluding the argument. The next SDra takes up the same theme from another point of view, and opens with the same note, "Praise be to God".

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XVIII (Kahf).

It has been explained in the Introduction to S. xvii how the five Suras xvii to xxi develop the theme of the individual soul's spiritual history, and how they fit into the general scheme of exposition.

This particular Meccan Sūra may be called a lesson on the brevity and mystery of Life. First there is the story of the Companions of the Cave who slept therein for a long period, and yet thought they had been there only a day or less. Then there is the story of the mysterious Teacher who shows Moses how Life itself is a parable. And further there is the story of Zul-qarnain, the two-horned one, the powerful ruler of west and east, who made an iron wall to protect the weak against the strong. The parables refer to the brevity, uncertainty, and vanity of this life; to the many paradoxes in it, which can only be understood by patience and the fulness of knowledge; and to the need of guarding our spiritual gains against the incursions of evil.

Summary.—The Qur-an is a direction and a warning. This life is brief and subject to vicissitudes. Our ideas of Time are defective, as shown in the story of the Companions of the Cave, who had faith, truth, patience, and other virtues. But their life was a mystery that can be fathomed but by few (xviii, 1-22, and C. 133).

Knowledge is for God: be on your guard against idle conjectures and cock-sure hopes. Learn from the Qur-an Parable of the man who is puffed up with this world's goods and is brought to nought (xviii. 23-44, and C. 134).

This life is uncertain and variable: goodness and virtue are better and more durable. For the Day of Reckoning will come, with its Mercy and its Wrath (xviii, 45-59, and C. 135).

Moses in his thirst for knowledge forgot his limitations. Patience and faith were enjoined on him, and he understood when the paradoxes of Life were explained (xviii, 60-82, and C. 136).

Zul-quenain had a wide dominion: he punished the guilty and rewarded the good: he protected the weak from the lawless: but he had faith, and valued the guidance of God. God is One, and His service is righteousness (xviii. 83-110, and C. 137).

C. 133.—The Book of Revelation gives straight
(xviii. 1-22.) Directions to make our lives straight,—
10 warn us against Evil and guide us
To the Good everlasting. Teach the Truth,
But fret not about men rejecting it.
The Parable of the Companions of the Cave
Shows how God works wonders beyond
Our fathoming: how Faith is a sure
Refuge in ways we know not; how
Time itself works God's Plan
Before we know how it passes;
How He can give us rest and raise
Us back to life against all odds;
And how futile it is to engage
In controversies about matters we know not.

The spirit of man inakes gradual progress upwards, through the grace and mercy of God.

236. Some people's idea of a Sacred Book is that it should be full of mysteries—dark corners, ambiguous expressions, words so far removed from human speech that they cover anything or nothing. Pagan oracles were couched in language which suggested one meaning to the hearer and claimed to have the very opposite meaning in the light of events which actually happened subsequently. They were distinctly crooked, not straight in the next verse the word "Straight" (qaiyim) is used to characterize the Qurān, in contrast to this word "crooked" ('tiwaj). See also xix, 36. n. 2480.

237. Qaiyim: straight, that which has no bends and no corners to myaifly people, that which speaks clearly and unambiguously, that which guides to the right path. C.J. x. 36, where the adjective is used for a straight usage, in contrast to usages, which tend to myaifly and deceive people. The Qur-In is above all things straight, clear, and perspicuous. Its directions are plain for everyone to understand. Any book that deals with the highest myasteries of spiritual life must necessarily have portions whose full meaning is clearer to some minds than to others not so well prepared. But there there is nowhere any mystification, any desire to wrap up things in dark sayings repugnant to human reason. God's purpose is to give clear warning of spiritual dangers and lead up to the highest bliss.

2328. The "Reward" is not a material thing, or limited by time or space. It is a state of bits. Cf. Milton's "The mind is its ...wn place, and in itself can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven" (P. L. i. 254-55). "God hath begotten a son ": ""

- 5. No knowledge have they Of such a thing, nor Had their fathers. It is A grievous thing that issues From their mouths as a saying. What they say is nothing But falsehood!

وَانَا لَحَمْ لِلوُنَ مِنَا عَلَيْهَا

2329. The warning is not only needed for those who deny God or deny His Message, but also for those whose lake ideas of God degrade religion in supposing that God begot a son, for God is One and is High shove any ideas of physical reproduction.

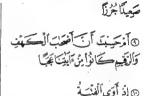

2330. The attribution of a son "begotten" to God has no basis in fact or in reason. It is only a "word" or "saying" that issues out of their mouths. It is not even a dogma that is reasoned out or can be explained in any way that is consistent with the spiritual nature of God.

2331. In a reasonable world the preaching of a reasonable Faith like that of Islam would win universit acceptance. But the world is not altogether reasonable. It caused great distress to the unselfish Preacher of Islam that his Message met with so much opposition. He wanted to point the way to salvation. He only got, in the Meccan period, abuse from the chiefs of the Meccans—abuse and persecution, not only for himself but for the Truth which he was preaching. A heart less stout than his might have been appailed at what seemed the hopeless task of reclaiming the world from falsehood, superstition, selfishness, wrong, and oppression. He is here consoled, and told that he was not to fret himself to death: he was nobly doing his duty, and, as after events showed, the seed of Truth was alleady germinating, although this was not wisble at the time. Besides, these "chiefs" and "leaders" were only strutting in false plumes: their glory was soon to fade for ever.

2332. This world's goods—, worldly power, glory, wealth, position, and all that men scramble for,—are but a fleeting show. The possession or want of them does not betoken a man's real value or position in the spiritual world, the world which is to endure. Yet they have there uses. They test a man's sterling quality. He who becomes their slave loses rank in the spiritual world. He who uses them if he gets them, and does not fall into despair if he does not get them, shows his true mettle and quality. His conduct proclaims him.

10. Behold, the youths betook themselves ****

2333. The fairest sights on the earth will become as dust and waste when this earth vanishes, and true spiritual values are restored.

2334. A wonderful story or allegory is now referred to — Its lessons are: (1) the relativity of Time, (2) the unreality of the position of oppressor and oppressed, persecutor and presecuted, on this earth, (3) the truth of the final Resurrection, when true values will be restored, and (4) the potency of Faith and Prayer to lead to the Right. Wonderful though such things may seem to be, they happen every day on God's earth !

2335. The unbelieving Quraish were in the habit of putting posers to the holy Prophet—questions which they got from Christians and Jews, which they thought the Prophet would be unable to answer. In this way they hoped to discredit him. One of these questions was about the floating Christian legend of the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus. The Prophet not only told them the main story but pointed out the variations that were current, and rebuked men for disputing about such details (xviii. 22). Most important of all, he treated the story (under inspiration) as a parable, pointing to spiritual lessons of the highest value. This is Revelation in the highest sense of the term. The story is recapitulated in n. 237 below.

2336. Raqtm=Inscription. So interpreted by the Jalalain, and the majority of Commentators agree. See n 2337, below. Others think it was the name of the dog: see xviii. 18, and n, 2350 below.

2337. The bare Christian story (without the spiritual lessons taught in the Quir-an) is told in Gibbon's Decise and Fall or the Roman Empire (end of chapter 33). In the reign of a Roman Empire who persecuted the Christians, seven Christian youths of Ephesus left the town and hid themselves in a cave in a mountain near by. They fell aslaten, and remained asleep for some generations or centuries. When the wall which sealed up the cave was being demolished, the youths awoke. They still thought of the world in which they had previously lived. They had no idea of the duration of time. But when one of them went to the town to purchase provisions, he found that the whole world had changed. The Christian religion, instead of being persecuted was fashionable: in fact it was now the State religion. His dress and speech, and the money which he brought, seemed to belong to another world. This attracted attention. The great ones of the land visited the Cave, and verified the tale by questioning the man's Companions.

When the story became very popular and circulated throughout the Roman Empire, we may well suppose that an Inscription was put up at the mouth of the Cave. See verse 9 and n 2356. This inscription was probably to be seen for many years afterwards, as Ephensus was a famous city on the west coast of Asia Minor, about forly to fifty miles south of Smyrna. Later on, the Khalifa Waithiq (842-816 A.D.) sent an expedition to examine and identify the locality, as he did about the Zul-Qarnain barrier in Central Asia (Appendix VII at the end of this Sura).

A popular story circulating from mouth to mouth would necessarily be vague as to dates and vary very much in details. Somewhere about the 6th century AD, a Syriac writer reduced it to writing. He suggested that the youths were seven in number; that they went to sleep in the reign of the Emperor Decius (who reigned from 249 to 151 AD, and who was a violent persecutor of Christianity); and that they awoke in the reign of Theodosius II, who reigned from 49 to 450 A.D. In our literature Decius is known as Daqyanus (from the adjectival Latin from Decianus), and the name stands as a symbol of injustice and oppression, and also of things old fashioned and out-of-date, as res Deciane must have been two or three centuries after Decius.

2338. The youths hid in the cave, but they trusted in God, and made over their whole case to Min prayer. Then they apparently fell asleep, and knew nothing of what was happening in the vorld-outside.

2339, Direc (a veri) over their ears: i.e., sealed their ears, so that they heard nothing. As they were in the Cave they saw nothing. So they were completely cut off from the outer world, it was as if they had died, with their knowledge and ideas remaining at the point of time when they had entered the Cave. It is as if a watch stops at the exart moment of some accident, and any one taking it up afterwards can preceively fix the time of the accident.

2340. Roused them: or raised them up from their sleep or whatever condition they had falled into Aviit, 18), so that they began to perceive the timps around them, but only with the memories of the time at which they had ceased to be in touch with the world.

231). When they awoke to consciousness, they had lost all count of time. Though they had all entered together, and lain together in the same place for the same length of time, their impressions of the time they had passed were quite different. Time is thus related to our on internal expenseoes. We have to learn the lesson that men as good as ourselves may yet differ as to their reactions to certain facts, and that in such matters disputes are unseemly. It is best to say, "God knows best" (xviii, 19).

2342. Their Faith carried them higher and higher on the road to Truth Faith is cumulative, Each step leads higher and higher, by the grace and mercy of God.

2344. We may suppose them to have taken their stand and made a public protest before they betook themselves to the Cave (xviii. 16). The story really begins at xviii 13, and the verses xviii, 9-12 may be considered as introductory. As the emphasis is on spiritual lessons, the facts stated in the introductory part are passed over lightly in the story.

2345. Besides the heathen gods, the cult of the Emperors also became fashionable in the Roman Empire in the first three centuries of the Christian Bra. The statue of Diana (Artemis) at Ephesus had been one of the wonders of the ancient world. The city was a great seaport and the capital of Roman Asia. We may therefore imagine how the heathen cults must have flourished there. St. Paul spent three years preaching there, and was mobbed and assaulted, and compelled to leave (Acts, xiz. 1-41).

2346. That is, 'do not be afraid of anything: put your whole case in the hands of God: at present you are being persecuted; he will solve your difficulties and give you ease and comfort. The public protest ends at verse 15. In verse 16 they are taking counsel among themselves. After they go into the Case, verse 17 introduces us to the scene where they are lying in the midst of the Cave in tranquil confidence in God.

234? In the latitude of Ephesus, 38° north, i.e. well above the sun's northern declination, a cave opening to north, would never have the heat of the sun within it, as the sunny side would be the south. If the youths lay on their backs with their faces looking to the north, i e towards the entrance of the Cave, the sun would rise on their right side, declining to the south, and set on their left side, leaving them cool and confortable.

It set, turning away
From them to the left,
While they lay in the open
Space in the midst
Of the Cave. Such are Among the Signs of God:
He whom God guides <sup>1946</sup>
Is rightly guided; but he Whom God leaves to stray,—
For him wilt thou find
No protector to lead him
To the Right Way.

<sup>2348.</sup> The youths, having faith and trust in God, found safety and refuge in the Cave. They were protected from the persecution and violence of the heathen. Their prayer (xviii lb) was heard.

<sup>2319.</sup> Perhaps their eyes were open, even though their senses were sealed in sleep. They turned about on their sides as men do in sleep.

<sup>235</sup>f. This is the point of the story. Their own human impressions were to be compared, each with the other. They were to be made to see that with the best goodwill and the most honest enquiry they might reach different conclusions; that they were not to waste their time in vain controversies, but to get on to the main business of life; and that God alone had full knowledge of the things that seem to us so strange, or inconsistent, or inexplicable, or that produce different impressions on different minds. If they entered the Cave in the morning and woke up in the afternoon, one of them might well think they had been there only a few hours—only part of a day. This relative or fallacious impression of Time also gives us an inkling of the state when there will be no Time, of the Resurrection when all our little impressions of this life will be corrected by the final Reality. This mystry of time has puzzled many contemplative minds. Cf., "Dark time that haunts us with the briefness of our days "(Thomas Wolfe in "Of Time and the River").

" How long have ye stayed (here)? They said, "We have stayed (Perhaps) a day, or part Of a day." (At length) They (all) said, "God (alone) Knows best how long Ye have stayed here ... 2353. They now give up barren controversy and come to the practical business of life. But their thoughts are conditioned by the state of things that existed when they entered the Cave. The money they carried was the money coined in the reign of the monarch who persecuted the Religion of Unity and favoured the false cults of Paganism.

2354. Best food: i.e., purest, most wholesome, perhaps also most sultable for those who rejected idea worship. i.e., not dedicated to idols. For they still imagined the world in the same state in which they had known it before they entered the Cave.

2355. They think that the world had not changed, and that the faces persecution they knew still raging, under which a man had to pay by his life for his religious faith, if he could not conform to Pagan worship.

2336. That is, never reap the spiritual good which your knowledge, instruction, and experience entitle you to attain. To become a renegade, to give up the Truth which you have won, simply on account of the fear of men, is the most despicable form of cowardice, and would rightly close the door of salvation if strict justice were to be done. But even then God's Mercy comes to the cowards aid so long as the door of repentance is open.

2357. Thus: in this way, by these means, i.e., by the sending out of one of the Sleepers with the old money to the town to buy provisions. His old-fashioned dress, appearance, and speech, and the old uncurrent money which he brought, at once drew the attention of people to him. When they learnt his story, they realised that God, Who can protect His servants thus and ratise them up from sleep after such a long tune, has-power to raise up men for the Resurrection, and that His promise of goodness and mercy to those who serve Him is true and was exemplified in this striking way. On the other hand, to the men of the Cave themselves, it became clear that God can change the situation before we are aware, and our hope in Him is not futile, and that even when we are on the brink of despair, a revolution is surely working in the world before the world itself realises it.

238. The perversity of man is such that as soon as ever a glimpse of truth becomes manifest, men fall into controversies about it. The Sleepers could not judge about the duration of their slay in the Cave, but they wisely left the matter and attended to the urgent business of their lives. The townsfolk could not agree as to the significance of the event; they fell to discussing immaterial details, "What sort of a memorial should they raise"—a house or a place of worship or a table? The place of worship was built. But the real significance of the spiritual meaning was missed until explained in the Out-an

Sleepers

2359. The controversy in after ages raged about the number of the Sleepers: were they three or five or seven? People answered, not from knowledge, but from conjecture. Gibbon's version, which has now become best known, makes the number of Sleepers seven. The point was immaterial; the real point was the spiritual lesson.

2360. The true significance of the story is known only to a few. Most men discuss futile details, which are not in their knowledge.

2361. It is unprofitable to eater such immaterial controversies and many others that have been waged about Religion by shallow men from time immemorial. Yet, if there is a matter of clear knowledge from experience that matters, we must openly proclaim it, that the world may be brought to listen to God's Truth.

2362. Vulgar story-mongers as such know little of the true significance of stories and parables. What need is there to go into details of the number of men in the Cave, or of the time they remained there?

C. 134.—True knowledge is with God alone. (zviii, 23-44.) We are not to dispute on matters

Of conjecture, but to rely on the Truth That comes from God. As in the Parable. The man who piles up wealth And is puffed up with this world's goods, Despising those otherwise endowed, Will come to an evil end, For his hopes were not built on God.

"I hope that my Lord
Will guide me ever closer
(Even) than this
To the right road." 2811

 So they stayed in their Cave Three hundred years, and (some) Add nine (more) 1000

2363, Verses 23 and 24 are parenthetical. We must never rely upon our own resources so much as forget God. If Aby any chance we do forget, we must come back to Him and keep Him in remembrance, as did the Companions of the Cave.

2364. In geometry the perfect circle is an ideal. Any given circle that we draw is not so perfect that we cannot draw one closer to the ideal. So in our life, there is always the hope of drawing closer and closer to God.

'2365 This verse should be read with the next verse. In the floating oral tradition the duration of time in the Cave was given differently in different versions. When the tradition was reduced to writing, some Christian writers (e.g., Sincon Metaphrastes) names 375 years, some less. In round numbers 300 years in the solar Calendar would amount to 309 in the lunar Calendar. But the next verse points out that all these are mere conjectures: the number is known to God along.

The authority on which Gibbon relies mentions two definite reigns, that of Decius (249-251 A.D.) and that of Theodosius II (408-450 A.D.). Taking 250 and 490, we get an interval of 200 years. But the point of the story does not lie in the name of any given Emperor, but in the fact that the beginning of the period coincided with an Emperor who persecuted: the Emperor's name at the end of the period may be taken as approximately correct, because the story was recorded within two generations afterwards. One of the worst Emperors to persecute the Christians was Neto who reigned from $4$ to 68. If we took the end of his reign (A.D. 68) as the initial point, and (say) 440 A.D. as the final point, we get the 372 years of Simeon Metaphrastes. But none of these writers knew any more than we do. Our best course is to follow the Quranic injunction, "Say, God knows best how long they-stayed" (xwiti 26). There is also a rebuke implied; 'do not instate these men who love mischievous controversies!' After all, we are given the narrative more as a parable than as a story.

2366. Who are "they" in this sentence? They may be the Companions of the Cave, for they put themselves under the protection of God, and disowned all attribution of partners to Him. Or "they" may refer to the people in general who go wrong and become "Mushriks", i.e., attribute imaginasy partners to God.

2367. His Command: i.e., God's government of the world, or in His Judgment on the Day of Judgment;

2368. His Words: His Commands, Decrees, Orders.

 ذَخِيرَ وَيَلْبَسُونَ

2371. Our choice in our limited Free will involves a corresponding personal responsibility. We are offered the Truth: again and again is it pressed on our attention. If we reject it, we must take all the terribile consequences which are prefigured in the Fire of Hell. Its fames and roof will completely enclose us like a teht. Ordinarily there is water to quench the heat of thirst; here the only drink will be like molten brass, thick, heavy, burning, sizzling. Before it reaches the mouth of the unfortunates, drops of it will scald their faces as it is poured out 2372. The righteous will be rewarded, as has been said again and again, beyond their merits: xxviii 84; xxx 39. Not a single good deed of theirs will lose its reward, and the mercy of God will blot out their sins.

<sup>2375.</sup> Here is a simple parable of the contrast between two men. One was purse-proud, and forgot that what he had was from God, by way of a trust and a trial in this life. The other boasted of nothing: his trust was in God. The worldly wealth of the first was destroyed, and he had nothing left. The second was the hadoor in the end.

<sup>2376</sup> The two men began to compare notes. The arrogant one was puffed up with his possessions, his income, and his large family and following, and thought in his self-complacency that it would last for ever. He was also wrong in looking down on his Companion, who, though less affluent, was the better man of the two

2377. It was not wealth that ruined him, but the attitude of his mind. He was unjust, not so much to his neighbour, as to his own soul. In his love of the material, he forgot or openly defed the spiritual. As verse 37 shows, he took his companion with him to impress him with his own importance, but the companion was unmoved.

2378. Here comes out the grasping spirit of the materialist. In his mind "hetter" means more work and more power, of the kind he was enjoying in this life, although in reality, even what he had, rested on hollow foundations and was doomed to perish and bring him down with it.

2379. The three stages of men's creation: first dust, or clay, itself created out of nothing, and forming the physical basis of his body; then, out of the produce of the earth as incorporated in the parents' body, the sperm drop (with the corresponding receptive element); and then when the different elements were mixed in due proportion, and the soul was breathed into him, the fashioned man. G/J.JKXVII. 2, and xv. 28.29.

2380. The companion's argument divides itself into five parts. (1) He remonstrates against the proud man denying God. (2) He, from his own spiritual experience, proclaims that God is One and that He is good. (3) He points out to him the better way of enjoying God's gifls, with gratitude to Him. (4) He expresses contentment and satisfaction in God's dealings with him. (5) He gives a warning of the fielding nature of this world's goods and the certainty of God's punishment for inordinate vanity.

2381. The punishment was that of thunderholts (hushanan), but the general meaning of the word includes any punishment by way of a reckoning (hisab), and I think that an earthquake is also implied, as it alters water-courses, diverts channels underground, throws up silt and sand, and covers large areas with rum, as happened in the Bihar earthquake of 1934.

2382. "Fruits", "spent", "twisting of the hands", should all be understood in a wide metaphorical sense, as well as the literal sense. He had great income and satisfaction, which were all gone, What resources he had lavished on his property! His thoughts had been engrossed on it; his hopes had been built on it; it had become the absorbing passion of his life. If he had only looked to God, instead of to the ephemeral goods of this world!

2383 In this case, in his mind, there was his own Self and his Mammon as rivals to God I

2384. He had built up connections and obliged dependants, and was proud of having his " quiver full.". But where were all things when the reckoning came. He could not help himself; how could others be expected to help him!

Are the best of possessions in God's sight:
All will be levelled up on the Day

Evil ones in preference to God? Let us accept
Truth, for though Falsehood may flourish
For a time, it must persish in the end.

  Who prevails over all things.
- 46. Wealth and sons are allurements Of the life of this world:
  But the things that endure,
  Good Deeds, are best
  In the sight of thy Lord,
  As rewards, and best
  As (the foundation for) hopes. SANT

۞ الْمَالُوَّالْمِتُوْنَ نِيَنَةُ ٱلْكِيَّا فِالدُّنْيُّ وَالْمِيْنِيْتُ ٱلصَّلِيحَتُ خَبُرُّ عِندَ رَبِكَ فَكَابًا وَخَبْرُ آمَاكُ

2385, All else is vanity, uncertainty, the sport of Time. The only hope or truth is from God. Other rewards and other successes are illusory; the best Reward and the best Success come from God.

2366. Rain-water is a good thing in itself, but it does not last, and you can build no solid foundations on it. It is soon absorbed in the earth, and produces the flourishing appearance of grass, and vegetation—for a time. Soon these decay, and become as dry stubble, which the least wind from any quarter will blow about like a thing of no importance. The water is gone, and so is the vegetation to which it lent a brave show of luxuriance temporarily. Such is the lift of this word, contrasted with the inner and real Life, which looks to the Hereafter," God is the only enduring Power we can look to, supreme over all.

2387. Other things are fleeting; but Good Deeds have a lasting value in the sight of God. They are best as (or for) rewards in two ways; (1) they flow from us by the Grace of God, and are themselves rewards for our Faith; (2) they become the foundation of our hopes for the highest spiritual rewards in the Hereafter.

- 47. One Day We shall
  Remove the mountains, and thou
  Wilt see the earth
  As a level stretch, and
  And We shall gather them,
  All together, nor shall We Leave out any one of them.
- 48. And they will be marshalled Before thy Lord in ranks, (With the announcement), "Now have ye come to Us (Bare) as We created you see First: aye, ye thought We shall not fulfil The appointment made to you To meet (Us)!"." ***
- 49. And the Book (of Deeds)
  Will be placed (before you);
  And thou wilt see
  The sinful in great terror
  Because of what is (recorded)
  Therein; they will say,
  "Ah! woe to us!
  What a book is this!
  It leaves out nothing
  Small or great, but Takes account thereof!"
  They will find all that they Did, placed before them:
  And not one will thy Lord
  Treat with injustice."

2388. On the Day of Judgment none of our present landmarks will remain.

3389. We shall stand as we were created, with none of the adventitious possessions that we collected in this life, which will all have vanished.

2390. The sceptics will now at length be convinced of the Reality which will be upon them,

. 239). Personal responsibility, for all deeds in this life will then be enforced. But it will be done with perfect justice. Expressed in the forms of this word, it will amount to a clear statement of all we did in this life: the record will be put before us to convince us. As it will be a perfect record, with no omissions and no wrong entries, it will be perfectly convincing. Where there is punishment, it has been earned by the wrong-doer's own deeds, not imposed on him unjustly.

2392. Cf. ii. 34, where the story is told of the fall of mankind through Adam. Here the point is referred to in order to bring bome the individual responsibility of the erring soul. 'Iblis is your enemy; you have been told his history; will you prefer to go to him rather than to the merciful God, your Creator and Cherisher? What a false exchange you would make!

2393. Cf. vi. 100, n. 929.

2394, Satan's progeny: we need not take the epithet literally. All his followers are his progeny: even the evil thoughts born in man out of Satan's influence are Satan's progeny.

2395. Out of the limited free-will that man has, if he were to choose Evil instead of Good. Satan instead of God, what a dreadful choice it would be! It would really be an evil exchange. For man is God's creature, cared for and cherished by Him. He abandons his Cherisher to become the slave of his enemy!

2396. God wants man's good : how can He take Evil for His partner?

2397. Some Commentators construe: "And We shall make a partition between them": i.e., the Evil ones will not even be seen by their misguided followers, much as the latter may go on calling on them.

- 54. We have explained
  In detail in this Qur-an,
  For the benefit of mankind,
  Every kind of similitude:
  But man is, in most things,
  Contentious.
- 55. And what is there
  To keep back men
  From believing, now that
  Guidance has come to them,
  Nor from praying for forgiveness
  From their Lord, but that
  (They ask that) the ways
  Of the ancients be repeated With them, or the Wrath
  Be brought to them
  Face to face?
- 56. We only send the apostles
  To give glad tidings
  And to give warnings: ***
  But the Unbelievers dispute
  With vain argument, in order
  Therewith to weaken the truth,
  And they treat My Signs
  As a jest, as also the fact
  That they are warned!

 وَمِنَا الْهُورُولُ هُمْشُرُولَ

2398. If men had not cultivated the habit of contention and obstmacy, they would have found that the parables and similitudes of Scripture had fully met their difficulties, and they would gladly have obeyed the call of God.

2399. But man's obstinacy or contrariness asks or calls for a repetition of what happened to the wicked and those who rejected Faith in ancient times. Out of currosity, or by way of challenge, they seem to court the Punishment and ask that it be brought to pass at once. But it will come soon enough, and then they will think it too early 1 Cf. xiii 6 and n, 1810.

2400 The men of God are not sent to humour us with dialecture or satisfy the vulgar cunosity for miracles or dark unusual things. There is no "crookedness" (xviii. 1) in their preaching. They come to preach the Truth,—not in an abstract way, but with special reference to our conduct. They give us the good news of salvation lest we despair in the presence of Sin, and to warn us clearly of the dangers of Svii. Vain controverses about words only weaken their mission, or turn it into ridicule. The singoldy have a trick also of treating the earnest preaching to them itself as a jest and ridiculin it.

FC. 136.

58. But your Lord is Most Forgiving, Full of Mercy. If He were To call them (at once) to account For what they have earned, Then surely He would Have hastened their Punishment: But they have their appointed Time, beyond which with they Will find no refuge.

59. Such were the populations
We destroyed when they Committed iniquities; but
We fixed an appointed time
For their destruction.

﴿ وَمَنْ أَظُلُمْ مِنْ ذُكِّ رَئِياً يُكِ رَئِيهِ فَأَعْضَ عَنْهَا وَنَنِي مَا قَدْمَتْ بَكَاةً إِنَّ جَمَالُنَا عَلَى مُلْيُهِمْ أَكِنَّةً أَن يَفْقَهُوهُ وَفِى الْذَيْهِمْ وَقُولً وَإِن تَدْعُهُمْ إِلَى الْمُدَىٰ فَكُنْ يَشْدُدُولِ إِذَا أَبْهَا

وَبْلِكَ الْفَرْخَآ فَلَكَ لَمْ مَا ظَلُواْ وَجَعَلْنَا
 الشّيكي يرمّوعينًا

C. 136.—Moses was up against mysteries
(zvii. 608s) Which he wanted to explore. He searched
Out a man endued with knowledge
Derived from the divine springs from which Flow the paradoxes of life He is shown
Three such paradoxes and how human

2401. Considering the power of sin, and how it gets hold of the hearts of men, and considering all the wrongs that men have done, it is the height of folly and injustice on their part to turn away from warnings which are given expressly for their good. But a stage of callousness is reached, when, by their own choice, they have rendered themselves impervious to God's Grace. At that stage a veil is put over their hearts and they are left alone for a time, that they may commune with themselves and perhaps repent and seek God's Mercy again. If they do not, it is their own loss. See next verse.

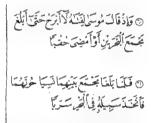

2402. Mindanihi: should we take the pronoun to refer to "the appointed time," or to "your Lord," mentioned at the beginning of the verse? Most Commentators take the former view, and I have translated accordingly. But I agree with those who take the latter view, and the better translation would be: "But they have their appointed time, and except with God, they will find no refuge." That means that even during the period allowed Jhem, when they are left to wander astray as they have rejected God's Grace. God's Mercy is open to them if they will repent and return; but nothing but God's Mercy can save them

2403. The instances of exemplary Punishment in former times were also subject to this rule, that God gives pienty of rope to the wicked, in case they might turn, repent, and obtain His Mercy.

Impatience is inconsistent with their true Understanding. The highest knowledge Comes not except by divine gift, And a constant, patient striving, With Faith, to apprehend something Of the purpose of the All-Wise God.

SECTION 9

- 60. Thehold, Moses said 466
  To his attendant, "I will not Give up until I reach
  The junction of the two 466
  Seas or (until) I spend
  Years and years in travel," 2603
- 61. But when they reached
  The Junction, "off they forgot
  (About) their Fish," which took
  Its course through the sea
  (Straight) as in a tunnel,

2004. This episotic in the story of Moses is meant to illustrate four points. (1) Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Kerns in this vession did not comprehend everything, even as the whole stock of the knowledge of the present day, in the sciences and the arts, and in iterature, (if it could be supposed to be gathered in one individuals), does not include all knowledge. Divine knowledge, as far as man is concerned, is unlimited. Even after Moses received his divine (2) Constant effort is necessary to keep our knowledge supare with the march of time, and such effort Moses is shown to be making. (3) The mysterious man he meets (xiii 65 and a 2411), to whom Tradition assigns the name of Khidar (literally, Green), is the type of that knowledge whole is ever green, fresh, and flourishing, ever in contact with life as it-actually lived, and not interly crystallied in books or second-hand sayings. The second kind of knowledge has its uses, but is only a stepping-stone to the first kind of knowledge, which is true knowledge and which is from God direct (xviii, 65). (4) There are paradoxes in the: apparent loss may be real gain; apparent cruelty may be real merry; returning good for evil may really be justice and not generosity (xviii 79-82). God's wisdom transerus all human calculation.

1405. The most probable geographical location (if any is required in a story that is a parable) is where the two arms of the Red Sea join together, rise, the Gulf of Anaba and the Gulf of Siez. They enclose the Sinai Penissula, in which Moses and the Israelites spent many years in their wanderings. There is also authority (see Baldhaws note) for interpreting the two seas as the two great streams of knowledge, which were to meet in the persons of Moses and Ehighr.

2406, Huqub means a long but indefinite space of time. Sometimes it is limited to 80 years, 2407. Literally, 'the junction of (the space) between the two,' i.e., the point at which the two seas were united.

2408. Moses was to go and find a servant of God, who would instruct him in such knowledge as had not already got. He was to take a fish with him. The place where he was to meet his mysterious Teacher would be indicated by the fact that the fish would disappear when he got to that place. The fish is the emblem of the fruit of secular knowledge, which merges itself in divine knowledge at the point where human intelligence is ready for the junction of the two. But the mere merger of secular knowledge does not in itself produce divine knowledge. The latter has to be sought patiently.

- 62. When they had passed on (Some distance), Moses said To his attendant: "Bring us Our early meal; truly We have suffered much fatigue ""
  At this (stage of) our journey."
- 63. He replied: "Sawest thou (What happened) when we Betook ourselves to the rock? I did indeed forget (About) the Fish: none but Satan made me forget To tell (you) about it;" took its course through The sea in a marvellous way!"
- 64. Moses said: "That was what We were seeking after:" So they went back On their footsteps, following (The path they had come).

فَلَمَاجَاوَزَا قَالَ لِنَشَهُ عَائِنَاغَمَاءَنَالَقَدُ
 لَقِينَامِنسَفَرِنَا هَلَائَضَبًا

۞ قَالَأَرْنِيَكُ إِذْ أَوَيْنَكَ إِلَى الصَّحْمُ فِلَاِنِي نَشِيئًا كُونَ مَنَا أَسَلَيْمِ الْإِلَا الشَّيْطُلُ اللَّذَكُونُ وَالْخَذَ سَبِيلَهِ فِالْمُحْتِجَةً

و قَالَ ذَاكِ مَا كُنَا نَبَغِ فَأَنْتَفَا عَلَى اللهِ عِمَا اللهِ عِمَا اللهِ عَلَى اللهِ عِمَا اللهِ عَمَا ا تَصَعَمَا

فَوَجَداً عَبْدًا يِّنْ عِبَادِيناً
 فَوَجَداً عَبْدًا يِّنْ عِبَادِيناً

2409. When they came to the Junction of the Seas, Moses forgot about the fish, and his attendant forgot to tell him of the fact that he had seen the fish escaping into the sea in a marvellous way. They passed on, but the stages now became heavier and heavier, and more fatiguing to Moses. So when our old knowledge is exhausted, and we come to the brink of new knowledge, we have a feeling of strangeness, heaviness, and difficulty, sepicially when we want to pass the new knowledge by and do not make it our own. Some refreshment, even if it be in our old traditional way, is required to sustain us. But we mist retrace our steps, and seek the accredited repository of the knowledge which is our quest. It is our business-to seek him out. We shall not find him without effort.

2410. The attendant actually saw the 8sh swimming away in the sea, and yet "furgot" to tell his master. In his case the "forgetting" was more than forgetting. Inertia had made him refrant from telling the important news. In such matters inertia is almost as had as active spite, the suggestion of Satan. So new knowledge or spiritual knowledge is not only passed by in ignorance, but sometimes by culpable negligence.

2411, One of Our servants: his name is not mentioned in the Qur-ân, but Tradition gives it as Ehdigh. Round him have gathered a number of picturesque folk tales, with which we are not here concerned. "Æhdigh" means: "Green": his knowledge is fresh and green, and drawn out of the living sources of life for it is drawn from God's own Presence. He is a mysterious being, who has to be sought out. He has the secrets of the paradoxes of Life, which ordinary people do not understand, or understand in a wrong sense, as we shall see further on. The nearest equivalent figure in the literature of the People of the Book is Melchizedek or Melchizedek (the Greek form in the New Testament). In Gen. xiv, 18-20, he appears as king of Salem, priest of the Minst High God: he blesses Abraham, and Abraham gives him tithes. St. Paul allegoness him in his Epstile to the Hebrews (v. 6-10; vii. 1-10): "he was without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life.", That, is to say, he appeared mysteriously: neither his parentage nor his pedigree is known, and he seems to live for all time. These qualities are also attributed to Khighr in Muslim tradition.

On whom We had bestowed Mercy from Ourselves And whom We had taught Knowledge from Our own 2012 Presence.

- 66. Moses said to him:

  "May I'follow thee,
  On the footing that
  Thou teach me something
  Of the (Higher) Truth
  Which thou hast been taught?" ***
- 67. (The other) said: "Verily
  Thou wilt not be able
  To have patience with me! 2444
- 69. Moses said: "Thou wilt Find me, if God so will, (Truly) patient: nor shall I Disobey thee in aught." 2416

2412. Khidhr had two special gifts from God: (1) Mercy from His own Presence, and (2) Knowledge from His own Presence The first freed him from the ordinary incidents of daily human life; and the second entitled him to interpret the inner meaning and mystery of events, as we shall see. further on. Much could be and has been written about this from the mystic point of wew.

2413. Moses, not understanding the full import of what he was asking, makes a simple request. He wants to learn something of the special Knowledge which God had bestowed on Khidhr.

2414. Khidh: smiles, and says that there will be many things which Moses will see with him, which Moses will not completey understand and which will make Moses impatient. The highest spiritual knowledge often seems paradoxical to those who have not the key to it.

2415. Khidhr does not blame Moses Each one of us can only follow our own imperfect lights to the best of our judgment, but if we have Faith, we are saved many false steps.

2416. Moses has Faith. He adopts the true attitude of the learner to the Teacher, and promises to obey in all things, with the help of God. The Teacher is doubtful, but premits him to follow him on condition that he asks no questions about anything until the Teacher himself mentions it first.

70. The other said: "If then Thou wouldst follow me, Ask me no questions About anything until I Myself speak to thee Concerning it."

2419. The inhabitants were churlish. They broke the universal Eastern rule of hospitality to strangers, and thus showed themselves beyond the pale of ordinary human courtesies. Note that they would have been expected to offer hospitality of themselves, unasked. Here Moses and his companion actually had to ask for hospitality and were refused point-blank.

2420. As they were refused hospitality, they should, as self-respecting men, have shaken the dust of the town off their feet, or shown their indignation in some way. Instead of the Khidhr actually goes and does a benevolent act. He rebuilds for them a falling wall, and never sisk for any compensation for it. Perhaps he employed local workmen for it and paid them wages, thus actually benefiting a town which had treated him and his companion so shabbily! Moses is naturally surrorsed and asks. "Could you not at least have asked for the cost?"

2421. The story and the interpretation are given with the greatest economy of words. It would repay us to search for the meaning in terms of our own inner and outer experience.

2422. They went on me boat, which was plying for hire. Its owners were not even ordinary men who piled for trade. They had been reduced to great poverty, perhaps from allluent circumstances, and deserved great commissration, the more so as they preferred an honest calling to begging for charity. They did not know, but Chighr did, that that boat, perhaps a new one, had been marked down to be commandered by an unjust king who served on every boat he could get—it may have been, for warlike purposes. If this boat had been taken away from these self-respecting men, they would have been reduced to beggary, with no resources left them. By a simple act of making it unseaworthy, the boat was saved from sezure. The owners could repair it as soon as the danger was past, Khidh, probably paid libetally in fares, and what seemed an unaccountably cruel act, was the greatest act of kindness be could do in the circumstances.

2423. This seemed at first sight even a more cruel act than scutting the boat. But the danger was also greater. Khidhr knew that the youth was a potential particide. His parents were worthy, pious people, who had brought him up with love. He lad apparently gone wrong. Perhaps he had already been guilty of murders and robberies and had escaped the law by subtleties and fraud. See next note.

2434. The son was practically an outlaw—a danger to the public and a particular source of grief to his righteous parents. Even so, his summary capital punishment would have been unjustified it Khighr had been acting on his own. But Khighr was not acting on his own: see the latter part of the next verse. The plural "we" also implies that he was not acting on his own. He was acting on higher authority and removing a public scourge, who was also a source of extreme sorrow and humiliation to his parents. His parents are promised a better-behaved son who would love them and be a credit to them.

C. 137.—Three episodes in the life of a great king. (xviii. 83-110) Zul-qarnain, illustrate how power

And opportunities should be used in the service Of God: he punished the guilty indeed, But was kind to the righteous; he left Primitive people their freedom of life; And he protected industrious people from grasping Reighbours. But he relied upon God, and made them Remember the Day of Judgment, when all Will see the Truth and receive the Punishments And Rewards earned in their present Life.

2425. The wall was in a ruinous state. If it had fallen, the treasure buried beneath it would have been exposed and would certainly have been looted, among so churish and selfish a people. See in 2419 above. The treasure had been collected and buried by a righteous man, it was not, in any sense of the word, illigotten gains; it was buried expressly in the interests of the orphans by their father before his death. It was intended that the orphans should grow up and safely take possession of their heritage. It was also expected that they would be righteous men like their father, and use the treasure in good works and in advancing righteousness among an otherwise wicked community. There was thus both public and private interests involved in all the three incidents. In the second incident khight uses the wind "we", showing that he was associating in his act the public authorities of the place, who had been eluded by the outlaw.

2426. Age of full strength: Cf, xvii. 34 and n 2218.

2427. Those who act, not from a whim or a private impulse of their own, but from higher authority, have to bear the blame, with the vulgar crowd, for acts of the greatest wisdom and utility. In human affairs many things are inexplicable, which are things of the highest wisdom in the Universal Plan.

2438. Literally, "the Two-horned one", the King with the Two Horns, or the Lord of the Two Epochs. Who was he? In what age, and where did he live? The Qurân gives us no material on which we can base a positive answer. Nor is it necessary to find an answer, as the story is treated as a Parable. Popular opinion identifies Zul-garnain with Alexander the Great. An alternative suggestion is an ancient Persian King, or a pre-historic Hinyarite King. See a brief account of the controversy in Appendix VII printed at the end of this Sura.

Zul-qarnain was a most powerful king, but it was God, Who, in His universal Plan, gave him power and provided him with the ways and means for his great work. His sway extended over East and West, and over people of diverse civilisations. He was just and righteous, not selfish or grasping. He protected the weak and punished the unlawful and the turbulent. Three of his expeditions are described in the text, each embodying a great ethical idea involved in the Dossession of kingship or power.

" I will rehearse to you Something of his story."

  To treat them with kindness." 2481
- 87. He said: "Whoever doth wrong, Him shall we punish; then Shall he be sent back sess To his Lord; and He will Punish him with a punishment Unheard-of (before).
- 88. "But whoever believes,
  And works righteousness.—

@ وَأَمَّا مَنْ اَمَّنْ وَعَمِم لَصَالِحًا

2429. Great was his power and great were his opportunities (" ways and means"), which he used for justice and righteousness. But he recognised that his power and opportunities were given to him as a trust by God. He had faith, and did not forget God.

2431. He had great power and a great opportunity. He got authority over a turbulent and unruly people. Was he going to be severe with them and chastise them, or was he going to seek peace at any price; 4.e., to wink at violence and injustice so long as it did not affect his power? He chose the better course, as described in the next verse. To protect the weak and the innocent, he punished the guilty and the headstrong, but he remembered always that the true Punishment would come in the Hereafter—the true auf that justice before the throne of God.

2432. Though most powerful among kings, no remembered that his power was but human, and given by God. His punishments were but tentative, to preserve the balance of this life as he could appraise it Even if his punishment was capital ("wrong doer sent back to his Lord") it was nothing compared to the spiritual consequences of sin, in the final lustice of God.

He shall have a goodly Reward, and easy will be His task as we order it By our command." *****

<sup>2433.</sup> He never said like Pharaoh, "I am your Lord Most High!" (Ixxix. 24). On the contrary his punishments were humbly regulated as not being final, and he laid more stress on the good he could do to those who lived normal lives in faith and righteousness. His rule was easy to them: he imposed no heavy tasks because of his power, but gave every opportunity to rich and poor for the exercise of virtue and goodness. Such is the spritual lesson to be learned from the first pelipide.

<sup>2434.</sup> We now come to the second episode. This is an expedition to the east. "Rising of the sun" has a meaning corresponding to "setting of the sun" in xvivi. 86, as explained in n. 2430.

<sup>2436.</sup> They were a primitive people. He did not fuss over their primitiveness, but left them in the enjoyment of peace and tranquilitiy in their own way. In this he was wise. Power is apt to be intolerant and arrogant, and to interfere in everything that does not accord with its ownglorification. Not so Zul-qarnain. He recognised his own limitations in the sight of God: man pewer completely understands his own position, but if he devourly looks to God, he will live and let live. This is the spiritual lesson from the second episode.

<sup>2438.</sup> It does not mean that they had no speech. It means that they did not understand the speech of the Conqueror. But they had parleys with him (through interpreters), as is evident from the verses following (xviii. 34-458).

- 94. They said: "O Zul-garnain! The Gog and Magog (people) **** Do great mischief on earth : Shall we then render thee Tribute in order that Thou mightest erect a barrier Between us and them?
- 95. He said: "(The power) in which My Lord has established me Is better (than tribute): "40 Help me therefore with strength (And labour): I will Erect a strong barrier . Between you and them:
- 96, "Bring me blocks of iron." 211 At length, when he had Filled up the space between The two steep mountain-sides, He said, "Blow (with your bellows)"

Then, when he had made 2442 It (red) as fire, he said: "Bring me, that I may Pour over it, molten lead."

2439. Who were the Gog and Magog people? This question is connected with the question, Who was Zul-garnain? Some discussion on the question will be found in Appendix VII at the end of this Stra.

What we are mainly concerned with is the spiritual interpretation. The Conqueror had now arrived among a people who were different in speech and race from him, but not quite primitive, for they were skilled in the working of metals, and could furnish blocks (or bricks) of iron, melt metals with bellows or blow-pipes, and prepare molten lead (gviti, 96). Apparently they were a peaceable and industrious race, much subject to incursions from wild tribes who are called Gog and Magog. Against these tribes 'hey were willing to ourchase immunity by paying the Conqueror tribute in return for protection. The permanent protection they wanted was the closing of a mountain gap through which the incursions were made.

7440. Zul-parnain was not greedy and did not want to impose a tribute to be carried away from an industrious population. He understood the power which God had given him, to involve duties and responsibilities on his part—the duty of protecting his subjects without imposing too heavy a taxation on them. He would provide the motive force and organising skill. Would they obey him and provide the material and labour, so that they could close the gap with a strong barrier, probably with well-secured gates? The word radw, translated "Barrier," does not necessarily mean a wall. but rather suggests a blocked door or entrance.

2441. I understand the defences erected to have been a strong barrier of iron, with iron Gates, The jambs of the Gates were constructed with blocks or bricks of iron, and the interstices filled up with molten lead, so as to form an impregnable mass of metal. It may be that there was a stone wall also, but that is not mentioned. There was none in the Iron Gate near Bukhara; see Appendix VII at the end of this Sura.

2442. Made it (red) as fire: what does "it" refer to? Probably to the iron, either in sheets or blocks to be welded with the molten lead.

- 98. He said: "This is

  A mercy from my Lord: ""

  But when the promise

  Of my Lord comes to pass,

  He will make it into dust;

  And the promise of

  My Lord is true."
- 99. n that day We shall Leave them to surge Like waves on one another; <sup>3469</sup> The trumpet will be blown, And We shall collect them All together.
- 100. And We shall present Hell that day for Unbelievers To see, all spread out,—<sup>2463</sup>
- 101. (Unbelievers) whose eyes Had been under a veil From Remembrance of Me, And who had been unable Even to hear. *****

قَاانطَاعُوا أَن يَظْهُرُوهُ وَمَا اَسْلَطَاعُوا أَن يَظْهُرُوهُ وَمَا اَسْلَطَاعُوا لَهُ وَمُدُلكُ لَهُ وَمُدُلكُ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهُ اللّهِ اللهِ مُلْمُ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ الل

(۱۸) سورة الكهف

2443. The iron wall and gates and towers were sufficiently high to prevent their being scaled and sufficiently strong with welded metal to resist any attempt to the through them,

244. After all the effort which Zul-qarnain has made for their protection, he claims no credit for himself bayond that of discharging his duty as a ruler. He turns their attention to God, Whu has provided the ways and means by which they can be helped and protected. But all such human precautions are apt to become futile. The time must come when they will crumble into dust, God has said so in His Revelation; and His Word is true.

And so the spiritual lesson from the third episode is: Take human precautious and do all in your power to protect yourselves from evil. But no protection is complete unless you seek the help and grare of God. The best of our precautions must crumble to dust when the appointed Day arrives.

244. And so we pass on to the Last Days before the Great Summons comes from God. All human barriers will be swept away. There will be tumultuous rushes. The Trumpet will be blown, and the Judgment will be set on foot.

2446. If men had scoffed at Faith and the Hereafter, their eyes will be opened now, and they will see the terrible Reality,

2447. Those very men who refused to see the many Signs of God which in this world convey His Message and to hear the World of the Lord when it came to them, will then see without any mistake the consequences fully brought up before them.

2449, Many people have such a smug sense of self-righteousness that while they go on doing wrong, they think that they are acquiring merit. So, in charity, all the elements that make for outward show or selfishness (as to get some worldly advantage) nully the deed of charity. In the same way hypocrites sometimes affect to be surprised that their declared effort for somebody's good is not appreciated, when they are really seeking some hidden gain or false glory for themselves. The sincere are only those who believe in their spiritual responsibility and act as in God's sight.

2450. What weight can be attached to works behind which the motives are not pure, or are positively evil? They are either wasted or count against those who seek to pass them off as mentorious I

2451. Faise motives, pretence, deception, and hypocrisy, flourish because people do not take the higher life seriously. In effect they treat it as a jest. Signs and Messengers are sent as a special and personal Mercy from God, and for such things the first person singular is used as in this verse, even when it involves a sudden transition from the first person plural as in the last verse.

107. As to those who believe

<sup>452.</sup> Firdaus in Persian means an enclosed place, a park. In technical theological language the word is used for the inner circle of Heaven, or the highest Heaven, the destination of those who perfectly fulfil both requirements, viz.: a sound faith, and perfectly righteous conduct. Small faults in either respect are forgiven; the Mercy of God steps in Perhaps there is spiritual development and progress even after death.

APPENDIX VII.

Who was Zul-qarnain?

(xviii, 83-98.)

As stated in my n. 2428 to xviii. 83, I do not consider that historical or geographical considerations have much bearing on a story treated as a Parable, as Zulqarnain's story is. Indeed all stories or narrations are referred to in the Qur-ân as Parables, for their spiritual meaning. Heated controversies or dogmatic assertions as to precise dates, personalities, or localities, seem to me to be out of place. But a great deal of literature has been piled up among our writers on the subject, and it seems desirable to set down a few notes as to the different views that have been expressed.

What is the meaning of the name or title Znl-qarnain—"Lord of the two Qarns"? "Qarn" may mean: (1) a horn in the literal sense, as in the case of a ram or bull; (2) a horn in a metaphorical sense, as in English, the horns of a crescent, or by a further metaphor (not used in English), the horns of a kingdom or territory, two portions at opposite ends; (3) by another metaphor, a summit, a lock of hair, typifying strength, a crest such as Eastern kings wear on their diadems; (4) referring to time, an Epoch, an Age, a Genciation. Meaning (1) is inapplicable to a man or a great King: but see the next paragraph about Alexander.the Great. The other three meanings may be applicable, as implying: (2) Lord of East and West, Lord of wide territory or of two kingdoms; (3) Lord of two crests on his diadem, typifying two kingdoms, or a rank superior to that of an ordinary king; (4) Lord of more than one Epoch: one whose power and influence extend far beyond his lifetime.

If we accept the popular identification of Zul-qarnain with Alexander, all the three latter designations would be applicable to him, as he was Lord of the West and the East, Lord of the Greek States united for the first time (Hellenic Captain-General) and of the widely-extended Persian Dominion which included all Western Asia, Egypt, Central Asia, Afghanistan, and the Punjab (at least portions). He is represented on his coins with two horns on his head: he considered himself a son of Jupiter Ammon (who had the two horns of a ram', with a divine mission. He revolutionised the history of Europe, Asia, and Africa (Egypt), and his influence lasted for many generations after his death at the young age of 33. He lived from B.C, 356 to 323, but his name was one to conjure with for many centuries after him. It was not only on account of his political power, but his cultural influences. Through his conquests Greek art gave the impulse to Gandhara art in Central Asia and North-West India. The city of Alexandria which he founded in Egypt became the cultural centre, not only for Greece and Rome, but for Judaism and Christianity, and retained its supremacy till the sixth century of the Christian era. Justinian closed its schools of philosophy in 529. Its philosophic and scientific schools spread their influence over even a wider area than the Mediterranean basin.

Now the generality of the world of Islam have accepted Alexander the Great as the one meant by the epithet Zul-qarnain. But some of our 'Ulama have raised doubts about it and made other suggestions. One is that it was not the Macedonian Alexander the Great, but an earlier pre-historic king contemporary with Abraham; because, they say, Zu-qarnain was a man of Faith (xviii, 88, 98), while Alexander the Great was a Pagan and believed in Grecian gods. An identification with a supposed pre-historic king, about whom nothing is known, is no identification at all. On the other hand, all that is known about Alexander the Great shows that he was a man of lofty ideals. He died over three centuries before the time of Jesus, but that does not mean that he was not a man of Faith, for God revealed Himself to men of all nations in all ages. Alexander was a disciple of the philosopher Aristotle, noted for his pursuit of sound Truth in all departments of thought. Alexander's reference to Jupiter Ammon may have been no more than a playful reference to the superstitions of his time. Socrates spoke of the Grecian gods, and so did Aristotle and Plato; but it would be wrong to call them idolaters or men without Faith. In the Ethiopic traditional stories of Alexander the Great, he is represented as a great peophet.

Another suggestion made is that Zul-qarnain was an ancient king of Persia. A king of Persia is referred to as a Ram with two horns in the Book of Daniel (viii. 3) in the Old Testament. But in the same Book, the Ram with the two horns was smitten, cast down to the ground, and stamped upon by a he-goat with one-horn (viii. 7-8). There is nothing in our literature to suggest that Zul-qarnain came to any such ignominious end. Nor is the Book of Daniel an authority worth consideration. Its authenticity is very doubtful. There is no question that it is a patch-work, as parts of it are in the Aramaic (or Chaldee) language and parts in Hebrew, and there are in it a number of Greek words. The Septuagint version contained large additions. "Daniel"—whoever the writer or writers were—refers to historical Persian Lings. If it is argued that it was some old pre-historic Persian king who built the Iron Gates (xviii. 96) to keep out the Gog and Magog tribes (xviii. 94), this is no identification at all. There is no unanimity about the identity of the Iron Wall, or the Gog and Magog tribes. Both these subjects will be referred to presently.

Another suggestion made is that it was some old pre-historic Himyarite king from Yemen, about whom nothing else is known. This, again, is no identification at all.

The question of Yajōj and Majūj (Gog and Magog) and the iron Barrier built to keep them out is of some interest. It is practically agreed that they were the wild tribes of Central Asia which have made incoads on settled kingdoms and Empires at various stages of the world's history. The Chinese Empire suffered from their incursions and built the Great Wall of China to keep out the Manchus and Mongols. The Persian Empire suffered from them at various times and at various points. Their incursions into Europe in large hordes caused migrations and displacements of population on an enormous scale, and eventually broke up the Roman Empire. These tribes were known vaguely to the Greeks and Romans as "Scythians", but that term does not help us very much, either ethnically or geographically.

If we could locate the iron barrier or iron gates referred to in xviii. 96, we should have a closer idea of the tribes whom the barrier was meant to keep out. It is obvious that the Great Wall of China is out of the question. Begun in the third century B.C. and continued later, it covers the enormous length of 1,500 miles, and goes up the hills and down the valleys, with towers 40 feet high at intervals of 200 yards. Its average height is 20 to 30 feet. It is built of stone and earth. There is no particular point in it which can be identified with the iron barrier in the text. No one has suggested that Zul-quarnain was a Chinese Emperor, and none of the great Conquerors of Western Asia can be credited with the building of the Chinese Wall.

The Barrier in the text must have been more in the nature of iron gutes than an iron wall. Two Iron Gates, geographically far apart, have been suggested in the alternative. Sometimes they have been mixed up by writers not strong in geography. Both of them have local associations with the name of Alexander the Great. Both are near a town Derbend, and have borne the name of Bab-ul-hadid (Arabic for "Iron Gate"). Let us examine the case of each in turn.

The best known in modern times is at the town and seaport of Derbend in the middle of the western coast of the Caspian Sea. It is now in Soviet territory, in the district of Daghistan. Before the southern expansion of Russia in 1813 it belonged to Persia. A spur of Mount Caucasus here comes up north, close to the sea. The Wall in question is 50 miles long, with an average height of 29 feet. As Azarbaijan (in Persia) is not far from this place, some writers have mixed up the Derbend Iron Gate with Azarbaijan, and some with the Caucasian town of Kharz (Kars), which is to the south of the Caucasus. There are local traditions here, and in the Astrakhan region, at the mouth of the river Volga, higher up the Caspian, connecting this Caucasian Iron Gate with the name of Alexander, but there are good reasons why we should reject this as the site of the Iron Gate in the Quranic story. (1). This does not correspond exactly to the description in xviii. 96 ("the space between the two steep mountain sides"); the gap is between the mountain and the sea. (2) Alexander the Great (assuming that Zul-qarnain is Alexander), is not known to have crossed the Caucasus, (3) There is an Iron Gate which corresponds exactly to the description, in a locality which we know Alexander to have visited. (4) In the early days, when Muslims spread to all parts of the world, local legends were started by ignorant people connecting the places they knew with places referred to in the Our-an.

We now come to the Iron Gate which corresponds exactly to the Quranic description, and has the best claim to be connected with Alexander's story. It is near another Derbend in Central Asia, Hissar District, about 150 miles south-east of Bukhārā. A very narrow defile, with overhanging rocks, occurs on the main route between Turkestan and India: latitude 38 N; longitude 67 E. It is now called in Turki Buzghol-Khana (Goat-house), but was formerly known as the Iron Gate (Arabic, Bab-ul-hadid; Persian, Dar-i-ahani; Chinese T'ie men-kuan). There is no iron gate there now, but there was one in the seventh century, when the Chinese traveller Hiouen Tsiang saw it on his journey to India. He saw two folding gates cased with iron and hung with bells. Near by is a lake named Iskandar Kul, connecting the locality with Alexander the Great. We know from history that Alexander, after his conquest of Persia and before his journey to India, visited Sogdiana (Bukhārā) and Maracanda (Samarqand). We also know from Muqaddasi, the Arab traveller and geographer, who wrote about A.H. 375 (A.D. 985-6) that the 'Abbasi Khalifa Wathiq (842-846 A.D.) sent out a mission to-Central Asia to report on this Iron Gate. They found the defile 150 yards wide: on two jambs made with bricks of iron welded together with molten lead, were hung two huge gates, which were kept closed. Nothing could correspond more exactly with the description in xviii, 95-96.

If, then, the Barrier in xviii, 95-98 refers to the Iron Gate near Bukhara, we are able to proceed to a consideration of the Gog-Magog people with some confidence. They were the Mongol tribes on the other side of the Barrier, while the industrious men who did not understand Zul-qarnain's language were the Turks, with their agglutinative language, so different from the languages then sooken in Western Asia. The Barrier served its purpose for the time being. But the warning that the time must come when it must crumble to dust has also come true. It has crumbled to dust, Long since, the Mongols pushed through on their westward journey, pushing the Turks before them, and the Turks became a European Power and have still a footing in Europe. We need not bother about the legends of the Gog and Magog people. They were reputed to be giants, and two tiny hills in flat Cambridgeshire are derisively called the Gog-Magog hills! Similarly the statues of Gog and Magog in the Guildhall in London, which M.M.A. takes so seriously, only remind us how legends are ant to grow and get transported to strange places. In the Alexander legends of medieval Europe, Gog and Magog are said to have come with 400,000 men to the help of Porus whom Alexander defeated, and to have fled after that defeat. They fled to the mountains, and Alexander built a wall with brass gates to prevent their irruptions. See Paul Meyer, Alexandre le Grand dans la litetrature française du Moyen Age; Paris, 1886; Vol. 2, pp. 386-389.

Personally, I have not the least doubt that Zul-garmain is meant to be Alexander the Great, the historic Alexander, and not the legendary. Alexander, of whom more presently. My first appointment after graduation was that of Lecturer in Greek history. I have studied the details of Alexander's extraordinary personality in Greek historians as well as in modern writers, and have since visited most of the localities connected with his brief but brilliant career. Few readers of Quranic literature have had the same privilege of studying the details of his career. It is one of the wonders of the Qur-shi, that, spoken through an Ummi's mouth, it should contain so many incidental details which are absolutely true. The more our knowledge increases, the more we feel this. There are little touches which need not have been mentioned. They come in incidentally like the incidental remarks of a person full of knowledge, who does not intend to put forward those points but whose fulness of knowledge brings them in lnevitably.

One such point occurs in the mention of Alexander's westward journey (xviii, 86). He saw the sun set in a piece of murky water which is described as a "Spring". Most Commentators have understood the "spring" to be the sea, and the "murky water" to be its dark-blue water. Nizami, in his Romance of Alexander, takes Alexander right west along North Africa to Andalusia and the Atlantic Ocean. There is no historic proof that Alexander ever reached the Atlantic. But he was of course familiar with the deep-blue waters of the Mediterranean. The Mediterranean interpretation may pass if we had not a closer explanation. Alexander's first exploits were when he was a mere boy, in the reign of his father Philip. The region of Illyricum was due west of Macedonia, and Macedonia's first expansion was in that direction. The town of Lychnis was annexed to Macedonia and thus the western frontier of Macedonia was secured. The northern frontier towards the Danube had already been secured, and the lesson he subsequently gave to Thebes secured him against attack from the Greek States to the south, and prepared the way for his great march east against the Persian Empire. To the west of the town of Lychnis is a lake 170 square miles in area, fed by underground springs that issue through limestone rocks and give out murky water. Both town and lake are now called Ochrida, about 50 miles west of Monastir. The water is so dark that the river which forms the outlet of the lake to the north is called the Black Drin. Looking at the sunset from the town, the observer would see the sun set in a pool of murky water (xviii, 86). It was a question before the boy Alexander—the dreamy, impulsive, fearless rider—whether he would put the barbarous Illyricians to the sword or show them mercy. He showed true discrimination and statesmanship. He punished the guilty but showed kundness to the innocent, and thus consolidated his power in the west. This I construe to be the meaning of xviii. 86.87; otherwise these verses do not seem to be perfectly clear.

Another point may be noted. The three episodes mentioned are the journey to the west, the journey to the east, and the journey to the Iron Gate. The journey to the west I have just explained. The journey to the east was to the Persian Empire. Here he found a people who lived in the open and wore little clothing. This might apply to people who live in an inland place in the latitude of Persepolis or Multan. He left them alone as they were (xviii. 91). He was not warring against populations: he was warring against the proud but effete Persian Empire. He left them as they were, with their local institutions, and under their local chiefs. In feeling he treated them as his own, not as aliens. In some things he himself adopted their ways. His followers misunderstood him. But God understood, for He approves of all things that lead to Unity among mankind.

The direction of the third journey is not mentioned. The Commentators suggest the north, but they might with better reason have suggested the south, as Alexander visited Egypt. But the visit to the Iron Gate was to the East—a continuation of his journey east. That is why the direction is not mentioned again. Here his mission was different. He had to protect a peaceful industrious population, whom perhaps the Persian Empire had failed to protect, against turbulent and restless invaders. He helped them to protect themselves, but warned them that all human precautions, though good and necessary, are vain without God's help.

Each of the episodes mentioned is historical. But the pomp and glitter of military conquest are not mentioned. On the contiary spiritual motives are revealed and commended. We need not know or learn any history or geography or science or psychology or ethics to understand them. But the more real knowledge we have, the more completely shall we understand them and the lessons to be drawn from them. The earthly journeys are treated as mere symbols to show us the evolution of a great and noble soul which achieved so much in a short earthly life.

His career was so extraordinary that it impressed his contemporaries as a worldevent, as it undoubtedly was,—one of the greatest world-events in history. Legends began to grow up round his name. In many cases the legends overlaid the history,
To-day the world is thrilled by Sir Aurel Stein's identification of Aornos, a very small geographical detail in a great career full of lessons, in political, ethical, and religious wisdom. But the generations immediately following Alexander's period wrote and transmitted all sorts of wonderful legends that passed current in East and West. The philosopher Kallisthenes had been with Alexander in Asia. Under his name was produced a Greek book in Alexandria some time before the second century of the Christian era. It was translated into Latin in the third century. Translations were subsequently made into most of the European languages. In Chaucer's time (13401400) these Alexander legends were known to every "wight that hath discrecion"
(The Monk in Cantabury Tales).

Alexandria was a focus of Christian and Jewish learning for some centuries. The Christians also made Alexander a saint. The Jews carried the Alexander cycle into the East. Our Persian poet Jami (A.H. 535-599, A.D. 1141-1203) worked it up into his epic the Iskandar-nāma. He is careful to show the historical or semi-bistorical and the ethical parts separately. The one relates to action or exploits  $(iqb\bar{a}i)$  and the other to wisdom (ih)iradi. He had the advantage of the Quran story before him. That story mentions three historical episodes incidentally, but draws our attention to matters of the weightiest spiritual significance, and that is the chief thing to note in the story.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XIX (Maryam).

The spiritual growth of man as an individual soul having been explained in S. xvii. as beginning with the first principles of moral conduct and in S. xviii as being dependent upon our realisation of the brevity and mystery of this life and the true use of power us in the story of Zul-qarnain, we now pass on to the story of individual Messengers of God in their personal relations with their environment,—Yalya with his father Zakariya, Jesus with his mother Mary, Abraham with his unbelieving father, Moses with his brother Aaron, Isma'il with his family, and Idris in the high station to which he was called. Seeing how these great ones fitted into the scheme of life, man is condemned for his want of faith, or for degrading his faith to superstition, and warned of the Hercafter.

In chronology, it was revealed before the first resort of the batch of Muslims to Abyssinia, say seven years before the Hijrat.

Summary.—Zakarīya was anxious to have an heir to carry on God's work in a world of unnighteousness, and Yaliya was given to him (xix. 1-15, and C. 138).

Mary the mother of Jesus was maligned by her people, but Jesus comforted her and was good to her (xix. 16-40, and C. 139).

Abraham was persecuted for his Faith by his people, including his unbelieving father, but he withdrew from them, and was blessed; Moses was helped by his brother Aaron; Isma'il brought up his family in piety; and Idrīs was truthful and pious in a high station: they showed the way; yet men will not learn the good life (xix. 41-65, and C. 140).

Man should not disbelieve in the Hereafter, nor sully his faith by false notions about God (xix. 66-98, and C. 141).

C. 138. - Men of God show their qualities
(xix. 1-15.) In their private relationships as much
As in their public ministry. Zakariya
Was anxious, in a world of unrighteousness,
To find a successor to continue his godly
Errand. He was given a son, Yahya,
Who heralded Jesus, and lived a life
Of wisdom, gentle love, and purity.

2455. This is the only Sura which begins with these five Abbreviated Letters, K., H., Y., 'A., B. For Abbreviated Letters generally, see Appendix I, pp. 118-120.

As stated in my note 25, such Letters are, Symbols, of which the true meaning is known to God alone. We should not be dogmatic about any conjectures that we make. According to the interpretation of the last letter $6d$, suggested in n. 990 to vil 1.1 should be disposed to accept $3d$ with the meaning of $Q_{100}, i.e. stories of the Prophets. The main figures referred to here are: Zakariya. Yabya, Maryam, "Jas, and Dishim: the others are mentioned but incidentally. The strong letter in ZaKariya is K; in IbraHtim, H; in 'Yabya' and perhaps MarYam, Y; and in 'Isa,—'A (Alvi). Halso comes in Harfor (Asaro), and the Araby: Ya' (comes in all the names including Isma'll and diris

I offer this suggestion with some diffidence. The suggestion of the Tafsir Kobir is that the letters stand for attributes of God: K, for Kuft (the One sufficient in Himself): H, for Hadf (He who guides); Y, for Yad (Hand as a symbol of Power or Authority:  $G_i$ , xivini, 10, "The Hand of God is above their hands"); 'A, for 'Alt'm (the All-Knowing): and S for Salte (The True One)

2456. The Mercy of God to Zakarlya was shown in many ways: (1) in the acceptance of his prayer; (2) in bestowing a son like "Yahyā; and (3) in the love between father and son, in addition to the work which Yahyā did as God's Messenger for the world. C/. iii, 38-41 and notes. There the public ministry was the point stressed; here the beautiful relations between the son and the father, 2431. In serret: hecause he feared that his own family and relatives were going wrong (xix. 5), and he wanted to keep the lamp of God burning bright. He could not very well mention the fear about his colleagues (who were his relations) in public.

2458. This preface shows the fervent faith of Zakariya. Zakariya was a priest of the Most High God. His office was in the Temple, and his relatives were his colleagues. But he found in them no true spirif of the service of God and man. He was filled with anxiety as to who would uphold the godly ideas he had in mind, which were strange to his worldly colleagues.

5. "Now I fear (what)
My relatives (and colleagues)
(Will do) after me:
But my wife is barren!
So give me an heir <sup>2450</sup>
As from Thyself.—

"(One that) will (truly)
Represent me, and represent before the posterity of Jacob;
And make him, O my Lord!
One with whom Thou art
Well-pleased!"

7. (His prayer was answered):
"O Zakariya! We give thee
Good news of a son:
His name shall be Yahyā:
On none by that name
Have We conferred distinction before."

8. He said: "O my Lord! How shall I have a son, When my wife is barren And I have grown quite decrepit From old age?" ۞ مَإِلَىٰخِنْتُ الْمُثَوِّلِ مِن وَلَآءِى وَكَانَيْا مَرَأَنِي عَاقِرًا فَهَبْ لِمِينَ أَدُمْكَ وَلِيَّا

٤ رَبَّنِيَ وَيَرِثُ مِنَ إلِيَمْ فُونَةً وَأَجَمَلُهُ رَبِّ يَمِنِيًا

يَزَكَوَيَّ إِنَّا بُنيْزُلُ بِمثْلَيْهِ الشَّمُونِيَّ إِنَّا بُنيْزُلُ بِمثْلَيْهِ الشَّمُونِيَّ
 يَزَخَفُ لَ لَهُ مِن قَبْلُ بَيْنًا

۞ قالَ رَبِّ أَنَّ يَحُونُ لِي غُلَـُهُ وَكَانِيَ الْمَرَافِ عَلَوْاً وَقَدْ بَلَغَتُ مِنَ الْحِيرِ عِنِيًّا

2459. His was not merely a vulgar desire for a son. If it had been, he would have prayed much earlier in his life, when he was a young man. He was too full of true piety to put merely selfish things into his prayers. But here was a public need, in the service of the Lord. He was too old, but could he perhaps adopt a child—who would be an heir "as from God" (See n. 380 to iii. 38).

2460. It is true that an heir inherits property, but his higher duty is to represent in everything the personality of him from whom he inherits. It is doubtful whether Zakariya had any worldly property. But he had character apd virtue, as a man of God, and this he wanted to transmit to his heir as his most precious possession. It was almost the most precious possession of the posterity of Jacob. The people around him had fallen away from God's Message. Could his heir, like him, try and renew it?

261. This was John the Baptist, the forerunner of Jesus. In accordance with his father's prayer he, and Jesus for whom he pepared the way, renewed the Message of God, which had been corrupted and lost among the Israelites. The Arabic form Yahya suggests: "Life", The Hebrew form is Johansan, which means "Jehovab has been Gracious" C. Bananan in verse 13 below. It does not mean that the name was given for the first time, for we read of a Johanan the son O.Careah in It Kings, xxv. 23, an otherwise obscure man. It means that God had, for the first time, called one of His elect by that name.

9. He said: "So (it will be): ****
Thy Lord saith, 'That is Easy for Me: I did
Indeed create thee before,
When thou hadst been nothing!'" ****

10. (Zakariya) said: "O my Lord!. Give me a Sign." 264 "Thy Sign," was the answer, "Shall be that thou Shalt speak to no man For three nights, 260 Although thou art not dumb."

11. So Zakariya came out
To his people
From his chamber:
He told them by signs
To celebrate God's praises
In the morning
And in the evening.

12. (The his son came the command): ***

"O Yahyā! take hold

وَقَدْ خَلَفُكُ مِن الْحَصَلَ وَالْمَالَ مَنَا اللّهِ اللّهِ عَلَى اللّهِ اللّهُ اللّهِ اللّهُ اللّ

٠ يَلِيَعْنِيَلُ غُلِالْكِتَكِ بِفُوَّالْمِ

2462. Who is the "He" in this clause? As I have construed it, following the majority of Commentators, it means the angel who brought the message from God. Cf. xix. 21 below. But some Commentators construct its order to Zakariya. In that case the meaning will be: Zakariya after a little reflection said (in his wonder) "Sol", i.e., "Can it really be so? Can I really have a on in my old age?" The speech following. "Thy Lord saith, "stc., will then be that of the angel-messenger.

2463. Every man was nothing just before he was created, ie., his personality was called into being by God. Even if, there are material processes in forming the body, in accordance with the laws of nature, the real creative force is in God. But here there is a subtler meaning. John was the harbinger of Jesus, preparing the way for him; and this sentence also prepares us for the more wonderful birth of Jesus himself: see verse 21 below. Everything is possible with God.

3464. The "Sign". I understand, was not in order to convince Zakariya that the Lord's promise was true, for he had faith; but it was a symbol by which he was to show in his conduct that he was to conform to his new desting as the father of Yahyà who was to come. Yahyà was to take up the work, and Zakariya was to be silent, although the latter was sound in body and there was nothing to prevent him from speaking.

. 1465. Compare this verse with iii. 41. The variations are interesting. Here it is "for three mights": there it is "for three days." The meaning is the same, for a day is a period of 24 hours. But the point of view is different in each case. There it was from the point of view of the Ummator Congregation, among whom he worked by day; here the point of view is that of his individual soul, which spent the nights in prayer and praise. Notice again that at the end of the next verse, we have here, "In the morning" —showing again that the point of view is reversed.

2466. Time passes. The son is born. In this section of the Stra the centre of interest is Yahya, and the instruction is now given to him. 'Keep fast hold of God's revelation with all your might': for an unbelieving world had either corrupted or neglected it, and Yahya (John the Baptist) was to prepare the way for Jesus, who was coming to renew and re-interpret it.

Of the Book with might": And We gave him Wisdom 2467 Even as a youth,

- And pity (for all creatures) As from us, and purity: 2143 He was devout,
- And kind to his parents, And he was not overbearing Or rebellious.
- 15. So Peace on him
  The day he was born,
  The day that he dies,
  And the day that he
  Will be raised up
  To life (again)!

C. 139.—Next comes the story of Jesus and his mother
(xix. 16-40.) Mary. She gave birth, as a virgin, to Jesus,
But her people slandered and abused her
As a disgrace to her lineage. Her son
Did defend her and was kind to her. He Was a servant of God, a true Prophet,
Blessed in the gifts of Prayer and Charity,
But no more than a man: to call him
The son of God is to derogate from God's Majesty, for God is High above all
His Creatures, the Judge of the Last Day.

2467 Hukm, translated Wirdom, implies something more than Wudom; it is the Wisdom or Judgment that is entitled to judge and command, as in the matter of denouncing sin.

2468. John the Baptist did not live long. He was imprisoned by Herod, the tetrarch (provincial ruler under the Roman Empire), whom he had reproved for his sins, and eventually beheaded at the instigation of the woman with whom Herod was infatuated. But even in his young life, he was granted (1) wisdom by God, for he boldly denounced sin; (2) gentle pity, and love for all God's creatures, for he moved among the humble and lowly, and despied "soft raiment"; and (3) purity of life, for he renounced the world and lived in the wilderness. All his work he did in his youth. These things showed themselves in his conduct, for he was devout, showing love to God and to God's creatures, and more particularly to his parents (for we are considering that aspect of his hile): this was also shown by the fact that he never used violence, from an attitude of arrogance, nor equeratized a spirit of rebellion against human or divine Law.

2400. This is spoken as in the life-time of Yahya. Peace and God's Blessings were on him when he was born; they continue when he is about to die an unjust death at the hands of a tyrant; and they will be specially manifest at the Day of Judgment.

<sup>2470.</sup> Cf. the story of Mary as related in iii 42-51. Here the whole theme is different: it is the personal side of the spiritual experiences of the worshippers of God in relation to their families or environment.

It was in this state of purity that the angel appeared to her in the shape of a man. She thought it was a man. She was frightened, and she adjured him not to inyade her privacy.

<sup>2472.</sup> God had destined her to be the mother of the holy Prophet Jesus Christ, and now had come the time when this should be announced to her.

<sup>2473.</sup> The mission of Jesus is announced in two ways (1) he was to be a Sign to men; his wonderful birth and wonderful life were to turn an ungodly world back to God; and (2) his mission was to bring solace and salvation to the repentant. This, a spowe way or other, is the case with all apostless of God, and it was pre-emimently so in the case of the holy Apostle Muhammad. But the point here is that the Israelites, to whom Jesus was sent, were a hardened race, for whom the message of Jesus was truly a goosple of Mercy.

2474. For anything that God wishes to create, He says "Be", and it is (Cf. iii. 47). There is no interval between His decree and its accomplishment, except such as He imposes by His decree. Time may be only a projection of our own minds in this world of relativity.

2475. The annunciation and the conception, we may suppose, took place in Nazareth (of Galilee), as of miles north of Jerusalem. The delivery took place in Bethlehem about 6 miles south of Jerusalem. It was a remote place, not only with reference to the distance of 71 miles, but because in Bethlehem itself the birth was in an obscure corner under a palm-tree, from which perhaps the babe was afterwards removed to a manger in a stable.

2476. She was but human, and suffered the pangs of an expeciant mother, with no one to attend on her. The circumstances being peculiar, she had got far away from her people.

2478. Cool thine syst: An idiom for "comfort thyself and be glad". The literal meaning should not, however, be lost sight of. Sho Was to cool her eyes (perhaps full of tears) with the fresh water of the rivulet and take comfort that a remarkable babe had been bord to her. She was also to look round, and if any one came near, she was to decline all conversation. It was quite true: she was under a vow, and could not talk to any one

2480. The amazement of the people knew no bounds. In any case they were ready to think the worst of her, as she had disappeared from her kin for some time. But now she comes, shamelessly parading a babe in her arms! How she had disgraced the house of Aaron, the fountain of priesthood! We may suppose that the scene took place in the Temple in Jerusalem, or in Nazareth, 4881. Aamon the brother of Moses was the first in the line of Israelite priesthood, Mary and her cousin Elisabeth (mother of Yahyā) came of a priestly family, and were therefore "sisters of Aaron" or daughters of 'Imrān (who was Aaron's father). See n. 373 to iii, 35. Mary is reminded of her high lineage and the unexceptionable morals of her father and mother. How, they said, she had fallen, and disgraced the name of her progenitors!

2482. What could Mary do? How could she explain? Would they, in their censorious mood, accept her explanation? All she could do was to point to the child, who, she knew, was no ordinary child. And the child came to her rescue. By a miracle he spoke, defended his mother, and preached—to an unbelieving audience. See iii. 46, and n. 398.

- 36. Verily God is my Lord And your Lord: Him

2483 There is a parallelism throughout the accounts of Jesus and Yahyā, with some variations. Both the parallelisms and the variations are interesting. For instance Jesus declares at the very outset that he is a servant of God, thus negativing the false notion that he was God or the son of God. The greatness of Yahyā is described in xix. 12-13 in terms that are not applied to Jesus between xix 14-15 as applied to Yahyā are in almost identical terms with those applied to Jesus between Xix 32-33. Devotion in Irrayer and Charity is a good description of the Church of Christ at its best, and pity, puirly, and devotion in Yahyā are a good description of the ways leading to Prayer and Charity, just as John left to Jesus.

2384 Overbearing violence is not only unjust and harmful to those on whom it is practised; it is perhaps even more harmful to the person who practises it, for his soul becomes turbufu unsettled, and ultimately unhappy and wretched,—the state of those in Hell. Here the negative qualities are "not overbearing or miserable". As applied to John they were "not overbearing or rebellhous." John bore his pounishment from the State without any protest or drawing bar.

2485 Cf xix 15, and n. 2409 Christ was not crucified (iv. 157). But those who believe that he never died should ponder over this verse, 248). The disputations about the nature of Jesus Christ were vain, but also persistent and sangunary. The modern Christian churches have thrown them into the background, but they would do well to abandon trational dogmas altogether.

2487. Bogetting a son is a physical act depending on the needs of men's animal nature. God thigh is independent of all needs, and it is derogatory to Him to attribute such an act to Him, It is meetly a critic of pagan and antiropomorphic materialist superstitions.

2488. As opposed to the crooked supersitions which take refuge in all sorts of metaphysical sophistries to prove three in one and one in three. In the Qur-an there is no brookedness (xviii. 1), Christ's teaching was simple, like his life, but the Christians have made it prooked.

<sup>2489.</sup> Judgment: the word in the original is Mosh-had, which implies many things. (1) the time or place where evidence is taken, as in a Court of Judgment; (2) the time or place where people are produced (to be judged); and (3) the occasion for such production for the taking of evidence. A very expressive phrase for the Day of Judgment.

- 41. (Also) mention in the Book (The story of) Abraham: He was a man of Truth. A prophet.
- 42. Behold, he said to his father: 9198 "O my father! why Worship that which heareth not And seeth not, and can Profit thee nothing?
- 43. " O my father! to me Hath come knowledge which Hath not reached thee: 8004 So follow me: I will guide Thee to a Way that Is even and straight. 900

- 45, "O my father! I fear Lest a Penalty afflict thee 9497 From (God) Most Gracious, So that thou become To Satan a friend."

- 2493 The reference to Abraham here is in relation to his tender solicitude for his father, who had not received the light of Unity, and to whom Abraham wanted to be a guide and friend.
- 2494. Some are more receptive of Light than others. It is their duty and privilege to guide and point to the right Way.
- 2495. Sawiyan-right, smooth, even; complete, perfect; hence the derived meanings; in xix. 10, 'in full possession of all the physical renses'; in that context, 'not dumb': in xix. 17, when the angel appears in the form of a man, 'completely like' a man, a man 'in all respects.'
- 2496. The rebellion is all the more beinous and inexcusable, considering that God is Most Just, Most Merciful, Most Gracious.
- 2497. To entertain a feeling of friendliness, instead of aversion, to Evil, is in itself a degradation of our nature, a Penalty which God imposes on our deliberate rejection of the Truth And the friendliness to Evil also implies the sharing of the outlawry of Evil.

2498. Note the gentle persuasive tone of Abraham in his speeches in xis. 42.45 (for we may suppose those sentences to sum up a long course of arguments) and in xis. 47-48, contrasted with the brisque and repetient tone of the father's reply in this verse. The one was the outcome of the true Light which hadeome to Abraham from God, as the other was the outcome of Pagan arrogance and the worship of brute force. The spiritual lesson from this episode of Abraham's life may be stated in four propositions: (I) the plous son is dutiful to his father and wishes him well in all things, material and spiritual; (E) if the father refuses God's Light, the son will do his utmost to bring sich bas to forfeit his father's flow and renounce his home; (4) even if he father repels him and turns him out, his answer will be a soft answer, full of love and forgiveness on the one hand, but firmness on behalf of Truth on the other.

2499, Cf. iz. 114, where this promise of Abraham to pray for his father is referred to, and its limitations pointed out.

2500. Abraham left his father and the home of his fathers (Ur of the Chaldees) and never returned. He left because he was turned out, and because it was not possible for him to make any compromise with what was false in religion. In return for abuse, he spoke gentle words. And he expressed his fetvent hope that at least he (Abraham) would have God's blessing in reply to his prayers. Here was a prefigurement of another Hijrat many centuries later! In both cases the prayer was abundantly fulfilled.

2503. Moses was (1) especially chosen, and therefore prepared and instructed in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, in order that he might free his people from Egyptian bondage; there may also be a reference to Mode's title of Kailmullah, the one to whom God spoke without the intervention of angels but behind a cloud see iv 164, and n 670; (2), he was a prophet (nobl), in that he received inspiration; and (3) he was an aposite (rasil) in that he had a Book of Revelation, and an Ummat or organised Community, for which he instituted laws.

2504. The incident here I think refers to the incidents described more fully in xx. 9-36; a reference may also be made to Exod in I. 184 and ix. 1-17. There is a great deal of mystic meaning. The time is when Moses (with his family) was travelling and grazing the flocks of his father-in-law Jethro, just before he pot lift commission from God. The place is somewhere near Mount Sinat (Jabal Mázia). Moses sers a Fire in the distance, but when he goes there, he hears a voice that tells him it is sacred ground. God asked him to put off his shoes and to draw near, and when he went near, great mysteries were revealed to him. He was given hos commission, and his brother Aaron was given to him to go with him and aid him. It is after that that he and Aaron went and faced Pharach in Egypt, as narrated in vit, 10-144, etc. The right side of the mountain may mean that Moses heard the voice from the right side of the mountain may have the figuralive meaning of "right" in Arabic, i.e., the side which was blessed or sacred ground.

2305. Moses was diffident, and reluctant to go to Pharaoh as he had an impediment in his tongue, and he asked that his brother Aaron should be associated with him in his mission. God in His Mercy granted his request; xxx 25-36.

- 54. Also mention in the Book (The story of) -! sma'il: He was (strictly) true To what he promised, so: And he was an apostle (And) a prophet.
- 55. He used to enjoin On his people Prayer And Charity, and he was Most acceptable in the sight Of his Lord.<sup>265</sup>
- 56. Also mention in the Book The case of Idris: **** He was a man of truth (And sincerity), (and) a prophet;
- 57. And We raised him To a lofty station.
- 58. PK hose were some
  Of the prophets on whom God did bestow His Grace,—
  Of the posterity of Adam,
  And of those whom 'We Carried (in the Ark)
  With Noah, and of
  The posterity of Abraham '*
  And Israel—of those Whom 'We guided and chose.

2306. Ismā'li was Zahiisullab. i.z., the chosen sacrifice of God in Muslim tradition. When Abraham told him of the sacrifice, he voluntarily offered himself for it, and never flunched from his promise, until the sacrifice was redeemed by the substitution of a ram under God's commands. He was the fountain-head of the Arabian Ummat, and in his posterity came the Apostle of God. The Urhimat and the Bogk of Islam reflect back the apostlephip on Ismā'li.

2507. An acceptable sacrifice : see last note.

2508. Idris is mentioned twice in the Qurda, risc, where and in xxi 85, where he is mentioned among (Gen. v. 21-24), may or may not be correct. Nor are we justified in interpreting verse 37 here as meaning the same thing as in Gen. v. 21 ("God took him"), that he was taken up without passing through the portals of death. All we are told is that he was a man of truth and sincerly, and a prophet, and that he had a high position among his people. It is this point which brings him in series of men just mentioned: he kept himself in touch with his people, and was honoured among them. Spiritual progress need not cut us off from our people, for we have to help and guide them. He kept to truth and pleyt in the highest station.

2509. The earlier generations are grouped into three epochs from a spiritual point of view: (1) from Adam to Nosh, (2) from Nosh to Abraham, and (3) from Abraham to an indefinite time, say to the time when the Message of God was corrupted and the need arose for the final Apostle of Unity and Truth. Sciel is adotter name for Jacob.

- 2510. The original is in the Agrist tense, implying that the "Posterity" alluded to includes not only the apostles but their worthy followers who are true to God and unhold His standard.
- 2511. This selfish godless posterity gains the upper hand at certain times, but even then there is always a minority who see the error of their ways, repent and believe, and live righteous lives. They are not penalised in the Hereafter because they were associated with the ungodly in time. They reap the full reward of their faith and righteousness.
- 2512. Salām, translated "Peace", has a much wider signification. It includes (1) a sense of security and permanence, which is unknown in this life; (2) soundness, freedom from defects, perfection, as in the word salīm; (3) preservation, salvation, deliverance, as in the word salīm (4) subservation, accord with those around us; (5) resignation, in the sense that we are salished and not discontented; besides (6) the ordinary meaning of Peace, i.e., freedom from any jarring element. All these shades of meaning are implied in the word Islām. Heaven therefore is the perfection of Islām.
- 2513. Sustemance in the highest metaphorical sense, all the means of perfect satisfaction of the soul and its complete self-expression in the new conditions, which we can only imagine vaguely in our material life. Morning and evening: i.e., early and late, all the time, always.

To Him that He cares for all His creatures!

SECTION 5.

66. Man says: "What! When I am dead, shall I Then be raised up alive?" @ وَيَغُولُا لَايِنسَكُ أَءَ ذَا مَامِثُ لَسَوْفَ أَخْرُجُ حَيَّاً

23.4. We are apt to be impatient of the exits we see around us. We may give of our best service to God, and yet see no results. In our human short-sightedness we may complian within oursieves. We may address the Spirit of God, as Shelley addressed the Spirit of Poesty, "Ragely, rarely comest thou, Spirit of Delight!" But we must not be impatient. The angels of Grace come not haphazard, but by command of God according to His Universal Will and Purpose. God does not forget. If things are delayed, it is in accordance with a wise providence, which cares for all. Our plain duty is to be patient and constant in His service.

2515. The more we taste of the truth and mystery of life, the more do we realise that there is no to be mentioned in the same breatil as God. He is above all names. But when we think of His beautiful qualities, and picture them to ourselves by names which give us some idea of Him, we can search the whole wide world of our imagination, and we shall not find another to be compared with Him in name or quality. He is the One: praise be [0 Him]

67. But does not man
Call to mind that We Created him before
Out of nothing?

69. Then shall We certainly
Drag out from every sect.
All those who were worst
In obstinate rebellion
Against (God) Most Gracious.

 And certainly We know best Those who are most worthy Of being burned therein.

- 71. Not one of you but will asse Pass over it: this is, With thy Lord, a Decree Which must be accomplished.
- 72. But We shall save those Who guarded against evil, And We shall leave The wrong-doers therein, (Humbled) to their knees.

أولابنك ألاسك ألك خلقت أو المستبدئا
 مَثِلُ لَهُ لَالْمِنْ اللهِ الله

2316. The disbelief in a future state is not merely a philosophic doubt, but a warped will, a disingensous obstinacy in face of our inner spiritual instincts and experiences. We were onthing before. Cannot the same God Who created us out of nothing also continue our personality? But if we refuse to accept His light and guidance, our state will grow worse and worse. We shall be deprived of His grace. We shall be herded with the Evil Ones. In utter humiliation we shall be faced with affire consequences of our refusal of Truth.

2517. Round about Hell: There are many ways leading to evil, and people get to it from all round. Hence the allegory of the seven Gates to Hell; see xv. 44, and n. 1977.

2518. Three interpretations are possible. (1) The general interpretation is that every soul must pass through or by or over the Fire. It may be the fire of temptation or anxiety or distress; but they must see Hell. Those who have had Taqwa (see a 16 to ii. 2) will be saved by God's Mercy, while unrepentant sinners will suffer the torments in ignominy. (2) It we refer the pronoun "you" to those "in obstinate rebellion" in overse 60 above, both leaders and followers in sin, this verse only applies to the wicked. (3) Some refer this verse to the Bridge over Hell, the Bridge $\tilde{g}_0 \tilde{g}_0 \ti

- 74. But how many (countless)
  Generations before them

2319 The Unbelievers may, for a time, make a better show in worldly-position, or in people's assemblages where things are judged by the counting of heads. But Truth must prevail even in this world, and ultimately the positions must be reversed.

230. God's warning is that every evil deed must have its punishment, and that there will be a Hereafter, the Day of Judgment, or the Hour, as it is frequently called. The punishment of evil often begins in this very life. For instance, over-indulgence and excessed of all kinds bring on their Nemesis quite soon in this very life. But some subtler forms of selfishness and sign will be punished—as every evil will be punished—in its own good time, as the Hour approaches. In either case, the arrogant boasting suners will realise that their faunt—who is best in position and in forces? (xx 73)—is turned against themselves.

251. These lines are the same as in xviii. 46 (second clause), (where see n. 2387), except that the word moradd (eventual returns) is here substituted for a mail (hope). The meaning is practically the same: but "hope" is more appropriate in the passage dealing generally-with this world's goods, and "eventual returns" in the passage dealing with the sinner s specific investments and commitments in world'y position and organised cliques.

77. In ast thou then seen

 اَعْلَمْ الْمَثِنَ الْمَثْنِ مَا الْمَثْولُ وَتَمَلَّلُ اللّهِ مِنْ اللّهِ مَا اللّهُ مَا الل

2522. Besides the man who boasts of wealth and power in actual possession, there is a type of man who boasts of getting them in the future and builds his worldly hones thereon. Is he sure? He denies God, and His goodness and Mercy. But all good is in the hands of God. Can such a man then bind God to bless him when he rejects faith in God? Or does he pretend that he has penetrated to the mysteries of the future? For no man can tell what the future holds for him.

2523. Such a man deserves double punishment,—for rejecting God, and for his blasphemies with His holy name.

2524. Literally, "We shall inherit" Cf. xix. 40, and n 2492. Even if the man had property and power, it must go back to the Source of all things, and the man must appear before the Judgment-seat, alone and unaccompanied, stripped of all the things from which he expected so much!

2528. Note the contrast between the saved and the doomed. The one march with dignity like honoured ones before a king, and the other rush in anguish to their punishment like a herd of cattle driven down by thirst to their watering place. Note the metaphor of the water. They rush madly for water but are plunged into the Fire!

253). The belief in God begetting a son is not a question merely of words or of speculative thought. It is a stupendous blasphemy against God. It lowers God to the level of an animal. If combined with the doctrine of viratious atonement, it amounts to a negation of God's justice and man's personal responsibility. It is destructive of all moral and spiritual order, and is condemned in the strongest possible terms.

<sup>2530.</sup> This basic principle was laid down early in the argument (xix. 35). It was illustrated by a reference to the personal history of many aposites, including Jesus himielf, who behaved justily as men to their kith and kin and humbly served God. The evil results of such superstitions were pointed out in the case of many previous generations which went to their ruin by dishonouring God. And the argument is now rounded off towards the close of the Sora.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XX (Ta Ha).

The chronology of this Sûra has some significance: it has some relation to the spiritual lessons which it teaches,

It was used with great effect in that remarkable scene which resulted in Hadhrat 'Umar's conversion, and which took place about the seventh year before the Hijrat.

The scene is described with dramatic details by Ibn Hisham. 'Umar had previously been one of the greatest enemies and persecutors of Islam. Like his blood-thirsty kinsmen the Quraish, he meditated slaying the Prophet; when it was suggested to him that there were near relations of his that had embraced Islam. His sister Fatima and her husband Sa'id were Muslims, but in those days of persecution they had kept their faith secret. When 'Umar went to their house, he heard them reciting this Sūra from a written copy they had. For a while they concealed the copy. 'Umar attacked his sister and her husband, but they bore the attack with exemplary patience, and declared their faith. 'Umar was so struck with their sincerity and fortitude that he asked to see the leaf from which they had been reading. It was given to him: his soul was touched, and he not only came into the Faith but became one of its strongest supporters and champions.

The leaf contained some portion of this Sura, perhaps the introductory portion. The mystic letters Ta Ha are prefixed to this Sura. What do they mean? The earliest tradition is that they denote a dialectical interjection meaning "O man!" If so, the title is particularly appropriate in two ways. (1) It was a direct and personal address to a man in a high state of excitement, tempted by his temper to do grievous wrong, but called by God's Grace, as by a personal appeal, to face the realities, for God knew his inmost secret thoughts (xx. 7); the revelation was sent by God Most Gracious, out of His Grace and Mercy (xx. 5). (2) It takes up the story from the last Sura, of man as a spiritual being and illustrates it in further details. It tells the story of Moses in the crisis of his life when he received God's Commission and in his personal relations with his mother, and how he came to be brought up in the Pharaoh's house, to learn all the wisdom of the Egyptians, for use in God's service, and in his personal relations with Pharaoh, whom we take to be his adoptive father (xxviii. 9). It further tells the story of a fallen soul who misled the Israelites into idolatry, and recalls how man's Arch-enemy Satan caused his fall. Prayer and praise are necessary to man to cure his spiritual blindness and enable him to appreciate God's revelation.

Summary.—The revelation of God (the Qur-an) is not an occasion of distress, but is a gift of mercy from God Most Gracious (xx. 1-8, and C. 142).

How Moses was first chosen, and led to his mission to Pharaoh with his brother Aaron (xx. 9-36, and C. 143).

... How the mother of Moses was directed to cast the infant Moses into the river, to be brought up in Pharaoh's house under God's own supervision, in order to preach to Pharaoh and declare God's glory (xx. 37-76, and C. 144).

How Moses was directed to lead his people and quell their rebellious spirit, and how that spirit was stirred up by Samiri (xx. 77-104, and C. 145).

On the Day of Judgment personal responsibility will be enforced, and God's Truth acknowledged: man should guard against Adam's enemy, Satan, and should renounce vanities, purify himself with prayer and praise, and await the call to God (xx: 105-135, and C. 146).

C. 142—God's revelation is not an occasion

- 7. If thou pronounce the word Aloud, (it is no matter):

2534. For an explanation see the Int. oduction to this Sūra. If the meaning is "O man!", that is itself a mystic meaning, as explained, but the letters form a word and would not be classified strictly as Abbreviated Letters; see n. 25 40 ii. 1. This, however, is a question of classification and does not affect the meaning. That is conjectural, and no one can be dogmatic about it.

2535. God's revelation may cause some human trouble for two reasons: (1) it checks man's selfathness and narrowness of view, and (2) it annoys the wicked and causes them to jeer and persecute. These are mere 'nicidental things, due to man's own shortcommags. As far as the trouble is concerned, the revelation is meant to give a warning, so that persecutors may be reclaimed, (and of course for men of faith it is a comfort and consolation, though that point does not arise in this context).

2536. Cf, x. 3 n. 1386. If things seem to be wrong in our imperfect vision on this earth, we must temember that God, Who encompasses all Creation and sits on the throne of Grace and Mercy, is in command, and our Faith tells us that all must be right. God's authority is not like an authority on earth, which may be questioned, or which may not last. His authority is "firmly established"

C. 143.—The story of how Moses was chosen and told (xx. 9.36.)

Of his mission, has a high mystic meaning. He was true to his family and solicitous For their welfare. Encamped in the desert, He saw a fire far off. Approaching. He found it was holy ground. God Did reveal Himself to him, so That he saw life in things lifeless, And light in his glorified Hand, that shone White with light divine. Armed

With these Signs he was told to go forth On his mission. But he thought of his brother Aaron, and prayed that God might join him In his mission, and his prayer was granted.

10. Behold, he saw a fire: 2543
So he said to his family.

﴿ وَهَا إِنَّالَ حَدِيثُ مُوسَى ﴿

2538. There are two or three implications. (1) Whatever you profess, or say alqud, gives no information to God: He knows not only what is secret and perhaps unknown to others, but what people take, spicial care to conceal. (2) It does you no good to make iosuncere professions; your hidden motives are known to Him, Who alone matters. (3) If you read the Word of God, or if you pray to God, it is not necessary to raise your voice; in either case, God will judge you by your inner thoughts which are tilke an open book to Him.

2539. Cf. xvii 110 and n. 2322. God is all in all, but the most beautiful things we can think of are referable to Him. A great deal is made, in our mystic philosophy, of the word "Name", which sums up attributes, and is almost entivalent to a Title of Honour.

2540. The story of Moses in its different incidents is told in many places in the Qur.Bn, and in each case the phase most appropriate in the context is referred to or emphasised. In it. 49-61, it was a phase from the religious history of mankind; in vii 103-102, it was a phase from the story of the Ummat (or nation) of Israel, and the story was continued to the times after Moses; in xvii 101-103, we have a picture of the decline of a solu in the strongance of Phanach; here, in xx. 9-24, we have a picture of the rise of a soul in the commission given to Moses from God; in kx. 25-36, we have his spiritual relationship with his brother Aacon; in xx. 37-40, we have his spiritual relation with his mother and sister, and his upbringing; in xx. 41-76, we have his spiritual combat with Pharach; and in xx. 77-98, we have his spiritual combat with his own people, the Israelites. For other incidents, consult the Index.

2341. A fire: It appeared like an ordinary fire, which always belokens the presence of men in a desert or a lonely place. Aloses made for it alone, to fetch the wherewithal for making a fire for his family, and perhaps to find some direction as to the way, from the people he should meet there. But it was not an ordinary fire. It was a Burning Bush: a Sign of the Glory of God.

2542. The spiritual history of Moses begins here, It was his spiritual birth. His physical life, index, and upbringing are referred to later on, to illustrate another point. Moses, when he given up, left the palace of Pharaon' and went to the Midaintie people, in the Sinal peoinsula. He marred among them, and was now travelling with his family and his flocks, when he was called to his mission by God. He went to look for a fire for comfort and guidance. He found a higher and holier comfort and guidance. The whole passage is full of the highest mystic meaning, which is reflected in the short rhymed verses in the original. Both the rhythm and the meaning suggest the highest mystery.

2455. The shoes are to be put off as a mark of respect. In the parallel mystic meaning, Moses was now to put away his mere worldly interests, and anything of mere worldly utility, he having been chosen by the Most High God, 2344. This was the valley just below Mount Sinal, where subsequently he was to receive the Law. In the parallel mystic meaning, we are selected by trials in this humble life, whose valley is just as sacred and receives God's glory just as much as the heights of the Mount (Tar) if we but have the insight to cerceive it.

2545. The first need is to mend our lives and worship and serve God, as in the last verse. The next is to realise the meaning of the Hereafter, when every soul will get the meed of its conduct in this life.

2546. Ubif may mean either "keep it hidden", or "makeit manifest", and the Commentatois have taken, some one meaning and some the other. If the first is taken, it means that the exact hour of all when the lydgment comes is hidden from man; if the second, it means that the fact of the Judgment to come is made known, that man may remember and take warming. I think that both meanings are mobiled, as is the case in mixtue interoretation.

254). Moses had yet to meet the formidable opposition of the arrogant Pharaoh and his proud Egyptians, and laters the rebellion of his own people. In receiving his commission, he is warned of body dangers. The mystic meaning relates to main's own sool: when once the light reaches him the first to it, lest be perish. He will be best with dangers of all kinds around him: the worst will be the danger of unbeheving people who seem to thrive on their self-shiress and in following their own vain desires?

2548. Now comes the miracle of the rod. The rod itself has a manifold mystic meaning. First of all, the attention of Moses himself is drawn to it, and he thinks of the ordinary uses to which he publis it in his daily life.

2349. C/i. viii. 107, where a different word (thu whān is used hir 's make', and the qualifying adjective is "plain (for all to see)". The scene there is before Pharaoh and his magicians and people: the object is to show the bollowness of their magic by a miracle: the rod appears before them as a long and creeping, withing seprent. Here there is a symbol to present God's Mystery to Mosse's mind and understanding: the rod becomes a Hairy (a dire snake), and its adirect motion is what is most to be impressed on the mind of Moses, for there were no other spectators. So the highest spiritual mysteries can be grasped, which God's gift of insight, from the most ordinary things of daily use. Once they are grasped, there is no question of fear. They really are the virtues of this life lifed up to the glorious spiritual plane.

21. (God) said, "Seize it, And fear not: We Shall return it at once To its former condition"...

2530. The second of the greater Miracles shown to Moses was the "White (shining) Hand". Ordinarily, when the skin becomes white, it is a sign of disease, leprosy or something loatispome. Here there was no question of disease: on the contrary, the hand was glorinder, and it shone as with a divine light. Such a miracle was beyond Egyptian or human magic. So, the instruments of our activity in daily life may be sanctified by being pressed close to that side of our which is sprintual: then they become bright and shining mistruments for the carrying out of the divine Will. Or pethags pressing the hand close to the side may be a metaphor for casting off fear: a bird when agitated shakes its wings about, but presses them close to its body when it sits composed Cf Xxviii, 32.

2551. Moses, having been spiritually prepared, now gets bis definite commission to go to Pharaoh and point out the error of his ways. So inordinate was Pharaoh's vanity that he had it in his mind to say: "I am your Lord Most High!" (Exizit 24).

2552. The breast is reputed to be the seat of knowledge and affections. The gift of the highest spiritual insight is what he prays for first., C/, xeiv, 1. This was the most urgent in point of time. There are three other things he also asks for: vx, (1) God's help in his task, which at first appears difficult to him; (2) the gift of eloquence, and the removal of the impediment from his speech; and (3) the counsel and constant attendance with him of his brother Aaron, whom he loved and trusted, for he would otherwise be alone among the Egyptians.

32. "And make him share My task:

33. "That we may celebrate "333 Thy praise without stift,

34. "And remember Thee Without stint:

35, "For Thou art He That (ever) regardeth us." 474

36. (God) said: "Granted Is thy prayer, O Moses!"

C. 144.- From his birth was Moses prepared for his task.

(xx. 37-76.) His mother received guidance, so that God's purpose might be fulfilled. Moses Was brought up in Pharaoh's palace and trained In all the learning of Egypt. Yet he drank The love of his people in his mother's milk. Adventures and trials he had, including His stay with the Midianites - until . He was called to his double mission: to preach To Pharaoh and the Egyptians, and to free His own people. So he and Aaron went To Pharson, who rejected God and His Signs, But appointed a trial of strength between His magicians and Moses. Moses won: And the Truth of God was accepted By some Egyptians, but not by Pharach.

2554. Literally, "Strengthen my back with him". 'A man's strength lies in his back and backbone so that he can stand erect and boldly face his tasks.

2556 The celebration of God's praise and remembrance is one form of showing gratitude on the part of Moses for the Grace which God has bestowed upon him.

<sup>2555.</sup> The requests that Moses makes are inspired, not by earthly but by spiritual motives. The motive, expressed in the most general terms, is to glorify God, not in an occasional way, but systematically and continuously, "without stint." The clauses in this verse and the next, taken together, govern all the requests he makes, from verse 25 to verse 32.

37. " And indeed We conferred
A favour on thee
Another time (before).

38. "Behold! We sent have To thy mother, by inspiration, The message:

39, "'Throw (the child)

And an enemy to him '; "***
But I cast (the garment

40. "Behold! thy sister goeth forth And saith; 'Shall I show you وَلَقَدْمَنَنَا عَلَىٰكُ مَنَّا أُخْرَىٰنَ

 وَالْمُمْسَعَ عَلَى عَيْمَ

@ إِذْ تَشَيِّمَ أُخُـ تُنْكَ فَتَقُولُ مَثَلَادُ لُكُمْ

253. The story is not told, but only those salient points recapitulated which bear on the spiritual upphringing and work of Moses. Long after the age of Joseph, who had been a Wazir to one of the Pharaohs, there came on the throne of Egypt a Pharaoh who hated the Iraelties and wanted them annihilated. He ordered Israelties and lack little and the lack the ordered Israeltie male children to be killed when they were born. Mose's mother hid him for a time, but when further concealment was impossible, at thought came into her mind that she should put the'r child into a chest and send the chest floating down the Nile. This was not merely a foolsh fancy of hers. It was God's Plan to bring up Moses in all the learning of the Egyptians, in order that that learning itself should be used to expose what was wrong in it and to advance the glory of God. The chest was floated into the river Nile. It flowed on into a stream that passed through Pharaoh's Garden. It was picked up by Pharaoh's people and the child was adopted by Pharaoh's were See xxivii 415.

2538. Pharauh wis an enemy to God, because he was puffed up and he blasphenied, claiming to be God himself. He was an enemy to the child Moses, because he hated the Israelites and wanted to have their male children killed; also because Moses stood for God's revelation, or conte.

2559. God made the child comely and lovable, and he attracted the love of the very people who, on general grounds, would have killed him.

255). We may suppose that the anxious mother, after the child was floated on the water, sent the child's siter to follow the chest from the bank and see where and by whom it was picked up. When it was picked up by Pharach's own family and they seemed to love the child, she appeared the a stranger before them, and said, "Shall I search out a good wet-nurse for the child, that she may rear-the child you are going to adopt?" That was exactly what they wanted. She ran home and told her mother. The mother was delighted to come and fold the Infant in her arms again and feed it at her own breast, and all openly and without any contesiment.

2562. The mother's eyes had, we may imagine, been sore with scalding tears at the separation from her baby. Now they were cooled: a phrase meaning that her heart was comforted.

283. Years passed. The child grew up. In outward learning he was of the house of Pharaoh, In his inner soul and sympathy he was of Irarel. One day, he went to the Israelite colony and saw all the Egyptian oppression under which Israel laboured. He saw an Egyptina smiting an Israelite, apparently with impunity. Mones felt brotherly sympathy and smore the Egyptian. He did not intend to kill him, but in fact the Egyptian died of the blow. When this became known, his position in Pharaoh's household became impossible. Sole fleed out of Egypt, and was only saved by God's grace. He fied to the Biant Peninsula, to the land of the Midanites, and had various adventures, the married one of the daughters of the Midanites chief, and lived with the Medianites for many years, as an Egyptian stranger. He had many triats and temptations, but he retained his integrity of character.

2594. See last note. After many years spent in a quiet life, grazing his father-in-law's flocks, he came one day to the valley of Tuwā underneath the great mountain mass of Sina, called Tar lin Arabic). The peak on the Arabian side (where Moses was) was called Horeb by the Hebrews. Then was fulfilled God's Plan: he saw the fire in the distance, and when he went up, he was addressed by God and chosen to be God's Mesenger for that age.

2565. We may suppose that Moses had fied alone to the land of Midian, and that he had now come alone (with his family but not with his brother) to TuWs, as described in n. 23% above. When he was honoured with his mission, and was granted his request that his brother Aaron should accompany him, we may suppose that he took steps to get Aaron to come to him, and their meeting was in TuWs. Some time may be supposed to have elapsed before they were in Egypt, and then they prayed, and received these directions in their Egyptian home.

Aaron was either an elder or a younger brother,—we are not told which. In either case he was born when the ban on Israelite new-born babes was not in operation. Moses had been out of touch with him, and it speaks greatly for his Iamily affection that he remembered him and prayed for his remarkadeship in the most sectious spiritual work of his life.

And slacken not, Either of you, in keeping Me in remembrance.

- 43. "Go, both of you, to Phar 10h, "500 For he has indeed Transgressed all bounds; 5007
- 44. "But speak to him mildly; Perchance he may take Warning or fear (God)." 5008
- 45. They (Moses and Aaron) said:

- 47. "So go ye both to him,
  And say, 'Verily we are

  With a Sign, indeed,
  Have we come from thy Lord!

<sup>2566.</sup> Their mission was in the first instance to Pharaoh and to the Egyptians, and then to lead Israel out of Egypt.

<sup>2568</sup> So far Pharaoh in his inordinate vanity had forgotten himself and forgotten how small a creature he was before God. This was to be brought to his recollection, so that he might perhaps repent and believe, or at least be deterred by fear from "transgressing all bounds". Some men eschew wrong from sincere love of God and understanding of their fellow-men, and some (of coarser minds) from the lear of consequences. Even the latter conduct may be a step to the former.

<sup>2570.</sup> The Children of Israel were subjected to all sorts of oppression and indignities. They were given hard tasks; their leaders were unjustly beaten; they were forced to make bricks without straw; and they "groaned in bondage" (Excd., 6.9), vi 5).

2571. God, in His infinite Mercy, always offers Peace to the most hardened sinners, even those who are warring against Him. But, as stated in the next verse, their defiance cannot go on with impunity indefinitely. The punishment must inevitably come for sin, whether the sinner is great or small.

2572, Notice how subtly Pharaoh rejects the implication in Moses's speech, in which Moses had referred to "thy Lord" (verse 47). Pharaoh implicitly repudiates the suggestion that the God who had sent Moses and Agron could possibly he Pharaoh's Lord. He asks insolently, "Who is this Lord of yours, of Whom ye speak as having sent you?"

2573. The answer of Moses, is straightforward, dignified, and illuminating. He will not dispute about "my Lord" or "your Lord," the God of Israel, or the God of Egypt. He and his brother were proud to serve "our Lord," but He was the universal Lord and Cherisher, the One and Only God. Who had created all beings and all things. It was from Him that each created thing derived its form and nature, including such free-will and power as man had got. He, Pharaoh, was subject to the same condition. In order that the free-will should be rightly exercised, God had given guidance through His Messengers, and His Signs. Moses and Aaron slood as such Messengers, with such Signs. Will Pharaoh now understand and do right?

2574. But Pharaoh was not the man to accept teaching from the despised Israelite—one, too, who in his eyes was a renegade from the higher Egyptian civilisation. "If." he says in effect, "there is only one God, to Whom all things are referred, this is a new religion. What of the religion of our ancestors? Were they wrong in worshipping the Egyptian gods? And if they were wrong, are they in misery now?" He, wanted to trap floose into a scathing denunciation of his ancestors, which would at once have deprived him of the sympathy or the hearing of the Egyptian crowd,

- 52. He replied: "The knowledge Of that is with my Lord,"
  Duly recorded: my Lord Never errs, nor forgets.—
- 53. "He Who has made for you The earth like a carpet Spread out; has enabled you To go about therein by roads and (And channels); and has sent Down water from the sky." With it have We produced 2071 Divers pairs of plants 1078 Each separate from the others.

255. Moses did not fall into the trap. He remembered the injunction given to him to speak mildly (xx. 44). He speaks mildly, but does not in any way whittle down the truth. He said in effect: 'God's knowledge is perfect, as if, with men, it were a record. For men may make mistakes or may not remember, but God never mistakes and never forgets. But God is not only All-Knowing: He is also All-God. Look around you: the whole earth is spread out like a carpet. Men go to and fro in it freely. He sends abundance of water from the skies, which comes down in Nile floods and fertilises the whole soil of Egoty, and feeds immen and animals.'

2576. Sabit means not only a road, but would include water-roads or channels, and in modern conditions, airways—in fact all means of communication.

2577. This seems to be outside the speech of Moses, and connects itself with the following verses 54-56, as part of the Word of God, expanding the speech of Moses and explaining the working of God's Providence in nature.

2578. Azwāj: we might translate here (as in xv. 88) by "classes" instead of "pairs"; but as sex in plants seems to be referred to elsewhere (see xiii, 3, and n, 1804), I translate "pairs"

2579. This verse ought really to go into the last Section.

259. This is a sort of general introduction to the spiritual combat between Moses and Pharaoh. The Signs are not only the countering of the fraudulent magte of Egypt with real miracles, but the subsequent Plagues (not mentioned here) and the Crossing of the Red Sea by Israel. 57. He said: "Hast thou come To drive us out Of our land with thy magic," 681 O Moses?

59. Moses said: "Your tryst

281. The Egyptians accused Moses of a design to deprive them of their land, and of exercising black magic. Both charges were palpably false. What Moses wanted to do was to free his people from bondage. The Egyptians had all the power in their possession: they wished to use the Israelites as untouchable helots; and any one who wanted to mitigate this fulustice was branded as a dreadful person who wished to deprive them of their lawful rights. As to magic, the Egyptians judged Moses by themselves. They practised sortery to deceive the people. They accused the man of God of doing the same, though both his outlook and the source of his strength were altogether different.

288. Simms: literally, 'equal, even. It has been construed to mean: (1) a place equally distant for both sides, or a central puece, or (2) equally convenient to both sides, or (3) an open level plain, where the people can collect with ease. All these are possible meanings, but the one I have adopted is more comprehensive, and includes the others, viz: (4) a place where both sides shall have even chances, "a fair place," as Plamer lesconically translates it.

2383 A great day of a Temple Festival, when the temples and streets were decorated, and people were in holiday, free from work... Moses makes this appointment in order to collect as large a number as possible, for his first duty is to preach the Truth. And he apparently did it with some effect with some Egyptians (xx. 70, 72-76), though the Pharaoh and his high and mighty officers rejected the Truth and afterwards not it the Penalty.

284. Pharaoh was apparently taken aback at Moses appointing a solemn day of public Festival, when there would be a large concourse and there would be sure to be some people not in the Court clique, who might be critical of Pharaoh's own sorcerers. But probably there was something more in their dark counsels, something unfair and wicked, to which Moses refers in his speech in the next verse.

2385. Moses had some idea of their trickery and deceit. They would palm off their fraudulent magic as coming from God or from their gods? He warms them that their tricks will stand exposed, and their hopes will be deteated.

2586. They knew that they had here to deal with no ordinary man, but a man with powers above with they could conceive of. But eril always thinks exil. -Judging Moses and Aaron by their own standards, they thought that these two were also tricksters, with some tricks superior to their own. All they had to do was to stand together, and they must win. I construe xx. 63-64 to be their private talk among themselves, followed by their open challenge to Moses in xx. 65.

2587. Cf. xx. 104. Your most cherished institutions, i.e. your ancestral and time-honoured religion angue. Μυμμία, teminine of A mthat, most distinguished, honoured, cherished. Tariqat == way of life, institutions, conduct.

2588. Presumably Pharaoh was in this secret conference, and he promises the most lavish rewards to the magicians if they overcome Moses. See vii. 114. That—but I think more than that—is implied. That day was to be the crisis: if they won then, they would win all along, and Moses and his people would be crushed.

2589. Their bag of tricks was so clever that it imposed upon all beholders. Their ropes and their rods were thrown, and seemed to move about like snakes. So realistic was the effect that even Moses felt the least bit of doubt in his own mind. He. of course had no tricks, and he relied entirely on God.

2590. The concerted attack of evil is sometimes so well contrived from all points that falsehood appears and is acclaimed as the truth. The believer of truth is isolated, and a sort of moral duztiness creeps over his mind But by God's grace Fauls asserts itself, gives him confidence, and points out the specific truths which will dissipate and destroy the teeming brood of faite-board.

2596. The magic, mummery, and deceptions which pertained to Egyptian Pagan religion became a creed, a State article of faith, to which all citzens were compelled to bow, and which its priests were compelled actively to practise. And Pharaoh was at the head of the whole system—the high priest or the supreme god: Witten using the theorem of the converted magicians lay the blame on Pharaoh, effectively negativing Pharaoh's disingenuous charge that they had been in league with Moses.

These falsehoods and deceptions—combined in many cases with horrid cruelties, open and secret.—were common to many Pagan systems. Some of them have been investigated in detail in Sir John G. Fraver's Golden Bough.

They were to cross the Red Sea into the Sinai Peninsula. They were told to have no fear of Pharaoh or of the sea or of the unknown desert country of Sinai into which they were going. They crossed dry-shod, while Pharaoh who came in pursuit with his troopy was overwhelmed by the sea. He and his men all pershed. There is no emphasis on this episode here. But the emphasis is faid on the hard task which Moses had with his own people after the had delivered them from the 2602, C.f. ii. 37 and n. 71; and vii. 160. I should like to construe this not only literally but also metaphorically. 'God has looked after you and saved you. He has given you ethical and spiritual guidance. Enjoy the fruits of all this, but do not become puffed up and rebelhous (another meaning in the root Taga); otherwise the Wrath of God is sure to descend on you.

2603. This gives the key-note to Moses's constant tussle with his own people, and introduces immediately afterwards the incident of the golden calf.

2604. This was when Moses was up on the Mount for forty days and forty nights: ii. 51, and n. 66. Moses had left the elders of Israel with Aaron behind him: Exod. xxiv. 14, While he was in a state of ecstatic honour on the Mount, his people were enacting strange scenes down below. They were tested and tried, and they failed in the trial. They made a golden image of a calf for worship, as described below. See also vii. 184:150 and notes.

Z605. Who was this Sāmni? If it was his personal name, it was sufficiently near the meaning of the original root-word to have the definite article statished to it: Cf. the name of the Chalita Mutasim, (Al-Mutasim). What was the root for "Sāmin"? If we look to old Egyptian, we have Sāmner-A stranger, foreigner (Sir E. A. Wallis Budges Egyptian Hirngly)shic Dictionary, 1920, p 815. As the Israelites had just left Egypt, they might quite well have among them an Egyptianised Hebrew beating that nickname. That the name Sāmner was subsequently not unknown among the Hebrews is clear from the Old Testament. In I Kings, xvi. 24 we read that Omni, king of Israel, the northern portion of the divided kingdom, who reigned about 903-896 B.C., built a new city, Samaria, on a bill which he bought from Sāmner, the owner of the hill, for two talents of silver, See also Renan: History of Israel, it; Di. For a further discussion of the words see n. 2608 below.

2606. There are two promises referred to in this verse, the promise of God and the promise of the people of Israel. They form one Covenant, which was entered into through their leader Moses. See xx. 80, and ii. 63, n, 78. God s promise was to protect them and lead them to the Promised Land, and their promise was to obey God's Law and His commandments.

2607. G. Exod. xii. 33-36: the Isrselites, before they left Egypt, borrowed from the Egyptians "fewels of silver and jewels of gold, and raiment"; and "they spoiled the Egyptians" i.e., stripped them of all their valuable jewellery. Note that the aniswer of the backsliders is disingenuous in various ways. (1) The Samiri was no doubt responsible for suggesting the making of the golden calf, but they could not on that account disclaim responsibility for themselvers: the butden of the sin is on him who commits it, and he cannot pretend that he was powerless to avoidit. (2) At most the weight of the gold they carried could not have been heavy even if one 'two men carried it, but would have been negligible if distributed. (3) Gold is valuable, and it is not likely that if they wanted to disburde themselves of it, they had say need to light a furnace, melt it, and cast it into the shape of a calf.

2608. See n. 2605 about the Sămiri. If the Egyptian origin of the root is not accepted, we have a Hebrew origin in "Shomer" a guard, watchman, sentinel; allied to the Arabic Samara, yasmuru, to keep awake by uight, to converse by night; samīr, one who keeps awake by uight. The Sāmiri may have been a watchman, in fact or by nickname.

2609. See n. 1113 to vii, 148, where the same words are used and explained.

2610. See n. 1114 to vii, 148.

2611. Moses has forgotten: i.e., 'forgotten both us and his god. He has been gone for so many days. He is searching for a god on the Mount when his god is really here! 'This is spoken by the Samiri and his partisans, but the people as a whole accepted it, and it therefore becomes their speech.

2612. This is a parenthetical comment. How blind the people were! They had seen Signa of the true living God, and yet they were willing to worship this dead image! The true living God had spoken in definite words of command, while this call fould only emit some sounds of lowing, which were themselves contrived by the fraud of the priests. This image could do neither good nor harm, while God was the Cherisher and Sustainer of the Universe, Whose Mercy was unbounded and Whose Wrath was terrible.

2613. "Resist this temptation; you are being tested in this. Do not follow after the semi-Egyptian Samiri, but obey me,"

2620. Moses now turns to the Samit, and the Samit's reply in the next verse sums up his character in a few wonderful strokes of character-painting. The lesson of the whole of this episode is the fall of a human soul that nominally comes to God's Truth in a humble position but makes mischlef when and as it finds occasion. It is no less dangerous and culpable than the arrogant soul typified by Pharaoh, which gets into high places and makes its leadership the cause of rigin to a whole nation.

<sup>2016.</sup> The rebels had so little faith that they had given Moses up for lost, and never expected to see him again.

<sup>2617.</sup> Moses, when he came back, was full of anger and grief. His speech to Aaron is one of rebuke, and he was also inclined to handle him roughly; see next verse. The order he refers to is that stated in vii, 142, "Act for me amongst my people; do right, and follow not the way of those who do mischief.".

1621. This answer of the Samiri is a fine example of unblushing effrontery, excelul evasion of issues, and invented falsehoods. He takes upon himself to pretend that he had far more might than anyhody else; he saw what the vulgar crowd did not see. He saw something supernatural. "The Apostie" is construed by many Commentators in one an the angel Gabriel. Nexal [plural, result) is used in several places for "angels" e.g. in xi. 69, 77; xix 19; and xxix. 1. But if we take it to mean the Apostie Aloses, it means that the Samiri say something sacred or supernatural in his footprints; perhaps he thinks a little flattery would make Moses forgree him. The dust became sacred, and his thowing it into the call's image made the claft-cutter a lowing sound 1. As if that was the point at issue! I he does not answer the change of making an image for worship, But should be enough!"

2622. He and his kind were to become social lepers, untouchables; perhaps also sufficiently arrigant to hold others at arm's length, and say " Noli me langure" (touch me not)

2623. Namely, the promised Wrath of God : see xx, 81 ; lxxxix, 25.

2624. The cast effigy was re-melted and destroyed. Thus ends the Sanmi's story, of which the lessons are indicated in n. 2620 above. It may be interesting to pursue the transformations of the word Samiri in later times. For its origin see notes 2605 and 2608 above. Whether the root of Samut was originally Egyptian or Hebrew does not affect the later history. Four facts may be noted. (1) There was a man bearing a name of that kind at the time of Moses, and he led a revolt against Moses and was cursed by Moses. (2) In the time of King Omri (903 896 B,C.) of the northern kingdom of Israel, there was a man called Shemer, from whom, according to the Bible, was bought a hill on which was built the new capital of the kingdom, the town of Samana. (3) The name of the hill was Shomer (-watchman, vigilant guardian), and that form of the name also appears as the name of a man (see II Kings xii. 21); some authorities think the town was called after the hill and not after the man (Hastings's Encyclopadia of Religion and Ethics), but this is for our present purposes immaterial. (4) There was and is a dissenting community of Israelites called Samaritans, who have their own separate Pentateuch and Targum, who claim to be the true Children of Israel, and who hold the Orthodox Jews in contempt as the latter hold them in contempt; they claim to be the true guardians (Shemerim) of the Law, and that is probably the true origin of the name Samaritan, which may go further back in time than the foundation of the town of Samaria. I think it probable that the schism originated from the time of Moses, and that the curse of Moses on the Samiri explains the 811

2630. In the last verse, it was the deceptiveness and relativity of Time that was dealt with. Here we come to the question of space, solidity, bulk. The question was actually put to the holy Prophet: what will become of the solid Mountains, or in the English phrase, "the eternal hills"? They are no more substantial than anything else in this temporal world. When the "new wrold", (xiii, 3) of which Unbelievers doubted, is actually in being, the mountains will case to exist. We can imagine the scene of judgment as a level plain, in which there are no ups and downs and no places of concealment. All is straight and level, without corners, mysteries, of lutking doubts.

2631. The one word massis carries the ideas of (1) tearing up by the roots, (2) scattering like chaff or dust, and (3) winnowing. Its twofold repetition here intensifies its meaning.

2632, The Caller: the singel whose voice will call and direct, all souls. Gabriel will call, when Israitl has sounded the Trumpet,

(Can they show) him: all sounds 300 Shall humble themselves in The Presence of (God) Most Gracious: Nothing shalt thou hear Nothing shalt thou hear But the tramp of their feet (As they march).

- 109. On that Day shall no
  Intercession avail

  Permission has been granted
  By (God) Most Gracious
  And whose word is Acceptable to Him.
- 110. He knows what (appears To His creatures as) before Or after or behind them: ***33 But they shall not compass it With their knowledge.
- 111. (All) faces shall be humbled Before (Him)—the Living, The Self-Subsisting, Eternal: Hopeless indeed will be The man that carries Iniquity (on his back).**

2633. A beautiful personification of hushed Sound. First there is the foud blast of the Trumpet; then there is the soft angelic Voice calling "Arise". Then there is the stillness and hush of awe and reverence; only the tramp of the ranks marching along will be heard.

2634.  $C_l$ : ii. 255 in the Verse of the l'hrone. Here man is in the accusative case governed by tanfa's, and it is better to construe as I have done. That is, intercession will benefit no one except those for whom God has granted permission, and whose word (of repentance) is true and sincere, and therefore acceptable to God. Others construe: no intercession will avail, except by those to whom God has granted permission, and whose word (of intercession) is acceptable to God. In that case the two distinct clauses have no distinct meanings.

2635. Cf. ii. 255 and n. 297. The slight difference in phraseology (which I have tried to preserve in the Translation) will be understood as a beauty when we reflect that here our attention is directed to the Day of Judgment, and ii. 1255 the wording is general, and applies to our present state also.

25i6. The metaphor of the burden of sin which the unjust carry on their backs is referred to in xx. 100-101 (seen. 2526), in vi. 31, and in other passages. Note that all faces, those of the just as well as of the unjust, will be humble before God: the best of us can claim no ment equal to God's Grace. But the just will have Hope: while the unjust, now that the curtain of Reality has risen, will be in absolute Depair!

- 112. But he who works deeds
  Of righteousness, and has faith,
  Will have no fear of harm
  Nor of any curtailment ****

<sup>2637.</sup> See the last note. Unlike the unjust, the righteous, who have come with Faith, will now and their Faith justified: not only will they be free from any fear of harm, but they will be rewarded to the full, or, as has been said in other passages, where His bounty rather than His justice is emphasised, they will get more than their due reward (ii. 27; xxxix. 10).

<sup>2638.</sup> The Qur-an is in clear Arabic, so that even an unlearned people like the Arabs rhight understand and profit by its warnings, and the rest of the world may learn through rhem, as they did in the first few centuries of Islam and may do again when we Muslims show ourselves worthy to explain and exemplify its meaning. The evil are warned that they may repent; the good are confirmed in their Fails and strengtheand by their remembrance of Him.

<sup>2639.</sup> God is above every human event or desire. His purpose is universal). But He is the Truth, the absolute Truth; and His kingdom is the true kingdom, that can carry out its will. That Truth unfolds itself gradually, as it did in the gradual revelation of the Qursan to the holy Apcetle. But even after it was completed in a volume, its true meaning and purpose only gradually unfold themselves to any given indivic; a) or nation. No one should be impatient about it. On the contrary, we should always pray for increase in our own knowledge, which can never at any given moment be complete.

<sup>2640.</sup> The spiritual fail of two individual souls, Pharaoh and the Samir, haxing been referred to, the one through overweening arrogame, and the other through a spirit of mischief and false harking back to the past, our attention is now called to the prototype of Evil who tempted Adam, the original Man, and to the fact that though man was clearly warned that Evil is his enemy and will only effect his ruin, he showed so little formess that he succumbed to it at once at the first opportunity.

But he forgot: and We found On his part no firm resolve.

  And to a kingdom
  That never decays?"

264). See last note. 'The story is referred to, in order to draw attention to man's folly in rushing into the arms of Evil, though he had been clearly forewarned.

2642. Not only had the warning been given that Evil is an enemy to man and will effect his description, but it was clearly pointed out that all his needs were being met in the Garden of Happiness. Food and clothing, druk and shelter, were amply provided for. By these terms we must understand, if the Garden was a spiritual Garden, also spiritual good the things that feed the soul and make it glad, that give it an aesthetic sense of beauty and afford it shelter from extremes of passion or emotion.

2643. The suggesion of the Evil One is clever, as it always is: it is false, and at the same time plausible. It is false, because (1) that felicity was not temporary, like the life of this world, and (2) they were supreme in the Garden, and a "hingdom" such as was dangled before them would only add to their sorrows. It was plausible, because (1) nothing had been said to them about Eternity, as the opposite of Eternity was not yet known, and (2) the sweets of Power arise from the savour of Self, and Self is an alluring (if false) attraction that misteads the Will.

- 121. In the result, they both
  Ate of the tree, and so
  Their nakedness appeared ***
  To them: they began to sew
  Together, for their covering,
  Leaves from the Garden:
  Thus did Adam disobey
  His Lord, and allow himself ***
  To be seduced.
- 122. But his Lord chose him (For His Grace): He turned To him, and gave him guidance.
- 123. He said: "Get ye down,
  Both of you,—all together, ***
  From the Garden, with enmity
  One to another: but if,
  As is sure, there comes to you
  Guidance from Me, whosoever
  Follows My guidance, will not Lose his way, nor fall ***
  Into misery,
- 124. "But whosoever turns away From My Message, verily For him is a life narrowed Down, and We shall raise

2644. Hitherto they were clothed in the garb of Innocence and knew no evil. Now, when disobedience to God had sullied their soul and torn off the garment of their Innocence, their sullied Self appeared to themselves in all its nakedness and uginess, and they had to resort to external things (leaves of the Garden) to cover the shame of their self-consciousness,

2645. Adam had been given the will to choose, and he chose wrong, and was about to be lost in the throng of the evil ones, when God's Crace came to his aid, His repentance was accepted, and God chose him for His Mercy, as stated in the next verse.

2646. The little variations between this passage and ii. 38 are instructive, as showing how clearly the particular argument is followed in each case. Here ighlig ("get ye down") is in the dual number, and refers to the two individual souls, our common ancestors: in iii. 38 lephils is in the plural number, to include all mankind and Satan, for the argument is about the collective life of man. On the other hand, "all together" includes Satan, the spirit of evil, and the emity "one to another" refers to the eternal feud between Man and Satan, between our better nature and Evil.

2647. For the same reason as in the last note, we have here the consequences of Guidance to the individual, vir.; being saved from going astray or from falling into misery and despair. In ii. 38, the consequences expressed, though they apply to the individual, are also appropriate taken collectively: "on them shall be no fear, nor shall they grieve."

Him up blind on the Day 6046 Of Judgment."

- 126. (God) will say: "Thus
  Didst thou, when Our Signs
  Came unto thee, disregard
  Them: so wilt thou,
  This day, be disregarded." **co
- 127. And thus do We recompense
  Him who transgresses beyond bounds
  And believes not in the Signs
  Of his Lord: and the Penalty
  Of the Hereafter is far more
  Grievous and more enduring. State

128. Is it not a warning to such Men (to call to mind)
How many generations before them

We destroyed, in whose haunts They (now) move? Verily, In this are Signs for men Endued with understanding. 1868 وَالِيَّهُ اعْنَى (الْ الْرَبِي الْرَحَةُ لَيْكَ أَمَّنَاكُ عَلَى وَقَدْ كُنْكُ لِلْهِ الْمُعَلَّى وَقَدْ كُنْكُ لِلْهِ الْمَنْكُ وَاللَّهُ الْمُنْكَ وَاللَّهُ الْمُنْكِينَةُ مِنْ اللَّهُ اللَّ

2648. Again, as in the last two verses, there is a variation from the previous passage (ii. 39). The consequences of the rejection of God's guidance are here expressed more individually: a life narrowed down, and a bindness that will pessite beyond this life. "A life narrowed down" has many implications: (1) it is a life from which all the beneficent influences of God's wide world are excluded; (2) it is a life for Self, not for all; (3) in looking exclusively to the "good things" of this life, it misses the true Reality.

2649. Because God gave him physical sight in this life for trial, he thinks he should be favoured in the treal world, the world that matters! He misused his physical sight and made himself blind for the other world.

2650, 'You were deliberately blind to God's Signs: now you will not see God's favours, and will be excluded from His Grace, 2651. Blindness in the world of enduring Reality is far worse than physical blindness in the world of probation.

2652. Cf. xx. 54. This phrase concluded the argument of Moses with Pharanh about Pharanh bimdness to God and the Signs of God. Now it concludes the more general argument about men, concerning whom the saying arose: 1 none are so billed as those who xtll not see,

2633, Cf. x. 19 and n. 1407 also xi. 110. In God's holy Plan and Purpose, there is a wise adjustor of all interests, and a merciful chance and rer; ite given to all, the unjust as well as the just, and His decree or word abilities. The most wicked have a term appointed them for respite. Had it not been so, the punishment must necessarily have descended on them immediately for their evil deeds.

2654. All good men must be patient with what seems to them evil around them. That does not mean that they should sit still and do nothing to destroy exil; for the fight against evil is one of the cardinal points in Islam. What they are sold is that they must not be impatient: they must pray to God and commune with Him, so that their patience and faith may be strengthened, and they may be able the better to grapple with evil. For they thus not only get strength but inward spiritual joy.

2655, Taraf, plural agrāf, may mean sides, ends, extremities. If the day be compared to a tubular figure standing erect, the top and bottom are clearly marked, but the sidet are not so clearly marked they would be april (plural), not tarafain (aula). Now the prayer before sunties is clearly Fajr; that before sunset is "har: "part of the hours of the night" would indicate Magrib (easi'y night, just after sunset), and "blab, before going to bed. There is left Zuhr, which is in the indefinite side or middle of the day: it may be soon after the sun's decline from noon, but there is considerable latitude about the precise hour. The majority of Commentators interpret in favour of the Ave Canonical prayers, and some include optional prayers. But I think the words are even more comprehensive. A good man's life is all one sweet Song of Praise to God.

2656. The good things of this life may make a brave show, but they are as nothing compared with the good of the Hereafter. Both are provided by God. But the former are given to the just and the unjust as a test and trial, and in any case will pass away; while the latter come specially from God for His devoted servants, and are incomparably of more value and will last through eternity.

2637. Sustenance, in the sense of the ordinary needs of life, the man of God does not worry about. That is provided by God for all, the just and the unjust. But the special provision, the real Sustenance, the spiritual fruit, is for a righteous life in the service of God.

2658. The question or plea of the Unbelievers is disingenuous. Many Signs have come with this Revelation. But the one that should have appealed to those who believed in former revelations and should have convinced them was what was in their own books.

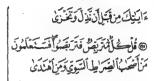

2659. If the Sign mentioned in the last note did not convince them, it would mean that they were not true to their own faith. They were not straight with themselves. In justice they should have been punished for their laisheod. But they were given further respite. Or they would again have argued in a circle, and said: "If only God had sent us a living apostle we should have believed!" The living apostle they flout because they want a Sign. The Sign they wish to ignore, because they want a living apostle!

Thy Signs before we were Humbled and put to shame."

135. Say: "Each one (of us)
Is waiting: wait ye, therefore, ""
And soon shall ye know
Who it is that is
On the straight and even ""

16 Way, and who it is

30 That has received guidance."

<sup>2660.</sup> If people will not be true to their own lights, what further argument is left? The man of God an only say: "Let us wait the issue: my faith tells me that God's Truth must prevail." Cf. ix. 32.

<sup>2661.</sup> Cf. xix. 43. The straight and even Way must endure, and show that the man who follows it has received true guidance. All falsehood and crookedness must ultimately disappear.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXI (Anbiyaa).

The last Sûra dealt with the individual story (spiritual) of Moses and Aaron, and contrasted it with the growth of evil in individuals like Pharaoh and the Samiri, and ended with a warning against Evil, and an entortation to the purification of the soul with prayer and praise. This Sûra begins with the external obstacles placed by Evil against such purification, and gives the assurance of God's power to defend men, illustrating this with reference to Abraham's fight against idolatry, Lot's fight against unnatural wickedness, Noah's against unbelief, that of David and Solomon against injustice and failure to proclaim God's glory by making full use of man's God-given faculties and powers, that of Job against impatience and want of self-confidence, that of Isma'il, Idris, and Zul-kifi against want of steady perseverance, that of Zun-nûn against hasty anger, that of Zakarıya against spiritual isolation, and that of Mary against the lusts of this world. In each allusion there is a special point about the soul's purification. The common point is that the Prophets were not, as the vulgar suppose, just irresistible men. They had to win their ground inch by inch against all kinds of resistance from evil.

The chronology of this Sūra has no significance. It probably dates from the middle of the Meccan period of inspiration.

Summary.—Man treats, as he has always treated, the serious things of life with jest or contempt; but the Judgment must come, and Truth must triumph (xxi. 1.29, and C. 147).

Unity of Design, and certainty of God's Promise: God's protection and mercy, and His justice (xxi 30.50, and C. 148).

· How Abraham triumphed over idols, as did others among God's chosen ones over various forms of evil (xxi. 51-93, and C, 149).

Work righteousness while it is yet time, for the Judgment will come, and only he righteous will inherit (xxi, 94-112, and C, 150),

C. 147.—Men may lightly treat God's Signs
(xxi, 1-20.) As jests, but the Judgment must come
Inevitably. His Message is true,
And delivered by God's Apostle, as from
Man to men. Truth must triumph,
And all false gods and false worship
Must come to naught: for God is One,
And His Truth has been one throughout the arcs.

Stra XXI.

Anbiyaa, or The Prophets

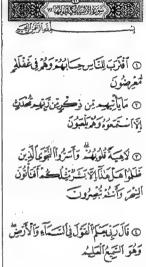

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- Closer and closer to mankind **ees*
   Comes their Reckoning: yet they
   Heed not and they turn away.
- Never comes (aught) to them
  Of a renewed Message sess
  From their Lord, but they Listen to it as in jest,—
- 3. Their hearts toying as with Trifles. The wrong-doers conceal ***

  Their private counsels, (saying), "Is this (one) more than A man like yourselves? Will ye go to witchcraft With your eyes open? " ***

  With your eyes open? " ***

  With your eyes open? ****
- 4. Say: <sup>9886</sup> "My Lord Knoweth (every) word (spoken) <sup>9807</sup> In the heavens and on earth; He is the One that heareth And knoweth (all things)."

2662. Every minute sees them nearer to their doom, and yet they are sadly headless, and even actively turn away from the Message that would save them.

2653. In each age, when the Message of God is renewed, the very people who should have known better and welcomed the renewal and the sweping away of human cobwebs, either receive it with amused self-superiority, which later turns to active hostility, or with careless indifference.

2664. God's Message is free and open, in the full light of day. His enemies plot against it in secrecy, lest their own false motives be exposed. Their jealousy prevents them from accepting a "man like themselves" as a teacher or warner or guide.

2665 Literally, "in a state in which you (actually) see (that it is witchcraft)". When God's Messenger is proved to be above them in moral worth, in true insight, in earnestness and power of eloquence, they accuse him of witchcraft, a word which may mean nothing, or perhaps some mysterious deceitful arts.

2665, Notice that in the usual Arabic texts printed in India the word #Ma is here and in xxi. 112 below, as well as in xxiii. 112, spelt differently from the usual spelling of the word in other places (e.g., in xx, 125:126). Qul is the reading of the Bagra Qiraat, meaning. "Say thou" in the imperative, If we construe "he says", the pronoun refers to "this (one)" in the preceding verse, viz.: the Prophet. But more than one Commentator understands the meaning in the imperative, and I agree with them. The point is merely one of verbal construction. The meaning is the same in either case. See n. 2948 to Xxiii 112.

2667. Every word, whether whispered in secret (as in xxi. 3 above) or spoken openly, is known to God. Let not the wrong-doers imagine that their secret plots are secret to the Knower of all things.

5. "Nay," they say, "(these are) Medleys of dreams I—Nay, He forged it!—Nay, He is (but) a poet! ***
Let him then bring us A Sign like the ones That were sent to (Prophets) of old!"

6. (As to those) before them, Not one of the populations Which We destroyed believed: Will these believe? ****

7. Before thee, also, the apostles
We sent were but men,
To whom We granted inspiration:
If ye realise thic not, ask
Of those who possess the Message.

 Nor did We give them Bodies that are no food, Nor were they exempt from death.

In the end We fulfilled
 To them Our promise,
 And We saved them
 And those whom We pleased.

2688. The charges against God's inspired Apostle are heaped up. "Magic!" says one: that means, "We don't understand it!" Says another, "Oh! but we know! he is a mere dreamer of confused dreams!" If the "dreams" fit in with real things and vital experiences, another will suggest, "Oh yes! why drag in supernatural agencies? he is clever enough to forge it himself!" Or another suggests, "He is a poet! Poets can invent things and say them in beautiful words!" Another interposes, "What we should!like to see is miracles, like those we read of in stories of the Prophets of old!"

2669, 'If such miracles as you read of failed to convince Unbelievers of old, what chance is there that these Unbelievers will believe? Miracles may come, but they are no cures for Unbelief.

2670. See xvi. 43 and n. 2069. This answers the Unbelievers' taunt, "he is just a man like ourselves!" True, but all aposties sent by God were men, not angels or another kind of beings, who could not understand me, or whom men could not understand.

2671. As men they were subject to all the laws governing the physical bodies of men. They ate and drank, and their bodies perished in death,

But We destroyed those Who transgressed beyond

2672. But, however difficult for impossible) their mission may have appeared to them, or to the world at first, they won through eventually, even those who seemed to have been defeated. Examples are given in the latter part of this Sūra, especially jn xxi. 31-93. They were delivered from the Wrath which overtook the Unbplievers, as were those with them who accepted God's Message and placed themselves in conformity with His Will and Plan. That is the meaning of "whom We pleased".

2673. When they had every chance of repentance and reform, they rejected God's Message, and perhaps even put up an open defiance. When they actually began to feel the Wrath coming, they began to fiee, but it was too late 1 Bestdes, where could they fee to from the Wrath of God? Hence the ironical appeal to them in the next verse: better go hack to your luxuries and what you thought were your permanent homes! Gr. Christ's saying in the present Gospel of St. Matthew (iii, 7): "O generation of yipers, who hath warred you to fiee from the Wrath to come?"

2674, See last note. 'You thought your homes so comfortable: why don't you go back to them?' You will be called to account, Perhaps there may be rewards to be given you, who knows?' This itury is itself the beginning of the Punishment. But the ungody now see how wrong they had been. But their sighs and regrets now avail them nothing. It is too late. They are lost, and nothing can save them.

<sup>265.</sup> The two similes present two different aspects of the lamentation of the ungodly. When they really see the Wrath to come, there is a stampede, but where can they go to? Their lamentation is now the only mark of their life. But it dies away, as corn vanishes from a field that is being mown, or as a dying fire is slowly extinguished! They do not die. They wish they were dead! (txviii. 40).

<sup>2676.</sup> The Hindu doctrine of Lifa, that all things were created for sport, is here negatived. But more: with God we must not associate any ideas but those of Truth, Righteousness, Mercy, Justice, and the other attributes implied in His Beautiful Names. He does not jest nor play with His creatures.

<sup>2677.</sup> If such an idea as that of play or pastime had been possible with regard to God, and if He had wished really to indulge in pastime. He would have done it with creatures of Light nearest to Him, not with the lowly material creation that we see around us.

2680. The different kinds of false gods whom people raise from their imagination are now referred to. In verses 21-23, the teference is to the gods of the earth, whether dols or local godlings, or defined heroes, or animals or trees or forces of the nature around us, which men have from time to time worshipped. These, as delites, have no life except what their worshippers give to them.

2681. The answer of course is "no". No one but God can raise the dead to life. The miracle in the story of Jesus (iii. 49 and v. 113) was "by God's leave". It was a miracle of God, not one of lesus by his own power or will.

2682. After the false gods of the earth (verse 21), are mentioned the false gods in the heavens and the aerth, like those in the Greek Pantheon (verse 22), who quarrelled and fought and siandered each other and made their Olympus a perfect bear-garden!

2683. God is Self-Subsisting. All His creatures are responsible to Him and dependent on Him there is no other being to whom He can be responsible or on whom He can be dependent.

2685. This werse should be read with the next. All reason revolts against the idea of conflicting good, and points to Unity in Creation and Unity in Godhead. This is not only the Message of Islam ("those with me") but the message of all prophets who came before the holy Prophet Muhammad ("those before me"), and the line of prophets was closed with him. The Message given to every apostle in all ages was that of Unity as the fundamental basis of Order and Design in the world, material, moral, and spiritual.

- 25. Not an apostle did We Send before thee without This inspiration sent by Us To him: that there is No god but I; therefore Worship and serve Me.
- 26. And they say: "(God) Most Gracious has begotten som Offspring." Glory to Him! They are (but) servants raised To honour.
- 27. They speak not before seen He speaks, and they act (In all things) by His command.
- 28. He knows what is before them, And what is behind them, And they offer no intercession Except for those who are Acceptable. **** and they **** stand In awe and reverence Of His (glory).
- 29. If any of them should say,
  "I am a god besides Him",
  Such a one We should Reward with Hell: thus
  Do We reward those
  Who do wrong.

2696. This refers both to the Trinstarian superstition that God has begotten a son, and to the Arab superstition that the angels were daughters of God. All such superstitions are derogatory to the glory of God. The prophets and the angels are no more than servants of God: they are raised high in honour, and therefore they deserve our highest respect, but not our worship.

2687. They never say anything before they receive God's command to say it. and their acts are similarly conditioned. This is also the teaching of Jesus as reported in the Gospel of St. John :xii. 49.50): "For I have not spoken of myself: but the Father which sent me, He gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that His commandment is life ever. Lasting: whatesover I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak." If rightly understood, "Father" has the same meaning as our "Rubb", Sustainer and Cherisher, not Begetter or Progenitor.

2688, Cf. xx. 109. "Acceptable" means that they have conformed to the Will of God and obeyed His Law, thus winning the stamp of His approval.

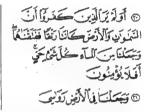

269). They: the usual interpretation refers the pronoun to the servants of God who intercede: it may also refer to those on whose behalf intercession is made: they do not take it as a matter of course. but stand is due awe and reverence of God's great glory and mercy.

C. 148.—Look at God's Creation: contemplate (xxi. 30-50.) Its unity of Design and benevolence Of Purpose. Death must come to all, But life and faith are not objects of ridicule. Truth will outlast all monkery: 'tis God Who calls, because He cares for you, And on His Judgment Seat will weigh Each act, each thought, each motive, great Or small, with perfect justice. Come, Ye all, reject not His blessed Message.

SECTION 3.

- 30. Do not the Unbelievers see
  That the heavens and the earth
  Were joined together (as one see Unit of Creation), before
  We clove them asunder?
  We made from water see
  Every living thing. Will they
  Not then believe?
- 31. And We have set on the earth Mountains standing firm, 9593

2691. About 72 per cent, of the surface of our Globe is still covered with water, and it has been estimated that if the inequalities on the surface were all levelled, the whole surface would be under water, as the mean elevation of land sphere-level would be 7,000—10,000 feet below the surface of the ocean. This shows the predominance of water on our Globe. That all life began in the water is also a conclusion to which our latest knowledge in Biological science points. Apart from the fact that protoplasm, the original basis of living matter, is liquid or semi-liquid and in a state of constant flux and instability, there is the fact that land animals, like the higher vertebrates, including man, show, in their embryological history, organs like those of fishes, indicating the watery origin of their original habitat. The constitution of protoplasm is about 80 to 85 per cent of water.

260. Cf..xvi, Is and n. 2038. Lest is should shake with them: here "them" refers back to "they" at the end of the preceding verse, meaning "Unbelievers". It might be mankind in general, but the pointed address to those who do not realise and understand God's mercies is appropriate, to drive home to them the fact that it is God's well-ordered providence that protects them normally from cataclysms like earthquakes, but that they could for their injusities be destroyed in an instant, as the Ad and the Thambd were destroyed before them. As pointed out in n. 2691 above, if the surface of the earth were levelled up, it would all be under water, and therefore the firm mountains are a further source of security to life which has evolved in terrestrial forms. Though the mountains may seem impassable barriers, yet God's providence has provided broad passes between them to afford highways for human communications.

Lest it should shake with them, And We have made therein Broad highways

For them to pass through:
That they may receive guidance.

صُلُنَعْشِ آيَةَ الْمَوْتُ
 وَبَنْلُوعُمْ إِلْنُكَرِّوَ الْخَسَيْرِ

2693. In both the literal and the figurative sense. Literally these natural mountain highways direct men in the way they should go. Figuratively, these wonderful instances of God's providence should turn men's thoughts to the true guidance of God in life and spiritual progress.

2694. Canepy well guarded: the heavens form a canopy that is secure from falling down; they also form a sublime spectacle and a Mystery that man can only faintly reach. Perhaps also the mystery of spictual life is metaphorically hinted at. Cf. also xv. 17.

2695. I have indicated, unlike most translators, the metaphor of swimming implied in the original works: how beautiful it is to contemplate the heavenly bodies swimming through space (or ether) in their rounded courses before our gaze!

2696. Life on this planet without death has not been granted to any man. The Khidhr legends are popular tales. His life without death on this earth is nowhere mentioned in the Qurān. The taunt of the Unbelievers at the holy Prophet was therefore futile. Could any of them live without death at some time or other? Could they name any one who did?

2697. Cf. lii. 185, and n. 491. The soul does not die, but when it separates from the body at the death of the body, the soul gets a taste of death. In our life of probation on this earth, our virtue and faith are tested by many things: some are tested by calamities, and some by the good things of this life. If we prove our true mettle, we pass our probation with success. In any case all must return to God, and then will our life be appraised at its true value.

By way of trial. To Us must ye return.

- 36. When the Unbelievers see thee,
  They treat thee not except
  With ridicule. "Is this,"
  (They say), "the one who talks ""
  Of your gods?" And they
  Blaspheme at the mention
  Of (God) Most Gracious!
- 37. Man is a creature of haste: ***
  Soon (enough) will I show
  You My Signs; then
  Ye will not ask Me
  To hasten them!
- 38. They say: "When will this Promise come to pass, If ye are telling the truth?"
- 39. If only the Unbelievers ****o
  Knew (the time) when they
  Will not be able
  To ward off the Fire
  From their faces, nor yet
  From their backs, and (when)
  No help can reach them!
- 40. Nay, it may come to them All of a sudden and confound Them: no power will they Have then to avert it, Nor will they (then) Get respite.

2698. To the godly man the issue between false worship and true worship is a very serious matter. To the sceptics and unbelievers it is only a joke. They take it lightly, and laugh at the godly man. They not only laugh at him, but they blaspheme when the name of the One True God is mentioned. The reply to this is in the next verse.

2699. Haste is in the very bone and marrow of man. If he is granted respite for his own sake, in order that he may have a further chance of repentance and coming back to God. he says impatiently and incredulously: "Bring on the Punishment quickly, that I may set if what you say is true!" Alas, it is too true! When the Punishment actually comes near and he sees it, he will not want it hastened. He will want more time and further delay! Poor creature of haste!

2700. They would not be so unreasonable it they only realised the terrible future for them! The Fire will envelop them on all sides, and no help will then be possible. Is it not best for them now to turn and repent? The Punishment may come too suddenly, as is said in the next verse.

41. Mocked were (many)
Apostles before thee;
But their scoffers
Were hemmed in
By the thing that they mocked.**

SECTION 4.

- 42. Say, "Who can keep You safe by night and by day From (the Wrath of) (God) Most Gracious?" "" Yet they Turn away from the mention Of their Lord.
- 44. Nay, We gave the good things
  Of this life to these men
  And their fathers until
  The period grew long for them;
  See they not that We grew
  Gradually reduce the land

2701. The same verse occurs at vi. 10, where see n. 843. 'What they are mocking at now will be in a position to mock them in due time.'

2702. 'God is most Gracious: if, in spite of His great mercy, you are so rebellious and depraved as inclumed in the whole is there who can save you? His Wrath can descend on you at any time, by night or by day.'

2703, Appels: to join as companion; with 'an or min it has also the meaning of to defend or remove from someone. The full signification can only be got by a long paraphrase: 'they are not fit to be mentioned in the same breath with Us, nor can they be defended from Us.'

2704. 'Umr, or 'Umur: age, generation, period, time, life. Here "period" is most appropriate, as it covers many generations, "these men and their fathers."

2705. Cf. xiii. 41 and n. 1865. The particular signification is that Islam spread from the outer borders, social and geographical, gradually inwards. The social fringe was the humbler people, such as slayed and poor men. The geographical reference is to Medica and tribes away from the Mecca centre. The proud and unbelieving Quraish, were the last to come in when the circle was gradually drawn tighter and tighter around them. The general signification applies to all times, God's Truth makes its way first among the poor and the lowly, those whose minds are unsoited by prejudices of false pride or false knowledge, but it gradually hems in the obstinate, until it prevalls in the end.

- 45. Sav. "I do but warn vou According to revelation ": But the deaf will not hear The call. (even) when They are warned! $706
- 46. If but a breath of the Wrath Of thy Lord do touch them. They will then say, "Woe To us! we did wrong indeed!"
- 47. The shall set up scales Of justice for the day Of Judgment, so that Not a soul will be dealt with Unjustly in the least. . And if there be (No more than) the weight Of a mustard seed, 9707 We will bring it (to account): And enough are We To take account. $708
- 48. In the past We granted To Moses and Aaron

2706. According to the English saying, "none is so deaf as those who will not hear". When they deliberately shut their ears to warnings from the Merciful God, meant for their own good, the responsibility is their own. But their cowardice is shown in the next verse by Their behaviour when the first breath of the Wrath reaches them.

2707. Not the smallest action, word, thought, motive, or predilection but must come into the account of God. Cl. Browning (in Rabbi Ben Esra): "But all, the world's coarse thumb And finger failed to plumb, So passed in making up the main account; All instincts immature, All purposes unsure, That weighed not as his work, yet swelled the man's account; Thoughts hardly to be packed Into a narrow act, Fancies that broke through language and escaped; All I could never be, All, men ignored in me, This, I was worth to God, Whose wheel the pitcher shaped."

2708. The literalism of Sale has here excelled itself; he translates, "and there will be sufficient accountants with us" | What is meant is that when God takes account. His accounting will be perfect : there will be no flaw in it, as there may be in earthly accountants, who require other people's help in some matters of account which they do not understand for want of knowledge of that particular department they are dealing with. God's knowledge is perfect, and therefore His justice will be perfect also; for He will not fail to take into account all the most intangible things that determine conduct and character. See last note. There is no contradiction between this and zviii. 104-105, where it is said that men of vain works, i.e., shallow hypocritical deeds, will have no weight attached to their deeds. In fact the two correspond.

C. 149.—The great exemplars of virtue conquered (xxi. 51-93) Evil, each according to his circumstances: Abtlanta toods stouch in the nee.

Of persecution, unhart; Lūt was bold in reproving abominations; Nosh, sarvived The Flood by his faith, in a world of Unbelief David sought justice, and sang God's praises; Solomon by wisdom subdued the refractory; Job was patient in suffering; Isma'il, Idris, and Zul-kifl were true in constancy Amid temptation; Jonah turned to God After a short misunderstanding; Zakariya And his family were exemplars of devoutness; And Mary of chastity. All men and women Of God form one united Brotherhoad.

2709. Cf. ii. 53 and n. 68, where the meaning of Farqān is discussed. Here three things are mentioned as given to Aloses and Aarm: (1) The Criterion for judgment; this might well be the wondeful Proofs they saw of God's geometers and glory from which they could have no doubt as to God's will and command; (2) the Light; this was the inner enlightenment of their soul, such as comes from inspiration; and (3) the Message, the Book, the original Book of Aloses, which Aaron as his lieutenant would also use as a guide for his people

270. Note the three kinds of fear mentioned in xxi. 48-49 Topwā is the fear of running counter to the will of God; it is akin to the love of Him; for we fear to oßend those we love; it results in right conduct, and those who entertain it are "those who would do right". Then there is Rharhyar, the fear of God, lest the person who entertains it may be found, if his inmost thoughts, to be short of the standard which God wishes for him; this is also righteousness but in a less high degree than Taqua which is akin to feve. And thirdly, there is the fear of consequences on the Day of Judgment (kh/dq); this also may lead to righteousness, but is on a still lower plane. Perhaps the three correspond to the Criterion, the Light, and the Message (or Warning) of the last verse.

2711. Here is a man and a Book, greater than Moses and his Book. Are you going to reject him and it?

- 52. Behold! he said

  To his father and his people, 97.16

  "What are these images,

  To which ye are (So assiduously) devoted? "
- 53. They said, "We found Our fathers worshipping them."
- 54. He said, "Indeed ye Have been in manifest Error—ye and your fathers."
- 55. They said, "Have you Brought us the Truth, Or are you one Of those who jest?" ""15
- 56. He said, "Nay, your Lord Is the Lord of the heavens And the earth, He Who Created them (from nothing): *is And I am a witness To this (fruth).

2712. Rushd: right conduct, Corresponding in action to the quality expressed in the epithet Eans' (sound or true in Faith) applied to Abraham in it. 135 and elsewhere.

2713. Hence Abraham's title "Friend of God" (Khalif-xilah); iv. 125.

2715. Abraham looked at life with a serious eye, and his people took it light-heartedly. He was devoted to Truth, and they cared more for ancestral custom. In the conflict he seemed to be in their power. But he was learless, and he triumphed by God's Grace.

2716. For the various words for "creation" see a. 120 to ii, 117, where fature is explained and differentiated from other words of similar meaning.

- 57. "And by God, I have A plan for your idols-After ve go away And turn your backs" ... "
- 58. So he broke them to pieces. (All) but the biggest of them. That they might turn (And address themselves) to it. 4714
- 59. They said, "Who has Done this to our gods? He must indeed be Some man of implety!"
- 60. They said. "We heard A youth talk of them : 2710 He is called Abraham."
- 61. They said, "Then bring him Before the eyes of the people. That they may bear witness:"
- 62, They said, "Art thou The one that did this With our gods, O Abraham?" ##

2717. He wants to convince them of the powerlessness of their idols. But he does not do it underhand. He tells them that he is going to do something when once they are gone and their backs are turned to the idois -- as much as to say that the idols are dependent on their care and attention. Apparently the people are amused and want to see what he does. So they leave him to his own devices.

2718. He was enacting a scene, to make the people ashamed of worshipping senseless stocks and stones. He left the biggest idol untouched and broke the others to pieces, as if a fight had taken place between the idols, and the biggest had smashed the others. Would they turn to the surviving idol and ask him bow it all happened?

2719. Different groups of people are speaking. Those who were not present at Abraham's speech in verse 57 ask, "who has done this?" Those who were, at once name him, whereupon a formal council of the people was held, and Abraham was arraigned.

2720. They asked him the formal question. There was no mystery about it. He had already openly threatened to do something to the idols, and people who had heard his threats were there. He now continues his ironic taunt to the idol-worshippers. 'You ask met Why don't you ask the idols? Doesn't it look as if this big fellow has smashed the smaller ones in a quarrel?' If they do not ask the idols, they confess that the idols have not intelligence enough to answer! This argument is developed in verses 64-67. Note that while the false worshippers laughed at his earnestness, he pays them out by a grim practical joke, which at the same time advances the cause of Truth.

- 63. He said: " Nav. this Was done by-This is their biggest one! Ask them, if they Can speak intelligently!"
- 64. So they turned to themselves And said, "Surely ve Are the ones in the wrong!" " "
- 65. Then were they confounded and With shame: (they said), "Thou knowest full well that These (idols) do not speak!"
- 66. (Abraham) said, "Do ye then Worship, besides God. Things that can neither Bo of any good to you Nor do you harm?
- 67. " Fie upon you, and upon "a The things that ye worship Besides God! Have ve No sense?"...
- 68. Whey said, "Burn him And protect your gods. If ye do (anything at all) !"

2721. Abraham's biting irony cut them to the quick. What could they say? They turned to each other. Some among them thought he had the best of the argument. They were not keen on idolatry, and they told their fellows that it was useless arguing with Abraham. They all hung their heads in shame. But presently they thought they would face out Abraham, and take his words literally. They said, "You know quite well that idols do not speak!" This was precisely what Abraham wanted them to say, and he delivered his final blow! See n. 2723 below.

2722. Literally, "they were turned down on their heads" which may suggest a metaphorical somersault, i.e., that they recovered from their dawning shame for idolatry and were prepared to argue it out with the youth Abraham. But I think there is better authority for the interpretation I have adopted.

2723. As soon as they admitted in so many words that the idols could not speak, Ahraham delivered his final attack: 'Then why do you worship such useless impotent creatures?' After that, there remains nothing but the argument of violence, which they proceed to exercise, being the party in power, 'Burn him at the stake' is an easy cry t But it was not Abraham that suffered: it was his persecutors (xxi, 70).

69. We said, "O. Fire! ""

2724. The nature of fire, by all the physical laws of matter, is to be hot. The supremacy of mind over matter is a phrase much used, but the supremacy of the spiritual over the material is not so commonly understood. And yet it is the greatest factor in the estimate of Reality. The material is ephemeral and relative. The spiritual is ciernal and absolute. Through all the fire of persecution and hatterd Absham remained unhurt. The fire became cond, and a means of safety for Abraham.

2725. Can we form any idea of the place where he passed through the furnice, and the stage in his career at which this happened? He was born in Ur of the Chaldees, a place on the lower reaches of the Euphrates, not a hundred miles from the Persian Gulf. This was the cradle, or one of the cradles, of human civilisation. Astronomy was studied here in very ancient times, and the worship of the sun, moon, and stars was the prevailing form of religion. Abraham revolted against this quite early in life, and his argument is referred to in vi. 74 82. They also had idols in their temples, probably idols representing heavenly bodies and celestial winged creatures. He was still a youth (xxi 60) when he broke the idols. This was stage No. 2. After this he was marked down as a rebel and persecuted. Perhaps some years passed before the incident of his being thrown into the Fire (xxi. 68-69) took place, or the incident may be only allegorical. Traditionally the Fire incident is referred to a king called Nimrud, about whom see n. 1565 to xi. 69. If Nimrud's capital was in Assyria, near Nineveh (site near modern Mosul), we may suppose either that the king's rule extended over the whole of Mesopotamia, or that Abraham wandered north through Babylonia to Assyria, Various stratagems were devised to get rid of him (xxi 70), but he was saved by the mercy of God. The final break came when he was probably a man of mature age and could speak to his father with some authority. This incident is referred to in xix. 41-48 He now left his ancestral lands, and avoiding the Syrian desert, came to the fertile lands of Aram or Syria, and so south to Canaan, when the incident of mi. 69-76 and the adventure of his nephew 1.01 took place. It is some years after this that we may suppose he built the Ka'ba with Isma'il (si. 124-29), and his prayer in giv. 35-41 may be referred to the same time. His visit to Egypt (Gen. gii. 10) is not referred to in the Our-an.

2736. As they could not get rid of him by open punishment, they tried secret plans, but were toiled throughout. It was not he that lost, but they. On the contrary he left them and prospered and became the progenitor of great people;

From the town which practised Abominations: truly they were A people given to Evil, A rebellious people. 2780

75. And We admitted him To Our Mercy : for he Was one of the Righteous.

SECTION 6.

2728. Nāfilat has many meanings: (1) booty; (2) extra work or prayer; (3) extra or additional gift; (4) grandson. The two last significations are implied here. Not only was 'Abraham given a son in his old age; he was given not only Isaac, but several sons, the chief being Isma'il and Isaac, who both joined in burying him (Gen. 2xx. 9); and he also saw grandsons. Isma'il is specially mentioned later (xxi. 85) pastr from Isaac's line, on account of his special importance for Islam.

2729. The spiritual lesson from this passage may be recapitulated. The righteous man makes no compromse with evil. If the votaries of evil laugh at him he pays them in their own coin, but he stands firmly by his principles. His firmness causes some confusion among the followers of evil, and he openly declares the faith that is in him. They try, openly and secretly, to injure or kill him, but God protects him, while evil perishes from its own sexcesses.

2730. Lot's people were given to unspeakable abominations. His mission was to preach to them. He withstood Evil, but they rejected him. They were punished, but he and his followers were saved. See y. 6.1-74; ix. 7-82; ix. 40; ix. 90-84.

2730-A. The date of Noah was many centuries before that of Abraham.

2731. The contemporaries of Noah were given to Unbelief, oppression of the poor, and vain disputshiphs, He carried God's Message to them, and standing fast in faith, built the Ark, in which he was sayed with his followers from the Flood, while the wicked were drowned. See, xi. 25-48.

77. We helped him against
People who rejected Our Signs:

2732. The sheep, on account of the negligence of the shepherd, got into a cultivated field (or vineyard) by night and ate up the young plants or their tender shoots, causing damage, to the extent of perhaps a whole year's crop. David was king, and in his seat of judgment he considered the matter so serious that he awarded the owner of the field the sheep themselves in compensation for his damage. The Roman law of the Twelve Tables might have approved of this decision, and on the same principle was built up the Deodand doctrine of English Law, now obsolete. His son Solomon, a mere boy of eleven, thought of a better decision, where the penalty would hetter fit the offence. The loss was the loss of the fruits or produce of the field or vineyard: the original of the property was not lost. Solomon's suggestion was that the owner of the field or vineyard should not take the sheep altogether but only detain them long enough to recoup his actual damage, from the milk, wool, and novelby young of the sheep, and through the sheep the shepherd. David's merit was that he accepted the suggestion, even though it came from a hittle boy: Solomon's neutral state the dissinguished between crops; and income, and though a boy, was not ashamed to put his case before his father. But in either case it was God Who inspired the true realisation of justice. He was present and winessed the afair, as He is present everywhere.

2733. Whatever is in the heavens and the earth celebrates the praises of God: xvii, 44; lvii, 1; xvii 48 50. Even 'the "thunder repeateth His praises": xiii. '13. All nature ever sings the praises of God. David sang in his Pealins, cxtviii. 7:10: "Praise, the Lord from the earth, ye...mountains and all hills; ...creeping things and flying flow!!" All nature sings to God's glory, in unison with David, and angels, and men of God. If the Jewish Talmodists take this iterally, there is no need for Muslims to do so. C/. also xxxiv. 10 and xxxviii. 18-19.

2734. The making of coats of mail is attributed to David. It is defensive atmour, and therefore its discovery and supply is associated with deeds of righteousness in xxxiv, 10 11, in contrast with the deadly weapons which man invents for offensive purposes. Indeed, all fighting, unless in defence of righteousness, is mere "violence."

83. M nd (remember) Job, when He cried to his Lord, "Truly distress has seized me, 2700 But Thou art the Most 2735. David's good work then was: (1) he was open to learn wisdom wherever it came from; (2) he sang the praises of God, in unison with all nature; (3) he made defensive armour. But all these things he did, because of the faculties which God had given him, and we must be grateful for this and for all things to God.

473.6. Cf. XXXiv. 12, and XXXVII. 36-38. This has been interpreted to mean that Solomon had misculous power over the winds, and he could make them obey his orders. Rationalists say that he had naval power on the Mediterranean, and through the Gull of 'Aqaba on the Red Sea, and that he therefore figuratively commanded the winds, and we may say the same of airmen at the present day. In any case the power behind was, and is, from God, Who has granted man intelligence and the faculties by which he can tame the more unruly forces of nature.

2738. As in n, 2736, the literalists and the rationalists take different views. The former say that Solomon had power over supernatural beings of evil, whom he compelled to dive for peatis and do other hard tasks. Rationalists refer this to hostile unruly races whom he subjected to his sway, It was God's power ultimately, Who granted him wisdom. Solomon tamed evil with Windom.

2739. Job (Atyāb) was a prosperous man, with faith in God, living somewhere in the north-east corner of Arabia. He suders from a number of calamities: his cattle are destroyed, his servants stain by the sword, and his family crushed under his roof. But he holds fast to his faith in God. As a further calamity he is covered with loathsome sores from head to foot. He leses his peace of mind, and he curses the day be was born. His false friends come and attribute his afficitions to sin. These "Job's comforters" are no comforters at all, and he further loses his balance of mind, but God recalls to him all His mercles, and he resumes his humility and give up self-justification. He is restored to prosperity, with twice as much as he had before; his brethren and friends come back to him; he had a new family of seven sons and three fair daughters. He lived to a good old age, and saw four generations of descendants. All this is recorded in the Book of Job in the Old Testament. Of all the Hebrew writings, the Hebrew of this Book comes nearest to Arabic.

  Idris, <sup>3742</sup> and Zul-kiff, <sup>3782</sup> all
  (Men) of constancy and patience;
- 86. We admitted them to Our Mercy: for they Were of the Righteous ones.

2740. Job is the pattern of humility, patience, and faith in God. It was with these weapons that he fought and conquered evil.

274]. Ismā'īl is mentioned specially, apart from the line which descended through Isaac (xxi. 72), as he was the founder of a separate and greater Ummat. His sufferings began in infancy (see n. 160 til. 158); but his steady constancy and submission to the will of God were specially shown when he earned the title of "Sacrifice to God" (see n. 2506 to xix. 54). That was the particular quality of his constancy and patience.

2742. For Idris seen. 2308 to xix. 56. He was in a high station in life, but that did not spoil him. He was sincere and true, and that was the particular quality of his constancy and patience.

27.13 $ml-kif, would literally mean "possessor of, or giving, a double requital or portion"; or else, "one who used a cloak of double thickness," that being one of the meanings of Kifl. The Commentators differ in opinion as to who is meant, why the title's applied to him, and the point of his being grouped with Isma'll and Idi's for constancy and patience. I think the best suggestion is that afforded by Karsten Nieburh in his Krastracheburg and Arabus, Openhasgen 1778, ii. 267-266, as quoted in the Encyclopedia of Islam under "Dhol-Kifl". He visited Meshed 'All in 'Isla, and also the little town called Kefil, midway between Najaf and Hills (Baitylon), Kefil. he says, is the Arabic form of Ezekkel. The shrine of Ezeklel was there, and the Jews came to it on pitgrimage,

If we accept "Zul-kiff" to be not an epithet, but an Arabicised form of "Ezekief", if this the context. Ezekief was a prophet in Israel who was carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzarafterhis second attack; on Jerusalem (about B C, 399). His Book is included in the English Bible (Old Testament). He was chained and bound, and put into prison, and for a time he was dumb (Ezekief, if 3-56). He bove all with patience and constancy, and continued to reprove boldly the evils in Israel. In a burning passage he denounces false leaders in words which are eternally true: "Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! Should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wood, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken...", etc. (Ezeklel, xxxiv. Aselled, x

Zul-kifl is again mentioned in xxxviil, 48 along with Isma'il and Elisha, 2744. Sun-nan, "the man of the Fish or the Whale", is the title of Jonah (Yunus), because he was swallowed by a large Fish or Whale. He was the prophet raised to warn the Assyrian capital Nineveh, For Nineveh see n 1478 to x. 98. His story is told in xxxvii 139-148 When his first warning was unheeded by the people, he denounced God's wrath on them. But they repented and God forgave them for the time being. Jonah, meanwhile, departed in wrath, discouraged at the apparent failure of his mission. He should have remained in the most discouraging circumstances, and relied on the power of God; for God had power both over Ninevah and over the Messenger He had sent to Nineveh.. He went away to the sea and look a ship, but apparently the sailors threw him out as a man of bad omen in a storm. He was swallowed by a big Fish (or Whale), but in the depth of the darkness, he cried to God and confessed his weakness. The "darkness" may be interpreted both physically and spiritually; physically, as the darkness of the night and the storm and the Fish's body; spiritually as the darkness in his soul, his extreme distress in the situation which he had brought on himself. God Most Gracious forgave him. He was cast out ashore; he was given the shelter of a plant in his state of mental and physical lassitude. He was refreshed and strengthened, and the work of his mission prospered. Thus he overcame all his disappointment by repentance and Faith, and God accepted him.

27.15 See xiz, 2.15, and iii 38.41. Zakartră was a priest; both he and his wife were devout and punctilious in their duties. They were old, and they had no son. He was troubled in mind, not so much by the vulgar desire to have a son to carry on his tine, but because he felt that his people were not unselfathly devout, and there would be no sincere work for God unless he could train up some one himself. He was given a son Yahyà (John the Baprist), who added to the devour reputation of the family, for he is called "noble, chaste, and a prophet," (iii. 39). All three, father, mother, and son, were made worthy of each other, and they repelled evil by their devour emulation in virtue.

2746. 'It is not the I crave a personal heir to myself: all things go back to Thee, and Thou art the best of inheritors: but I see no one around me sincere enough to carry on my work for Thee; will Thou give me one whom I can train?

Here, with reference to Zakaryka's wite, the signification is twofold; (i) that her barrenness would be removed, so that she could become a mother; and (2) her spiritual dignity should be raised in becoming the mother of lohn the Baptist; and by implication his also, is becoming the father of John.

"Community", "race", and "nation," and "people" are words which import other ideas and do not quite correspond to "Ummat", "Religion" and "Way of Life" are derived meanings, which could be used in other passages, but are less appropriate here. Our attention has been drawn to people of very different temperaments and writes, widely different it emperaments and but forming the closest brotherhood as being men and women united in the highest service of God. They pre-figure the final and perfected Brotherhood of Islam.

2750. God's Message was and ever is one; and His Messagers treated it as one. It is people of narrower views who come later and trade on the earlier names, that break up the Message and the Brotherhood into jarring camps and seets.

The Righteous will have no fear; for them The angelic greetings will truly open A new world, which they will inherit. This was God's Message of old, and thesame Is God's Message renewed: for God Is one, and so is His Message, proclaimed For all, freely and in loving Truth.

2751. God gives credit for every act of righteousness, however small: when combined with sincere Faith in God, it becomes the stepping stone to higher and higher things. It is never lost.

2752. But when wickedness comes to such a pass that the Wrath of God descends, as it did on Sodom, the case becomes hopeless. The righteous were warned and delivered before the Wrath descended. But those destroyed will not get another chance, as they flouted all previous chances. They will only be raised up at the approach of the Day of Judgment.

2753. For Gog and Magog see n. 2439 to xviii. 92. Their geographical position was discussed in Appendix VII, pp. 761-63. Here I do not think we are concerned with their geographical position. The name stands for wild and lawless tribes who will break their barriers and swarm through the earth. This will be one of the prognostications of the approaching Judgment.

2755. The ultimate proof of Truth and Falsehood will be that Truth will endure and come to its own, while Falsehood will be destroyed. And so the men who worshipped Truth will come to their own, while those who worshipped Falsehood will be in a Fire of Punishment they could scarcely have imagined before. In that state there will be nothing but regrets and sighs and groans, and these evil sounds will drown everything else.

2756. In contrast to the misery of those who rejected Truth and Right, will be the happiness of those who accepted it. Their record does not lag behind: in fact it goes before. Our Deeds go before our journey in this life is completed. What then is the Judgment? It is instantaneous; it will all be decided in the twinkling of an eye (xvi. ??). The good will not hear the least sound of the groans of evil. Their true sout's desires will be fulfilled-not temporarily as in this world, but in a permanent form.

2757. The Judgment and balancing of accounts will be a mighty Terror to the evil-doers. , But it will cause, to the righteous, not grief or anxiety, but hope and happiness, for now they will be in a congenial atmosphere, and will see the fulfilment of their ideals in the meeting and greeting of the angels, preparatory to their enjoyment of the supreme Bliss-seeing the Face of God.

104. The Day that We roll up

2738. The world—the universe—as we know it, will be folded up like a scroll of parchment, for it will have done its work. If God created all this world out of nothing, He can create an entirely new heaven and a new earth, on a plane of which we can form no conception in our present life. And He will do so, for that is His promise.

Some Commentators understand Sijiil to be the name of the Recording Angel who closes the Book of a man's Deeds after the man's death, 2759. Zabūr: the Book of the Psalms of David. The name of David is expressly mentioned in connection with the Zabūr in iv. 153 and xvii. 55, although there the indefinite article is applied to the word as meaning a Book of Scripture. See Psalms xxv. 13, "his seed shall inherit the earth"; xxxvii. 11, "the meek shall inherit the earth "(quoted by Jesus in Matt. v. 3); and xxxvii. 29, "the righteous shall inherit the land." Thus may be understood both literally, as referring to power and authority on this earth, and figuratively, as referring to the new and real world of the spint.

2760. The same promise occurs in the Pentateuch, Exod, xxxii, 13, "they shall inherit it (the land) for ever".

276]. The culimination of God's Revelation is in the Quran, which confirms previous scriptures, corrects the errors which men introduced into them, and explains many points in detail for all who seek for right worship and service to God—whether they inherit the previous Books ("People of the Book") or not, It is a universal Message.

2782. There is no question now of race or nation; of a "chosen people" or the "seed of David"; or of Hindu Arya-wata; of Jew or Gentile, Arab or Ajam (Persian), Turk or Tajik, European or Asiatic, White or Coloured; Aryan, Semitic, Mongolian, or Arican; or American, Australian, or Polynesian. To all men and creatures other than men who have any spiritual responsibility, the principles universally apply.

I have given the Good News for the Righteous and the Warning for the Unjust, without favour or partiality, and without abating one jot of the truth, openly and squarely for all. Do not ask-me when the Good News and the Warning will be fulfilled. That is for God to decide, not for me or for you to know."

2765. The Messenger of God freely and impartially teaches all how to carry out God's Will and live a good life. If some of them are hypocrites and come into the Unimat (Brotherhood) from baser motives and not the pure motives of the love of God, their motives and conduct will be judged by God and not by men.

2766. In the same way if men who come into the Brotherhood from pure motives and yet feel agglieved that those outside are better off from a worldly point of view, they are wrong. It may be that the fleeting enjoyment of this world's goods is but a trial, and they should be grateful for being saved from tempotation.

2767. See above, n. 2666 to xxi. 4. The better reading is "Say" in the imperative, rather than "He (the Prophet) said (or says)" in the indicative mood. Note that, on that construction, there are three distinct things which the Prophet is asked to say: riz; (1) the statement in verses 109-111. addressed to those who turn away from the Message; (2) the prayer addressed to God in the first part of verse 112; and (3) the advice given indirectly to the Believers, in the second part of verse 112. I have marked these divisions by means of inverted commas.

768. That is, God's judgment as between the Teacher and those who refuse his Message, or between the righteous and those who taunt them for their poverty, will be the true one, and both the Teacher and the Ummat must leave the judgment to God.

2769. Blasphemy is a dreadful sin. We must guard ourselves from it. But as regards others, if we cannot prevent it, we must pray to God for assistance and not rely upon carnal weapons.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXII (Hajj).

We now come to a new series of four Súras, dealing with the environments and methods contributing to our spiritual progress, as the last five Súras dealt with the Messengers who came in various ways to proclaim the Truth and conquer evil. See Introduction to S. xvii.

The subject-matter of this particular Sūra is concerned mainly with the spiritual implications of the Sacred House, the Pilgrimage, the Sacrifices, Striving and Fighting in defence of Truth when attacked, and other acts that make for Unselfishness and uproof Falsehood.

On the chronology of this Sūra, opinion is divided. Some parts were probably revealed in the later Meccan period, and some in Medina. But the chronological question has no significance here.

Summary.—Importance of the spiritual Future, and need of firmness in Faith: help for Truth and punishment for Evil (xxii. 1-25, and C. 151).

Purity, Prayer, Humility, and Faith are implied in the Pilgrimage; in solemn Sacrifice we express our gratitude and reverence to God, and our desire to share food with our poorer brethren; Striving and Fighting in defence of Truth when attacked are necessary as tests of self-sacrifice (xxii. 26-48, and C.*152).

The promptings of Evil may hinder the work of God's Apostle, but that work must triumph, and the Mercy and Truth of God must be established; therefore serve God humbly, and He will protect and help you (axii. 49-78, and C. 153).

C. 151.—Will not mankind take warning
(xxii. 1-25.) From the dreadful consequences of Evil
Clearly proclaimed to them? Will they Dispute about God and the Life of the Future?
They have only to look around and within them,
And they will, see vestiges of the Plan
And Purpose of God. Let them not halt
Between Good and Evil: God's Message as well
As His Messenger must win against all Obstacles. Only the evil will be brought To shame and agony. The good—whose speech
Is pure and conduct worthy of praise—
Will have a meed of refinement, beauty, and bliss.

2770. As an introduction to the spiritual meaning of various symbolical acts in this life, the seminosi issues involved are indicated by showing how terrible the consequences will be for those who disobey God's Will. The terror will only be for those who rebel and disobey; the righteous will not suffer from it, but on the contrary will be greeted by angels with joy (xxi, 103)

271. Three metaphors are used for the extreme terror which the Awul Day will inspire, (1) No mother abandons the baby at her breast in the greatest danger; yet that will happen in this Dreadful Hour. (2) An expectant mother carries the young life within ther with great pinde and hope: "hope" is the actual word used in Urdu for this physical state; yet the terror will overpower the hope at this "Hour", and naturelys working will be reversed. (3) Men ordinarily retain their self-possession except under intoxication; here, without intoxication, they will be driven to freasy with terror.

2772. Even after the warnings there are men who are such fools as to turn away from God Who created them and cherishes them with His love and care; they become outlaws in His Kingdom, making friends with Evil, which is a rebel in God's Kingdom.

.2774. The stages of man's physical growth from nothing till he completes the cycle of this life are described in words whose accuracy, beauty, and comprehensiveness can only be fully understood by biologists. Parallel to the physical growth, may be understood man's inner growth, also by stages and by God's creative artistry.

2775. That is, a male or a female child, a fair or an ugly child, a good or a rebellious child, etc., involving countless mysteries of genetics and heredity.

2776. Cf. xvi 70. In that passage the mystery of our life was used to illustrate God's abundant mercies and favours to us. Here it is used to illustrate God's power in giving us a future Life of even greater promise.

2717. A beautiful nature passage so pregnant in meaning that the earnest student wonders what magic and truth have been conveyed in so few words. M. P.'s Egyptian colleague, Prof Chamrawi (see M. P.'s note on this passage) was but expressing the feelings of every careful student of the Quran. The "subtlety and wealth of meaning" are indeed marvellous.

- 6. This is so, because God
  Is the Reality: it is He
  Who gives life to the dead,
  And it is He Who has Power over all things."
- 7. And verily the Hour will come:
  There can be no doubt
  About it, or about (the fact)
  That God will raise up
  All who are in the graves.

- 9. (Disdainfully) bending his side, In order to lead (men) astray From the Path of God: For him there is disgrace was In this life, and on the Day Of Judgment We shall Make him taste the Penalty Of burning (Fire).
- 10. (It will be said): "This is Because of the deeds which Thy hands sent forth, For verily God is not Unjust to His servants." stell 2778. All these beautiful and well-articulated pageants of life and nature point to the Reality behind them. i.e., God. They will perish, but He is eternal. They are but shadows; the substance (if such a word may be used) is in Him. They are shifting and illusory, in the sense that they have neither permanency nor independent existence. But they have a sort of secondary reality in the sense in which a shadow is a real reflection from a substance. No Power of Existence has any meaning except as a reflection of God's inefable Glory.

2779. For "Book of Enlightenment" see iii, 184 and n. 490. I understand "knowledge" to mean here their human knowledge or intelligence, "guidance" to mean divine guidance, such as comes from God or a revelation from God, and the "Book of Enlightenment" to mean the fundamental guide to good conduct, the clear rules laid down in all Dispensations to help men to lead good lives. The "Book of Enlightenment" may mean as revealed Book in which case "Guidance" would refer to divine guidance through a man of God.

2780. Some Commentators think this refers to Abū Jahl, but the words are perfectly general, and this type of man is common in all ages. The same may be said about verse 3 above: Commentators give the immediate reference to one Nadhar ion Harith.

2781. What you suffer is the Consequence of your own sinful deeds; God is just; He is not unjust to the least of His creatures.

2782. They are men whose minds are not firm; they will have faith, if all goes well with them, but as soon as they are treef, they are found wanting. They are a different kind from hyporrites, It is not fraud or double-dealing that is their snr. it is a weak mind, petty standards of judging right by success, a selfishness that gives nothing but asks for all, a narrow-mindedness that does not go beyond petty mundanc calculations—— "nicely calculated less or more" of the good, things of this world, "They fail in both worlds, and their failure in this world is parted for ever, "on-lookids, and their failure in this world is parted for ever, "on-lookids, and their failure in this world is parted for ever, "on-look in the standard in the standard is parted for ever, "on-look in the standard in the standard is parted for ever, "on-look in the standard in t

2783. To such minds religion does not mean high endeavour, self-sacrifice for noble ends, the recognition of God's infinite world, but just a small concession to formalism, perhaps a present to an idol (literal or figurative), perhaps attendance at worship if it can be done without trouble! It is false gods they worship, and the more they worship, the more they stray.

2784. Such false worship is not always neutral, bringing neither harm nor good. Perhaps the harm comes first, and there is no help from God. Such minds are themselves democratised, and render themselves until for help!

2785. God is both true to His promise, and He has power to give full effect to His Will and Plan.

15. If any think that God
Will not help him
(His Apostle) in this world
And the Hereafter, let him
Stretch out a rope
To the ceiling and cut (himself) 200
Off: then let him see
Whether his plan will remove
That which enrages (him)!

16. Thus have We sent down stern Clear Signs; and verily God doth guide whom He will!

17. Those who believe (in the Qur-an),
Those who follow the Jewish (scriptures),
And the Sabians, **** Christians,
Magians, **** and Polytheists,—
God will judge between them

1786. There is some difference of opinion as to the interpretation of this verse. Most Commentators are agreed that the pronoun "him" in the second line ("will not help him") refers to the holy Prophet, and that the "any" in the first line refers to his senemies, who wished to see him destroyed and removed from the scene of his labours. Buy "Abbās, whim i have followed here, and whom a grear number of Commentators follow, construes the later clauses in the sane given in the text. Freely paraphrased, it means: if the entemies of God's Aposite are entaged at his successes, let them fix a rope to their ceiling and hang themselves. Samāa is thus rendered by the word "ceiling" If Samāa is rendered by the word "heaven" (the usual meaning), the paraphrase would be: if the entemies of God's Aposite are entaged at the help he gets from heaven, let them stretch a rope to heaven and see if they can cut off the help in that way!—in other words, they are fools if they think they can intercept God's help by their netty devires!

2787. Instead of plotting against God's Messenger, the Unbelievers should observe the Clear Signs which he has brought, and obey and follow the Guidance which comes from God according to the Laws which He has Swed by His holy Will and Phan.

2788. For Sabinas, see n. 76 to it 62. They are also referred to in v. 72. In both those passages the Muslims are mentioned with the Jews. Christians, and Sabinas, as receiving God's protection and mercy. Here, besides the four religions, there is further mention of hagians and Polythesia: it is not said that they would receive God's Mercy, but only that God will judge between the various forms of faith. The addition of polythesis—those who join gods with God—may seem a little surprising. But the argument is that all forms of faith that are sincere (and not merely contumacious) are matters in which we as men cannot interfere. Our duty is to be tolerant within all the limits of folerance—i.e., so long as there is no oppression, injustice, and persecution. Where we can right an obvious wrong, it is our duty to do so; but it would be wrong on our part to rush in without power or autionity simply opecause other people do not see our point of view.

2789. This is the only place where the Magians (Majās) are mentioned in the Qurān. Thoir cult is a very ancient one. They consider Fire as the purest and noblest element, and worship it as a fit emblem of God, Their location was the Persian and Median uplands and the Mesopotamian valleys. Their religion was reformed by the Prophet Zardusht (date uncertain, about B.C. 600?). Their scripture is the Zend-Avestia, the bible of the Pārsis. They were "the Wise men of the East" mentioned in the Gospels.

2791. Cf. xxn. 16. There the argument was that those who work in harmony with God's Law and Will will get their reward, for God always carries out His Plan. Here is the parallel argument: those who dely God's Will must suffer pain and disgrace, for God is well able to carry out His Will.

2792. Two antagonists: i.e., narties of antagonists, vis., Men of Faith, who confess their Lord and seek to carry out His Will, and Men who deny their Lord and dely His Will.

2793. The punishment, expressed in physical terms, will be all-pervading, not merely superficial.

C. 152.— For our spiritual growth are provided
(xxii. 26.48.) Symbols and means of expression in our ordinary Lives. Such is the pilgrimage, meant
To gather men and women from far and near

2795, In xxii, 14 above, was described the meed of the Righteous as compared with the timeservers and those who worshipped false posts (v: 12-13); here we have the case of those who were persecuted, abused, prevented from entering the Larba and deprived of all that makes life smooth, agreeable, and comfortable. For them the meed is described in metaphors that negative these afficients; costly adoraments (as against being stripped of home and property), purity of speech (as against the abuse they received), the Path of the Lord of Praise (as against the fierce and malignant persecution to which they were subjected).

2796. All these were enormities of which the Pagan clique in power in hircca before and during the Hijrat were guilty.

To share in sacrifice, and prayer and praise, In an age-old centre of worship. The sacrifices, Too, are symbols of Piety of Heart, A longing to share with fellow men In the bounties of God. In the Fight for Truth Is tested our purity of motive, unselfishness Of aim, and devotion to Right at the cost Of Self. Fearless must we fight; for Truth Has often been flouted, but must finally win 2707. The site of Merca, was granted to Abraham (and his son Ismis 10) for a place of worship that to be pure (without idds, the worship head paul to the One Trus God) and universal, without being reserved dike Solomon's Temple of later (univ) to any one People or Race.

2708. Cf. ii. 125. Note that here the word offinin ('who stand up for prayer') becurs in place of shiftin (who use it as a retreat). In practice the meaning is the same. Those who go for a retreat to the Karba stay there for the time being.

2799, When the Pilgrimage was proclaimed, people came to it from every quarter, near and far, on foot and mounted. The "lean came!" coming after a fatiguing journey through distant mountain roads typities the difficulties of travel, which Pilgrims disregard on account of the temporal and spiritual benefits referred to in the next verse.

2800. There are benefits both for this our material life and for our spiritual life. Of the former kind are those associated with social intercourse which furthers trade and increases knowledge. Of the latter kind are the opportunities of realising some of our spiritual yearnings in sacred associations that go back to the most ancient times. Of both kinds may be considered the opportunities which the Pligitimage provides for strengthering our international Brotherhood. And celebrate the name

<sup>2001</sup> The three special days of Bajj are the 8th, 9th, and 10th of the month of Zul-hajj, and the two or three subsequent days of Tashriq: see the rites explained in n. 217 to ii 107. But we may prinarily include the first lend days of Zul-hajj in the term.

<sup>2804.</sup> The spirit of the Polgramage is not completed by the performance of the outward rites. The Pilgrim should carry in mind some vow of spiritual service and endeavour to perform it. Then comes the final Taurist.

<sup>2803.</sup> The general food prohibitions will be found in ii, 173, v. 4.5, and vi. 121, 138-146. They are nearly for health and cleanliness, but the worst abominations to shun are those of false worship and as expect. Here the question is about food during Pilgrimage. Lawful meat but not game is allowed.

2807. Sha'āir, symbols, signs, marks by which something is known to belong to some particular body of men, such as fags. In it. 158 the word was applied to $afa and Marwa; see n. 150 there. Here it seems to be applied to the rites of sacrifice. Such wacrifice is symbolical; it should betoken dedication and piety of heart; See below, xmi 37.

2808. In them: in cattle, or animals offered for sacrifice. It is quite true that they are useful in many ways to man, e.g., camels in desert countries are useful as mounts or for carrying burdens, or for giving milk, and so fire horses and over are last good for meat, and earnel's hair can be woven into cloth; goats and sheep also yield milk and meat, and hair or wool. But if they are used for sarrifice, they become symbols by which men show that they are willing to give up soone of their own benefits for the sake of statisfying the needs of their poorer brether).

2805. Hā "(owards, near. The actual sacrifice is not performed in the Ka'ba, but at Minā, five or six miles off, where the Pilgrims encamp: see n. 217 foi i 197. **Dumma=thn, finally, in the end; f.e., after all the rites have been performed, Tawatf, Safa and Marwa, and 'Arafat.

  Are filled with fear,
  Who show patient perseverance

  We have bestowed upon them.
- 36. The sacrificial camels

  God: in them is (much)

  The name of God over them
  As they line up (for sacrifice):
  When they are down

  Eat ye thereof, and feed
  Such as (beg not but)
  Live in contentment:

  ***H**
  And such as beg
  With due humility: thus have

 مَا فَا قَصَبُ جُنُوبُها فَصَلُوا مِنْهَا
 وَأَمْلِمِهُ الْقَالَعَ وَالْمَازَرُ صَلَالًا

2814. There are chics in begging, as in charity. No approval is given to arrogant and insolent begging, though the relief of distress of all kinds, deserved and undeserved, is included in charity. But those who beg with humility and those who receive gifts with gratitude and contentment are both mentioned for special attention. Charity should not be given for show, or to get rid of importunate demands, It should find out real needs and meet them.

<sup>2810.</sup> This is the true end of sacrifice, not propituation of higher powers, for God is One, and He does not delight in flesh or blood (xxii. 37), but a symbol of thanksgiving to God by sharing meat with fellow-men. The solemn pronouncement of God's name over the sacrifice is an essential part of the rite.

<sup>2811.</sup> The good news: is, the Message of God, that He will accept in us the sacrifice of self for the benefit of our fellow-men.

<sup>2812.</sup> Some qualities of God's devotees are mentioned here, in ascending order: (1) Humility before God makes them receptive, and prepares them to listen to God's Message; (2) fear of God, which is akin to love, touches their heart, and penetrates through their inmost being; (3) they are not alraid of anything in mortal life; they take their trials patiently, and they go on in a course of righteousness with constancy; (4) their prayer now is not a matter of form, but a real communion with God, with a sense of confidence such as a faithful servant feels in the presence of a kind and loving master; and (5) gratifued to God, as shown by practical acts of charity to all fellow-creatures.

We made animals subject To you, that ye May be grateful.

- 37. It is not their meat
  Nor their blood, that reaches
  God: it is your piety
  That reaches Him: He
  Has thus made them subject
  To you, that ye may glorily
  God for His guidance to you:
  And proclaim the Good News
  To all who do right.
- 38. Verily God will defend (From ill) those who believe: Verily, God loveth not Any that is a traitor To faith, or shows ingratitude.

SECTION 6.

- 39. All o those against whom war is made, permission Is given (to fight), because They are wronged;—and verily, God is Most Powerful For their aid;—
- 40. (They are) those who have Been expelled from their homes

2815. The essence of sacrifice has been explained in n 2810. No one should suppose that meat or blood sacripte. But God does accept the oftening of our heart, that God could be appeased by blood sacribe. But God does accept the oftening of our heart, and as a symbol of such offer, some visible institution is necessary. He has given us power over the brute creation, and permitted us to eat meat, but only if we pronounce this name at the solemn act of taking life, for without this solemn invocation, we are apt to forget the sacredness of life. By the invocation we are reminded that wanton cruelly is not in our thoughts, but only the need of food. Now if we further deny ourselves the greater part of the food (some theologians fix the proportion at three-quarters or two-hitch) for the sake of our poner breather in solemn assembly in the precincts of the Haram (sacred territory), our symbolic act finds practical expression in benevolence, and that is the virtue rought to be raught. We should be grateful to God for His guidance in this matter, in which many Peoples have gone wrong, and we should proclaim the true doctrine, so that virtue and charity may increase among men.

, 7816. Several translators have failed to notice that yag@faigna (in the best-approved texts) is in the passive voice, "against whom war is made",—not " who take arms against the unbelievers "as Sale translates it. The clause "and verify...their aid" is parenthetical. Verse 40 connects on with "they are wronged". The wrong is indicated: 'driven by persecution from their home, for no other reason than that they worshipped the One True God. This was the first occasion on which fighting—in self-defence—was permitted. This passage therefore undoubtedly dates from Medicates.

2817. C.J. ii. 251, where the expression is used in connection with David's fight against the Philistines. To allow a righteous people to fight against a feroclous and mischell-loving people was fully justified, But the justification was far greater here, when the little Muslim community was not only fighting for its own existence against the Meccan Quraish, but for the very existence of the Faith in the One True God. They had as much right to be in Mecca and worship in the Ka'ba as the other Quraish; yet they were existed for their Faith. It affected not the faith of one peculiar people. The principle involved was that of all worship, Jewish or Christian as well as Muslim, and of all foundations built for plous uses.

2818. 'Asis means Exalted in power, rank, dignity; incomparable; Full of might and majesty; Able to enforce His Will. The last signification is the one that predominates here.

2319. The justification of the righteous in resisting oppression when not only they but their laith is persecuted and when they are led by a righteous Imām, is that it is a form of self-sacrañce. They are not fighting for themselves, for land, power, or privilege. They are fighting for the right.

2820. It is nothing new if the Prophet of God is accused of imposture. This was done in all ages; eg., Noah (vii. 69); Hud the prophet of the "Ad people (vii. 69); Bâlh) the prophet of the Thammd (vii. 76); Abraham (xxi. 59); Lu (vii. 82); Shu'aib the prophet of the Madyan people (vii. 83) and ano of the Companions of the Wood (xv. 78). The case of Moses is mentioned apart, as his people survived to the time of our Prophet and survive to the present, and they frequently rebelled against Moses (ii. 49-61).

2821. Were they the same as the Companions of the Wood? See n. 2000 to xv. 78.

2822. My Wrath on them, and the complete reversal of their fortune in consequence.

2823. The roofs fell in first, and the whole structure, walls and all, came tumbling after, as happens in ruins. The place was turned upside down.

.2835. The word for "heart" in Arabic speech imports both the seat of intelligent faculties and understanding as well as the seat of affections and emotions. Those who reject God's Message may have their physical eyes and ears, but their hearts are blind and deal. If their faculties of understanding were active, would they not see the Signs of God's Providence and God's Wrath in nature around them and in the cities and ruins if they travel intelligently?

And their ears may Thus learn to hear? Truly it is not their eyes That are blind, but their Hearts which are In their breasts.

47. Yet they ask thee To hasten on the Punishment! But God will not fail 2846 In His promise. Verily A Day in the sight of thy Lord Is like a thousand years Of your reckoning.

48. And to how many populations Did I give respite, which that Were given to wrong-doing? In the end I punished them. To Me is the destination (of all).

C. 153.—The power of Evil is in insidious suggestions: (xxii, 49-78.) They are only a trial to those whose hearts Are inclined to evil, but Truth doth shine The nobler for the Believers, by the grace And guidance of God. Martyrs who give Their all in the cause of God will find A provision ample and eternal. The finest And subtlest mysteries are but proofs of the goodness. Of God. Dispute not about rites and ceremonies: Follow the Straight Way. Seek for worship The Only True God, and strive in His service. That ye may be witnesses among men To God's Truth, as the Apostle is a witness to you.

SECTION 7.

49: Say: "O men! I am (Sent) to you only to give 2826. If God gives respite, those to whom it is given have a real chance of repentance and amendment. He will not curtail His promise of respite. But on the other hand He has promised to call everyone to account for his deeds, and this involves justice and punishment for sin. This promise will also come true. It is foolish to fry to hasten it. Time with Him is nothing. We keep count of time for our relative calculations. His existence is absolute, and not conditioned by Time or Place. What we call a thousand years may be nothing more than a day or a minute to Him.

A clear warning: 9839

- 51. "But those who strive
  Against Our Signs, to frustrate **
  Them,—they will be
  Companions of the Fire."
- 52. Dever did We send
  An apostle or a prophet
  Before thee, but, when he Framed a desire, Satan
  Threw some (vanity) 3011
  Into his desire: but God
  Will cancel anything (vain)
  That Satan throws in,
  And God will confirm
  (And establish) His Signs:
  For God is full of knowledge
  And wisdom: 3021
- 53. That He may make
  The suggestions thrown in
  By Satan, but a trial
  For those in whose hearts

For those in whose hearts

2228. It is the Aposile's duty to convey the warning in the clearest terms to the wicked. It is no part of his duty to coages them or judge them, or bring on the Punishment for them. That only rests with God. But the warning itself is full of Morcy; for it gives the highest hope to the repentant sinder who turns and comes to God.

2839, The "sustenance" must be construed in the widest sense, spiritual as well as intellectual and physical. The reward of righteousness is far more generous than any merit there may be in the creature following the Will of his Creator.

 2830. It will not be in their power to frustrate God's Plan; all they will do is to go further and further down in their spiritual state, deeper and deeper in their Hell.

2831. Prophets and apostles (the distinction is explained in n. 2803 to xix. 51) are but human. Their actions are righteous and their motives pure. But in judging things from a human point of view, the suggestion may come to their mind (from Satan) that it would be good to have power or wealth or influence for furthering God's cause, or that it may be good to concluste some faction which may be irreconciable. In fact, in God's Plan, it may be the opposite. God, in fils mercy and inspiration, will cancel any false or vain suggestions of this kind, and confirm and strengthen His own Commands and make known His Will in His Signs or revelations.

2832. This clause and the similar clause at the end of the next verse are parenthetical.

2833. If any suggestion comes to the human mind that is not in accordance with God's Will and Plan, it has two opposite effects: to evil minds it is a trial and temptation from the Evil One, but to the mind well-instructed in Paith, it stands self-condemned at once, and becomes a means of strengthening the Paith and stimulating redoubled efforts to conform to the Will of God.

.(۲۲) سورة الحج

I a disease and who are 2834 Hardened of heart: verily The wrong-doers are in a schism Far (from the Truth):

- 54. And that those on whom """ Knowledge has been bestowed may learn
  That the (Qur-an) is the Truth
  From thy Lord, and that they May believe therein, and their hearts
  May be made humbly (open)
  To it: for verily God is
  The Guide of those who believe,
  To the Straight Way.
- 55. Those who reject Faith
  Will not cease to be will
  In doubt concerning (Revelation)
  Until the Hour (of Judgment)
  Comes suddenly upon them,
  Or there comes to them
  The Penalty of a Day of Disaster.
- 56. On that Day the Dominion *** Will be that of God: He will judge between them: So those who believe And work righteous deeds will be In Gardens of Delight.
- 57. And for those who reject Faith And deny Our Signs, There will be a humiliating Punishment.

تَهَنُّ وَالْفَاسِيَةِ فُلُونُهُ ثُمُّ فَاتَ الظّالِينَ لِنَ شِعَالِمِ سَيد ﴿ وَلِيمَنَهُ الْذِينَ أُوثُوا الْمِسْمُ أَنَّهُ الْمَيْمُ مُ ثَيْلِتَ فَيُوْمِنُوا إِنِهِ مَفْضِ الْمُرْضُلُونُهُ أَنْ وَإِنْ الْمُعْلَمُ الْمِلْرِينَ الْمَنْفَا الْاسِنا الْمُعْمَلُ والْمِلْرِينَ الْمَنْفَا

۞ وَلاِ يَرَالُ الَّذِينَ كَمْنُواْ فِيثِمَا يُونِيَّهُ حَتَّى تَاٰنِيْهُمُ السَّاعَةُ بَفْتَةً أَوْ يَاٰنِيهُمُ عَلَّالِ بَيْنِهِمُ عَفِيدٍ

۞ وَالْذِينَ كَفَرُواْ وَكَذَّبُواْ بِالنِيْنَا وَالْوَلَتِهِ لَنَهُ مُعَالِثُ شُهِبُنُّ

2834. Cf. ii, 10. I understand the "disease in the heart" to be an earlier state of curse, which leads in an intensified form to a complete "hardening of the heart"

2835. The last clause in the last verse was parenthetical. Treat this clause as parallel with the fixed clause in verse 53, "that he may make"; etc. Both will then connect with "God will confirm (and establish) this Signs" in verse 52. See n. 2833 above.

2836. The penalty of deliberately rejecting Faith is that the person doing so closes the channels of Mercy that flow from God. He will always be subject to doubts and superstitions, until the time comes when all earthly scales fall from his spiritual eyes. But then there will be no time for Repentance: it will be too late to profit by the guidance of God given through Revelation.

2837. Such power as Evil has over those who yield to it (xvii. 62-64) will then be gone, as the respite granted to Satan will be over, and God's Kingdom will be established.

SECTION 8

- 58. Mehose who leave their homes
  In the cause of God,
  And are then slain or die,—
  On them will God bestow verily.
  A goodly Provision:***
  Truly God is He Who Bestows the best: Provision.

  Has retaliated to no greater
  Extent than the injury he received,
  And is again set upon
  Inordinately, God will help
  Him: for God is One
  That blots out (sins)
  And forgives (again and again). 2010
- FE hat is because God merges Night into Day, and He Merges Day into Night, and Verily it is God Who hears

وَالْذَرَتَ مَا جَرُوا فِي سَيْمِ لِ الْقَرْتُ مَا جُرُوا فِي سَيْمِ لِ الْقَرْتُ مَا الله وَ لله وَ اله وَالله وَاله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله وَالله

2838. Rize: sustenance, provision. I have preferred the latter word here, because after death we can only think of rag in a large metaphorical sense, i.e., all the provision necessary to equip the person for a full and happy Future Life, and also, I think, a provision for his dependants and near and dear ones in this life.

2839. Martyrdom is the sacrifice of life in the service of God. Its reward is therefore even greater than that of an ordinarily good life. The martyr's sins are forgiven by the very act of martyrdom, which implies service and self-surrender in the highest sense of the word God knows all his past life but will forbear from calling him to account for things that should strictly tome into his account.

280. Ordinarily Mualims are enjoined to bear injuries with patience and return good for evil (xxiii. 96). But there are occasions when human feelings get the better of our wise resolutions, or when, m a state of conflict or wan, we return "as good as we get". In that case our retalization is permissible, provided the injury we inflict is not greater than that we receive. After such retalization we are even, but if the other side again acts aggressively and goos beyond all bounds in attacking us, we are entitled to protection from God in spite of all our faults: for God is One that blots out our sins, and forgives again and aggrain. And sees (all things), MIII

- 62. That is because God—He ****!

  Is the Reality; and those
  Besides Him whom they invoke,
  They are but vain Falsehood;
  Verily God is He, Most High,
  Most Great.****

  Verily God is He, Most High,
- 63. Seest thou not that God
  Sends down rain from the sky,
  And forthwith the earth
  Becomes clothed with green?
  For God is He Who understands call
  The finest mysteries, and
  Is well-acquainted (with them).
- 64. To Him belongs all that is In the heavens and on earth: For verily God,—He is Free of all wants, Worthy of all praise.<sup>5815</sup>

بَصِيرُ ﴿ ذَلِكَ بِأَنَّ اللّهُ هُوَ الْحَيْقُ وَأَنَّ مَا بَدْعُونَ مِن دُونِهِ - هُوَالْبُ طِلْ وَأَنَّ اللّهُ هُوَ الْمَيْلِ الْكَبِيْدُ ﴿ أَلَةٍ زَرَ أَنَ اللّهَ أَنزَلَ مِنَ السَّسَاءَ مَا الْمَسَاءَ مَا الْمَسَاءَ مَا الْمَسَاءَ مَا الْمَسَاءَ مَا الْمُسَاءِ مِنْ السَّسَاءَ مَا الْمَسْعَادِ مِنْ السَّسَاءَ مَا الْمَسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُؤْمِنُ عَلَيْهِ اللّهُ مُسْعَدِيمُ الْمُسْعِدِيمُ الْمُسْعَدِيمُ اللّهُ اللللللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ ال

281). To some it may appear strange or even irreconcilable that God should be both Merciful and Just; that He should both protect His devotees and yet ask for their self-sacrifice; that He should combinant dihem to return good for evil, and yet permit retalation under certain restrictions. But such thoughts are short-righted. Do they not see many inconsistencies in all Life, all Nature, and all Creation? Why, even in such simple phenomena as Night and Day, the one merges into the other, and no one can tell when precisely the one begins and the other activity, that the one irreals the beauties of the starry heavens and the other the other activity, that the onic reveals the beauties of the starry heavens and the other the splendour of the sun. In countless ways we can see there the wisdom and the fine artistry of God. And there are subtle nuances and mergings in nature that our intelligence can hardly penetrate. Now human life and human relations are far more complicated, and it is God alone Who can six all the subtle distinctions and hear the cries of all His creatures, in a world which Tennyson described as "red in tooth and claw".

2842. The emphatic construction calls attention to the fact that God is the only abiding Reality. All else is like shadows that will pass away.

2844. Lajī, as a name of God, is as difficult to define in words as the idea it seeks to represent is difficult to grasp in our minds. It implies: (1) fine, subtle (the basic meaning); (2) so fine and subtle as to be incomprehensible; (4) with sight so perfect as 1.0 see and understand the finest subtleties and mysteries; (5) so kind and gracious as to bestow grits of the most refined kind; extraordinarily gracious and understanding. No. 4 is the predominant meaning here and in xii 100; Nos. 2 and 3 in vi. 100; and No. 5 in xiii, 19, but every shade of meaning must be borne in mind in each case, as a subsidiary factor in the spiritual melody.

2815. Each of the verses xxii 5143 mentioned two attributes of God with reference to the contents of that verse. This verse now sums up the whole argument, and the two attributes with which it closes sum up the idea by which we can understand God's goodness. God's loving kindness and mercies are not like those of human creatures who all depend upon one another, and often expect some kindness or recognition in return. God's above all wants and depends in no way whatever on this creatures. His mercies have therefore a special quality, which we cannot describe except by gratefully signing the praises of God. Cf. ii. 260.

SECTION 9.

- 65. Seest thou not that God

  All that is on the earth,
  And the ships that sail sets
  Through the sea by His command?
  He withholds the sky (rain) set?

2846. Land and sea have been made subject to man by God's command, so that man can develop his life freely on earth.

2847. Samãa means (1) something high, (2) a roof, a ceiling, (3) the sky, the canopy of heaven. (4) cloud or rain. I undersland the last meaning here, though most authorities seem to render it by some such word as "sky". If we undersland rain here, we have a complete picture of the three elements in which man lives—land, air and sea, Rain is also appropriate for mention with God's kindness and mercy. He regulates the rain for man's lender.

2848. Rites and ceremonies may appear to be an unimportant matter compared with "weightier matters of the Law" and with the higher needs of man's spiritual nature. But they are necessary for social and religious organisation, an' i their effect on the individual himself is not to be despised. In any case, as they are visible external symbols, they give rise to the most heated controversies. Such controversies are to be deprecated. That does not mean that our rites and exermonies are to be made light of. Those in Islam rest on the highest social and religious needs of man, and if we are convinced that we are on the Right Way," we should invite all to join us, without entering into controversies about such matters.

2849. You are only wrangling about matters about which you have no knowledge nor any deep religious feeling. The springs of your conduct are all open before God, and He will judge you.

- 70. Knowest thou not that God knows all that is In heaven and on earth? Indeed it is all In a record, and that Is easy for God <sup>801</sup>
- 71. Yet they worship, besides God, Things for which no authority Has been sent down to them, And of which they have (Really) no knowledge: For those that do wrong There is no helper. 2554

2850. You not only find fault with the very few and simple rites and ceremonies in Islam: you outside Islam, have no rites and ceremonies which you are yourselves agreed upon, either as Christians or as jews, or one compared with the other.

2851. We human beings can only think of knowledge being accurately and permanently preserved by means of a record. God's knowledge has all the qualities of a perfect record, and it is moreover complete and comprehensive. This is not difficult for Him from whom flow all knowledge and intelligence, 2852. When plain common-sense shows the absurdity of false worship, behind which there is neither knowledge, intelligence, nor authority (quite the contrary), who or what can help the false misguided creatures who dishonour God by false worship?

2853, Munkar: (1) a refusal to accept something offered; (2) a denial of something stated or pointed out; (3) a feeling of disapproval or active aversion, or disgust.

2854. There is irony here. You think God's revelations and Signs are distanteful to you! There will be something far more distanteful to you if you do not repent! What do you say to the inevitable Punishment.

God has promised it To the Unbelievers! And evil is that destination!"

- 2855. Both idols and their worshippers are poor, foolish, feeble creatures (
- 2856. No one can have a true idea of God, who descends to the base forms of false worship. God have all power, and He is fully able to carry out every part of His Will and Plan. He is exalted above all in power and dignity. Cf. xxii. 40 and n. 2816 for the full meaning of '4xiz.
- 2857. Men are chosen as Messengers to ordinary men; for ordinary men will not be able to understand and be in communion with beings so refined as angels. But angels are sent as Messengers to God's chosen apostles, to convey the Message from time to time. In either case they are chosen by God, are subject to God's Will, and should not be worshipped as gods.
- 2838. As God regards the humblest of His creatures and hears their prayer, He sends men apostles out of their own brethren (see last note), and to such apostles He communicates the highest spiritual Truths through His angels.

It is He Who has named You Muslims, both before 2003 And in this (Revelation): That the Apostle may be A witness for you, and ve Be witnesses for mankind! 9864 So establish regular Praver. 2839. Time, before or behind, may be of some importance to men. They may dispute as to what was the first Message, and what is the last Message. To God, this question of priority and posteriority is of no consequence. All questions go back ultimately to him and are judged on their merits.

2860. Prosper: in a spiritual sense, both in this life and the Hereafter.

2801. As far as the striving is concerned with Jihād in the narrow sense, see the limitations in n. 204 to it. 190 and n. 203 to it. 191. But the words are perfectly general and apply to all true and unselfish striving for spiritual good.

2862. The Jews were hampered by many restrictions, and their religion was racial. Christianity, as originally preached, was a hermit religion: "sell whatsoever thou hast "(Mark x, 21); "take no thought for the morrow "(Mark x, 34); and for logical to man's faculties of every kind. It is universal, and claims to date from Adam: father Abraham is mentioned as the great Ancestor of those among whom Islam was first preached (Jews, Christians, and Arab Quraish).

2863. Before: see Abraham's prayer in ii, 128. In this Revelation; in this very verse, as well as in other places.

2864, See ii, 143, and notes 143 and 144. As the Prophet is a guide and exemplar among us, so Muslims ought to be exemplars amongst mankind. The best witness to God's Truth are those who show its light in their lives.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXIII (Mū-minān).

This Sūra deals with the virtues which are the seed-bed of Faith, especially in an environment in which Truth is denied and its votaries insulted and persecuted. But Truth is One and must prevail. Those who do wrong will be filled with vain regrets when it is too late for repentance

It belongs to the late Meccan period.

Summary.—Faith, coupled with humility in prayer, charity, abstinence from vanity and from indulgence in appetites, and strict probity, must lead to final success, even though people mock and accuse the righteous of false motives, as did the contemporaries of Noah, of Moses, and of Jesus (xxiii, 1-50, and C. 154).

The apostles of God and the righteous form one Brotherhood, but those who make schisms and refuse to believe have ample evidence pointing to Truth and the goodness and greatness of God (xxiii: 51.92, and C. 155).

Evil must be repelled by goodness and faith in God; for the future life is sure, and those who disbelieve will wish for another chance when it is too late (xxiii, 93-118, and C, 156).

C, 154.—Faith leads to humility, avoidance
(axiii. 1-50) Of vanity in word and deed, charity,
Continence, faithful observance
Of trusts and covenants, and devout
Approach to God,—surest steps
To Bliss. Man carries in himself
Proofs of God's Providence; the same
Story is told if he looks at nature
Around him; and the long line of Teachers
Sent by God shows God's special care
Of humanity. What though they were Rejected and scorned, maligned and persecuted?
God's Truth won through, as it always wiff.

Stira XXIII

Mu-minun, or The Believers.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. The Believers must (Eventually) win through,—2863
- 2. Those who humble themselves and In their prayers;
- 3. Who avoid vain talk;
- Who are active in deeds Of charity;
- 5. Who abstain from sex, 9867
- 7. But those whose desires exceed

  Those limits are transgressors;—

2865. Afaha: win through, prosper, succeed, achieve their aims or obtain salvation from sorrow and all evil. This verse connects on with verses 10 and 11 bollow. The success or victory may come in this world, but is certain and lasting in the world to come.

2866. Humility in prayer as regards (I) their estimate of their own worth in God's presence, (2) as tegards their estimate of their own powers or strength unless they are helped by God, and (3) as regards the petitions they offer to God.

2867. The Muslim must guard himself against every kind of sex abuse or sex perversion. The new psychology associated with the name of Freud traces many of our hidden motives to sex, and it is common knowledge that our refinement or degradation may be measured by the hidden workings of our sex instincts. But even the natural and lawful exercise of sex is restricted to the marriage bopd, under which the rights of both parties are duly regulated and maintained.

2868. This is further explained and amplified in iv. 25. It will be seen there that the status of a cash can be raised to freedom by marriage is the same as that of a free woman as regards het rights, but more lenient as regards the punishment to be inflicted if she falls from virtue.

8. Those who faithfully observe
Their trusts and their covenants; 2000

9. And who (strictly) guard 2010
Their prayers:—

10. These will be the heirs, 2871

 Who will inherit Paradise: They will dwell therein (For ever).

12. Man We did create
From a quintessence (of clay); 287

 Then We placed him As (a drop of) sperm وَالَّذِينَ مُمْ الْأَمْنَيْهِ مُوعَمَّدِهِ مِنْ

 وَلَقَدُ خَلَقْتُ اللَّهِ نِسَانَ مِن سُلَلْقِ

2869. Trusts may be express or implied. Express trusts are those where properly is entrusted or duties are assigned by some one to some other whom he trusts, to carry out either immediately or in specified contingencies, such as death. Implied trusts arise out of power, or position, or opportunity; 4.g., a king holds his kingdom on trust from God for his subjects: the Afghan official phrase for their kingdom used to be Daulatt-Kjaud and (Tod-given kingdom). The subject of covenants, express and implied, has been discussed in n. 882 to v. 1. Covenants create obligations, and express and implied trusts and covenants taken together cover the whole field of obligations.

2870. In verse 2 we were directed to the spirit of humility and earnestness in our prayers. Here we are told how necessary the habit of regular prayer is to our spiritual well-being and development, as it brings us closer to God, and thus sums up the light of the seven jewels of our Falth, vis.: (1) humility, (2) avoidance of vanity; (3) charity, (4) sex purity, (5) fidelity to trusts, and (6) to covenants, and (7) an earnest desire to get closer to God.

2871. Cf. xxi. 105, where it is said that the righteous will inherit the earth. In the first verse of this SUra, the final success or victory is referred to. Truth will prevail even on this earth, but they not be for any individual men of righteousness to see it: it may be in the time of their heirs and successors. But in the life to come, there is no doubt that every man will see the fruit of his life here, and the righteous will inherit heaven, in the sense that they will attain it after their death here.

2872. In this beautiful passage, God's creative work, as far as man is concerned, is recapitulated. in order to show man's real position in this life, and the certainty of the future : to which he was referred for his reward in verses 10-11 above. For the various stages of creation, see n. 120 to ii. 117. Here we are not concerned with the earliest stage, the creation of primeval matter out of nothing It is also a process of creation when inorganic matter becomes living matter. Thus inorganic constituents of the earth are absorbed into living matter by way of food and living matter reproduces itself by means of sperm. This is deposited in the ovum and fertilises it and rests for a time in security in the mother's womb. The first change in the fertilised ovum is the conversion into a sort of clot of thickly congealed blood; the zygote cells grow by segmentation; then the mass gradually assumes shape in its growth as a feetus. From the lump develop bones and flesh and organs and a nervous system. So far man's growth is like that of an animal, but a further process takes place which makes the infant animal into the infant man. This is the breathing of God's spirit into him (xv. 29): that process need not be precisely at a given point of time. It may be a continuous process parallel to that of physical growth. The child is born; it grows; it decays and dies; but after death another chapter opens for the individual, and it is to remind us of this most momentous chapter that the previous stages are recapitulated.

In a place of rest,<sup>2073</sup> Firmly fixed;

- 14. Then We made the sperm Into a clot of congealed blood; Then of that clot We made A (fortus) lump; then We Made out of that lump Bones and clothed the bones With flesh; then We developed Out of it another creature. So blessed be God, The Best to create!
- 15. After that, at length Ye will die. 2873
- Again, on the Day Of Judgment, will ye be Raised up.
- 17. And We have made, above you, Seven tracts; <sup>brid</sup> and We Are never unmindful Of (Our) Creation. <sup>8671</sup>

(٢٣) سُورة المؤمنون

2874, From a mer; narmal, we now consider man as man. Is it not a Sign of wonder, at itself inton dry dust (12748), xxxx. 3) or morganic matter should be made protoplasm (moist clay or organic matter); from it should grow a new animal life; and out of it should grow human life, with all its capacities and responsibilities? Man carnes within himself Signs of God's wisdom and power, and he can see them every day in the universe around him.

2875. Our physical death in this mottal life seems to make a break. But if it were the end of all, on the becomes meaningless. Our own instinct tells us that it cannot be so, and God assures us that there will be a resurrection for judgment.

2876. Tarāių: tracts, roads, orbits, or paths of motion in the visible heavens. These seven are regular and clearly marked to our eyes, in the immense space that we see around us. We must go to astronomy to form any plausible theories of these motions. But their simplest observation gives us a sublime view of beauty, order, and grandeur in the universe. The assurance given in the next clause, that God cares for us and all His Cleation, calls our attention to God's goodness, which is further illustrated in the subsequent verse.

2877. God's care for His Creation is ceaseless. A few examples of His care for our physical well-being are given in verses 18-22, and for our spiritual well-being, in Sections 2 to 5.

- 18. And We send down water
  From the sky according to and
  (Due) measure, and We cause it
  To soak in the soil;
  And We certainly are able
  To drain it off (with ease).
- 19. With it We grow for you
  Gardens of date-palms
  And vines; in them have ye
  Abundant fruits: and of them
  Ye eat (and have enjoyment),—200
- 20. Also a tree springing
  Out of Mount Sinai, see
  Which produces oil,
  And relish for those
  Who use it for food.
- 21. And in cattle (too) ye
  Have an instructive example: ***
  From within their bodies
  We produce (milk) for you

2878 Normally the rain comes well distributed; it soaks into the soil; the moisture is retained for a long time in all high grounds; it soaks and penetrates through many layers of soil and forms the architecture of physical geography; the retentive powers of higher soil enable rivers to flow perennially even where, as in India, the rainfall is seasonal and confined to a few months in the year. Another form in which water comes down from the sky according to due measure is in snow and hall; these also have their place in the economy of air and soil. Were it not for snow and glacers in the higher mountain regions, some of the rivers would fail in their abundant flow. As wonderful as the supply of water and moisture is its drainage. It returns to the sea and nir in all sorts of ways, and the formalion of miss, and clouds repeats the cycle. Were it not for the drainage and the clearance of the waters, we should have floods and waterlogging, as happens when the normal processes of nature are temporarily obstructed. The same thing happens wen the rain comes down in other than due measure. These abnormal conditions also have their value. But how grateful should man be for God's gifts in the ceaseless processes of nature on such an enormous scale!

2879. C/. vii, 19 and n, 776 to 1, 69.

1881. 'Ibref: the root meaning of the verb is "to interpret, or expound, or instruct", as in zit, 3; the noun means, an interpretation, or example or Sign that instructs, as here and in xvi. 66, or gives warning, as in iii, 13. From eattle we get milk and meat; also from their skins we make leather for shoes, boots, straps, saddlery, and numerous other uses; from camel's hair and sheep's wool we weave cloth, hagnings, carpets, etc.; from the horns of cattle we make uses and articles of ornament or use; and camels, horses, donkeys, mules, etc., are used for riding, carrying loads, or drawing vehicles.

22. And on them, as well as In ships, ye ride.

SECTION 2.

- 23. (Exurther, We sent a long line Of prophets for your instruction), 2005 We sent Noah to his people: 988 He said, "O my people! Worship God! Ye have No other god but Him. Will ye not fear (Him)?" 9864
- 24. The chiefs of the Unbelievers Among his people said: "He is no more than a man Like yourselves: his wish is To assert his superiority Over you: if God had wished 9805 (To send messengers), He could have sent down Angels: never did we hear Such a thing (as he says), Among our ancestors of old."
- 25. (And some said): "He is 9886 Only a man possessed: .Wait (and have patience) With him for a time."

2882. The material gifts having been mentioned, which we receive from a wise and kindly Providence, our attention is now directed to God's Providence in spiritual matters. He sent Teachers to instruct and guide us, and though they were mocked, rejected, and accused of falsehood and selfishness, they were protected by God, and God's Truth at length prevailed.

2883. " People" here is almost equivalent to "contemporaries"

2884. Cf. vii. 59. To fear God is to lead righteous lives and eschew evil.

· 2885. They attribute altogether wrong motives to him (such as would have actuated them themselves), in saying that he was trying to establish his own personal superiority over them by his preaching. Then they accuse him of falsehood in claiming to bring a message of God. "If", they say, "God had wished to send us messengers, He would have sent angels, not a man like ourselves and from among ourselves. Our ancestors did not worship One God: why should we?"

2886 I construe this to be a speech of another group among them. They thought he was mad, and best left alone. His madness would run out, or he would come to an evil end.

- 26. (Noah) said: "O my Lord! Help me: for that they Accuse me of falsehood!"
- 27. So We inspired him

  (With this message): "Construct
  The Ark within Our sight **
  And under Our guidance: then
  When comes Our command,
  And the fountains of the earth **
  Gush forth, take thou on board
  Pairs of every species, male **
  And female, and thy family —
  Except those of them
  Against whom the Word
  Has already gone forth; **
  And address Me not
  In favour of the wrong-doers;
  For they shall be drowned
- 28. And when thou hast embarked ***
  On the Ark—thou and those
  With thee,—say: "Praise be
  To God, Who has saved us
  From the people who do wrong."

(In the Flood).

- 29. And say: "O my Lord1 sensity Enable me to disembark With Thy blessing: for Thou Art the Best to enable (us) To disembark."
- Verily in this there are Signs (for men to understand); (Thus) do We try (men). 8000

2894. If this refers to any particular prophet, it must be Hād whose mission was to the 'Ad people, or to 'Aālib, whose mission was to the 'Thamūd people. That is the sequence after Noah in S xi. 50-60 and 61-68. But I thusk that as the name is not mentioned, we are to understand in general the type of the post-Flood prophets until we come later on to Moses and Jesus. The object here is not to recount the stories, but to show that the resistance of the wicked made no difference to the trumph of God's holy Truth.

2805. The type of the narrow Sybarite, who enjoys the good things of this life, denies a suture list of yealous of any one who presumes to widen his horizon, is here described in a few masterly strokes. He is bored by any mention of the serious things beyond his ken. What good is it, he says, to talk about the future? Enjoy the present. The gain is all in the present; the loss is all in the future.

38. "He is only a man
Who invents a lie
Against God, but we Are not the ones
To believe in him!"

2902. Their habitations and their organisation have been wiped out. What remains is merely a vague story of their existence, a tale that is told. Where their name remains, which is not always the case, it is only a by-word, suggesting all that is unstable and ephemeral,—" to point a moral and adorn a tale".

2003. Moses and Aaron had a twofold mission: (I) to Pharaoh and his Court, which (alled because of Egyptian arrogance; (2) to the Israelites, for whom the Law was specieved on Mount Sinai, but they repeatedly rebelled against God. In both cases there were miracles (" Clear Signs") and other proofs which showed that they came at God's command and were inspired by His authority.

2904. Racial arrogance made the Egyptians say, 'These men belong to a race which we hold in subjection as our slaves: how can we accept them as messengers of God?'

2905. Here the reference is to the second part of the mission of Moses, that to the Israelites, which the Israelites rendered ineffective by their want of faith. See n. 2903 above.

C. 155.—The Brotherhood of Truth is one in all ages:
(xxin.31-92.) It is narrow men who create sects.

Let them not think that the goods

Of this world can shield them from evil

Or its consequences. God's Truth and His Messenger

Can be known to all: for He in His Mercy

Has given us faculties and judgment, if we

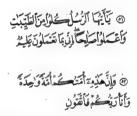

Would but use them. The Message is not

New: all Creation proclaims it: High

Above all is the Lord of Glory Supreme!

SECTION 4.

- 51. ye apostles! enjoy was (All) things good and pure, And work righteousness: For I am well-acquainted With (all) that ye do.
- 52. And verily this Brotherhood
  Of yours is a single Brotherhood, and I am your Lord
  And Cherisher: therefore Fear Me (and no other).

- 2906. The virgin birth of Jesus was a miracle both for him and his mother. She was falsely accorded of unchastity, but the child Jesus triumphantly vindicated her by his own miracles (xix. 27.33), and showed by his life the meaners of the calumny against his mother.
- 2007. There is no need to look far for the place where mother and child were given secure shelter, it is described in xiz. 22-26. It was the place to which she withdrew to be delivered when the time drew near. There was a faultful palm-tree, evidently on high ground, for beneath it flowed a spring. She retired there in seclision, and she and her child rested their until it was time for her to go to her people with her child.
- 2908. Literally, "eat". See n. 776 to v, 69. The men of God do not pose as ascetics, but receive gratefully all God's gifts, and show their gratitude by their righteous lives.
- 2909. Cf. xxi. 92.93. All prophets form one Brotherhood: their Message is one, and their religion and teaching are one; they serve the One True God, Who loves and cherishes them; and they owe their duty to Him and Him alone.

2910. The people who began to trade on the names of the prophets cut off that unity and made sects; and each sect rejoices in its own narrow doctrine, instead of taking the universal teaching of Unity from God. But this sectatian confusion is of man's making. It will last for a time, but the rays of Truth and Unity will finally dissipate it.

2919. God is All-Wise and All-Guod, and His architecture of the universe is on a perfect Plan. If these poor, low, selfish, ignorant creatures were to plan it according to their hearts' desires, it would be a dreadful world, full of confusion and corruption.

2910 This is the last of the questions, beginning with xxii. 68 above, showing the absurdity of the position taken up by the Unbellevers. (1) The Message of God is as old as humanity: why do they fight sliy of it? (2) They have known their Aposle to be true and righteous: why do they deny him? (3) is it madness to bring the bitter Truth before them? (4) Does the Prophet ask any worldly reward from them? I flox, why do they greject his unselfish efforts for their own good?

2921. The reference is to a very severe famine felt in Mecca, which was attributed by the Unbelievers to the presence of the holy Prophet whong them, and his preaching against their god at this is a Meccan 507a, the famine referred to must be that described by Ibn Kaihlf as having occurred in the 8th year of the Missian, say about four years before the Hijfa. There was also a port-Hijfa famine, which is referred to by Bukhair, but that was a later even.

2922. Some Commentators understand the battle of Badr to be meant here: if so, this particular verse would be of the Medina period. But it is better to understand it as referring to the same "distress" as in the preceding verse, or to punishments in general, which obstinate sinners refuse to take as warnings given to them to mend their ways and turn in repentance to God.

2933. Cf. vi. 44. If the little trials in the present life will not open their eyes, will great trials do so? Unfortunately they only cause in the wicked a feeling of despair. In the final Punishment after the Judgment, it will be too late for them to repent, and despair will be their only lot,

2934. As elsewhere, "heart" is to be understood as the seat both of feeling and intelligence. 'All the means by which knowledge can be gathered, judgment formed, and goodness cultivated, are provided for you by God. If you were grateful, you would use those in His service, which is expressed in your service to your fellow-men. But instead you ignore these gifts, question 'God's Providence, and biaspheme against Him!'.

2930. The order and unity of purpose in the Universe argue unity of design and goodness in its March. Is it not then sheer madness for you to run after false factives and fail to understand and obey His Will? It is delivious in you to seek other than God."

2931. Cf. xvii. 42. The multiplicity of gods is intellectually indefensible, considering the unity of Design and Purpose in His wonderful Universe.

2033. In the first instance, this applied to the holy Apostle. His subsequent Hijrat from Mecca and the eventual overthrow of the Meccan oligarchy amply prove the fulfilment of the prophecy. But in general meaning it applies to all. We are taught that evil will be visited with a terrible punishment, not only in a future life, but in this very life when its cup is full and the time comes for punishment in God's Plan. If I has to come while we are salt ill on the scene of this life, we are asked to pray that we may not be found in the company of those who draw such punishment on themselves. In other words we must esshew the society of evil ones.

2934. Whether people speak evil of you, in your presence or behind your back, or they do evil to you in either of those ways, all is known to God. It is not for you to punish. Your best course is not to do evil in your turn, but to do what will best repel the evil. Two evils do not make a good. Cf. zil. 34, n. 4504.

2936. This verse I think connects on with xxin, 90 above. Though God proclaims His Truth everywhere, the weeked cling to Palsehood until they face the reality of Death.

2937. The verb for "send me back" is in the plural in Arabic, which is construed either (1) as an emphatic form, as if the singular were repeated, or (2) as a plural of respect, though such a plural is not ordinarily used in addressing God, or (3) as a plural addressed to the angels, after the address to God in "O my Lord!"

2938. The unrighteous will ask for another chance. But it will be too late then. The time for repentance will then have passed.

They forget that it was by their own deliberate choice that they surrendered to evil, and they are reminded in verses 1991.10 of the ridicule with which they covered godyl men in their life on earth.

2946 After their flouting of God's Signs and their mockery of godly men on earth, they have forfeited their right to plead for mercy before God's Throne.

2947, Literally, 'they made you forget My Message. The ungodly were so occupied in the backbiting and indicute of the godly that the godly themselves became the unconscious cause of the ungodly forgetting the warnings declared by God against those who do not treat His Signs seriously. Thus evil often brings about its own ruin through the instrumentality of those whom it would make its victims.

2949. The question and answer about Time imply two things. (1) The attention of the ungodly is drawn to the extremely short time of the life in this world, compared to the eternity which they face: they are made to see this, and to realise how mistaken they were in their comparative valuation of things spiritual and things malerial. (2) Time, as we know it now, will have faded away and appear as almost nothing. It is just a matter relative to this life of temporary probation. Cf. the experience of the Companions of the Cave: xvii, 19.

2980, God's Creation is not without a high serious purpose. It is not vain, or for mere play or, sport. As far as man is concerned, the highest issues for him hang on his behaviour, in this life. "Life is real, life is earnest, And the grave is not its goal", as Longfellow truly says. We must therefore earnestly search out God's Truth, encouraged by the fact that God's Truth is also, out of His unbounded mercy, searching us out and trying to reach us.

2951. Not with any one else whatever, as God is the only Reality. If men, out of the figments of their imagination, fancy other gods, they will be rudely undeceived. And God is Lord, i.e., our Cherisher as well as our Creator. In spite of all our shortcomings and our rebellions, He will forgive us if we go to Him not on our merits but on His grace.

2952. See the same word used in describing the contrast with the Believers, in the first verse of this Sura. Righteousness must win and all opposition to it must fail. Thus the circle of the argument is completed.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXIV (Nav).

The environmental and social influences which most frequently wreck our spiritual ideals have to do with sex, and especially with its misuse, whether in the form of unregulated behaviour, of false charges or scandals, or breach of the refined conventions of personal or domestic privacy. Our complete conquest of all pitfalls in such matters enables us to rise to the higher regions of Light and of God-created Nature, about which a mystic doctrine is suggested. This subject is continued in the next Süra.

As the reprobation of false slanders about women (xxiv. 11-20) is connected with an incident that happened to Hadhrat 'Aisha in A.H. 5-5. that fixes the chronological place of this Medina Stra.

Summary.—Sex offences should be severely punished, but the strictest evidence should be required, and false slanderers are also worthy of punishment. Light talk about women reprobated (xxiv. 1-26, and C. 157).

Privacy should be respected, and the utmost decorum should be observed in dress and manners (xxiv. 27-34, and C. 158).

Parable of Light and Darkness: order and obedience in Nature point to the spiritual duty of man (xxiv. 35-57, and C. 159).

Domestic manners and manners in public or collective life all contribute to the highest virtues, and are part of our spiritual duties leading up to God (xxiv. 58-64, and C. 160).

C. 157.—Chastity is a virtue, for men and women, (xxiv. 1-26) Whether joined in marriage, or single,
Or widowed. The punishment for offences
In such matters should be public. No less
Grave is the launching of false charges
Or rumours against the fair reputation
Of women, or the spreading of such
Slanders, or the facile belief in them.
Evil is ever spreading its net.
Good men and women should ever be
On their guard, and pray for God's grace and mercy.

Sūra XXIV.

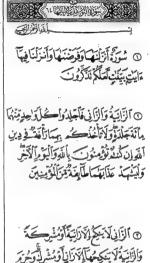

Nur. or Light.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, . . . Most Merciful,

- 1. A Sura which We
  Have sent down and "MAS"
  Which We have ordained:
  In it have We sent down
  Clear Signs, in order that
  Ye may receive admonition.

Flog each of them
With a hundred stripes: ***SL
Let not compassion move you
In their case, in a matter
Prescribed by God, if ye believe
In God and the Last Day:
And let a party
Of the Believers
Witness their punishment.**

3. Let no man guilty of Adultery or fornication marry Any but a woman Similarly guilty, or an Unbeliever: Nor let any but such a man Or an Unbeliever Marry such a woman: To the Believers such a thing Is forbidden.*

293. It must not be thought that the checking of sex offences or of minor improprieties, that relate to sex or privacy, are matters that do not affect spiritual life in the highest degree. These matters are intimately connected with spiritual teaching such as God has sent down in this Sona. The emphasis is on "We": these things are not mere matters of convenience, but God has ordained them for our observance in life.

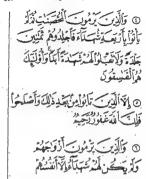

1954 Zinā includes sexual intercourse between a man and a woman not married to each other. It therefore applies both to adultery (which implies that one or both of the parties are married to a person or persons other than the ones concerned) and to fornication, which, in its strict signification, implies that both parties are unmarried. The law of marriage and divorce is made easy in Islam, so that there may be the less templation for intercourse outside the well-defined incidents of marriage. This makes for greater self-respect for both man and woman. Other sex offences are also punishable, but this Section applies strictly to Zifia as a bove defined.

2956. The punishment should be open, in order to be deterrent,

2957. Islam commands sex purity, for men and for women, at all times,—before marriage, during marriage, and after the dissolution of marriage. Those guilty of illicit fractices are shut out of the marriage circle of chaste men and women.

- 4. And those who launch
  A charge against chaste women,
  And produce not four witnesses
  (To support their allegations).—
  Flog them with eighty stripes;
  And reject their evidence the service of their evidence to the service of the ser
- Unless they repent thereafter was And mend (their conduct);
   For God is Oft-Forgiving,
   Most Merciful.
- And for those who launch A charge against their spouses, And have (in support)
   No evidence but their own,

2038. The most serious notice is taken of people who put forward-slanders or scandalous suggestions about women without adequate evidence. If anything is said against a woman's chastity, it should be supported by evidence twice as strong as would ordinarily, be required for business transactions, or even in murder cases. That is, four witnesses would be required instead of two. Pailing such preponderating evidence, the slanderer should himself be treated as a wicked transgressor and punished with eighty stripes. Not only would he be subjected to this disgraceful form of punished with eighty stripes. Not only would he be subjected to this disgraceful form of punished with eighty stripes. Not only would he be subjected to this disgraceful form of punished with eighty stripes. Not only would he be subjected to this disgraceful form of punished with eighty stripes. Not only would he be subjected to this disgraceful form of punished with eighty stripes. Not only would he be subjected to this disgraceful form of punished with eighty stripes.

299. The punishment of stripes is inflicted in any case for unsupported slander. But the deprivation of the civic right of giving evidence can be cancelled by the man's subsequent conduct, if he repents, shows that he is sorry for what he did, and that he would not in future support by his statement anything for which he has not the fullest evidence. Secular courts do not enforce these principles, as their standards are lower than those which good Muslims enter for themselves, but good Muslims must understand and act on the underlying principles, which protect the honour of womanhood. AbB stanifa consaders that nether the stripes nor the incompetence for giving furture evidence is cancelled by repentance, but only the spiritual stigms of being "wicked transgressors". This of course is the more serious punishment, though it cannot be enforced in the Courts.

2900 The case of married persons is different from that of outsides. If one of them accuses the other of unchastity, the accusation parity reflects on the accuser as well. Moreover, the link which unites married people, even where differences superivene, is sure to act as a steadying influence against the connection of false charges of unchastity particularly where divorce is anowed (as in Islam) for reasons other than unchastity. Suppose a housband catches a wife in adultery. In the nature of things four witnesses—over one outside witness—would be impossible. Yet after such an experience its against human nature that he can live a normal married lift. The matter is then left to the honour of the two spouses. If the husband can solemnly swear four times to the fact, and in addition invoke a curse on himself if he less that is prime facile evidence of the wife's guilt. But if the wife swarts similarly four times and similarly invokes a curse on himself if he less the charge is held proved and the punishment follows. In either case the marriage is dissolved, as it is against human nature that the parties can live together happily after such an incident.

Their solitary evidence (Can be received) if they Bear witness four times (With an eath) by God That they are solemnly Telling the truth:

- 7. And the fifth (oath)
  (Should be) that they solemnly
  Invoke the curse of God
  On themselves if they Tell a lie.
- 8. But it would avert
  The punishment from the wife
  If she bears witness
  Four times (with an oath)
  By God, that (her husband)
  Is telling a lie:
- And the fifth (oath)
   Should be that she solemnly
   Invokes the wrath of God
   On herself if (her accuser)
   Is telling the truth.
- If it were not
   For God's grace and mercy
   On you, and that God
   Is Oft-Returning,
   Full of wisdom,—

2961, Cf. xxiv. 11-14, and n. 2962, which illustrates the matter by a concrete instance.

299.2. The particular incident here referred to occurred on the ratural from the expedition to the Banü Muytaliq, A.H. 5-6. When the march was ordered, Badhrat "Aisha was not in her tent, having gone to search for a valuable necklace she had drupped. As her litter was veiled, it was not not not used that she was not in it, until the army reached the next halt. "Meanwhile, finding the camp had gone, she hat down to rest, hoping that some one would come back to felch her when her absence was noticed. It was night, and she fell asleep. Next morning she was found by §sawan, a Muhājir, who had been left behind the camp expressly to pick up anything inadvertently left behind. He put her on his camel and brought her, leading the camel on foot. This gave occasion to enemies to raise a malicious scandal. The ringleader among them was the chief of the Median Hypocrites, 'Abdullah ibu Ubai, who is referred to in the last clause of this verse. He had other sins and enormities to his debit, and he was left to the spiritual punishment of an unexpentant sinner, for he died in that state. The minor tools were given the legal punishment of the law, and after penitence needed their lives. They made good.

Among yourselves: think it not To be an evil to you; On the contrary it is good <sup>2005</sup> For you: to every man Among them (will come The punishment) of the sin That he earned, and to him <sup>2004</sup> Who took on himself the lead Among them, will be A Penalty grievous.

- 13. Why did they not bring
  Four witnesses to prove it? ***
  When they have not brought
  The witnesses, such men,
  In the sight of God,
  (Stand forth) themselves as liars!
- 14. Were it not for the grace And mercy of God on you, In this world and the Hereafter, A grievous penalty would have Seized you in that ye rushed Glibly into this affair. Earl
- Behold, ye received it On your tongues,

2963. It is worse for a scandal to be whispered about with bated breath, than that it should be brought into the light of day and disproved.

2964. The ringleader: see n. 2962 above. .

2965. Both men and women were involved in spreading the scandal. Their obvious duty was to put the best, not the worst, construction on the acts of one of the "mothers of the Believers."

2965. If any persons took it seriously, it was their duty to search for and produce the evidence, in the absence of which they themselves became guilty of slander.

2967. Cf., xxiv., 10 above. It was God's mercy that saved them from many evil consequences, both in this life and in the Hereafter,—in this life, because the Aportle's wise measures nipped in the bud any incipient estrangement between those nearest and carest to him, and from a spiritual aspect in that the minor agents in spreading the-scandal repented and were forgiven. No doubts and divisions, no mutual distrust, were allowed to remain in their hearts after the whole matter had been cleared up.

And said out of your mouths Things of which ye had No knowledge; and ye thought It to be a light matter, While it was most serious In the sight of God. ****

- 16. And why did ye not,
  When ye heard it, say?—
  "It is not right of us
  To speak of this:
  Glory to God! this is
  A most serious slander!"
- God doth admonish you, That ye may never repeat Such (conduct), if ye Are (true) Believers.
- 18. And God makes the Signs Plain to you: for God Is full of knowledge and wisdom.
- 19. Those who love (to see) Scandal published broadcast Among the Believers, will have A grievous Penalty in this life And in the Hereafter: God Knows, and ye know not. 8770
- 20. Were it not for the grace And mercy of God on you,

2968. There are three things here reprobated by way of spiritual teaching: (1) if others speak an evil word, that is no reason why you should allow it to defile your tongue; (2) floog get a thiought or suspicion, which is not based on your certain knowledge, do not give it currency by giving it expression; and (3) others may think it is a small matter to speak lightly of something which blasts a person's character or reputation: in the eyes of God it is a most serious matter in any case, but specially when it involves the honour and reputation of plous women.

2569. The right course would have been to stop any further currency of false slanders by ignoring them and at least refusing to help in their circulation. The exclamation "Subjanaka", "Praise to Thee (O God)", or "Glory to God!" is an exclamation of surprise and disavowal as much as to say, "We do not believe it I And we shall have nothing to do with you, O false slanderers!"

2970. What mischiels can be planned by Evil to delude simple folk who mean no harm in their own minds but who by thoughtlessness are deluded step by step 10 become the instruments of Evil, may not be known to the most instructed of men, but it is all known to God. Man should therefore always be on his guard against the traps of Evil, and it is only God's grace that can save him.

And that God is Full of kindness and mercy, (Ye would be ruined indeed).<sup>871</sup>

SECTION 3.

- 21. Ye who believe! Follow not Satan's footsteps: If any will follow the footsteps Of Satan, he will (but) command What is shameful and wrong: And were it not for the grace And mercy of God on you, or Not one of you would ever Have been pure: but God Doth purify whom He pleases: and God is One Who Hears and knows (all things).
- 22. Let not those among you Who are endued with grace And amplitude of means <sup>2071</sup> Resolve by oath against helping Their kinsmen, those in want, And those who have left

(3) * يَكَايُهُمُّ الَّذِينَ الْمَنْ الْمَنْ الْمَنْ وَالْمُنْ الْمَنْ وَالْهُ الْمَنْ الْمَنْ اللَّهُ عَلَىٰ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ عَلَىٰ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ عَلَىٰ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ عَلَىٰ اللَّهُ اللْهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللْهُ اللْهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللْهُ اللَّهُ اللْهُ اللَّهُ اللْهُ اللْهُمُ اللْهُ اللْهُ اللْهُ اللْهُ اللْهُ اللَّهُ اللْهُ اللْهُ اللْهُ

2971. Note the refrain that comes four times in this passage, "Were it not for the grace and mercy of God,..." Each time it has a different application. (1) In xixv. 10.1i was in connection with the accusation of infidelity by one of the spouses against the other: they were both reminded of God's mercy and warned against suspicion and untruth. (2) In xxiv. 14, the Believers were told to be wary of false rumous leat they should cause pain and division among themselves: it is God's grace that keeps them united. (3) Here is an admonition for the future: there may be conspinances and snares laid by Evil against simple people: it is God's grace that protects them. (4) In xxiv. 21, the general warning is directed to the observance of purity in act and in thought, concerning one's self and concerning others: it is only God's grace that can keep that purity spotless, for He hears prayers and knows of all the snares that are spread in the path of the god's.

2972. See last note.

2973. Spotless purity in thought, word, and deed, includes the disposition to put the best construction on the motives of others, so that we ascribe no evil motive in the seeming indiscretions of virtuous people. Such a high standard can only come by the grace of God, Who heats all prayers and knows all the temptations to which human nature is subject. His Will and Plan make both for spiritual notection and spiritual prace, and we must bake ourselves trustingly in his handless.

29%. The immediate reference was to Badhrat AbB Bakr, the father of Badhrat 'Aisha. He was bessed both with spiritual grace from God and with ample means, which he always used in the service of Islam and of Muslims. One of the slanderers of Badhrat 'Aisha turned out to be Muslah, a cousin of Badhrat AbB Bakr, whom he had been in the habit of supporting. Naturally Badhrat AbB Bakr wished to stop that aid, but according to the highest standards of Muslim ethics he was asked to forgive and forget, which he did, with the happiest results to the peace and unity of the Muslim community. But the general application holds good for all time. A generous patron should not, in personal anger, withdraw his support even for serious faults if the delinquent repents and mends his ways. If God forgives us, who are we to refuse forgiveness to our fellows?

Their homes in God's cause: Let them forgive and overlook, Do you not wish That God should forgive you? For God is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful.

- 23. Those who slander chaste women, Indiscreet but believing, wind Are cursed in this life And in the Hereafter: For them is a grievous Penalty,—
- 24. On the Day when their tongues, Their hands, and their feet Will bear witness against them who As to their actions.
- 25. On that Day God
  Will pay them back
  (All) their just dues,
  And they will realise
  That God is
  The (very) Truth,
  That makes all things manifest.<sup>807</sup>
- Women impure are for men impure And men impure for women impure

And women of purity
Are for men of purity,
And men of purity
Are for women of purity
These are not affected

2975. Good women are sometimes indiscreet because they think of no evil. But even such innocent Badfart 'Alsham, and those who hold them dear, in difficulties. Such was the case with Badfart 'Alsham, who was in extreme pain and 'anguish for a whole month because of the slanders spread about her. Her husband and her father were also placed in a most awkward predicament, considering their position and the great work in which they were engaged. But unprincipled people, who start faise slanders, and their unthinking tools who help in spreading such slanders, are guilty of the gravest spiritual offence, and their worst punishment is the deprivation of God's grace, which is the meaning of a state of Curse.

2976. Our own limbs and faculties are the strongest witnesses against us if we misuse them for evil deeds instead of using them for the good deeds for which they were given to us.

2977. All that we thought of hitting will be clear as day before God's Judgment Seat, because He is the very essence of Truth and Reality. He is the true Light (xxiv. 35), of which all physical light is metely a type or reflection.

SECTION 4.

- 27. To ye who believe!
  Enter not houses other than
  Your own, until ye have Asked permission and saluted
  Those in them: that is Best for you, in order that Ye may heed (what is seemly)."
- 28. If ye find no one ***
  In the house, enter not Until permission is given
  To you: if ye are asked
  To go back, go back:
  That makes for greater purity

2978. The pure consort with the pure, and the impure with the impure. If the impure, out of the impury of their thoughts, or imaginations, impute any evil to the pure, the pure are not affected by it, but they should avoid all occasions for random task.

2979. Forgiveness for any indiscretion which toey may have innocently committed, and spiritual provision or protection against the assaults of Evil. It is also meant that the more the evil ones attempt to defame or slander them, the more triumphantly will they be vindicated and provided with the physical and moral good which, will advance their real life.

2960. The conventions of propriety and privacy are essential to a refined life of goodness and purity. The English saying that ah Englishman's home is his castle suggests a certain amount of exclusiveness and definer. The Muslim principle of asking respectful permission and exchanging salutations ensures privacy without exclusiveness, and friendliness without undue familiarity.

2981. That is, if no one replies: there may be people in the house not in a presentable state. Or, even if the house is empty, you have no right to eater it until you obtain the owner's permission, wherever he may be. The fact of your not receiving a reply does not entitle you to eater without permission. You should wait, or knock twice or three times, and withdraw in case no permission is accured. If you are actually asked to withdraw, as the inmates are not in a condition to receive you, you should a forlier withdraw, either for a time, or altogether, as the immates may wish you to do. Even if they are your friends, you have no right to take them by surprise or enter against their wishes. Your own purity of ile and conduct as well as of motives is thus tested.

For yourselves: and God Knows well all that ye do.

- 29. It is no fault on your part
  To enter houses not used
  For living in, which serve
  Some (other) use for you: "85
  And God has knowledge
  Of what ye reveal
  And what ye conceal.
- 30. Say to the believing men
  That they should lower.
  Their gaze and guard dul
  Their modesty: that will make
  For greater purity for them:
  And God is well acquainted
  With all that they do.
- 31. And say to the believing women. That they should lower
  Their gaze and guard Milling Their modesty; that they Should not display their Beauty and ornaments No except What (must ordinarily) appear
  Thereof: that they should

1982. The rule about dwelling-houses is strict, because privacy is precious, and essential to a refined, decent, and well-ordered life. Such a rule of course does not apply to hopses used for other useful purposes, such as an init or caravanserar, or a shop, or a warehouse. But even here, of course, implied permission from the owner is necessary as a matter of common-sense. The question in this passage is that of refined privacy, not that of rights of ownership.

1983. The rule of modesty applies to men as well as women. A brazen stare by a man at a woman (or even at a man) is a breath of refined manners. Where sex is concerned, modesty is not only "good form": it is not only to guard the weaker sex, but also to guard the sprittual good of the stronger sex.

1984. The need for modesty is the same in both men and women. But on account of the differentiation of the sexes in nature, temperaturents, and social life, a greater amount of privacy required for women than for men, especially in the matter of dress and the uncovering of the boson, 2985. Zindi menas both natural beauty and artificial ornaments. I think both are implied here, but chirfy, the former. The woman is asked not to make a display of her sigure or appear in undress except to the following classes of people: (I) her husband, (I) her near relatives who would be living in the same house, and with whom a certain amount of registe is permissible; (I) her women. is, her maid-servants, who would be consistantly in attendance on her; some Commensators include all believing women; it is not good form in a Alustim household for women to meel other women. except when they are properly desceed (14) slaves, male and temale, as they would be in constant attendance; but this item would now be blank, with the abolition of slavety; (35 old or infirm men servants, and (6) infants or small children before they get a sense of sex. Cf. also xxiii, 59.

Draw their veils over
Their bosoms and not display
Their beauty except
To their husbands, their fathers,
Their husbands' fathers, their sons,
Their brothers or their brothers' sons. Or their sisters' sons. Or their women, or the slaves Whom their right hands Possess, or male servants Free of physical needs. Or small children who Have no sense of the shame Of sex: and that they Should not strike their feet In order to draw attention To their hidden ornaments. And O ye Believers! Turn ve all together Towards God, that ye May attain Bliss. 200

32. Marry those among you Who are single, and or The virtuous ones among Your slaves, male or female: If they are in poverty, God will give them Means out of His grace: For God encompasseth all, and He knoweth all things.

2097. While all these details of the purity and good form of domestic life are being brought to our attention, we are clearly reminded that the chief object we should hold in view is our spiritual welfare. All our brief life on this earth is a probation, and we must make our individual, domestic, and social life all contribute to our holmess, so that we can get the real success and bits a which at the aim of our spiritual endeavour. Mystics understand the fules of decorum themselves to typity spiritual truths. Our soul, like a modest maiden, allows not her eyes to stray from the One True God. And her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her beauty is not for vulgar show, but for God her heavy is not for vulgar show, but for God her heavy is not for vulgar show, but for God her heavy is not for vulgar show, but for God her heavy is not for vulgar show, but for God her heavy is not for vulgar show, but for God her heavy is not for vulgar show.

2988. The subject of sex ethics and manners brings us to the subject of marriage, "Single" (ayāmā, Diural of Aiyun) here means any one not in the bond of wedlock, whethe cumarried of sawfully divorced, or widowed. If we can, we must marry in our own circle, but if we have not the means, there is no harm if we choose from a lower circle, provided our choice is determined by urtue. Poverty in the other party does not matter if there is virtue and loye. A happily married man has the best wealth in a virtuous wife, and his very happiness makes bim a better potential earner of wealth. A leave becomes free by marriage.

2989. Cf. v. 57. God's mercy is for all: it is not confined to a class or grade of people.

2990. A Muslim marriage requires some sort of a dower for the wife. If the man cannot afford that, he must wait and keep himself chaste. It is no excuse for him to say that he must satisfy his natural crayings within or outside marriage. It must be within marriage.

299]. The law of slavery in the legal sense of the term is now obsolete. While it had any meaning, Islam made the slave's lot as easy as possible. A slave, male or female, could ask for conditional manumission by a written deed fixing the amount required for manumission and allowing the slave meanwhile to earn money by lawful means and perhaps marry and bring up a family. Such a deed was not to be refused if the request was genuine and the slave had character. Not only that, but the master is directed to help with money out of his own resources in order to enable the slave to earn his or her own liberty.

2993. I have translated "in" (literally, "it") by "when", because this is not a conditional clause but an explanatory clause, explaining the meaning of, "force", "Forcing" a person necessarily means that it is against the wish or inclination of the person forced. Even if they were to give a formal consent, it is not valid because the persons concerned are in (legal, or now) economic slavery.

2994. The poor unfortunate girls, who are victims of such a nefarious trade, will yet find mercy from God, whose bounties extend to the lowest of His creatures.

2995. This prepares the way for the magnificent Verse of Light that follows, and its mystic meaning.

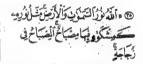

C. 159.1

C. 159.-God is the Light of the heavens and the earth. (xxiv 35 57.) High above our petty evanescent lives. He illumines our souls with means that reach-Our inmost being. Universal is . . His light, so pure and so intense That grosser beings need a veil To take His rays: His elect are e'er Absorbed in prayer and praise and deeds Of love, unlike the children of Darkness, Struggling in Depths profound of vanities False. All Nature sings to the glory Of God, and men of fraud and hypocrisy

Are but rebels in the Kingdom of God.

SECTION 5

35. God is the Light and Of the heavens and the earth. 3007 The parable of His Light Is as if there were a Niche And within it a Lamp: The Lamp enclosed in Glass: ***

2996. Embedded within certain directions concerning a refined domestic and social life, comes this glorious parable of Light, which contains layer upon layer of allegorical truth about spiritual mysteries. No notes can do adequate justice to its full meaning. Volumes have been written on, this subject, the most notable being Imam Gazali's Mishkat-ul-Anwar. In these notes I propose to explain the simplest meaning of this passage, reserving a brief account of Gazall's exposition for Appendix VIII (printed at the end of this Sora), no 920-924."

2997. The physical light is but a reflection of the true Light in the world of Reality, and that , true Light is God. We can only think of God in terms of our phenomenal experience, and in the phenomenal world, light is the purest thing we know. But physical light has drawbacks incidental to its physical nature; eg. (1) it is dependent upon some source external to itself; (2) it is a passing phenomenon; if we take it to be a form of motion or energy it is unstable, like all physical phenomena; (3) it is dependent on space and time; its speed is 186,000 miles per second, and there are stars whose light takes thousands of years before it reaches the earth. The perfect Light of God is free from any

2998 The first three points in the Parable centre round the symbols of the Niche, the Lamp, and the Glass. (1) The Niche (Mishkat) is the little shallow recess in the wall of an Eastern house, fairly high from the ground, in which a light (before the days of electricity) was usually placed. Its height enabled it to diffuse the light in the room and minimised the shadows. The background of the wall and the sides of the niche helped to throw the light well into the room, and if the wall was whitewashed, it also acted as a reflector; the opening in front made the way for the light. So with the spiritual Light; it is placed high, above worldly things; it has a niche or habitation of its own, in Revelation and other Signs of God; its access to men'is by a special Way, open to all, yet closed to those who refuse its rays. (2) The Lamp is the core of the spiritual Truth, which is the real illumination; the Niche is nothing without it; the Niche is actually made for it. (3) The Glass is the transparent medium through which the Light passes. On the one hand, it protects the light from moths and other forms of low life (lower motives in man) and from gusts of wind (passions), and on the other, it transmits the light through a medium which is made up of and akin to the grosser substances of the earth (such as sand, soda, potash, etc.), so arranged as to admit the subtle to the gross by its transparency. So the spiritual Truth has to be filtered through human language or human intelligence to make it intelligible to mankind,

2999. The glass by itself does not shine. But when the light comes into it, it shines like a brilliant star. So men of God, who preach God's Truth, are themselves illuminating by God's Light and become the illuminating media through which that Light spreads and permeates human life.

3000 The olive tree is not a very impressive, tree in its outward appearance. Its leaves have a dull greenish-brown colour, and in size it is inconspicuous. But its oil is used in sacred ceremonies and forms a wholesome ingredient of food. The fruit has a specially fine flavour. Cf. n. 2880 to xaiii, 20 For the illuminating quality of its oil, see a 3002 below.

3001. This mystic Olive is not localised. It is neither of the East not of the West. It is universal, for such is God's Light. As applied to the olive, there is also a more literal meaning, which can be allegorised in a different way. An olive tree with an eastern aspect gets only the rays of the morning sun; one with alwestern aspect, only the rays of this western sun. In the northern hemisphere the south aspect will give the sun's rays a great part of the day, while a north aspect will shut them out allogether, and vice versal in the southern hemisphere. But a tree in the open plann or on a hill will get perpetual sunshine by day: it will be more mature, and the fruit and oil will be of superior quality. So God's light is not localised or immature: it is spefect and universal.

5002. Pure olive ool is beautiful in colour, consistency, and siluminating power. The world has tried all kinds of illuminants, and for economic reasons or convenience, one replaces another. But for coolness, comfort to the eyes, and steadiness, vegetable oils are superior to electricity, nineral oils, and animal oils. And among vegetable oils, olive oil takes a high place and deserves its sacred associations. Its purity is almost like light itself: you may suppose it to be almost light before it is lit. So with spiritual Truth: it illuminates the mind and understanding imperceptibly, almost before the human mind and heart have been consciously touched by it.

300). Glorious, illimitable Light, which cannot be described or measured. And there are grades and grades of it, passing transcendently into regions of spiritual height, which man's imagination can scarcely conceive of. The topmost pinnacle is the true prototypal Light, the real Light, of which all others were reflections, the Light of God. Hence the saying of the holy Prophet about God's "Seventy thousand veils of Light".

3005. That is, in all places of pure worship; but some Commentators understand special Mosques, such as the Ka'ba in Mecca, or the Mosques in Medina or Jerusalem; for these are specially held in bosour.

In them, of His name: In them is He glorified In the mornings and

In the evenings, (again and again).

- 37. By men whom neither Traffic nor merchandise Can divert from the Remembrance 3000 Of God, nor from regular Prayer, Nor from the practice Of regular Charity: Their (only) fear is For the Day when Hearts and eves Will be transformed 3008 (In a world wholly new),-
- 38. That God may reward them According to the best 3000 Of their deeds, and add Even more for them Out of His Grace: For God doth provide For those whom He will. Without measure.
- 39. But the Unbelievers,-Their deeds are like a mirage 8010

3006. In the evenings: the Arabic word is Asel, a plural of a plural, to imply emphasis: I have rendered that shade of meaning by adding the words " again and again"

3007. "Remembrance of God" is wider than Prayer: it includes silent contemplation, and active service of God and His creatures. The regular Prayers and regular Charity are the social acts performed through the organised community.

3008 Some renderings suggest the effects of terror on the Day of Judgment. But here we are considering the case of the righteous, whose "fear" of God is akin to love and reverence and who (as the next verse shows) hope for the best reward from God. But the world they will meet will be a wholly changed world.

3009 The best of the righteous do not deserve the reward that they get: all their faults are forgiven, and only their best actions are considered in the reward that they get. Nay, more! Out of the unbounded Grace of God even more is added to them. For in giving rewards, God's bounty is boundless,

3010. We have had various metaphors to give us an idea of the beneficent Light of God in the spiritual world. Now we have contrasted metaphors to enable us to see those who deny or refuse that Light, and are overwhelmed in utter darkness. The Light (of God) is an absolute Reality, and is mentioned first, and the souls that follow that Light are a reflected reality and are mentioned after the Light. On the other hand the Darkness is not a reality in itself, but a negation of reality: the reflected existences that refuse the Light are mentioned, and then their state, which is Unreality, Two metaphors are given; a mirage, in this verse, and the depths of darkness in the sea, in the next. In sandy deserts, which The man parched with thirst Mistakes for water; until When he comes up to it, He finds it to be nothing: 1901 But he finds God 19018 [Ever] with him, and God Will pay him his account: And God is swift In taking account

40. Or (the Unbelievers' state) is like the depths of darkness In a vest deep ocean, Overwhelmed with billow Topped by billow, Topped by (dark) clouds: 3015 Depths of darkness, one 3014 Above another: if a man Stretches out his hand, He can hardly see it! For any to, whom God Giveth not light, There is no light!

<sup>3012.</sup> The rebel against God finds himself like the man deluded by a mirage. The Truth which he rejected is always with him. The mirage which he accepted leads to his destruction.

Bach has his own mode of prayer and praise. It is not necessarily with word, for language (as we know it) is peculiar to man. But actions and other modes of self-expression recognise and declare the Glory of God.

3018, From Him we are; to Him we belong; and to Him we shall return. Not only we, but all Creation, proclaims this in the whole world.

3019. Aftists, or lovers of nature, or observers of clouds will appreciate this description of cloud effects—this clouds if loating about in fantastic shapes, joining, together and taking body and substance, then emerging as heavy clouds happed up, which, condense and pour forth their ratin. Then the heavy dark clouds in the upper regions, that bring hail,—how distinct and yet how similar! They are truly like mountain masses! And when the halistones fall, how local their area! It hits mose localities and leaves free others almost interfaced! And the lightning—how blinding fisshes come from thunderous clouds! In this Book of Nature can we not see the hand of the powerful and beneficing Code.

3020. His power, wisdom, and goodness are shown no less in the regular phenomena of nature like the succession of Day and Night, than in the seasonal or seemingly irregular movements of clouds and rain and hail and lightning. Those who have the spiritual vision can read this Book of God with delight and instruction.

3021. Cf. xxi. 30, n. 2691. Protoplasm is the basis of all living matter, and "the vital power of problasm seems to depend on the constant presence of water" (Lowson's Text-book of Botany, Indian Edition, London 1922, p. 23). Text books on Zoology are also clear on the point. For example, see T. J. Parker and W. A. Haswell, Text-book of Zoology, London 1910, vol. I, p. 15: "Living protoplasm always contains a large amount of water."

3022. The creeping things include worms and lowly forms of animal life as well as reptiles (like anakes), ceatipédes, spiders, and insects. Where these have legs they are small, and the description of creeping or crawling is more applicable to them than that of walking. Fishes and sea animals generally cannot be said to walk: their swimming is like "creeping on their bellies". Two-legged animals include birds and man. Most of the mammals walk on four legs. This includes the whole of the animal world.

3025. The Hypocrites only wanted to go to the judge who they thought was likely to give budgment in their favour. If their case was incontestable, and justice was on their side, they readily came to the Apostle, knowing litat he was just and would judge in their favour, even against his own adherents. But if they had done wrong, an impartial judge was not to their taste. They would rather go to some one who wor of by the balance in their favour! This form of-selfismess and inquity was not confined to the Hypocrites of Medina. It is common in all ages, and should be suppressed.

3026. The real fact is that their conscience smites them. They know their own iniquity, and do not wish to go before a just judge who would be open to no influence and would be sure to give a righteous decree.

If this verse was revealed about the time of the Battle of the Ditch (Καπασαγ), also called the Battle of the Confederates (Αβπάθ), A H. 4.5, we can imagine the comfort it gave to the Muslims who were besieged in Medina by a force ten times their number. The Hussims then lived in a state of great suspense and danger, and under arms for days on end. (See xxxiii.9-20). The security and authority they were promised came to them subsequently in abundant measure.

The inwardness of things both great and small.

SECTION 8.

3033. We now come to rules of decorum within the family circle in refined society. Servants and children have rather more freedom of access, as they come and go at all hours, and there is less ceremony with them. But even in their case there are limitations. During the night, before morning prayer, i.e., before dawn, they must discreetly ask for permission before they enter, partly because the people are then underessed. The same applies to the time for the midday siesta, and again to the time after night prayers, when people usually undress and turn in to steep. For grown-ups the rule is stricter; they must ask permission to come in at all times faxis. Only

3034. This would mean slaves in a regime of slavery. But the principle applies to all personal servants, who have to render personal service to their masters or mistresses by day and by night,

Who have not come of age 2000 Ask your permission (before They come to your presence). On three occasions : before Morning prayer: the while Ye doff your clothes For the noonday heat: And after the late-night prayer: These are your three times Of undress: outside those times It is not wrong for you Or for them to move about Attending to each other: Thus does God make clear The Signs to you : for God Is full of knowledge and wisdom.

. 59. But when the children among

Come of age, let them (also)

Senior to them (in age): **
Thus does God make clear
His Signs to you : for God

60. Such elderly women **as are Past the prospect of marriage,—
There is no blame on them
If they lay aside

3035 I have translated," come of age" euphemistically for " attain the age of puberty ".

3036. It is a mark of refinement for ladies and gentlemen not to be slipshod or vulgarly familiar, in dress, manners, or speech; and Islam aims at making every flushim man or woman, however humble in station, a refined gentleman or lady, so that he or she can climb the ladder of spiritual development with humble confidence in God, and with the co-operation of his brothers and sisters in Islam. The principles here laid down apply, if they are interpreted with due elasticity, even if social and domestic habits change, with changes in climate or in racial and personal habits. Punctillous self-respect and respect for others, in small things as well as great, are the key-notes in these simple rules of etiquette.

3037. Children among you: i.e., in your house, not necessarily your own children. All in the house, including the stranger within your gate, must conform to these wholesome rules.

3038. Those senior to them: literally, those before them, i.e., those who have already become grown-up before these children attain their age. It is suggrated that each generation as it grows up should follow the wholesome traditions of its predecessors. While they were children, they behaved like children: when they grow up, they must bahave like grown-ups.

3039. The refrain connects up this verse, with the last verse, whose meaning is completed here. The slight variation ("His Signs" here, against "the Signs" there) shows that this verse is more personal, as referring to children who have now become responsible men and women.

3040. For elderly women in the home the rules of dress and decorum are not so exacting as for younger women, but they are also enjoined to study modesty, both because it is good in itself, and as an example to the younger people.

Their (outer) garments, provided They make not a wanton display Of their beauty: but It is best for them To be modest: and God Is One Who sees and knows 2001 All things.

3012. There were various Arab supersitions and fancies which are combated and rejected here. (1) The blind, or the halt, or those afflicted with serious disease were supposed to be objects of divine displeasure, and as such not fit to be associated with us in meals in our houses: we are not to entertain such a thought, as we are no judges of the causes of people's misfortunes, which deserve our sympathy and kindness. (2) It was considered unbecoming to take meals in the houses of near relatives: this taboo is not approved. (3) A similar supersition about houses in our possession but not in our actual accupation is disapproved. (4) If people think they should not fall under obligation to casual friends, that does not apply to a sincere friend, in whose company a meal is not to be rejected, but welcomed, (5) If people make a supersition either that they should always eat separately, as in a Chawka in India, or that they must always eat in company, as some people weary of their own company think, teller of them is wrong. Man is free and should regulate his life according to needs and circumstances.

3043. The shades of meaning in Salām are explained in n. 2512 to xix. 62. Here, we were first told that we might accept hospitality and good fellowship in each other's houses. Now we are told what spirit should animate us in doing so. It should not be a spirit doily of self-satisfaction in a worldly sense. It should rather be a spirit of good-will in the highest spiritual sense of the term—purity of motives and purity of life, as in the sight of God. Cf. Dante in the Paradise (iii. 85): "In His will is our Peace."

Thus does God make clear The Signs to you: that ve May understand.™

SECTION 9.

- nly those are Believers. Who believe in God and His Apostle: when they are With him on a matter Requiring cellective action. 3015 They do not depart until They have asked for his leave : Those who ask for thy leave Are those who believe in God And His Apostle; so when They ask for thy leave. For some business of theirs Give leave to those of them Whom thou wilt, 3046 and ask God for their forgiveness: sout For God is Oft-Forgiving. Most Merciful:
- 63 Deem not the summons Of the Apostle among yourselves. Like the summons of one 3018 Of you to another: God Doth know those of you Who slip away under shelter Of some excuse: then Let those beware who 3044. See notes 3039 and 3041 above: The refrain comes again, in a different form, closing the argument from a different point of view.

3045. Matter requiring collective action : anything that affects the Community as a whole : Jurnu'a and 'Id prayers are periodical occasions of this kind, but what is meant here is, I think, joint consultations with a view to joint undertakings, such as a Jihād, or some kind of organisation in peace.

3046. That is, those to whom, in the exercise of your impartial discretion, you think it expedient to give leave "Will", unless the context shows otherwise, means " right will", not a will without any definite principle behind it.

3047. In important matters of general consultation, even though leave of absence is given on sufficient excuse, it implies some defect in duty on the part of the person to whom the leave is given, and therefore the need of forgiveness from Him to Whom we owe duty in a perfect measure.

Withstand the Apostle's order, Lest some trial befall them, or a grievous Penalty Be inflicted on them.

64. Be quite sure that
To God doth belong
Whatever is in the heavens
And on earth. Well doth He Know what ye are intent upon:
And one day they will be Brought back to Him, and He
Will tell them the truth
Of what they did:
For God doth know
All things.

APPENDIX VIII

Mystic Interpretation of the Verse of Light (xxiv. 35).

Among the beauties of the Quran, not the least is that which sends its mystic interpreters into ecstasies of spiritual delight. While its plain meaning contains noble precepts of ordinary conduct, its mystic passages reveal spiritual mysteries which can only be expressed by the phrase "Light upon Light!" (xxiv 35). It is an endless chain of illumination in which ordinary knowledge dissolves as if it were ignorance.

The highest place among the mystic interpreters should be assigned to Imám Gazalli, whose diishkāt-nl Anvār deals with the verse of Light (xxiv. 35), the contrasted verse of Darkness (xxiv. 40), and the saying of the holy Prophet quoted by him from the Ḥadīth: "God has Seventy Thousand Veils of Light and Darkness: were He to withdraw their curtain, then would the splerdours of His Aspect (or Countenance, or Face, Wajh) surely consume everyone who apprehended Him with his sight." In the Mishkāt Sharīf (Bāb-ul-Masājid, end of section 2) Jibrīl says: "Kāna bainī wa bainahū sab'āna alfa hijābin min nūrin: Between me and Him are seventy thousand veils of Light."

English readers will thank me for drawing their attention to a meritorious English translation of Gazall's interpretation of these sublime passages. It is in the Asiatic Society Monographs series, vol. xix: "Al-Ghazall's Mishkāt-ul-Anwār, a Translation with Introduction, by W.H.T. Gairdner, published by the Royal Asiatic Society, London, 1924". They are asked to study this carefully, and better still (if they can), to study the original, and see for themselves how much spicitual wisdom is enshrined in just two verses of the holy Qurān, when interpreted by a learned Imam. And there are over 6,000 verses in the Qurān. In my Summary of Gazāli's argument I have used Gairdner's Translation throughout this Appendix.

Gazalii died in A.H. 505 (=1111 A.D.). He lived in an age when Greek philosophy and other philosophies had been studied by Muslims, many new arts and sciences had been added by them to the world's stock of knowledge, but the quest of the Timeless and the Universal was still urging thirsty enquirers on It was his mission to expose the hollow pretensions of some superficial thinkers who pursued mirages. He turned Muslim thought in the direction of the subtler Realities of spiritual life. Within a century and a half of his death the Muslim world was engulfed in a mighty cataclysm which well-nigh wiped out its channels of culture and civilisation.

Now for Gazālî's argument.

If we take physical light as ordinarily understood, it is a phenomenon or appearance, and is therefore liable to pass away. For its illuminative power it has to depend upon the perceiving faculty or the perceiving instrument, the Eye. But the Eye has many defects. It is only the perceiving faculty or intelligence which is properly entitled to the name of Light considered as a source of enlightenment,

The verses of the Qur-an, in relation to Intelligence, have the value of sunlight in relation to eyesight The Qur-an is therefore spoken of as the Light: "For We have sent unit you a light Uhat is manifest": 1v, 174.

Thus the physical eye sees by the sun; the spiritual eye sees by Revelation (the Qur an). There is a world invisible, with a Light of its own, quite different from the world visible, with its own physical light. The former, the spiritual world, is far above the physical world in to in space, for there is no question of space, but in grade. Yet the World of Sense is a type of the World of the Realm Celestial. All the Prophets are Lamps, and so are the Learned: but the difference between them is incalculable. If the Prophet of God is a Lamp Illuminant, that from which the Lamp is itself lit may fitly be symbolised by Fire. It is the Spirits Celestial, the angels, considered as the kindling-source of the Lamps Terrestrial, that can be compared alone with Fire: xxviii. 29-30. These Lamps Celestial have their own grades and orders, and the highest is the one nearest to the Ultimate Light.

That Ultimate Light is the final Fountain head, Who is Light in and by Himself, not a light kindled from other lights. The term 'light' is applied to any other than this primary Light is purely metaphorical. But these metaphorical lights have various gradations. So are there gradations in their opposites. There is no darkness so intense as the darkness of Not-being. A dark thing is called "dark" simply because it cannot appear to anyone's vision; it never comes to exist for sight, though it may exist in itself. But that which has no existence for others nor for itself is assuredly the very extreme of darkness. In contrast with it is Being, which is therefore Light. Thus God Most High is the only Reality, as He is the only Light,

In the physical world Light is itself visible and makes other things visible. It lies behind all colour, and is apprehended with colour. Through its intense union with the colours, it may appear (under refraction) as colours and not as light at all. Its very intensity may cause its invisibility. So God is with all things, but some visions perceive. Him not on account of His very brightness. (The absorption of some colours through the media through which they pass may result in the appearance of other colours. Some may consider it as a merit of the media. But it detracts from the appearance of the perfect colourless Light, which is the type for the perfection of God's Light,!

From the material world, the world of Sense, we rise through the world of Intelligence to the spiritual world, or the world of the Realm Supernal (or Celestial). This world of the Realm Supernal contains Light-substances, high and lofty, called "Angels", from which substances the various lights are effused upon the various mortal spirits.

The human soul has five faculties or spirits: (1) the sensory spirit which takes in the information brought by the senses; (2) the imaginative spirit, which records the information conveyed by the senses and presents it to the intelligential spirit above it, when required; (3) the intelligential spirit, which apprehends ideas beyond the spheres of sense and imagination; these ideas are of universal application, and are symbolised by the particular things that are known by the senses; (4) the discursive for ratiocinative) spirit, which takes the data of pure reason, combines them, and deduces from them abstract knowledge; (5) the transcendental prophetic spirit, which is possessed by prophets and some saints; by it the unseen tables and statutes of the Law are revealed from the other world, together with several of the sciences of the Reslms Celestial and Terrestrial, and pre-eminently Theology, the science of Deity, which the intelligential and discursive spirits cannot compass. All of these are Lights, for it is through them that every kind of existing thing is manifested, including objects of sense or imagination.

These five faculties or spirits are symbolised by the Niche, Glass, Lamo, Tree, and Oil in the verse of Light. The Niche is the sensory spirit, whose lights come through the eyes, ears, nostrils, etc. The Glass is the Imagination; for it is made out of opaque substances [like sand, soda, potash, etc.], but is clarified and refined till it becomes transparent to the light of a lamp, and it also keeps the lamp from being put out by a draught or violent jerking. So Imagination, though its origin is from the ideas of grosser substances, becomes clarified and transparent to ideas of intelligence and to the light from them, as well as serves to hold knowledge together and prevents it from being disturbed, unsettled, and dissipated. The lamp is the intelligential spirit, which gives cognisance of divine ideas. The Tree is the ratiocinative spirit, which begins with a proposition, then branches into two, which become four, and so on. It leads to conclusions which in their turn become germs producing like conclusions. these latter being also susceptible of continuation, each with each. The Tree in the symbol is the Olive, which gives oil producing the most radiant illumination. So the ratiocinative spirit multiplies, establishes, and fixes all knowledge. Illumination can be infinitely multiplied; therefore a tree like the olive, whose oil can multiply light infinitely is entitled to be called "blessed" above other trees like fruit trees, whose fruit is consumed in use. Again, the ramifications of pure intelligential propositions do not admit of relation to direction or distance, and therefore the symbolical Tree may well be said to be " neither of the East nor of the West ".

Finally, the Oil is the type of the transcendental prophetic spirit, which is absolutely luminous and clear. The thought-spirit is divided into that which needs to be instructed, advised, and supplied from without, if the acquisition of knowledge is to be continuous; while a portion of it is absolutely clear, as though it were self-luminous, and had no external source of supply. There are Saints whose light shines so bright that it is well-nigh independent of what the Angels supply. For the human soul there is a graded succession of Lights, and this explains the phrase "Light upon Light."

Now we come to the Darkness-verse (xxiv. 40). The man who has turned away from the path of guidance (light, truth),—he is false, he is darkness; nay, he is darker than darkness. For darkness is neutral for negative]; it leads one neither one way nor the other. But the minds of misbelievers, and the whole of their perceptions, are perverse, and support each other mutually in the actual deluding of their owners. That "vast deep ocean" is this world of mortal dangers, of evil chances, of blinding trouble. Wave upon wave of selfish passion darkens the man's soul. And the dark clouds above are rank beliefs and corrupt imaginings, which become so many veils veiling the misbeliever from the true faith, from knowledge of the Real, and from illumination by the sunligt of the Qur an and human intelligence. As all our Lights have their source in the great Primary Light, the One Reality, there can be no light unless God gives the Light.

What is the meaning of the Prophet's saying that "God has Seventy Thousand Veils of Light and Darkness"? (Inna iilläh) la-sab'ina alfa hijäbin min niirin wa sulmatin). The number, 70,000, varies in different versions, and is not by way of definite enumeration, but rather to denote some indefinitely great quantity. There are three classes of men who are veiled from the ineffably glorious Light of God: (1) those veiled by Pure Darkness; (2) those veiled by mixed Light and Darkness; and (3) those veiled by Pure Light. In each class there are numerous sub-divisions. [When we take account of all these, we may well speak of 70,000 Veils.]

Those veiled by Pure Darkness are such as are atheists, or such as take something else, which is not God, for God. For example, they take Nature or Self for God. But there are numerous varieties of such men. One particularly mentioned by Gazill is the sort of men that confess with their tongues the Creed of Islam, but are probably urged to it by fear alone, or the desire to beg from Muslims, or to curry favour with them, or to get financial for other] assistance out of them, or, by a merely fanatical zeal, to support the opinions of their fathers. If the Creed fails to impel them to good works, it will not secure their elevation from the dark sphere to light. Rather are their patron-saints devils, who lead them from the light into the darkness. But he whom the Creed so touches that evil disgusts him and good gives him pleasure, has passed from pure darkness seen though he be a great sinner still.

Those veiled by mixed Light and Darkness may be: (1) those veiled by the darkness of the Senses; they are above those who worship Self, but they give God'a attributes of Majesty and Beauty to sense-perceived bodies, or to Nature or the forces of nature; (2) those veiled by some light, mixed with the darkness of the Imagination; they have got above the senses, but they allow their Imagination to govern their ideas of God, Who is above anything that the imagination of man can conceive; and (3) those veiled by some Light divine, mixed with the darkness of Intelligence; they fall into anthropomorphism in their ideas of God [and fail to perceive that the Soul is above the Intellect).

Those veiled by Pure Light are those who have perceived spiritual truths up to a certain point, but whose eyes have been so dazzled by the Light itself that there is a Veil between them and the Light. But these are only the Few of the Few whom "the splendours of the Countenance sublime consume", and the majesty of the Divine Glory obliterates; so that they are themselves blotted out, annihilated. [That is the true meaning of the Buddha's Nirvāna.] For self-contemplation there is no more a place, because with the self they have no longer anything to do. Nothing then remain save the One, the Real: that becomes the experience of the soul. That is the true meaning of attainment or Salvation. And Gazali concludes with the words: "Hard, hard it is to essay the discovery of the Lights Supernal that are beyond the Veil." How true, and how appropriate for all who seek to interpret the Light! May God grant that their own feebie lights may not act as a veil between them and the Light Divine!

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXV (Furgan).

This Sura further develops the contrast between Light and Darkness, as symbolical of knowledge and ignorance, righteousness and sin, spritt al progress and degradation. It closes with a definition of the deeds by which the righteous are known in the environment of this world.

It is mainly an early Meccan Sura, but its date has no significance.

Summary.— God's highest gift to man is that He has furnished a Criterion for judgment between right and wrong,—in His revelation, which teaches us the true significance of our eternal Future (xxv. 1-20, and C. 161).

Those who do not use that Criterion will be full of woe when the Judgment comes, for God gave full warning at all times (xxv. 21-44, and C. 162).

In the contrasts of shade and sun, night and day, death and life, and the whole ordering of God's Creation, men may learn of God Most Gracious; and the virtues of the righteous respond to God's care for them (xxx, 48-57, and C. 163).

C. 161.—Among the highest and greatest of the gifts of God (xxv. 1-20.) Is His Revelation, which is the Criterion

By which we may judge between right

And wrong—between false and true worship,

Between the Message that comes from God

And the forgeries of men, between the Real

In our eternal Future and the Fancies

By which we are misled. The apostles of God

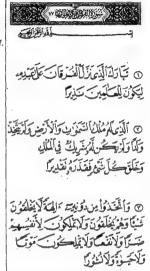

Come as men to live among men and guide them.

Stra XXV.

Furgan, or The Criterion.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. Blessed Man is He Who Sent down the Criterion Man To His Servant, that it May be an admonition To all creatures:—
- 2. He to Whom belongs
  The dominion of the heavens
  And the earth: no son
  Has He begotten, nor has He
  A partner in His dominion:
  It is He Who created
  All things, and ordered them
  In due proportions. ***
- 3. Yet have they taken, see Besides Him, gods that can Create nothing but are themselves Created; that have no control Of hurt or good to themselves; Nor can they control Death: Nor Life nor Resurrection.

3051. Tubäruka: the root meaning is "increase" or "abundance". Here that uspect of God's dealing with His creatures is emphasised, which shows His abundant goodness to all His creatures, in that He sent the Revelation of His Will, not only in the unitimited Hook of Nature, but in definite Book in human language, which gives clear directions and admonitions to all. The English word "blessed "hardly conveys that meaning, but I can find no other without departing far from established usage. To emphasise the meaning I have explained, I have translated "Blessed is...", but "Blessed be..." is also admissible, as it brings out another shade of meaning, that we praise and bless His holy name.

3033. That by which we can judge clearly between right and wrong. Here the reference is to the Quran, which has alleady been symbolised by Light. This symbol is continued here, and many contrasts are shown, in the midst of which we can distinguish between the true and the false by God's Light, especially the contrast between righteousness and sin.

3054. The pronoun in yakkua may refer either to Furgān (the Criteriou) or to 'Abd (the holy Prophet). In either case the ultimate meaning is the same. The Qur-ān is the standing Criterion for judgment between right and wrong.

3055. The majesty of God and His independence of all wants or help are mentioned, to show how exceeding great is His goodness in revealing His Will to us, 3056. This is the first great distinction taught by the Criterion; to know the nature of the true God, as against the false fancies of men.

4. But the Misbelievers say:
"Naught is this but a lie ***
Which he has forged,
And others have helped him
At it." In truth it is they
Who have put forward
An iniquity and a falsehood.

6. Say: "The (Qur-an) was sent down By Him Who knows The Mystery (that is) in the heavens were And the carth: verily He Is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful."

7. And they say: "What sort Of an apostle is this,
Who eats food, and walks
Through the streets? Why
Has not an angel
Been sent down to him

To give admonition with him? 300

© وَقَالُواْمَالِهُلْنَا الرَّسُولِيَّأْكُلُ الطِّسَامَوَمَّشِي فِي الأَسْوَافِي أَوْلَا الْزِلَالْيَهِ مَلِكُ فَيَصُورَنَهُ مَعْمُونَنْهِا

3057. Ifk, which I have translated a "lie" may be distinguished from zara tithe end of this verse, translated "falsehood". The "lie" which the enemies attributed to the holys man of God was supposed to be something which did not exist in eality, but was invented by the Prophet with the aid of other people: the implication was that (I) the Revelation was not a revelation but a forgety, and that (3 the things revealed e g, the event of the Heraffere, the Resurrection, the Judgment, the Birss of the Righteous and the sufferings of the, Evil, were functiful and had no basis in fact. Debission is also suggested. The reply is that, so fat from that being the case, the facts were true and the charges were false (24)—the falsehood being due to the habits of iniquity for which the Misbelievers' whole mental and spiritual artitude was responsible.

3038. In their misguided arrogance they say: "We have heard such things before; they are pretty talls which have come down from ancient times; they are good for amusement, but who takes them seriously?" When the beauty and power of the Revelation are pointed out, and its miracle as coming from an unlearned man, they again hint at other men who wrote them, though they could not produce any one who could write anything like it,

3059. The answer is that the Qur-an teaches spiritual knowledge of what is ordinarily hidden from men's sight, and such knowledge can only come from God, to Whom alone is known the Mystery of the whole Creation. In spite of man's sin and shortcomings, He forgives, and He, sends His most precious gift, i.e., the Revelation of His Will.

3060 This is another objection: 'He is only a man like us: why is not an angel sent down, if not by himself, at least with him?' The answer is: angels would be of no use to men as Messengers, as they and men would not understand each other, and if angels came, it might cause more confusion and wonder than understanding in men's minds. Cf xxi. 7-8; xxvii, 94-95. The office of an angel is different. A teacher for mankind is one who shares their nature, mingles in their life, is acquainted with their doings, and sympathises with their joys and sorrows.

"Or (why) has not a treasure Been bestowed on him, or Why has he (not) a garden For enjoyment?" <sup>3001</sup> The wicked Say: "Ye follow none other Than a man bewitched," <sup>3004</sup>

See what kinds of comparisons

3061. Literally, 'that he may eat out of it'. As shown in n. 776 to v. 69, okafa (to eat) has a comprehensive meaning, implying enjoyment of all kinds,—physical, social, mental and moral, and spiritual. Here, the garden itself stands for a type of the amenities of life: its fruits would be available for eating, its coolness for rest and refreshment, its waters and its landscape for asshetic delight.

3062. Cl. xvii 47. This speech, of the wicked or the ungodly, is meant to be even more bitter than that of the Misbelievers. It makes out the Teacher to be a demented fool!

3063. The charges the enemies made against the Apostle of God recoiled on those who made them. The Apostle was vindicated, and went from strength to strength, for God's Truth will always prevail. The men who perversely leave the way of truth, righteousness, and sincerity, have not only missed the Way, but on account of their perversity they will never be able to find any way by which they can get back to Truth.

3064. Cf. above, xxv. 1. The reminiscent phrase shows that the first argument, about the Revietation and Prophethood, is completed, and we now pass on to the contrast, the fate of the rejecters of both,

3063. This phrase is usually symbolical of the Bliss in the Hereafter. If it were God's Plan, He could give his Messengers complete felicity and power in this life also. Instead of being persecuted, mocked, driven out of their homes, and having to exert their utmost powers of body, mind, and character to plant the flag of Truth in an unbelieving world, they could have lived in ease and security. But that would not have given the real lessons they came to teach struggling humanity by their example.

3066. Denying the Hour of Judgment means denying the power of Justice and Truth to triumph; it means asserting the dominion of Evil. But the Reality itself will punish them, as shown in the following verses.

12. When it sees them
From a place far off,
They will hear its fury
And its raging sigh, 2007

- 14. "This day plead not For a single destruction: Plead for destruction oft-repeated!
- 16. "For them there will be Therein all that they wish for: They will dwell (there) for aye: A promise to be prayed for From thy Lord." ""
- The Day He will gather Them together as well as Those whom they worship Besides God, He will ask; 2078

3067. For aaftr, a deep emission of breath or a sigh, see n. 1607 to xl. 106. Here the Fire is personlied. It is raiging with hunger and fury, and as soon as it sees them from ever so far, it emits a sigh of desire. Till then they had not realised their full danger. Now, just as their heart begins to tremble with terror, they are bound together—like with like,—and cast into the roaring farmes!

3008, Anything—total annihilation—would be better than the anguish they will suffer. But no annihilation will be granted to them. One destruction will not be enough to wipe but the intensity of their anguish. They will have to ask for many destructions, but they will not get them!

$069. Shifting the scene back to this life, they may fairly be asked: "Here is the result of the two courses of conduct: which do you prefer?"

3070. To the righteous, the final Bliss will in one same be a reward. But the word "reward" does not truly represent facts, for two reasons; (1) the Bliss will be greater than they deserved; and (2) righteousness is its own reward. The best way of expressing the result would be to say that their highest Wish will now have been attained; the goal will have been reached; they will be in God's Presence. That is salvation in the highest.

3071. That is the sort of thing—the Goal of God's Presence—to be prayed for from God, and not ephemeral things, even though they may be good. And that is the sort of thing that God has promised and undertaken to give.

3072. The question is as in a Court of Justice, to convince those who stand areaigned.

"Was it ye who led These My servants astray, Or did they stray From the Path themselves?"

But Thou didst bestow,
On them and their fathers,
Good things (in life), until
They forgot the Message:
For they were a people (Worthless and) lost."

- 19. (God will say): "Now
  Have they proved you liars
  In what ye say: so
  Ye cannot avert (your penalty) **
  Nor (get) help." And whoever
  Among you does wrong,
  Him shall We cause to taste
  Of a grievous Penalty.
- 20. And the apostles whom We Sent before thee were all
  (Men) who ate food
  And walked through the streets: ***
  We have made some of you
  As a trial for others: ***
  Will ye have patience?
- 18 For God is One Who
- 30 Sees (all things).

3073. The creatures of God who were worshipped will prove that they never asked for worship: on the contrary they themselves worshipped do and sought the protection of God and one but God. Cf. xiv., 5-6. They will go further and show that the false worshippers added ingratitude to their other simis; for God bestowed abundance on them, and they blasphemed against God. They were indeed "worthless and lost", for the word by bears both significations.

3074. The argument is as in a court of justice. If the false worshippers plead that they were misled by those whom they falsely worshipped, the latter will be confronted with them and will prove that plea to be false. No help can be got from, them, and the penalty cannot then be averted. After all these things are thus explained in detail beforehand, all lingodly men should repeat and turn to God. False worship is here indentified with sin, for sin is disobedience to God, and arases from a wrong appreciation of God's nature and His goodness to His creatures. The sinful man refuses, in his conduct, to serve God: he serves other things than God.

3075, Cf. above, xxv. 7.

3076. In God's universal Plan, each unit or thing serves a purpose. If some are rich, the poor should not envy them: it may be that the rich man's proximity is itself a trial of their virtue. If some are poor, the righteous rich should not despise or neglect them: it may be that their coming within their sight is a trial for the real feeling of charity or brotherly love in the rich. If A is bad-tempered or persecutes or ill-uses B, it may be an opportunity for B to show his patience of humility or his faith in the ultimate prevalence of justice and truth. Whatever our experiences with other human beings may be, we must make them subserve the ends of our spiritual improvement and perhaps theirs also.

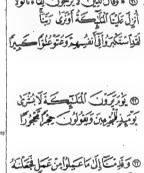

C. 162.-Woe to the misbelievers who arrogantly

C. 162.

(xxv. 21-44.) Demand to see God, yet reject His Signs ! The Judgment will come, And then they will see, too late, how evil Casts nothing but treacherous snares for man. Slowly comes God's Revelation, in ways Most conducive to man's enlightenment. Men in their folly reject the most obvious Signs of God. Let them mock! Soon Will they know! Alas! men ruled by self-impulse Are worse than brute beasts to guide or control!

SECTION 3.

- 21. Such as fear not The meeting with Us with (For Judgment) say: "Why are not the angels Sent down to us, or (Why) do we not see both Our Lord?" Indeed they Have an arrogant conceit Of themselves, and mighty is the insolence of their impiety!
- 22. The Day they see the angels,-·No joy will there be To the sinners that Day: The (angels) will say: "There is a barrier Forbidden (to you) altogether ! " 3079
- 23; And We shall turn To whatever deeds they did (In this life), and We shall Make such deeds as floating dust Scattered about. 3040

3077. The blasphemers who have given up all Faith and laugh at the Hereafter : nothing is sacred to them; their arrogance and insolence are beyond all bounds, 3078. Cf ii. 53 The Israelites in the time of Moses demanded to see God. But they were dazed with thunder and lightning even as they looked on. Indeed death would have been their fate, had it not been for the mercy of God.

3079. They will not be allowed to enjoy any of the felicity or peace which will be the normal state of the new world of Reality. Their own past will stand as a barrier to shut them off, 3080. The false hopes they built on in this life, and the deeds they did under the shadow of such false hopes will be dissipated as if they were dust flying about in the wind. They will have no value whatever.

- 24: The Companions of the Garden Will be well, that Day, In their abode, and have The fairest of places for repose. 3081
- 25. The Day the heaven shall be Rent asunder with clouds, 3091 And angels shall be sent down, Descending (in ranks).—
- 26. That Day, the dominion As of right and truth, Shall be (wholly) for (God) 3085 Most Merciful: it will be A Day of dire difficulty For the Misbelievers.
- 27. Me Day that the wrong-doer Will bite at his hands,
  He will say, "Oh! would that
  I had taken a (straight) path
  With the Apostle!
- 28. "Ah! woe is me! Would that I had never Taken such a one For a friend!
- 29. "He did lead me astray
  From the Message (of God)
  After it had come to me!
  Ah! the Evil One is
  But a traitor to man!" 2005

<sup>3081.</sup> The barrier which will shut out the evil ones will not exist for the righteous, who will have an abode of bliss and repose, for they will be in the Garden of God's Good Pleasure.

<sup>3082.</sup> It will be a new world, and the symbolism to describe it must necessarily draw upon our present experience of the finest things in nature. The sky, which now appears remote and unpeopled will be rent asunder. There will appear clouds of glory—angels and spiritual Lights of all grades and ranks (see Appendix VIII. p. 21).—and the true majesty and goodness of God will be visible as it should be in reality, and as it is not now, on account of "our muddy vesture of decay".

Then the Apostle will say:
30 "O my Lord! Truly
My people took this Qur-an
For just foolish nonsense." 3094

- 31. Thus have We made
  For every prophet an enemy
  Among the sinners: but enough
  Is thy Lord to guide
  And to help. **or*
- 32. Mehose who reject Faith Say: "Why is not the Qur-an Revealed to him all at once? Thus (is it revealed), that We May strengthen thy heart "". Thereby, and We have Rehearsed it to thee in slow, Well-arranged stages, gradually.
- 33. And no question do they Bring to thee but We Reveal to thee the truth
  And the best explanation
  (thereof).2011

3086. "My people" are of course the unbelieving Quraish. But they were only a handful of people where vested interests were touched by the beneficent reforms initiated by Islam. They sono passed away, and all Arabic-speaking or Arabic-understanding people have considered the Qurain as a treasury of Triths expressed in the most heautiful possible language, with a menning that grows depend with research.

3087. It is the nature of sin to be hostile to truth and righteouvness, but such hostility will not have the righteous and need cause no muguring, because God will guide and help those who work in His cause. And what could be better or more effective than His gridance and help.

JORS. Three reasons are given for the gradual revelation of the Qur-ân, (1) "To strengthen thy hear!": the tremendous task of winning the Arab nation, and, through them, the whole world, to Islam, required superhuman patience, constancy, and firmes and three qualities were strengthened by the gradual promulgation of solutions to each difficulty as it arose. (2) "Slaw, scell-arranged stages": though the stages were gradual, as the occasion demanded from time to time, in the course of twenty-three years, the whole emerged, when completed, as a well-arranged scheme of spiritual instruction, as we have seen in following the arrangement of the Sūras. (3) Questions put and answers gives: See next note.

3089. Divine knowledge is a fathomless ocean. But glimpses of it can be obtained by any individuals sincerely searching for the Truth. Their progress will be in grades. If they ask questions, and answers are then furnished to them, they are more likely to apprehend the Truth, as they have already explored the part of the territory in which they are interested. In the same way, when concrete questions arise by the logic of events, and they are answerd not only for the ocrasion but from a general stand-point, the teaching has a far greater chance of penetrating the human intelligence and taking shape in practical conduct. And this is the usual way of instruction in the Ouran.

34. Mahose who will be gathered To Hell (prone) on their faces,—<sup>300</sup> They will be in an evil Plight, and, as to Path, Most astray.<sup>301</sup>

3090. That is, in ignominy,

309). This verse may be compared and contrasted with xxv. 24 above. Here the argument is rounded off about the distinction between the Good and Evil in their final Destiny. The Good are to have "the fairest of places for repose," and in contrast, the Evil are, "as to Path, most astray." They have no repose, and their wanderings lead nowhere.

3002. Cf. xx. 29, and the whole passage there, which is merely referred to here, to show how provided the street of the street of the street of the control of the street of the street of the control of the street
3003. The stories of Noah, of the prophets of 'Ad and Thamüd (and of other prophets), in the reactions of their communities to their teaching are told in xxvi. 105-159, below. Here they are just mentioned to illustrate how little respect past ages had for their prophets and teachers of Truth, But God's Truth did not suffer; it was the blind rejecters of spiritual Truth who were wiped out.

3094. Commentators are not clear as to who the "Companions of the Rass" were. The ront meaning of "rass" is an old well or shallow water-pit. Another root connects it with the burial of the dead. But it is probably the name of a town or place. The "Companions of the Rass" may well have been the people of Shu'aib, as they are here mentioned with the 'Ad, the Thambd. and Lot's people, and the people of Shu'aib are mentioned in a similar connection in raw. 176-190 and in xi. 84-95. Shu'aib was the prophet of the Madyan people in the north-west of Arabia, where many old wells are found. There is however an oasis town al-Rass in the district of Qastm in Middle Najd, about thirty-five miles south-west of the town of 'Unaiza, reputed to be the central point of the Arabian Peninsula, and situated midway between Mecca and Basra. See Doughty's Arabia Dessrta, thin-paper one-volume edition, London 1926, 11, 435, and Map, 1.at. 26*N, and Long. 43*E.

It is wain to hope that such a man could be led, until his mad desires are killed. No one could undertake any responsibility for hits, for he obeys no law and follows no notiver. He is worse than brute beasts, which may not understand, bit at least follow the wholesome instincts implanted in them by God. The lawless man has killed his instincts and is unwilling to submit to guidance.

SECTION 5.

3098. We saw in xxiv, 35 that God is the Light of the heavens and the earth, and we tried, in Appendix VIII, to catch a gimpse of the mystic meaning under the guidance of Imam Gazali. We have now another sublime passage, in which we are asked to contemplate the Glory of God by a parable of the subtle play of Light and Shade in God's creation. Let us first understand the literal meaning as applied to the physical world, before attempting the spiritual interpretation, which takes us (if we are worthy) to the foot of the Throne of Glory.

In the van of those who love and honour God.

3099. In our artificial life and surroundings we fail to see some of the finest mysteries of Light and $3090. We praise and rightly, the wonderful colours of sunset. We see, particularly in climates more mortherly than that of India, the subtle play of Light and Shade in the twitights succeeding sunsets. If we were as assiduous in seeing sunsess and the play of Light and Shade preceding them, we should see phenomena even more impressive, as the early morning seems to os more holy than any other time in the twenty-four hours of the sun's daily journey. There is first the false dawn, with its certicous uncertain light and the culous long uncertain shadows which it casts. Then there are the streaks of black in the East, succeeded by the true dawn, with its delicate tones of colours and light and shade. The light of this true or false Dawn is not given by the direct rays of the sun, In a sense it is not light, but the shadows or reflections of light. And they gradually merge into actual sunrise, with its more substantial or more defined shadows, which we can definitely connect with the sun.

3100. The morning shadows are long but more definite, and their length and direction are seen to be guided by the sun. But they change insensibly every second or fraction of a second. 46. Then We draw it in 1101
Towards Ourselves,—
A contraction by easy stages, 31-12

And makes the Day

JIO. As the sun rises higher and higher, the shadows contract. In regions where the sun gets a citially to the zenith at noon, there is no shadow left at that time. Where does it go to? It was but a shadow cast by a substance, and it gets absorbed by the substance which produced it. But all material substances are themselves but shadows (ziv. 48, and n. 1074), and the only true Reality is God, to Whom all things return. Thus are shadows above the substance which substances are

Alid. Let us now reprently turn four vision (as far as weare able) to the symbolic meaning. God is the Light. All things in creation—whether concrete or abstract—are but shidnews, depending on His Light. All shadows are not equal. He gives length or size of substance to such as He pleases. And some shadows almost become reflected lights, like the light of the false or the true Dawn. Such are holy men, in all kinds of gradations. The shadows are constantly in a state of flux; so are all things in Creation, all things we see or cover in this life. God, if the wills, can give some of them greater faxity or comparative stability. The sun is but a shadow of God's Light; yet it tilluminates our whole world. So the great Prophet of the Age derives his light from God, and we can light our little spiritual candles from him. Or the Revealation is the sun's light, and we can light our life with it. As the light of the sun is identified with the sun, which is its living source, so is Revelation identified the thirding Prophet through whom it comes.

300, Cf. vii. 37. The Winds are heralds of Joy, ushering in Rain, which is one form of God's Metry. Again, the symbolisin presents a fresh point of view. Heat which is connected with light) sets up currents is, the atmosphere, besides sucking up moisture from the seas, and distributing it by means of Winds over wide surfaces of the earth. In the physical world we know the benefician action of heat on life, and by contrast, we also know how intolerable high temperatures may become, and how the cloud-bearing Winds come as welcome heralds of rain. This is particularly true where there are marked contrasts of drought and rain as in India. The Monsson winds and clouds are the Good Angels of Rain, as in Kalidas's "Megha-dūta". The symbolic meaning refers to God's Mercy, which to the ungodly may be as intolerable as extreme summer heat in the physical world, but which performs its benefician mission of fostering care to all Creation. It may produce apparently unpleasant movements like Storms. But in reality they distribute God's Message, His greatest gfit, among mankind, and are thus really heralds of joy to all who understand.

310. The water is distributed all over the world, in order that all life may receive its support according to its needs. In axv. 48.50, we have the argument of contrasts stated in another way. Water is life, and is made available to sustain life all over the world: this is a physical fact which all fan see. But water is also the symbol of spiritual life, whose sustaining principle is the Will of God as made known to us through Revelation. It sometimes comes to us in our inward or spiritual storms. Many violent unsattlements of the spirit are but heralds of therefreshing showers of spiritual understanding that come in their wake. They purify our souls, and produce spiritual Life even where there was a parched spiritual desert before. They confines to sustain us in our normal spiritual Life out of the reservoirs of God's Revelation, which are open to all, and well distributed in time and space. The universality of distribution stagain referred to it the following verse.

3108. In contrast to God's abounding Mercy is man's base ingratifude: another symbolical contrast between Light and Darkness, or Water and Drought.

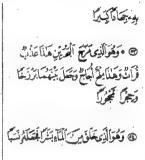

3109, God's Massage has been distributed to all nations. If it had been necessary, a Prophet could have been sent to every town and village. But God's Plan is different. He has sent His Light to every heart, through His Signs in man's conscience, in Nature, and in Revisition.

53. It is He Who has

And the other salt
And bitter; yet has He
Made a barrier between them,
A partition that is orbiiden

54. It is He Who has Created man from water: HIS Then has He established Relationships of lineage HIS

To be passed."112

3110. The distribution of God's Signs being universal, the man of God pays no heed to carping critics who reject Faith. He wages the biggest Jihad of all, with the weapon of God's Revelation, 3111. Maraja: literally, let free or let loose cattle for grazing. Babrais: two seas, or two bodies of whome water: for babr is applied both to the fall sea and to rivers. In the world taken as a whole, there are two bodies of water, vir. 10th the great sail Ocean, and (2) the bodies of sweet water fed by rain, whether they are rivers, lakes, or underground springs: their sourse in rain makes them one, and their drainage, whether above-ground or underground, evenually to the Ocean, also onakes them one. They are free to mingle, and in a sense they do mingle, for there is a regular water-cycle: seen. 3106 above: and the rivers flow constantly to the sea, and total riversaget sea-water for several miles up their estuaries at high tide. Yet in spite of all this, the laws of gravitation are like a barrier or partition set by God, by which the two bodies of water to the sea, like the hississippior the Yangtte-Klaing, the river-water with its gitt remains distinct from sea-water for a long distance out at sea. But the wonderful Sign is that the two bodies of water, though they pass through each other, remain distinct bodies, with their distinct functions.

3112. Again a new symbolic contrast; the two bodies of water, sweet and salt free to intermingle, yet distinct as by an impassable barrier. Sweet water is the wholesome spritual desires of man fed by the rain of God's Revelation; salt water is the bundle of worldly charge, ambittons, passions, and motives of man; the two may seem to mingle, yet they are always distinct, and there is an impassable barrier between them. The orighteous judgment is the Criterion that distinguishes between them. Further, the two bodies of water, or the two seas, may mean the two kinds of knowledge, divine and human, as in the allegory in the story of Moses; see xviii, (o), and notes 2404 and 2403.

3113. The basis of all living matter in the physical world, protoplasm, is water: Cf. xxiv. 45 and xxi. 30, and notes thereon.

3114. Water is a fluid, unstable thing: yet from it arises the highest form of life known to us, in this world, man. And man has not only the functions and characteristics of the noblest animals, but this abstract relationships are also typical of his highest nature. He can trace herage and opedigree, and thus remember and commemorate a long line of ancestors, to whom heis bound by ties of piety, which no mere animal can do. Further, there is the mystic union in marriage: it is not only like the physical union of animals, but it gives rise to relationships arising out of the sesses of individuals who were not otherwise related to each other. These are physical and social facts. But behind them again, in the symbolical lesson of spiritual contrasts: as there is a long way to go petween an ordinary man and him who is lifted pyto divine Light. As opposite seess, though different in function, are one and contribute to each other's happines, so persons of diverse talents may unite in the spiritual world for their own highest good and in the service of God.

3120. Those who have no spiritual Light cannot understand this precept about putting all our trust in God. It seems to them footish. They have no faith, or but a superfictal faith. They may possibly task the name of God on their lops, but they cannot understand the full significance of His title of Roaman (Most Gracious). Perhaps they are afraid on account of their sins; pethaps they do not see how unbounded is the mercy of God. Such men are contrasted against the true servants of God, who are described below in xxv. 63-75.

3)21. The glorious Lamp of the skies is the Sun; and next to him is the Moon, which gives borrowed light. The Constellations of course include the Signs of the Zodiac, which mark the path of the planets in the heavens.

312. The scenes of the phenomenal world are Signs of the Self-Ravelation of God, for those who understand and who have the will to merge their wills in His. This they do (1) by praising Him, which means understanding something of His nature, and (2) by gratitude to Him, which means carrying out His Will, and doing good to their fellow-creatures. These two attitudes of mind and heart give rise to various consequences in their tives, which are detailed in the following verses,

3123. I gramant: in a spiritual sense. Address: in the aggressive sense. Their humility i, shown in two ways: (1) to those in real search of knowledge, they give such knowledge as they have and as the recipients can assimilate; (2) to those who merely dispute, they do not speak harshly, but say "Peace!", as much as to say, "May it be well with you, may yourpent and be better"; or "May God give me peace from such wrangling"; or "Peace, and Good-bye; let me leave you!"

3124. Humble prayer brings them nearer to God.

3123. This is a prayer of humility: such a person relies, not on any good works which he may had one, but on the Grace and Mercy of God; and he shows a lively sense of the Day of Judgment, when every action will weigh for or against a soul.

3126. The misery which results from sin is not only grievous to live in ("an abode") but also grievous "to rest in "or "to stand in", if it be only for a short time.

3127. In ordinary spending this is a wise rule. But even in charity, in which we give of our best, it is not expected that we should be extravagant, i.e., that we should either do it for show, to impress of their people, or do it thoughtlessly, which would be the case if we "rob Peter to pay Paul". We should certainly not be niggerdly; but we should remember everyone's rights, including our own, and strike a perfectly just balance between them.

3128. Here three things are expressly condemned: (1) false worship, which is a crime against God; (3) the taking of life, which is a crime against our fellow-creatures; and (3) fornication, which is a crime against our self-respect, against ourselves. Every crime is against God, His creatures, and ourselves, but some may be viewed more in relation to one than to another. The prohibition against taking lire is qualified: "except for just cause": a.g., in judicial punishment for muder, or in self-preservation, which may include not only self-defence in the legal sense, but also the clearing out of pests, and the provision of meat under conditions of Halat: see n. 698 to v. 5. After this comes a long parenthesis, which ends with verse 71 below.

- 3179. The three crimes just mentioned are specially detestable and Infamous, and as Ignominy will be added to other punishments, the penalty will be double that of ordinary punishment.
- 3130. But even in the case of great crimes, if there is true repentance as tested by a changed life in conduct, God's Mercy is available, and it will transform the repentant's nature from evil to good.
- 3131. Witness no falsehood has two significations, both implied in this passage: (1) those who give no evidence that is false; and (2) those who do not assist at anything which implies fraud or falsehood.
- 3132. There is not only condemnation of positive faisehood or of being mixed up with things implying faisehood; but fulfillities—wain random talk, unedifying jokes, useless show, etc.—are all condemned. If a good man finds himself in such an affair, he must withdraw from it in an honourable, dignified way, not in a fussy arrogant way.
- 3133. Kharra may mean: to fall down, to snore, to droop down as if the person were bored or inattentive, or did not wish to see or hear or pay attention.
- 334. We must also pray for the maintenance of God's Law after us, through our wives and descendants: in our eyes they should not be mere accidents or play-things, but a real comfort and fulldiment of our spiritual longings. Perhaps, through them, as well through ourselves, we may, by God's grace, be able to give a lead for truth and righteousness.

<sup>3135.</sup> Let us recapitulate the virtues of the true servants of God: (1) they are humble and forbearing to those below then in spiritual worth; (2) they are constantly, by adoration, in touch with God; (3) they always remember the Judgment in the Herealter; (4) they are moderate in all things; (5) they avoid treason to God, to their fellow-creatures, and to themselves; (6) they give a wide borth not only to falsehood but to fullity; (7) they pay attention, both in mind and manner, to the Signs of their Lord; (8) their ambition is to bring up their families in righteousness and to lead in all good. A fine code of individual and social ethies, a ladder of spiritual development, open to all.

<sup>3136.</sup> Let not the wicked think that it causes God any annoyance or uneasiness if they do not serve or worship Him. He is high above all needs. But He turns in His Mercy to all who call on Him For those who arrogantly reject Him, the spiritual consequences (the Hell of spiritual misery and degradation) are inevitable, and must soon come to pass.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXVI (Shu'arāa).

This Sūra begins a new series of four Sūras (xxvi.xxix), which illustrate the contrast between the spirit of Prophecy and spiritual Light and the reactions to it in the communities among whom it appeared, by going back to old Prophets and the stories of the Past, as explained in the Introduction to S. xvii.

In this particular Sūra we have the story of Moses in his fight with Pharaoh and of Pharaoh's discomfiture. Other Prophets mentioned are Abraham, Noah, Hūd, Salih, Lūt, and Shu'aib. The lesson is drawn that the Qurán is a continuation and fulfilment of previous Revelations, and is pure Troth, unlike the poetry of vain poets.

Chronologically the S0ra belongs to the middle Meccan period, when the contact of the Light of Prophecy with the milieu of Pagan Mecca was testing the Meccans in their most arrogant mood.

Summary.—The conflict of Unbelief with Truth is vain: so was the conflict of Pharaoh with Moses: Pharaoh's magicians bowed to the Truth, and Pharaoh and his hosts were drowned (xxvi, 1-69, and C. 164).

Nor did Abraham's people gain anything by their resisting the Truth he preached, and Noah's people perished by their Unbelief (xxvi, 70-122, and C. 165).

Hud warned his people against reliance on their material strength, and Salini gainst sacrilege, but in both cases the evil ones were brought low (xxvi. 123-159, and C. 166).

L8; had to deal with unspeakable crimes, and Shu'aih against dishonest dealings and mischief; their teaching was rejected, but the rejecters were wiped, out (xxvi. 160-191, and C. 167).

So, when the spirit of Prophecy came to Mecca, it was resisted by the votaties of Evil: but Truth is not like vain poetry, and must triumph at last (xxvi. 192.277, and C. 168).

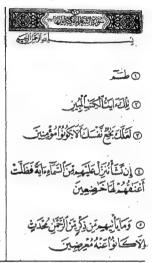

C. 164.—God's Plan works uncessingly: His Light
(xxvi. 1-69.) Shines none the less brightly, because some Reject it or mock at it. Moses was freed
From all fear when God gave him His Signs
And sent him to Pharaoh: he boldly
Proclaimed the Message, and won the wise ones
Of Egypt: the rejecters, with Pharaoh, perished,
And their heritage passed to worthier hands.

Stira XXVI.

Shu'arāa, or The Poets:

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful.

- 1. Me a. Sin. Mim. 3147
- 2. These are Verses of the Book That makes (things) clear. 3138
- It may be thou frettest
   Thy soul with grief, that they also Do not become Believers.
- 4. If (such) were Our Will, 310 We could send down to them From the sky a Sign, To which they would bend Their necks in humility.
- But there comes not
   To them a newly-revealed
   Message from (God) Most Gracious,
   But they turn away therefrom.

3137. This is a combination of three Abbreviated Letters, as to which, generally, see Appendix I, printed at the end of S. in. This particular combination occurs here and at the head of S. xxviii, while the intervening Shra xxvii has it in the syncopated form 7a Sin. None of the explanatory conjectures which I have seen carries conviction to me. If the letters stand for 7ax+iShith (Mount Sinai) and Mikid (Moese), whose story fills a large part of this Stra, why is the letter Aliro mitted in S. xxvii, where the same meaning would apply? There is, however, one fact to which I should like to draw attention. There are eleven sections in this Stra, and eight of them and with the word Rahm (with the final Miki). The three exceptions are sections 2 and 3, and section 11 But sections 2 and 3 are part of the story of Moese, which is completed in section 4, and thatends with "Rahm". The main argument in section 11 lends at verse 217, which ends with Rahm. We can say that the whole Stra is based on a refrain ending in the word "Rahm". Whether this has any bearing on our present enquiry I cannot say. My own position is that where we falve material, we should pursue our researches, but we should never be dogmatic in such matters, as some Mysteries can never to solved by mere research.

3138, Cf. v. 17, and n. 716. The comparison of God's revelation with Light is continued.

3139, "They" are the Pagans of Mecca. From a human point of view it was a great disappointment to God's Apostle in the middle period of his Meccan ministry that the Meccans could not be brought to believe in the Truth.

3140. If it had been God's Will and Plan to force people's will, Hecould quite easily have forced the Meccans. But His Will and Plan work differently. His revelation is meant to train man's own will so that it conforms to God's beneficent purpose.

3141. They may laugh at God's Message of righteousners, but they will soon see the power of Truth and realuse therreal significance of the movement which they opposed. Where were the Pagans of Mecca after Badr, and still more, after the bloodless surrender of Mecca? And the meaning may be applied universally in all history.

3142. If evil has a little.run in this life, let them not run away with the notion that the world is for exit. They have only to look round at the physical and moral world around them, and they would be undeceived. But they are bland and without the Faith (the Light) which would open their eyes.

343. One Who is able to carry out all His Will and Plans. See n. 2818 to xxii. 40.

3144. The part of the story of Moses told here is how Moses felt diffident about undertaking his commission; how God reassured him; how he want to Pharaoh with "the Signs"; how Pharaoh and his people rejected him; how their blasphemy recolled on themselves, but the cause of God triumphed; in other words the point here is the reaction of a wicked people to the Light that was held up to them, considered in its relation to the mind of God's Messenger.

13. "My breast will be straitened. 3143 And my speech may not go (Smoothly): so send unto Aaron.

- 14. "And (further), they have A charge of crime against me; ""
  And I fear they may Slav me."
- 15. God said: "By no means! Proceed then, both of you, With Our Signs; We Are with you, and will Listen (to your call).
- 16. "So go forth, both of you, To Pharaoh, and say: 'We have been sent By the Lord and Cherisher Of the Worlds:
- 17. "'Send thou with us.
  The Children of Israel.'"
- 18. (Pharaoh) said: "Did we not 3447 Cherish thee as a child Among us, and didst thou not Stay in our midst Many years of thy life?

وَيَضِينُ صَدْدِى كَالاً يَعْلَلُ لِيسَانِي

۞ فَالْأَذُرُبَيْكَ فِينَا تِلِيمًا وَلِيثَنَفِينَا مِنْعُمُ لِدُسِينِ

3145. As we should say in English, "My heart would fail me, and my tongue cleave to my mouth." Moses had an impediment in his speech, and his mission was risky: see next note. But God's Plan works in wondrous ways. Asron was given to assist him n his mission, and Moses's shortcomings were transformed by God's grace into power, so that he became the most powerful leader of Israel.

3146. Moses was brought up in the palace of Pharaoh, as narrated in his personal story in xx. 39.40 and n 2563. When he was grown-up he saw an Egyptian smitting an Israelite, and as the Israelites were being generally oppressed by the Egyptians. Mores's anger was roused, and he siew the Egyptian. He then fied to the Midianite country in the Sinai pennifula, where he received the divine commission. But the charge of slaying the Egyptian was hanging against him. He was also apparently quick-tempered. But God's grace cured his temper and he became wise; his impediment in speech, for he stood up boldly to speak to Pharaoh; and his fear, for he dared the Egyptians with God's Signs, and they were afraid of him.

3147. There is here a little play of wit on the part of Pharaoh. When Moses speaks of the "Lord and Cherisher of the Worlds", Pharaoh says: "Who cherished you? Did we not bring you up as a child? Did yound grow up among us?" By implication Pharaoh suggests that he is the cherisher of Moses, and in any case Pharaoh laid claim to godhead himself.

19. "And thou didst a deed
Of thine which (thou knowest) "I's
Thou didst, and thou art
An ungrateful (wretch)!"

20. Moses said: "I did it Then, when I was In error." 149

- 21. "So I fled from you (all)
  When I feared you; also
  But my, Lord has (since)
  Invested me with judgment
  (And wisdom) and appointed me
  As one of the apostles.
- 22. "And this is the favour "M With which thou dost Reproach me,—that thou Hast enslaved the Children Of Israel!"
- Pharaoh said: "And what Is the 'Lord and Cherisher Of the Worlds'?" ****

® وَفَعَلْتَ فَعْلَلَكَ الَّذِهِ فَعَلْكَ وَأَنتَ مِنَ الْكَلِمْدِينَ

@ قَالَ فِرْعَوْنُ وَمَارَبُّ الْمُلْكِينَ

3149, What is Moses's reply? He is no longer alread. He relia the whole truth, extenuating nothing in his own favour. "Yes I did it: hut I did it under au error." There are three implications in this: "(I) I was wrong in doing it in a temper and in being hasty: (2) I was wrong in taking the law into my own hands, but I repented, and asked for God's pardon (xxviii, 13-10); (3) that was at a time when I was under your influence, but since then I am a changed man, as God has called me."

.3150. He accounts for all his movements, much more than Pharaoh had asked for. He has nothing to hide. At that time he was under the influence of feat, and he had fied from him. Now he is serving God, the Lord of the Worlds. He has no fear; he is an apostle.

3131. Pharaoh had called Moses ungrateful and reproached him with all the favours which Moses had received from the Egyptians. "What favours?" he says; "Do you count it also as a favour to me that you have enslaved my brethren the Children of Israel?" Moses was now speaking as a most of God, not as an individual, Any individual favours he may have received were biotted out by the oppression of his people.

3152. Moses having eliminated all personalities, the argument now comes up to the highest plane of all,—the nature of God and His mercies. Moses had put forward this before, as implied in verse 16 above, but Pharaoh had twisted it into personalities. Now we come back to the real issue. It may have been in the same sitting, or it may have been in a later sitting.

- 24. (Moses) said: "The Lord And Cherisher of the heavens And the earth, and all between,— If ye want to be Ouite sure."
- 25. (Pharaoh) said to those Around: "Do ye not listen (To what he says)?" 3345.
- 26. (Moses) said: "Your Lord And the Lord of your fathers From the beginning!"
- 27. (Pharaoh) said: "Truly Your apostle who has been Sent to you is A veritable madman!" *154.
- 28. (Moses) said: "Lord of the East And the West, and all between! If ye only had sense!"
- 29. (Pharaoh) said: "If thou Dost put forward any god Other than me, I will Certainly put thee in prison!" 3188
- 30. (Moses) said: "Even if I Showed you something Clear (and) convincing?" *****

3133. Moses had stried up the wrath of Pharanh both by putting forward the name of the One True God as against Pharanh's pretended godhead, and by suggesting that any man of judgment would understand God's majesty. While Pharanh turns to his people in indignation, Moses drives the nat in further: "He is the God of the heavens and the earth and all between: therefore He is also your God, and the God of your fathers from the beginning. Any other pretensions are false!"

3154. Pharaoh is further perturbed. In reply to Moses's statement that the One True God is also the Egyptians and of Pharaoh also, Pharaoh says sarcastically to his Court: "Look at this 'apostic' of yours; he seems to be mad!" But Moses is not abashed. He boldly rays what is the truth: "It is you who are mad! The God Whom I preach is the universal Lord,—of the East and of the West. He regions wherever you go!"

3155. Now we come to the crisis. Pharaoh threatens Moses with prison for treason. Moses remains calm and still argues: "What if I show you be miracle? Will it convince you that I am not mad, and that I have behind me the Lord of all jik Worlds?"

3156. The Egyptians were addicted to magic and sorcers, which was mostly falser. If a true miracle were shown to them, would they believe? Perhaps they would see the hollowness of their was magic. In fact this actually happened with the Egyptian sorcerers themselves and perhaps with the commonalty. But Pharaoh and his Court were too arrogant, and battened too much on frauds to yield to Truth.

- 31. (Pharaoh) said: "Show it then,
  If thou tellest the truth!"
- 32. So (Moses) threw his rod, And behold, it was A serpent, plain (for all to see)!
- 33. And he drew out his hand, And behold, it was white To all beholders! 31.37

- 37. "And bring up to thee

- 38. So the sorcerers were got Together for the appointment Of a day well-known, 3159

3157. Cf. vii 107-8. See the whole passage there, and the notes thereon.

3158. In vii, 109 it is the Chiefs who say this. The fact is that it was a general consultation, and this was the general feeling, expressed in words by each to the others.

3160. See the last note. The people are to come and witness the triumph of the State religion, so that they may become the more obedient to Pharaoh and more compliant with the demands of the priests. The State religion included magic and the worship of Pharaoh.

- 41. So when the sorcerers arrived,
  They said to Pharaoh:
  "Of course—shall we have

<sup>3161.</sup> There was no such thing as pure loyalty to an exploiting ruler like this Pharaoh. The sorcerers, who were probably also priests, were venal, and they hoped to establish their own hold on both king and people by the further enrichment of themselves and their order.

<sup>3162.</sup> The euphemism implies a taunt, as if Moses had said; "I know about your tricks! You pretend to throw ropes and rods, and make people believe they are snakes. But now come on!".

<sup>3163.</sup> Though Pharanh claimed to be a god, it is not likely that those nearest to him—his priests and soccerers—believed such a thing! But it was a game of mutual prefence before the world. And so they appeal to his "divine" power.

<sup>3164.</sup> The sorcerers' ropes and rods seemed to have become serpents, but the rod of Moses was mightier than all of them and quickly swallowed them up. So Truth is more powerful than tricks and will expose and destroy them.

- 49. Said (Pharaoh): "Believe ye In Him before I give You permission? Surely he Is your leader, who has Taught you sorcery! But soon shall ye know!

3165. The sorceres knew that they had met something very different from their tricks. God's spirit worked on them, and they pricesed the True God. As they represented the intelligence of legy to community, it may be presumed that they carried the intelligence of legy that the man perhaps some of the commonalty, who were impressed by the dramatic scene! Hence Pharaoh's anger, but it is the beginning of his decline!

3167. The rest of the story—of the plagues of Egypt—is passed over as not germane to the present argument. We come now to the story of Israel leaving Egypt, pursued by Pharach Here again there are three contrasts: (I) the bind arrogance of the Egyptians, against the development of God's Plan; (I) the Faith of Moses, against the fears of his people; and (3) the final deliverance of the seed of righteousness, against the destruction of the boots of brute force.

3168 In deference to almost unanimous authority I have translated this passage (verses 58-60) as if it were a parenthelical statement of God's purpose. Personally I prefet another construction. According to that, verses 8-59 will be part of Pharach's proclamation: "We have dispossessed the Israelites from everything good in the land, and made them our slaves"; and verse 60 only will be parenthetical: "Poor ignorant men! you may oppress those who are helpless, but We (£.6, God) have decreed that they shall inherit all these things", as they certainly did (for a time) in the Land of Promise. Palestine.

3160 The Children of Israel certainty inherited the gardens, springs, treasures, and honourable postions in Palestine after many years' wanderings in the wilderness. But when they were false to God, they lost them again, and knother people (the Muslims) inherited them when they were true in Faith. These latter not only inherited Palestine but also Egypt, and the old Pharaonic power and institutions were fost for ever. "Of such finings": itiergily, "of them"

3170. The story is here resumed after the parenthesis of verses 58-60.

3175. For the argument of this Stira the incidents in Abraham's life are not relevant and are not mentioned. What is mentioned is: (1) the steps by which he taught about the sin of false worship, in the form of a Dialogue; (2) the aims of a righteous man not only in his individual life, but for his ancestors and posterity, in the form of a Praver; and (3) a picture of the Future Judgment, in the form of a vision. <sup>3176.</sup> They want to show their frue and assiduous devotion. But Abraham goes at once to the heart of the matter by asking: "To whom is your devotion paid? Is the object worthy of it?"

<sup>317. &#</sup>x27;The things that you worship are enemies to mankind: let me testify from my own personal experience: they are enemies to me: they can do me no good, but would lead me astray. Contrast with their impotence or their power of mischief the One True God Whom I worship: He created me and all the Worlds: He cherishes me and guides me; He takes care of me; and when I die, He will give me new life; He will forgive me and grant me final Salvation. Will you then come to this true worship? How can you doubt, after seeing the contrast to the one with the other? Is it not as the contrast between Light and Darknese?'

- 82. "And who, I hope, Will forgive me my faults On the Day of Judgment...
- 83, " my Lord bestow wisdom sin On me, and join me With the righteous:
- 84. "Grant me honourable mention On the tongue of truth <sup>3179</sup> Among the latest (generations);
- 85. " Make me one of the inheritors Of the Garden of Bliss:

  Wealth nor sons will avail,
- 89. "But only he (will prosper) That brings to God A sound heart:
- 90. "To the righteous, the Garden Will be brought near, 3381

3178. Having shown clearly the distinction between the False and the True, Abraham now shows in the form of a Prayer what his immost wishes are. (1) He wants his own soul enlightened with divine wisdom, and (2) has heart and life filled with righteousness; (3) he will not be content with working for himself or his own generation; his view extends to all future generations; (4) and of course he wishes to attain the goal of the righteous, the Garden of the Bliss of the Divine Countenance; but he is not content with this; for (5) he wants his father and relatives to share in his spiritual joy, so that he can proudly see all whom he can reach, in an honourable station (contrasted with disprace) on the Day of Judgment.

3179. Cf. xig. 50. The whole of the passage about Abraham there may be compared with this passage.

3180. Now we have a vision of the Day of Judgment. Nothing will then avail except a pure heart; all sorts of the so-called "good deeds" of this world, without the motive of purity, will be useless. The contrast of the Garden of Bliss with the Fire of Misery will be plainly visible. Evil will be shown in its true colours,—isolated, helplets, cursing and despairing; and all chances will then have been lost.

3181. The Good will only see good (the Garden of Bliss), and the Evil will only see evil (the Fire of Hell). The type of this contrast is shown to us in the world of our spiritual sense even in this life.

3184. They now see that the people who seduced them were themselves evil and subject to the penalties of evil, and their seductions were frauds. They feel that they ought to have seen it before. For who would deliberately follow the paths of those condemned to misery and punishment? 3185. This apparent longing for a chance of return is dishonest. If they were sent back, they would certainly return to their evil ways: vi. 27-28. Besides, they have had numerous chances already in this life, and they have used them for mischief or evil.

3186. Noah's generation had lost all faith and abandoned themselves to evil. They had rejected the Message of apostles previously sent to the world. Noah was sent to them as one of themselves ("their brother"). His life was open before them: he had proved himself pure in heart and conduct (like the holy Apostle of Arabia long after him), and worthy of every trust. Would they fear God and follow his advice? They could see that he had no ends of his own to serve. Would they not listen to him?

3189. The leaders of the people are speaking, as the Quraish leaders spoke in the time of the holy Prophet. "We know that thou hast been trustwoirthy in thy life. But look at the 'tag rag and bob tall' that follow thee! Dost thou expect us to be like them or to be classed with them?" His answer was: "I know nothing against them; if they have done any wrong, or are only hypocrites, they are answerable to God; how can I drive them away from me, seeing that I am expressly-sent to admonish all people?"

3100. Cf. xi. 29. All people who have faith have the right to come and listen to God's Word and receive God's Mercy, whether they are publicans and singers, "Harijans" and low-caste men, men of "superior" or "inferior" races. The man of God welcomes them all, as His Message has to shine before the whole world.

3191. Two other cases occur to me where prophets of God were threatened with death by stoning: one was Abraham (xix, 46), and the other was Shu'aib (xi. 91). In neither case did the threats deter them from carrying out their mission. On the contrary the threats recoiled on those who threatened. So also did it happen in the case of Noah and the holy Prophet.

3193. This and the following verse run like a refrain throughout this Sūra, and give the key-note to the subject-matter; how the Message of God is preached, how it is rejected in all ages, and how it triumphs at last, through the Mercy of God. 3194. See n 1040 to vif. 65 for the 'Ad people and their location. Here the emphasis is on the fact that they were materialists believing in brute force, and felt secure in their fortresses and resources, but were found quite helpless when God's Alessage came and they rejected it.

C. 167.-The task of Lot was a hard one : his mission (xxvl. 160-191.) Was to people addicted to crimes abominable. His reasoning with them was in vain : it only Excited their wrath. They threatened to cast Him out, but were themselves overwhelmed In disaster. Shu'aib had to rebuke fraud And commercial dishonesty : he met only Ridicule, but the just and fair dealing He preached was vindicated in the end.

3207. For this she-camel, see n. 1044 to vii. 73. The she-camel was to be a Sign and a test-case. Would they respect her rights of watering (and pasturage)?

<sup>3208.</sup> Their regrets were too late. They had themselves asked for a Sign. The Sign had been given them in the she-camel, which their prophet Salih had put forward as a test-case. Would they, through that symbol, respect the law of equity by which all people had rights in water and in the gifts of nature? They refused to respect that law, and committed sacrilege by deliberately killing the she-camel. They themselves came to an evil end.

C. 168 .- Thus the Truth of God must win against folly (xxvi. 192-227.) And falsehood. The Spirit of Inspiration And Faith brought down the Our-an to the mind Of the holy Prophet, that he might teach . In noble Arabic speech, and through it Reach the world. If obstinate rebels Do resist the Message, their day is brief: With humble, gentle kindness it must make Its way to all, nearest and farthest. It is not like the vain words of poets false. The hostile reception of some of the previous Messengers having been mentioned, the special characteristics of the Qur-an are now referred to, to show (1) that it is true, and (2) that its rejection by the Meccan Pagans was of a piece with previous experience in the history of man: vested interests resist Truth, but it conquers.

3224. Rus-ul-amin, the epithet of Gabriel, who came with the inspired Messages to the holy Prophet, is difficult to render in a single epithet in translation. In n. 3187 to xxvi, 107 I have described some of the various shades of meaning attached to the adjective Amin as applied to a Prophet. A further signification as attached to the Spirit of Inspiration is that it is the very quintessence of Faith and Truth, unlike the lying spirits which delude men with falsehood. On the whole, I think "the Spirit of Faith and Truth" will represent the original best here.

3223. Qaib (Heart) signifies not only the seat of the affections, but also the seat of the memory and understanding. The process of inspiration is indicated by the impression of the divine Message on the inspired one's heart, memory, and understanding, from which it was promulgated in human speech to the world. In this case the human speech was the perspicuous Arabic tongus, which would be plainly intelligible to the audience who would immediately hear it and be through them transmitted to all the world.

3226. In iii, 184 I have translated Zubur as Books of dark prophecies. See n. 490 there. Here person successful to the see that the Books of divine knowledge.

3227. Many of the Jewish Doctors recognised the holy Prophet's Message as a Message from God, $4, 'Abdullah ibn Salam and Mukhairq. The latter was a man of property, which helet for Islam. (These were also Christian monks and learned men who recognised the Prophet's mission.)

3228. The turn of Arabia having come for receiving God's Revelation; as was forefold in previous Revelations, it was inevitable that it should be in the Arab tongue through the mouth of an Arab. Otherwise it would have been unintelligible, and the Arabs could not have received the Faith and become the vehicles for its promulgation as actually happened in history.

3229. "Thus" I think means through the medium of the Arabic language and the Arab people. The Quran penetrated through their language and their hearts. If the hard-hearted among them did not believe, they will see when the Penalty comes, how grievous a mistake they made. For the Penalty must come; even when they least expected it. They will be caught saving or thinking. "There is plenty of time; we can get another respite," when already it will have become too late for them to turn over a new leaf.

201. They will not believe In it until they see The grievous Penalty;

202. But the (Penalty) will come To them of a sudden, While they preceive it not;

203. Then they will say:
"Shall we be respited?"

208. Never did. We destroy. A population, but had Its warners—

209. By way of reminder; And We never are unjust. 2831

210. No evil ones have brought saw Down this (Revelation): ئے کامن قائکہ الآ

3231. God will grant much respite to sinners, for He is Most Gracious and Merciful, But all this respite will profit them nothing if they are merely immersed in the vanities of this world. Again and again, in spite of their rebellion and their rejection, does God send warnings and warners before the final Punishment of Justice. For God knows human weakness, and He will never be unjust in the least,

<sup>3230.</sup> While some sinners out of negligence postpone the day of repentance till it is too late, others more bold actually ask out of bravado that God's Punishment should be brought down on them at once, as they do not believe in God or His Punishment! The answer to them is: It will come soon enough—too soon, they will think, when it comes! Cf. xxii, 47 and notes, <sup>3232.</sup> When anything extraordinary happens, there are always people desirous of putting the worst construction on it, and saying that it is the work of the evil ones, the devils. So when the Qurân came with its Message in wondrous Arabe, its sensities could only account for its power by attributing it to evil spirits! Such a beneficent message can never suit the purposes of the evil ones, nor would it be in their power to produce it. In fact Good and Evil are poles asunder, and Evil cannot even hear words of Good, of tender Pity for sinners and Forgiveness for the penitent!

- 211. It would neither suit them Nor would they be able (To produce it).
- 212. Indeed they have been removed Far from even (a chance of) Hearing it.
- 213. So call not on any
  Other god with God,
  Or thou wilt be among

- 215. And lower thy wing 3000
  To the Believers who Follow thee.
- 216. Then if they disobey thee, Say: "I am free (of responsibility) For what ye do!" *****

   On the Exalted in Might,
   The Merciful,—
- 218. Who seeth thee standing Forth (in prayer),,
- 219. And thy movements among Those who prostrate themselves. ****

3233. That is, be kind, gentle, and considerate with them, as a high flying bird is when she towers her wing to her offspring. Cf. xvil. 24 and n. 2205, and xv. 88 and n. 2011.

3234. "Disobey thee" implied that they did something wrong, for the holy Prophet commanded was was right and forbade what was wrong. If, then, any of his flock did wrong, the responsibility was not his, for he, like a good shepherd, tried to keep them right. What was he then to do? He would continue his teaching. But if any of them went so far wrong as to try to injure their own Teacher, Leader, and Guide, there was nothing for him to fear. His trust was only in God, and God sees and appraises all men's actions at their true worth.

3235. Literally, the standing and prostration are postures in Muslim prayer: the holy Prophet was equally earnest, sincere, and zealous in prayer for himself and for all his people. But there is a wider meaning. The postures in prayer are symbolical of attitudes of mind, and behavour in life generally, and the "movements" may refer also to various vicissitudes, in which a man's soul is tried and tested just as the body is exercised in standing, bowing, kneeling, and prostration in prayer. The Prophet's behaviour was exemplary in all the turns of fortune, and however foolish men may cavil, his purity and uprightness are fully known to God.

3236. To people who maticiously suggested that the holy Prophet was possessed or inspired by evil spirits (xxvi. 210 above) the reply had aiready been made, but it is now declared that that suggestion is itself the work of Evil. Behind such suggestions are lying and wickedness, or at best some half-ruths caught up in hearsay and twisted so as to show Good in an evil light.

.323: The Peefs: to be read along with the exceptions mentioned in warse 227 below. Poetry and other arts are not in themselves avil, but may on the contrary be used in the service of religion and righteousness. But there is a danger that they may be prostituted for base purposes. If they are instincers ("they say what they do not") or are divorced from actual life or its goodness or its serious purpose, they may become instruments of evil or futility. They then wander about without any set purpose, and seek the depths (valleys) of human folly rather than the heights of divine light.

3138. Postry and the fine arts which are to be commended are those which emanate from minds steeped in Faith, which try to carry out in: life the fine sentiments they express in their artistic work, aim at the glory of God rather than at self-glorification or the fulsome praise of min with feet of clay, and do not (as in Jihad) attack anything except aggressive evil. In this sense a perfect arith should be a perfect man. Perfection may not be attainable in this life, but it should be the aim of every man, and especially of one who wishes to become a supreme arist, not only in technique but in spirit and essentials. Among the commendable posts contemporary with the holy Prophet may be mentioned Bassian and Lablet: the latter had the bonour of being one of the seven whose ocean were selected for "hanging" (the Marialagal) in the Days of Ignorance.

APPENDIX IX.

Thamfid Inscriptions at al-Hijr. (xxvi. 141-159; xv. 80-84; and vii. 73-79.)

Mr. C.M. Doughty travelled in North-Western Arabia and Najd in the 1880's, and his book Arabia Deserta forms one of the most notable of Arabian Travel-books. It was first published in two volumes by the Cambridge University Press in 1883, and has recently gone through several editions. The edition I have used is the unabridged one-volume edition printed in London in 1926. The references in this Appendix should be understood to refer to that edition.

Doughty travelled on the old Pilgrim Caravan route (Darb-ul-Haff) with a Pilgrim Caravan from Damascus as far as Maddin Salih, and then parted company with the Pilgrims and turned into Najd. Maddin Salih, the Cities of Salih), is one of the stations on the Syrian Pilgrim soute, about 180 miles nouth of Medina. Tabūk, to which the holy Prophet led an expedition in A.H. 9 (see Introduction to S. ix), is about 170 miles father to the north-west, and Ma'an Junction about 150 miles still farther. Madain Salih was also an important station on the prehistoric gold and frankincense (ba'hār) coute between Yemen and Egypt or Syria In sacred history it marks the ruined site of the Thambl people to whom the prophet Salih was sent, whose she-camel was a symbolic Sign and is connected with Salih's history. See n. 3208 to xxvi. 155-157. To the west and north-west of Madain Salih are three Harrats or tracts of volcamic land covered with laws, steetching as far as Tabūk.

This is how Doughty describes his first view of Madain Salih, approaching from the north-west. "At length in the dim morning twilight, as we journeyed, we were come to a sandy brow and a straight descending-place betwirt cliffs of sand-stones. There was some shouting in the forward, and Aswad bid me look up, 'this was a famous place, Mabrak-an-Nāga' " (the kneeling place of the she-camel of Salih)..."It is, short, at first steep, and issues upon the plain of al-Hijr, which is Madain Salih; where the sun coming up showed the singular landscape of this valley-plain, encompassed with mighty sand-rock precipices (which here resemble ranges of city walls, fantastic towers, and castle buildings), and upon them lie high shouldering and drifts. The bottom is sand, with much growth of desert bushes; and I perceived some thin sprinkled volcanic drift. Westward is seen the immense mountain blackness, terrible and lowering, of the Harrat." (Arabis Deserts, p. 85, vol. I.)

Doughty took rubbings of some of the Inscriptions which were accessible tohim and they were studied by the great Semitic scholar M. Ernest Renan and published by the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres. Renan's Report in French is printed as an Appendix to Chapters IV, V and VI of Arabia Deserts (pp. 180-187, vol. I) and M. le Marquis de Vogüé's Note (also in French) on the Nabatesan sculptured Architecture, at Maddin Seith at pp. 620-623, vol. I. App. IX.] 976

The general result of these studies may be summarised. The sculpture and architecture are found to be of the same kind as in the Nabatæan monuments at Petra (for which see n. 1043 to vii. 73). At Petra there are no dated Inscriptions preserved, but at Madain Salih we have several. There are at Madain Salih perhaps 100 sepulchral rock-hewn chambers, in some of which are found human bones and remains, showing that the Nabatæans knew the art of embalming, and used linen of the same kind as was used in ancient Egypt. The tombs are dedicated in pernetuity to named families, and the named Nabatæan kings have, each, the epithet "loving his people". There are flat side-pilasters, and the figures of four-footed beasts, eagles, and other birds are discernible. Besides the sepulchral chambers, there is a great Hall or Council Chamber (Liwan), 25ft, × 27ft, × 13ft. This may have been a Temple. The gods worshipped were those whose names we know of from other Nabatwan sources, - Dusarés, Martaba, Allat, Mana, Kejs, and Hubal. Allat, Manat, and Hubal are also known to us in connection with the idols of the Pagan Ouraish of the Times of Ignorance. It is interesting to find the word Mesicala (Arabic Masfid) already used here for a "place of worship". Triads of stones were worshipped as gods.

The Inscriptions have dates from 3 B.C. to 79 A.D. Within this short period of 82 years we can see something of the development of Semitic palmography. The writing becomes more and more cursive with the years. We have here a central point between Old Armenian, Square Hebrew, Palmyran, Sinaltic, Koff and Naskb.

We may treat the Nabatæans as historical, as we have established dates. The Thamud were prehistoric, and occupied sites which were afterwards occupied by the Nabatæans and others. The kneeling place of Salih's sho-camel Mabrak-un-Nāga) and the well of the she-camel (Bir-un-Nāga), and a number of local names keep alive the race-memory of an ancient Arabian people and their prophet Salih.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXVII (Naml). .

This Sura is cognate in subject to the one preceding it and the two following it. Its chronological place is also in the same group of four, in the middle Meccan period.

Here there is much mystic symbolism. Wonders in the physical world are types of greater wonders in the spiritual world. The Fire, the White Hand, and the Rod, in the story of Moses; the speech of birds, the crowds of Jinns and men pitted against a humble ant, and the Hoopoe and the Queen of Sheba, in Solomon's story; the defeat of the plot of the nine wicked men in the story of Salih; and the crime of sin with open eyes in the story of Lot;—lead up to the lessons of true and false worship and the miracles of God's grace and revelation.

Summary. - Wonderful is Revelation, like the Fire which Moses saw, which was a glimpse of God's Glory, and His Miracles, which searched out those who refused Faith in spite of the light they had received (xxvii. 1-14, and C. 169).

Solomon knew the speech of Birds and had hosts of Jinns and men; yet the wise ant had ample defence against them: the Hoopoe who was absent at his muster, was yet serving him: the Queen of Sheba had a kingdom, but it submitted with conviction to the Wisdom of Solomon and the Kingdom of God (xxvii. 15-44, and C: 170).

Fools ascribe ill-luck to godiness as in Salih's story, or fall into their lusts with their eyes open, as in Lûts story; but their plots and their rage will be foiled by God (xxvii. 45-58, and C. 171).

God's glory and condess are supreme over all Creation: Unfaith will yield to Faith in the final adjustment of values: so follow Revelation, serve God, and trust in Him (xxvii. 59-93, and C. 172).

C. 169.— Revelation shows us a glimpre of the spiritual (xxvii. 1-14)

World, guides us in this life, and gives us

The Hope of eternal Bliss in the Hereafter.

It works a complete transformation in us,

As it did with Moses when he saw

The mystic Fire and was given the Signs

With which to reclaim a people lost

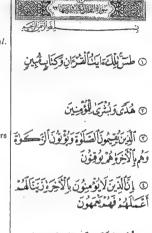

In superstition and sin, and proud of sin.

3240. See n 3137 to xxvi, 1,

3241. Revelation is here presented in three aspects: (1) it explains things, the nature of God, our own position, and the spiritual world around; (2) it directs us to right conduct and keeps us from evil; and (3) to those who have Faith and accept its guidance, it gives the good news of forgiveness, purification, and the achievement of salvation.

3242. Those who reject God and follow Evil have a good conceit of themselves. Their deeds are pleasing to no one else. As they have rejected God's guidance, they are allowed to hug their own self-conceit, and given further respite for repeatance. But fivey follow their own whims and wander about in distraction, as they have no standards such as guide the godly.

3243. The account will then be made up, and they will be found to be terribly in loss. They will be the worst in loss, for all their self-complacency.

  But when he saw it

3244. Cf, xx. 9-24. Both there and here there is a reference to the dawn of Revelation in the heart of Moses. The points there emphasised will be found in the noises to that passage. Here the emphasis is on the wonderful nature of the Fire and the wonderful way in which Moses was transformed at the touch of spiritual Light. He was travelling in the Sinai deseit with his family. Seeking ordinary light, he came upon a Light which took kim to the highest mysteries of God. No doubt all his inner history had prepared him for his great destiny. It is the inner history that matters, and not he place or position of a man in the eyes of his ordinary fellows.

3245. Those; in the original the pronoun is in the singular, "man", which is often used with a plural meaning. The Commentators usually construent to mean that it was not a physical fire, but it was the glory of the Angels, a reflection of the Glory of God. Hence the exclamation at the end of the verse.

3246. Moses was now transported into an entirely new world. What he had taken to be an ordinary fire was a gleam of the spiritual world,—rays from the angels of light. The desert in which he had been was the lower life stripped of its ornaments, leading to the divine light of Sinai. Through that Light he heard the Voice of the Source of Wisdom and Power. His own rod or sail was no longer the dead piece of wood that had hithere supported him. It became instinct with life, a life that moved, and had the power of offence and defence in it, as all living Good must have in its fight with Evil. His own transformation is described in the next note.

324. In this great, new, wonderful world, that was opening out to Moses, he had to get his vision adjusted to his new surroundings, as an ordinary man has to adjust his sight before he can seein any very strong light that is new to him. The staff which had become alive as a snake frightened him: yet it was to be his own instrument of work in his new mission. All fear was to be cast out of his mind, as befired a man chosen by God,

- 11. " But if any have done wrong And have thereafter substituted Good to take the place of evil, $548 Truly, I am Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful.
- 12." Now put thy hand into Thy bosom, and it will Come forth white without stain 3945 (Or harm): (these are) among The nine Signs (thou wilt take) 3750 To Pharaoh and his people: For they are a people Rebellious in transgression."
- 13. But when Our Signs came To them, that should have 3201 Opened their eyes, they said: "This is sorcery manifest!"
- 14. And they rejected those Signs In iniquity and arrogance, Though their souls were convinced Thereof: so see what was The end of those Who acted corruptly !

C. 170.-No less were David and Solomon versed. (xxvii. 15-44.) In knowledge and mystic wisdom. Even Solomon could appreciate the wisdom Of the humble Ant. He used all his power And resources in extending the Kingdom

3249. Cf. xx. 22. There the expression is: "Draw thy hand close to the side." As far as the physical act is concerned, the expressions there and here mean the same thing. Moses had a House fitting robe. If he put his hand within the folds of the robe, it would go to his bosom on the side of his body opposite to that from which his hand came; i.e., if it was his right hand it would go to the left side of his bosom. But the difference of expression has a little spiritual significance. The b. som here stands for his innermost being, which was being so transformed with divine light as to · land the radiance to his hand also, his instrument of action. The hand comes out white and radiant, without a stain. Ordinarily if the skin becomes white it is a sign of disease or leprosy. Here it was the opposite. It was a sign of radiance and glory from the higher Light.

3250. The nine Signs; see n. 1091 to vii, 133,

3251. The Signs should have clearly opened the eyes or any persons who honestly examined them and thought about them. Those who rejected them were perverse and were going against their own light and inner conviction. That was the aggravating feature of their ain,

Of God. In wonderful ways did He lead The Queen of Sheba to the Light of the Faith Of Unity, and confirmed her in pure Worship, the worship of the Lord of the Worlds.

SECTION 2.

C. 170 f

15. The gave (in the past) Knowledge to David and Solomon: 429

And they both said: "Praise be to God. Who Has favoured us above many Of His servants who believe!" 3250

16. And Solomon was David's heir. 3251 He said: "O ve people! We have been taught the speech 3855 Of Birds, and on us Has been bestowed (a little) Of all things: this is Indeed Grace manifest (from

17. And before Solomon were marshalled

3252. C). xxi 78-82 "Knowledge" means such knowledge as leads up to the higher things in life, the Wisdom that was shown in their decisions and judgments, and the understanding that enabled then, to fulfil their mission in life. They were both just men and apostles of God. The Bible, as we have it, is inconsistent; on the one hand it calls David " a man after God's own heart "(I Samuel, xiii, 14, and Acts xiii. 22); and the Christians acclaim Christ as a son of David; but on the other hand, horrible crimes are ascribed to him, which, if he had committed them, would make him a monster of cruelty and injustice. About Solomon, too, while he is described as a glorious king, there are stories of his lapses into sin and idolatry. The Muslim leaching considers them both to be men of piety and wisdom, and high in spiritual knowledge.

- 3253. They ascribed, as was proper, their knowledge, wisdom, and power to the only true Source of all good, God
- 3254. The point is that Solomon not only inherited his father's kingdom but his spiritual insight and the prophetic office, which do not necessarily go from father to son.
- 3255. Speech of Birds. The spoken word in human speech is different from the means of communication which birds and animals have between each other. But no man can doubt that they have means of communication with each other, if he only observes the orderly flight of migratory birds or the regulated behaviour of ants, bees, and other creatures who live in communities. The wisdom of Solomon and others like him (he speaks of "we") consisted in understanding these thingsin the animal world and in the lower fringes of human intelligence,
- 3256, "A little of all things": Solomon was a king of power and authority; outside his kingdom he had influence among many neighbouring peoples; he had knowledge of birds, and beasts and plants; he was just and wise, and understood men; and above all, he had spiritual insight, which brought him near to God. Thus he had something of all kinds of desirable gifts. And with true gratitude he referred them to God, the Giver of all gifts.

His hosts,—of Jinns and men And birds, and they were all Kept in order and ranks.****

18. At length, when they came
To a (lowly) valley of ants,
One of the ants said:
"O ye ants, get into
Your habitations, lest Solomon
And his hosts crush you
(Under foot) without knowing

19. So he smiled, amused
At her speech; and he said:
"O my Lord I so order me
That I may be grateful
For Thy favours, which Thou
Hast bestowed on me and ""O
On my parents, and that
I may work the righteousness
That will please Thee: ""
And admit me, by Thy Grace,
To the ranks of Thy Righteous Servants." " ami

323. Besides the literal meaning, there are two symbolical meanings. (1) All his subjects of varying grades of intelligence, taste, and civilization, were kept in due order and co-operation, by his discipline, justice, and good government. (2) The gifts of various kinds, which he possessed (see last note), he used in proper order and co-ordination, as if they were a well disciplined army, thus gatting the best possible results from them.

3258. This verse and the next, read together, suggest the symbolical meaning as predominant. The ant, to outward appearance, is a very small and humble creature. In the great pomp and circumstances of the world, she (generic feinnine in Arabity may be neglected or even trampled on by a people who mean her no harm. Yet, by her wisdom, she carries on her own life within her own sphere ("habitations") immolested, and makes a useful contribution to the economy of the world. So there is room for the humblest people in the spiritual world.

329 The counterpart to the position of the lumble ant is the position of a great king like Solomon. He prays that his power and wisdom and all other gifts may be used for incheousness and for the benefit of all around him. The ant being in his thoughts, we may suppose that he means particularly in his prayer that he may not even unwittingly tread on humble beings in his pre-occupations with the great things of the world.

3260. The righteousness which pleases the world is often very different from the righteousness which pleases God. Solomon prays that he may always take God's Will as his standard, rather than the standards of men.

3261. In the Kingdom of God, righteousness is the badge of citizenship. And although there are great and noble grades (see n 586 to iv 69), the base of that citizenship is the universal brotherhood of righteousness. The greatest in that Kingdom are glad and proud to pray for that essential badge.

- 20. And he took a muster
  Of the Birds; and he said:
  "Why is it I see not
  The Hoopoe? Or is he
  Among the absentees?
- 21. "I will certainly punish him With a severe penalty. Or execute him, unless he Bring me a clear reason (For absence)."
- 22. But the Hoopoe tarried not Far: he (came up and) said: "I have compassed (territory) Which thou hast not compassed, And I have come to thee From Saba 2000 with tidings true.
- 23. "I found (there) a woman <sup>2804</sup> Ruling over them and provided <sup>2306</sup> With every requisite; and she Has a magnificent throne.

3262. Solomon was no idle or easy-going king. He kept all his organisation strictly up to the wind the stress literally and his forces (metaphonically). His most-mobile arm was the Birds, who were light on the wing and few and saw everything like efficient scouts. One day he missed the Hoopee in his muster. The hoopee is a light graceful creature, with elegant plumage of many colours, and a beautiful yellow creation his head, which entitles him to be called a royal bird.

1831. Saba may reasonably be identified with the Biblical Sheba (1 Kings x. 1-10). It is further there do not be Start called after its name; xxxiv; 15-20. It was a city in Yemen, said to h., r been there days' journey (sav 30 miles) from the city of Ban2. A recent German explorer, Dr. Hans Helfittz, claims to have located it in what is now Radframaut territory. The famous dam of Makrib made the country very prosperius, and enabled it to ration a high degree of crivilation ("provided with every requisite" in the next verse). The Queen of Sheba therefore rightly held up her head high until the beheld the glories of Solomon

3264. The Queen of Sheba (by name Bilgis in Arabian tradition) came apparently from Yennen, but she had affinities with Abyssinia and possibly ruled over Abyssinia also. The Habsish inbe (after whom Abyssinia was named came from Yennen. Between the southern coast of Yennen and the north-eastern coast of Abyssinia (now occupied by Italy and France) there are only the Strais of BBA-B-Mandab, barely twenty miles across. In the 10th or 11th century BC there were frequent invasions of Abyssinia from Arabia, and Solomon's reign of 40 years is usually synchronised with B.C. 92 to 952. The Sabana and Bingarite alphabets, in which we find the south Arabian pre-Islamic inscriptions, passed into Ethiopic, the language of Abyssinia. The Abyssinians possess a traditional history called "The Book of the Glory of Kings" (Kebra Nagast), which has been translated from Ethiopic into English by Sir E. A. Wallis Budge (Oxford, 1932). It gives an account of the Queen of Sheba and her only son Menyelek I, as founders-oft the Abyssinian dynasty.

3265 Provided with every requisite: I take this to refer not only to the abundance of spices and gens and gold in her country, but to sciences and arts, and perhaps the spiritual possibilities which made her accept the religion of Unity and Truth (xxvii. 4).

24. "I found her and her people Worshipping the sun besides

Satan has made their deeds Seem pleasing in their eyes, And has kept them away From the Path,—so They receive no guidance.—

  That they should not worship

  What is hidden in the heavens
  And the earth, and knows
  What ye hide and what Ye reveal.
- 26, "God!—there is no god But He!—L,ord of the Throne 3268 Supreme!"
- (Solomon) said: "Soon shall we See whether thou hast told The truth or lied!"

3266. The accient religion of the people of Saba (the Simyar or Sabaans) consisted in the worship of the heavenly bodies, the sun, the planets, and the stars. Possibly the cult was connected with that of Chaldrae, the home-land of Abraham, see vi 75 79 and notes thereon. Yemen had easy access to Mesopotamia and the Persian Gull, by way of the sea, as well as with Abyssinia. That accounts for the Christians of Najard and the Jewish dynasy of kings (e.g., 26 Nuwas, d. 32 A.D.) who persecuted them in the century before Islam,—also for the Christian Abyssinian Governor Abraha and his discomfuture in the year of the Prophet's buttin (5 cv.), say 370 A.D. Jewish-Christian influences were powerful in Arabia in the sixth century of the Christian feat.

The religion of these Sabzeans (written in Arabic with a Sin) should not be confounded with that of the Babians (with a Sad), as to whom see n 76 to it 62.

3267. The false worship of the Sabeans is here exposed in three ways: (i) that they were sell-satisfied with their own human achievements, instead of looking un to God; and (i) that the light of the heavenly bodies which they worshipped was only dependent on the true Light of God, which extends over heaven and earth; the Creator should be worshipped rather than His Creation; and (i) God knows the hidden secrets of men's minds as well as the objects which they openly profess: are false worshippers really only worshipping their own selves, or the "sins they have a mind to " and are therefore afraid to go to God, Who knows all?

3208. The measenger (Hoopoe) is a pious bird, as belts a meastenger of Solomon, After mentioning the false worship of the Sababans, he pronounces the Creed of Unity, and emphasises God's attribute as Lord of the Throne of Glory supreme, in order to make it clear that whatever may be the magnificence of a human throne such as he has described (in verse 23), he is not in any way misled from his loyalty to Solomon, the exponent of the true Religion of Unity.

3269. Solomon does not doubt his messenger's plea that he has scouted a new country, but wants to test whether he has loosened the rein of his imagination in describing its splendours or its worship

- 28. "Go thou, with this letter Of mine, and deliver it To them: then draw back From them, and (wait to) see What answer they return"....
- (The Queen) said: "Ye chiefs!
   Here is—delivered to me—
   A letter worthy of respect.
- 30, "It is from Solomon, and is (As follows): 'In the name sno Of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful:
- 31. "'Be ye not arrogant Against me, but come To me in submission (To the true Religion),"
- 32. She said: "Ye chiefs!

  My affair: no affair
  Have I decided

SECTION 3.

- 33. They said: "We are endued With strength, and given To vehement war: But the command is. With thee; so consider What thou wilt command."
- 34. She said: "Kings, when they sent Enter a country, despoil it, 3270. Solomon expressly begins his letter with the formula of the true and universal Religion of Unity, and he invites to the true Faith the new people with whom he establishes honourable relations, not for worldly conquest but for the spreading of the Light of God.

3271. The character of Queen Bildy, as disclosed here, is that of a ruler enjoying great wealth and digaity, and the full confidence of her subjects. She does nothing without consulting her Council, and her Council are ready to carry out her commands in all things. Her people are manly, loyal, and contented, and ready to take the field against any enemy of their country. But their queen is prudent in policy, and is not willing to embroil her country in war. She has the discrimination to see that Solomon is not like ordinary kings who conquer by violence. Perhaps in her heart she has a ray of the divine light already, though her people are yet Pagans. She withes to carry her people with her in whatever she does, because she is as loyal to them as they are to her. An approach of the divine light she shall be also also because the is as loyal to them as they are to her. An approach of the property of the divine light she has a start of the control of the shall be a sh

- 36. Expow when (the embassy) came To Solomon, he said: "Will ye give me abundance In wealth? But that which God has given me is better Than that which He has Given you! Nay it is ye Who rejoice in your gift!ana
- 37. "Go back to them, and be sure We shall come to them With such hosts as they Will never be able to meet: We shall expel them From there in disgrace, And they will feel Humbled (indeed)."
- 38. He said (to his own men):
  "Ye Chiefs! which of you
  Can bring me her throne sers
  Before they come to me
  In submission?"
- 39. Said an 'Ifrit, 2274 of the Jinns:
  "I will bring it to thee

افسدُوهِ عَالَوَ عَلَمُ الْمَاعِدَةُ الْهَالِمَةُ الْمَالِمَةُ الْمَالِمَةُ الْمَالَةُ وَكَالُولَ مَنْ عَلَمُون ﴿ وَالْهِ مُرْسِلُهُ الْنِسَالُونَ ﴿ وَالْمَا عِنَا مِسْلَمِنَ مَا اللّهِ عَلَمُ اللّهِ مَا اللّهِ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ الللللّهُ الللّهُ الللللّهُ الللّهُ الللللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللللللّ

3272. Poor Bilqts! she thought she had arranged with womanly tact to conciliate Solomon, and at the same time pacify her warlike subjects! But the effect of the embasy with presents was the very opposite. Solomon took it as an insult that she should send her presents instead of her submission to the true Religion! He flung back the presents at her, as much as to say, "Let these baubles delight your own hearts! God has blessed me with plenty of worldy goods, and something infinitely better, riz: His Light and Guidance! Why do you say nothing about that? Will you only understand the argument of armies and violence?" Or perhaps his speech was only meant for the Sabrean crowd. For when she actually came, he treated her kindly, and she accepted the religion of Unity.

3273. The throne is symbolical of power and dignity. So far her throne was based on material wealth: Solomon is going to alter it to a basis of Faith and the Religion of Unity.

3274. 'Ifrit: a large, powerful jinn, reputed to be wicked and crafty: hence he is anxious to be recognised as one that "could be trusted"

Before thou rise from thy Council: indeed I have Full strength for the purpose, And may be trusted."

- 40. Said one who had knowledge 3215 Of the Book: "I will Bring it to thee within The twinkling of an eye!" Then when (Solomon) saw it Placed firmly before him. He said: "This is By the grace of my Lord !- 3276 To test me whether I am Grateful or ungrateful! And if any is grateful, Truly his gratitude is (a gain) For his own soul; but if Any is ungrateful, truly My Lord is Free of all Needs Supreme in Honour!" 3em
- 41: He said: "Transform her throne Out of all recognition by her: Let us see whether she Is guided (to the truth) 279

@ فَالْنَكِيْرُواْلْمَنَا عَرْضَهَا نَنظرْأَتَهُ لَدِي

1275. The symbolic meaning still continues. The big 'Ifitt had bassed of his britte strength, and bassed on inward knowledge, knowledge of the heart and spirit, the sort of knowledge that comes from the Book of the Grace of God, the spirit of truth and benevolence which is the invisible magic often of God. Even if worldly power and common honesty may be able to effect some good, it will take a commaratively long time, while the magic of spiritual love nots instantaneously. Solomon was thankful to God that he had men endowed with such power, and he had the throne of Bilgis transported to his Court and transformed as he desired, without Bilgis even knowing it.

3276. If Solomon had been ungrateful to God, i.e., if he had worked for his own selfish or worldly ends, he could have used the brute strength of 'lift to add to his worldly strength and gloy, Instead of it he uses the higher magic of the Book,—of the Sport—to transform the throne of bligts for her highest good, which means also the highest good of her subjects, by the divine Light. He had the two alternatives, and he chooses the better, and he thus shows his gratitude to God for the Grace He had given him.

327. Man's gratitude to God is not a thing that benefits God for God is high at ove all needs: it benefits a man's own soul and gives him higher rank in the spiritual world. Per contra, munisingratitude will not detract from God's Glory and Honour or the value of God's generous gifts to man: for God is supreme in honour, glory, and generosity Karlin in Arabic involves all three significations.

3278. The throne having been transformed, it will be a test to see whether Bildis recognises it as her own and accepts it of her own free will as her own, or rejects it as something also to her, something she will not accommodate herself to. So in our life. We get used to certain habits and customs and certain ways of thought. God's Mesage comes to transform us and set us on a different kind of throne, with our own active and willing consent. If we are week, we feel honoured and grateful. If we are "obstinately rebellious", we reject it as not our own, and pine for the old slavery, as the Israelites pined for Egypt when they were under God's guidance in the widdeness.

Or is one of those who Receive no guidance.

- 42. So when she arrived,
  She was asked, "Is this Thy throne?" She said,
  "It was just like this; 2009
  And knowledge was bestowed
  On us in advance of this,
  And we have submitted
  To God (in Islam)."
- 43. And he diverted her *****

  From the worship of others Besides God: for she was (Sprung) of a people

  That had no faith.
- 44. She was asked to enter some
  The lofty Palace: but
  When she saw it, she Thought it was a lake
  Of water, and she (tucked up
  Her skirts), uncovering her legs.
  He said: "This is
  But a palace paved

3279. Biligis stands the test. She knows it was her throne, yet not exactly the same, for it was now much better. And she is proud of her good fortune, and acknowledges, for herself and her people, with gratitude, the light which was given to them by God, by which they recognised God's apostle in Solomon, and received the true Religion with all their will and heart and soul.

3280. Some Commentators and Translators adopt an alternative construction for the last clause of the last verse and the first clause of this verse. They understand the former to be spoken by Solomon and to mean, 'we had knowledge of God's Message and accepted it before her.' They understand the latter to mean, 'the worship of others besides God diverted her (from the true Religion).' If we accept the construction adopted in this Translation, the visit to Solomon confirmed the true Faith of Bilqis and prevented her from lapshig into her ancestral false worship.

3281. The 'symbolic meaning takes us a stage further. But first let us take the literal story, Bilqis, having been received with honour on her arrival, and having accepted the transformation of her throne, placed presumably in an outer building of the Fulace, is asked to enter the great Palace itself. Its floor was made of slabs of smooth polished glass, that glistened like water. She thought it was water, and tucked up her clothes to pass through it, showing her bare feet and ankles. This was a very undignified position for a woman, especially one of the position of a Queen. Solomon immediately undeceived her, and told her the real facts, when she felt grateful, and joined herself with Solomon in praising God.

C. 171.—In Salih's pure preaching the evil Tham0d
(xxvii. 45 88) Found omens of ill to themselves: in secret
They plotted to take his life, and like cowards
They made a league to cover their crime
With lies. Lo I on themselves recoiled
The plot: they perished in utter ruin.
The men admonished by Lot were false
To themselves: they insulted the nature given
Them by God, and mocked the Message of Purity.
Lo! they were buried in a shower of brimstone!

3222, In symbolic language, a new entrant into the Palace of divine knowledge, may yet carry in him did many of the illusions of the lower world. The transparent crystal of Truth he may yet mistake for the unstable water of worldly vanily, which so ilst be vestiments of those who paddle in it. This leads to many undignified positions and mistakes. But a gentle leader points out the truth. Instead of resenting it, the new entrant is grateful; acknowledges his own mistake frely and frankly; and heartily joins with the Teacher in the worship of God, the Source of all truth and knowledge.

3285, All evil unpunished is not evil condoned, but evil given a chance for reform. They are on trial, by the mercy of God. What they call "ill omen" is really the just punishment for their ill-deeds, and that punishment rests with God.

3286. They had made up their minds to wage a relentless war against justice. They did not destroy justice, but justice destroyed them.

3287. A most distandly plot. because (1) it was to be secret, (2) by night, (3) taking their victims unawares, and (4) because careful provision was made that they should all tell lies together, saying that they knew nothing about it, in order to evade the vengeance which Salh's heirs (if any were left) or his tribe might want to exact! And yet such were exactly the plots laid against the holy Prophet himself.

50. They plotted and planned, 3388

But We too planned,

3788, Cf. iii. 54. Their secret plotting is all known to God, but of God's just and beneficent plans they know pothing. And the wicked must come to an evil end, 3289. The story of Lū; is referred to elsewhere. The passages to which reference may be made here are: xxv. 160 175, and vii, 80 34. But the point emphasised here is that the crime of the Cities of the Plane was against their own nature, and they saw its enormity, and yet they included in it. Can degradation go further? His wife was not apparently a Believer. Her previous sympathy with the sinfly people "destined her" (verse 57 below) to a miserable end, as she lagged behind and shared in the destruction of her kinsfolk.

3300. The ignorance referred to hear is the spiritual Ignorance, the Ignorance of how grossnoss and sins that bring shame on their own-physication moral nature are doomed to destroy them: it is their own loss. That they knew the iniquity of their sins has already been stated in the last verse. That knowledge makes their spiritual Ignorance all the more culpable, just as a man consciously deceiving people by hall-tuths is a gegater lar than a man who tells its insandeviently.

S. XXVII. 56-59.1

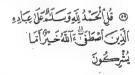

The followers of Lat from Your city: these are Indeed men who want To be clean and pure ! " 3091

- 57. But We saved him And his family, except His wife: her We destined To be of those Who lagged behind,
- 58. And We rained down on them A shower (of brimstone): And evil was the shower On those who were admonished (But heeded not)!

C. 172.-God's goodness and mercy are manifest (xxvii, 59-93.) Through all nature and in the heart and conscience Of man. He alone knows all: our knowledge Can at best be partial. Yet we can travel Through space and time and see how Evil Never prospered. God teaches us good, But how can we see if we make ourselves blind? At the end of all things shall we know how small Is our state, but for God's Grace : let us bow-To His Will and accept His true goidance: Let us praise Him and trust Him-now and for ever!

SECTION 5.

59. Say: Praise he to God, And Peace on His servants 270 Whom He has chosen (For His Message). (Who) Is better ?- God or to The false gods they associate 30 (With Him)?

3291, Cf. vii. 82-84. Instead of being ashamed on account of the consciousness of their own guilt, they attack the pure ones with their sarcasms, as if not they but the pure ones were in the wrong in trying to set them on the right way.

3292. God's revelation having been described as Light, Guidance, and Mercy, we ought all to be grateful to God for vouchsaling His revelation. We ought also to appreciate the services of God's Messengers, who are chosen to deliver His Message; we ought to send salutations of Peace on them, instead of plotting, as the wicked do, for their removal or persecution, or banishment or death. For these men of God undergo every kind of hardship and forego every kind of advantage or pleasure in life for serving mankind.' And God is truth and goodness, and all our fancies of false worship are falsehoods and evils. Shall'we prefer falsehood and evil to truth and goodness?

3293. The order, beauty, and grandeur of the Universe are appealed to. They show unity of design and purpose. How can unjust, ignorant, fool-th, heedless, false men think of a multiplicity of gods, or of any god besides the One True God?

3294. To make a single seed germinate and grow, into a tree is beyond man's power. When it without a Gardener's consummate art. And the orchard is more than the trees in it: there is design and beauty in their arrangement: proper spaces have to be left between them for the growth of their roots, for the acetation of the sool beneath them, and for the penetration of air and sunlight between their branches. How can any one then think of the wonderful Universe as a whole, without thinking of the far higher Unity of Design, the evidence of the Oar True God?

3295. Cf. xvi. 15 and notes 2038 and 2039. The terra firms, the flowing water, and the cycle of water circulation—sea, vapour, clouds, rain, tivers, and sea again,—all one and yet all distinct, with a sort of wonderful barrier between salt water and fresh water; cau man see all this and yet be ignorant to 40d?

3296. Cf. xxv. 53 and notes 3111 and 3112.

3297. Besides the evidence of external nature, there is the still more intimate evidence in man's inner conscience and heart. God listens to man's cry of agony and releves his suffering, and He has given him superiority over other creation on this earth, through his mind and soul. Is man then going to run after inferior beings and forget God?

3298, Cf. vi. 165, p. 988,

3299, Cf. xxv. 48, n. 3104. After external nature, our attention was drawn to our inner consciousness, after that, it is drawn here to our social and collective life, in which we use the forces of nature for international intercourse, trade, agriculture, production, and economic well-being generally. In the next verse, we are asked to contemplate creation from its primeval stages, through its intermediate processes, to the final Destiny in a new Creation—a new heaven and a new actth.

3300. Cf. x. 34, and n. 1428.

3302. All the arguments point to the Unity of God: there is none whatever against it.

3303 The existence of God is certain. But nothing else can be known with certainty to our knowledge. He has told us of the Hereafter, and therefore we know it is true. But those who do not believe in God,—what knowledge or certainty can they have? Even when it is actually coming, they will not have the sense to perceive it.

- ۞ قُلُعَنَّمَ ٓ أَن يَكُونَ رَدِفَ لَكُّ مَتَّمَى ۗ اَلْذَِى اَسْتَقِلُونَ

3004. The Unbelievers are generally materialists, who cannot go beyond the evidence of their physical senses. As to a spiritual vision of the future, their physical senses would only leave them in doubt and uncertainty, while their rejection of the spiritual Light makes them blind altogether to the spiritual world.

3305. Even if the Unbelievers are unwilling to take any mystic doctrine, they have only to observe what has actually happened on the arth, and they will see that evil always came to an evil end, and that Truth and righteousies sultimately work.

3306. Cf. xvi. 127, and n. 2164. The righteous need not worry over the unjust. The plots of the unjust can never defeat or defect the purpose of God.

3307. The Unbelievers—or even men of half-hearted faith—may say, "Why worry over distant future events? Take the day as it comes!" But that is a fallacy. Judgment is certain, and it may be that this very hour may be the hour of doom for any given individual. This is the hour of repentance and amendment. For God wishes well to all mankind in spite of their ingratitude.

(٢٧) سنورة التمل 996

3308. The chain of cause and effect is certain and clear. We stand or fall by our record. In this sense the doctrine of "Karma" is true, but it needs to be modified by the doctrine of "Grace"; for man may repent and obtain God's Mercy, and God's Mercy is like a good anget always trying to reclaim man, 3309. The Jews had numerous sects. Some were altogether out of the pale, e.g., the Samaritans, who had a separate Taurāt of their own: they hated the other Jews and were hated by them. But even in the orthodox body, there were several sects, of which the following may be mentioned; (I) the Pharisees, who were literalits, formalists, and fatalists, and had a large body of traditional literature, with which they overlaid the Law of Moses; (2) the Sadduces, who were rationalists, and seemed to have doubted the doctrine of the Resurroction or of a Hereafter; (I) the Essenes, who practised a sort of Communism and Asceticism and prohibited marriage. About many of their doctrines they had bitter disputes, which were settled by the Qu-ân, which supplemented and perfected the Law of Moses. It also explained clearly the nature of God and of Revelation, and the doctrine of the Hereafter.

3310. Decres: hikm: the disputes between rival sects can only be settled by the Decree of God,—(1) in the form of a Revelation, as was done by the Quran, or (2) by the logic of events, for hundreds of sects have been extinguished and forgotten in the course of time, and (3) in the Decree of Judgment in the Hereafter, when all jarring sects will at length see their errors.

<sup>3313.</sup> The Beast will be one of the Signs of the Last Days to come, before the present World passes away and the new World is brought into being. In symbolic language it would represent gross Materialism. It will be the embodiment of fat worldly triumph, which will appeal to a misguided and degreerate world, because such a corrupt world will have no assured belief in the Signs of God or in spiritual Light. It will itself he a Sign or Portent, closing tax door of repentance. I do not know whether this Beast has any reference to the symbolism in chapter xii. of the Book of Revelation, which closes the New Testament. Il fablimakem is read instead of inbalimakim, it would mean that the Beast would wound them; symbolically, that Materialism would produce its own Nemesis.

<sup>3314</sup> The charge against them will be: 'You had no knowledge, and yet you arrogantly rejected' my Signs: is that true, or have you any plea in your defence?'

3315 There will be no plea, because the charge will be only too true. The Decree will be passed and executed.

3316. Night, Day, Rest, and Light: both in the literal and the symbolic sense. Any one with a scrap of faith or spiritual insight could see that the Night is a blessing when used for rest and a curse when used to cover ignorance or sin; and that the Day is for work and eolightenment, and its misuse is gross ingratitude to God. Or, understand Truth and practise Righteousness while it is yet Light and the Message of God is here to guide you: for there comes the Night when Endeavour will case and there will be no room for Repentance.

3317. Arrogance will flee with Ignorance, and Self will see itself in its true place—that of humility and lowliness—when the scales of ignorance fall from its eyes.

3318. This is so in the present phase of phenomenal things, both literally and figuratively. There seems nothing more firm or fixed or permanent than the "eternal hills"; yet when the new order of things comes and the new World is brought into being, they will be as flimms and unsubstantial as clouds. So, in the revaluation of things in the spiritual World, persons or things or ideas that seem so great and so firmly established now will pass away like mere fancies and give way to the Reality of God.

(Such is) the artistry of God, Who disposes of all things <sup>318</sup> In perfect order: for He is Well acquainted with all that ye do.

332. The Lord of this City. This was spoken in Mecca, "say about the 5th year before the Hijrate, when the holy Prophet and his adherents were being persecuted as enemies to the cult of Mecca. So far from being against the true spirit of the holy City of Mecca, it was actually in furtherance of that spirit, which had been overlaid by the idolatries and abominations of the Pagan Quraish. They are fold that the new Teaching is from the Lord of Mecca uself, the One True God, Who had sanctified it in the time of Abraham. Lest they should think that it was a local or tribal or narrow cult, it is added that He is not only Lord of this City, but Lord of the Worlds, "to Whom belong all things.", It is a universal message; but how sad it would be if the Meccans, among whom it came first, were to reject it?

3323. The duty of the Apostle and his adherents was, first, to accept Islam and become themselves shiming examples of God's grace and mercy, as they in fact were, and secondly, to preach that message and spread that Light to all around. It was not for them to force it on unwiking people; for any who rejected it would find their own spiritual loss in such jejection. But they must clearly warn them of the consequences.

INTRODUCTION TO SERA XXVIII (Casas):

This Sara continues the subject of Revelation and its reception by those to whom it is sent. But it emphasises new points: how the recipient of inspiration is prepared for his high destiny, even in the growth of his ordinary life, and how the rejection of God's Message by groups of men or by individuals is caused by overweening arrogance or avarice. The plight of those who reject the Truth is contrasted with the reward of the righteous.

With the possible exception of a few verses, it belongs to the late Meccan period, just preceding the Hijrat.

Summary.—Pharaoh was arrogant and unjust, but God's Plan was to strengthen the weak: in infancy Moses was prepared for his mission; in youth he trusted in the Lord and was guided; in his exile he found help and love; and when he was called, he was supported by God (xxviii. 1.42, and C. 173).

So was the holy Apostle Muhammad fed spiritually by God's Grace, and his Revelation was recognised by those who knew the earlier Revelations: it came to an old and sacred Centre, to warn those seduced by this world's life (xxviii. 43.60, and C. 174).

The Future is with those who repent, have faith, and do good: for all Mercy and Truth are with God (xxviii. 61-75, and C. 175).

But men puffed up with wealth, like Qarun, will come to an cvil end, while the lowly and the righteous will attain God's Mercy (xxviii. 76-88, C. 176).

C. 173.—God's Apostles are men, and win through good life (zavni. 142)

By God's Grace and their Faith. So Moses

Was saved from the Tyrant's wrath in infancy,
And reared in the Tyrant's own den, but gently
In a mother's love. In youth was he endowed

With wisdom and knowledge, strength and the will
To do right. In sorrow or misfoctune
He trusted in God and opened his heart
To Him. In self-imposed exile'he won
Love by his chivalry and confidence by Truth.
In his mission he triumphed over arrogant

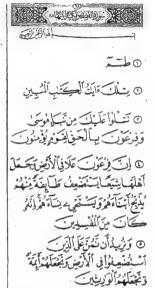

Wrong by his meekness, patience, and Faith.
So good follows good, and Evil must fall,
Cursed, loathed, disgraced, and despised.

- And We wished to be Gracious to those who were Being depressed in the land, sso To make them leaders (in faith) And make them heirs,

agray For a king or ruler to make invidious distinctions between his subjects, and specially to the is responsible to God Pharach and his subjects, is a dereiction of his kingly duties, for which he is responsible to God Pharach and his clique were intoxicated with pride of race and pride of material civilization, and grievously oppressed the Israelites. Pharach decreed that all male sons born to his Israelite subjects should be killed, and the females kept alive for the pleasure of the Expytians. Moses was saved in a wonderful way, as related further.

<sup>3330</sup> What Pharaoh wished was to crush them. But God's Plan was to protect them as they were weak, and indeed to make them custodians and leaders in His Fatth, and to give them in inheritance a land "flowing with milk and honey". Here they were established in authority for such ime as they followed God's Law. As regards Pharaoh and his ministers and hosts, they were to be shown that they would suffer, at the hands of the Israelites, the very calamities against which they were so onfidently taking precautions for themselves.

- 6. To establish a firm place For them in the land, And to show Pharaoh, Haman, Fun And their hosts, at their hands, The very things against which They were taking precautions, June
- 7. So We sent this inspiration To the mother of Mosses: "Suckle (thy child), but when Thou hast fears about him. Cast him into the river,<sup>2011</sup> But iear not nor gieve: For We shall restore him To thee, and We shall make Him one of Our apostles."
- 8. Then the people of Pharaoli Picked him up (from the river): (It was intended) that (Moses) Should be to them an adversary And a cause of sorrow: 3 "For Pharaoh and Haman And (all) their hosts were Men of sin.
- 9. The wife of Pharach said:
  "(Here is) a joy of the eye, same
  For me and for thee:
  Slay-him not. It may be

وَتُعَضِّنَ لَمُنْ فِي الْأَرْضِرَ وَثُرِي فَرَى فَعُوْنَ وَمُنْ فَعُلْمُ وَجُنُودَ لَمْ مَا مِنْهُمُ مَا مَا مُنْهُمُ وَالْمَا مُنْهُمُ مَا مَا مُنْهُمُ وَالْمَا فَا مُوسَى أَنْ أَرْضِوِرٌ فَالْمَا مَنْ مَا مُنْهُمُ وَالْمَا مُنْهُمُ وَالْمَا مُنْهُمُ وَالْمَا مُنْهُمُ وَالْمَا مُنْهُمُ وَالْمَا مُنْهُمُ مُنَا مُنْهُمُ وَمُنْهُمُ وَمُنْهُمُ وَمُنْهُمُ وَمُنْهُمُ وَمُنْفَعُمُ وَمُنْهُمُ نَ وَمُنْهُمُ ومُنْهُمُ ومُنْمُ ومُنْهُمُ ومُنْمُ ومُنْهُمُ ومُنْهُمُ ومُنْهُمُ ومُنْهُمُ ومُونُ مُنْهُمُ مُنْ م

- 3331. Haman was evidently Pharaolt's minister, not to be confounded with a Haman who is mentioned in the Old Testament (Exher in, 1), as a minister of Ahasierus (Xerxes) King of Persia, the same who invaded Greece, and ruled from E.C. 485 to 464.
- 3332. Pharauh was trying to kill the Israelites. Instead, the Plagues of Egypt, invoked by Moses, killed thousands of Egyptians (vii, 133, and notes 1001-92), because "they were steeped in arrogance, a people given to sin." In pursuing the Israelites in their flight, Pharaon and his army were themselves or envelopment in the sea.
- 3333. The Egyptian midwives had orders to kill braelite babes. Moses was saved from them, and his mother nursed the infant at her breast herself. But when the danger of discovery was imminent, she put him rule a chest or baskel, and floated him on the titre File. It flowed by the King's palace, and the chest with the baby was picked up, as related further on. The mother had no cause to fear or general filewards, as the child grew up under her tender care and became afterwards one of the apostles of God.
- 3334. This was the Plan of Providence; that the wicked might cast a net round themselves by fostering the man who was to bring them to naught and be the instrument of their punishment,—or tooking at it from the other side) that Moses might learn all the wisdom of the Egyptians in order to expose all that was hollow and wicked in it.
- 3335. He was a darling to look at, and Pharaoh had apparently no son, but only a daughter, who afterwards shared his throne. This is on the supposition that the Pharaoh was Thothmes I (see Appendix IV, S, vii).

That he will be of use To us, or we may adopt Him as a son." And they Perceived not (what they Were doing)! 3386

- 10. But there came to be
  A void in the heart
  Of the mother of Moses:
  She was going almost to Disclose his (case), had We
  Not strengthened her heart
  (With faith), so that she Might remain a (firm) believer. SASP
- 11. And she said to the sister Of (Moses), "Follow him", So she (the sister) watched him In the character of a stranger. And they knew not.
- 12. And We ordained that he Refused suck at first, until (His sister came up And) said: "Shall I Point out to you the people Of a house that will nourish And bring him up for you asse And be sincerely attached To him?"...
- 13. Thus did We restore him
  To his mother, that her eye
  Might be comforted, that she Might not grieve, and that
  She might know that the promise
  Of God is true: but
  Most of them do not understand.

قَدَدُنْهُ إِلَى أَيْهِ كَنَّ الْمَتَرَعَيْهَ الْمَالِقِينَ اللّهِ عَلَى الْمَتَرَعَيْهَ اللّهِ اللّهُ اللّهِ اللّهُ اللّ

3336. In all life Providence so orders things that Evil is defeated by its own weapons. Not only is it defeated, but it actually, though unwritingly, advances the cause of Good! In non-religious language this is called the work of the frontic Fates. If Thomas Hardy had not made Napoleon the Puppet of Fate in his "Dynasts", he could well have taken Pharach as an illustration of the Irony of Fate, or, as we should prefer to call it, the working of the Universal Plan.

3337. The mother's heart felt the gaping void at parting from her son; but her Faith in God's Providence kept her from betraying herself.

3338. For you; i.e. on your behalf. Thus Moses got the benefit of his mother's milk (symbolical of all the traditions and spiritual heritage of his ancestry and his people) as well as the previge and the opportunities of being brought up in the royal family, with the best of teachers to teach him Egyptian wisdom. In addition, there was the comfort to his mother.

3339. God's promise is always true, but short-sighted people, if they are a little thwarted in their plan, do not understand that God's wisdom, power, and goodness are far more comprehensive than any little plans which they may form.

SECTION 2.

- 14. When he reached full age,
  And was firmly established we
  (In life). We bestwed on him
  Wisdom and knowledge: for thus
  Do We reward those Who do good.
- 15. And he entered the City
  At a time when its people and
  Were not watching: and he Found there two men fighting,—
  One of his own religion,
  And the other, of his foes.
  Now the man of his own
  Religion appealed to him
  Against his f.e., and Moses
  Struck him with his fist. And made an end of him,
  He said: "This is a work
  Of Evil (Satan): for he is
  An enemy that manifestly
  Misleads!"
- 16. He prayed: "O my Lord!

  I have indeed wronged my sou!!

  Do Thou then forgive me!"

  So (God) forgave him: for He Is the Oft-Forgiving, Most

  Merciful.

لا ولا بلغ انسد واسلوک البنه و البنه

قَالَ رَبِّ إِنِّ ظَلَمْكُ نَفْسِى فَأَغْفِرْ لِي
 فَخَفَرَاهُ النَّ مُؤْهُ وَالْغَفْ ورُ الزَّحْيَــهُ

3340. Fall age may be taken to be mature youth, say between 18 and 30 years of age. By that time a person is fully established in life: his physical build is completed, and his mental and moral habits are formed. In this case, as Mose was good at heart, true and loyal to his people, and obedient and just to those among whom he lived, he was granted wisdom and knowledge from on high, to be used for the times of conflict which were coming for him. His internal development being complete, he now goes out into the outer world, where he is again tried and proved, until he gets his divine commission.

3341. That may have been either the time of the noontide siesta, when all business is suspended even now in Egypt, or the time of right, when people are usually asleep. The latter is goore probable, in view of verse 18 below. But there is also another suggestion. A guest in a Palace is not free to wander about at will in the plebeian quarters of the City at all sorts of hours, and this applies even more to an inmate of the Palace brought up as a son. Moses was therefore visiting the City privately and eluding the guards. His object may have been to see for himself how things were going on; perhaps he had heard that his people were being oppressed, as we may suppose that he had retained contact with his mother.

3342. His object was apparently to atrike him so as to release the Israelite, not to kill the Egyptian. In fact he killed the Egyptian. This was unfortunate in more ways than one. His visit to the City was clandestine; he had taken the side of the weaker and despised party; and he had taken the life of an Egyptian. He was full of regrets and repentance, and he prayed to God, and obtained God's forgivenes.

- 17. He said "O my Lord!

  For that Thou hast bestowed
  Thy Grace on me, neverShal! I be a help
  To those who sin!" NS
- 19. Then, when he decided to lay Hold of the man who was ****
  An enemy to both of them, That man said: "O Moses! Is it thy intention to slay me As thou slewest a man Yesterday? Thy intention is None other than to become A powerful violent man In the land, and not to be One who sets things right!"*****

3343. He takes a conscious and solemn yow to dedicate himself to God, and to do nothing that may in any way assist those who were doing wrong. This was his general idea, but no plan had yet shaped itself in his mind, until a second catastrophe brought matters to a head, and he was plunged in adventure.

3344. The man was an Israelite. But Moses was himself in a distracted mood, for the reasons given in n. 3342 above, and he was egasperated at this public appeal to him again.

3345, When Moses considered further that the Egyptian was unjust and that the Egyptian was an enemy to Israel generally (including both Moses and the man assaulted), he was going to intervene again, when he received à double warning, one from the Egyptian who was fighting, and the other from some man (Israelite or Egyptian) who was firendly to him, as explained below. We may suppose that after the first day's fight, there had been a great deal of talk in the bezart, both among Israelites and Egyptians. Probably the Israelites were elated att finding a champion—perhaps more elated than they should have been, and in a provocative mood, which deserved Moses's rebuke. Probably the Egyptians had discussed who this new champion was, and-had already apprised the Palace, to which Moses had not dared to return.

3346. The Egyptian saw the tactical advantage of his position. In effect he said: We have found out all about you. You live in the Palace, and yet you come clandestinely and kill our Egyptians. Are you going to do the same with me? You are nothing but a bully! And you talk of setting things right! That is what you should do if you were true to your sail t!

- 20. And there came a man,
  Running, from the furthest end sur
  Of the City. He said:
  "O Moses! the Chiefs
  Are taking counsel together
  About thee, to slay thee:
  So get thee away, for I
  Do give thee sincere advice."
- 21. He therefore got away therefrom, 346 Looking about, in a state Of fear. He prayed: "O my Lord! save me From people given to wrong-doing."

SECTION 3.

- 22. Mehen, when he turned his face Towards (the land of) Madyan, so He said: "I do hope That my Lord will show me The smooth and straight Path."
- 23. And when he arrived at The watering (place) in Madyan, and He found there a group Of men watering (their flocks), And besides them he found Two women who were keeping 3347. Apparently rumours had reached the Palace, a Council had been held, and the death of Moses had been decreed!

3348. Moses saw that his position was now untenable, both in the Palace and in the City, and maded anywhere in Pharaoli's territory. So he suffered voluntary exile. But he did not know where to go to. His mind was in a state of agitation. But he turned to God and prayed. He got consolation, and felt that after all it was no hardship to leave Egypt, where there was so much injustice and oppression.

3349. East of Lower Egypt, for about 300 miles, runs the Sinai Peninsula, bounded on the south by the Guiff of Suez, and on the north by what was the Islamus of Suez, now cut by the Suez Canal. Over the Islamus ran the highroad to Palestine and Syria, but a fugitive could not well take that road, as the Egyptians were after him. If he could, after crossing the Islamus, plunge into the Sinai desert, east or south-east, he would be in the Midianite territory, where the people would be Arabs and not Egyptians. He turned thither, and again prayed to God for guidance, 3350. The first thing that a wanderer in a desert would make for would be an oasis where he could get water from a spring or well, the shade of trees against the scorching sun, and some human company. The Midianite watering place was probably a deep well, at surface springs are rare in sandy deserts, where the water level is low, unless there was a hill from which issued a spring.

24. So he watered (their flocks)
For them; then he turned back
To the shade, and said:
"O my Lord!
Truly am I
In (desperate) need
Of any good
That Thou dost send me!"... Bask

25. Afterwards one of the (damsels)
Came (back) to him, walking
Bashfully. She said: "My father
Invites thee that he may
Reward thee for having watered
(Our flocks) for us." So when
He came to him and narrated
The story, he said:

مَالَ مَا خَطْلُ كُمَّا فَالْنَا لَانْكَ فِي حَنَّا فِي الْمَالَ مَا خَطْلُ كُمَّا فَالْنَا لَانْكَ فِي حَنَّا فِي الْمُنْ الْفَالِمِينَ الْمُنْفِقِ فَي الْمُنْفِقِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِيقِ اللَّهِ اللّلِيلِيلُولِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللّلِيلِيلُولِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللّلِيلِيلِيلُولِ اللَّهِ ال

3331. Here is a pretty little idyil, told in the fewest and most beautiful words possible. Moses arrives at an oasis in the desert, weary and travel-worn, with his mind full of anxiety and uncertainty owing to his recent experiences in Egypt. He was thirsty and would naturally seek water. At the well or spring he found shepherds (or perhaps goal-herds) watering their flocks. As a stranger it was not for him to thrust himself among them. He waited under the shade of a tree until they should finish. He noticed two damsels, also waiting, with their flocks, which they had come to water. His chivalry was roused. He went at once among the goal-herds, made a place for the flocks of the damsels, gave them water, and then resumed his place in the shade. They were modest maidens, and had given him in three Arable; words the key of the whole situation, 'Abb-fish highly in kelbrus'; our father is a very old man, and therefore cannot come to water the flocks; we therefore do the work: we could not very well thrust ourselves among these men.'

332. The maidens are gone, with smiles on their lips and gratitude in their hearts. What were the reflections of Mores as he returned to the shade of the tree? He returned thanks to God for the bright little vision which he had just seen. Had he done a good deed? Precious was the opportunity he had had. He had slaked his thirst. But he was a homeless wanderer and had a longing in his soul, which he dared not put into words. Those shepherds were no company for him. He was truly like a beggar in desperate need. For any little good that came his way, he was grateful. But what was this?—this vision of a comfortable household, presided over by an old man rich in flocks and berds, and richer still in two daughters, as modest as they were beautiful? Perhaps he would never see them grain! But Providence was preparing another surprise for him.

3333, Scarcely had he rested, when one of the damsels came back, walking with bashful grace! Modestly she gave her message. 'My father is grateful for what you did for us. He invites you, that he may thank you personally, and at least give some return for your kindness.

It will be (grace) from thee.
But I intend not to place
Thee under a difficulty:

الدانت أريداً أنكس حمل إضافه المنتخصة المنتحصة المنتخصة المنتحدد المنت

3334. Nothing could have been more welcome than such a message, and through such a messager. Moses went of course, and saw the old man, He found such a well-ordered patriarchal household. The old man was happy in his daughters and they in him. There was mutual confidence. They had evidently described the stranger to him in terms which made his welcome a foregone conclusion. On the other hand Mores had allowed his imagination to paint the father in something of the glorious colours in which his daughters had appeared to him like an angelic vision. The two men got to be friends at once. Moses told the old man his story,—who he was, how he was brought up, and what misfortunes had made him quit Egypt. Perhaps helve whole household, including the daughters, listened breathlessly to his tale. Perhaps their wonder and admiration were mingled with a certain amount of pity—perhaps with some more tender feeling in the case of the girl who had been to fetch him. Perhaps the chankment which besdemons felt in Othelio's story was working on her. In any case the stranger had won his place in their hearts. The old man, the head of the household, assured him of hospitality and asfety under his roof. As one with a long experience of life he congratulated him on his escape. Who would have among unjust people? It is as well you are free of them!

3355. A little time passes. A guest after all cannot stay for ever. They all feel that it would be good to have him with them permanently. The girl who had given her heart to him had spoken their unspoken thoughts. Why not employ him to tend the flocks? The father was old, and a young man was wanted to look after the flocks. And—there may be other possibilities.

.3356. Strong and Irusiy: Moses had proved himself to be both, and these were the very qualities which a woman most admires in the man she loves.

337. A little time passed, and at length the father broached the subject of marriage. It was not for the fugitive to suggest a permanent tie, especially when, in the wealth of this world, the girls family was superior, and they had an established position, while he was a mere wanderer. The father asked if he would marry one of the daughters and stay with them for at least eight years, or if he liked, ten years, but the longe term was at his option. If he brought not dower, his service for that period was more than sufficient in lieu of dower. The particular girl intended was no doubt tacitly settled long before, by the mutual attraction of the young hearts themselves. Moses was glad of the proposal, and accepted it. They ratified it in the most solemn manner, by appealing to God. The old man, knowing the worth of his son-in-law, solemnly assured him that in any event he would not take advantage of his position to be a hard task-master or to insist on anything inconsistent with Moses's interests, should a new future open out to him. And a new and glorious future was awaiting him after his apprenticeship.

Thou wilt find me.

1338 In patriarchal society it was not uncommon to have a marriage bargain of this kind conditional on a certain term of service. In this case the episode conveys two lesions. (1) A man destined to be an aposite of God is yet a man, and must pass through the ups and downs of life like any other man; only he will do it with more grace and distinction than other men. (2) The beautiful relations in follow and marriage may themselves be a preparation for the highest spiritual desting that may await a Messenger of God. A woman need not necessarily be a snare and a temptation; she may be the understanding help-mate that the Lady 'Meddiff, was to the holy Apostle.

3339. The episode in the desert, full of human interest, now closes, and we come to the threshold of the sacreid Call to the divine ministry of Moses. Here we may compare this passage with that in xwiii, 7-14 and previous passages. Note that a speech in such cases is not a literal report of spoken words, but a general rendering in human words of Commands, Events, and Thoughts, such as may be relevant in connection with any particular episode and its context. In this passage we are told, after reference to Moses's preparation for his high destiny, of the particular ain of Arrogance and Sacnlege of which Pharaoh was guilty (xwiii 38-39), how it was punished, and with what instruments in the hands of Moses and Pharaoh. The notes on the earlier passage should be read, as explanations already given need not now be repeated.

3360. Note how the transition is effected from the happy earthly life of Moses (with its previous earthly storm and stress) to the new spiritual storm and stress of his prophetic mission.

  "Draw near, and fear not:

  Who are secure.
- 32. "Move thy hand into
  Thy bosom, and it will

  Those are the two credentials
  From thy Lord to Pharaoh
  And his Chiefs: for truly
  They are a people
  Rebellious and wicked."

336). We are to suppose the appearance of a bush burning but not consumed (Exod, iii, 2), a device adopted by the Scotlish Church in its armorial bearings. Scotland apparently took that emblem and motto (Net cames consumed) rise, revertheless it was not consumed) from the Synod of the Reformed Church of France, which had adopted it in 1833. (I am indebted for this information to the Rev. DY, Robertson, Chaplain of the Church of Scotland in Simila). The real explanation of the Burning Bush will be found in xxvii. 8, n. 3245: it was not a fire, but a reflection of the Glory of God.

3362. The verbal meaning is: 'you's ave nothing to fear from what appears to be a snake; it is a nake, not for you, but for Pharach.' But there is a deeper meaning besiden.' Mores had now been called to a higher and splittinal mission. He had to meet the hatred of the Egyptians and circumvent their trickery and magic. He had now the security of Paith: in all dangers and difficulties God would guide and protect him, for he was actually in God's service, one of the Elect.

3363. Literally, "dfaw thy wing close to thy side, (away) from fear". When a bird is frightened. It ruffies its wings and prepares to fly away, but when it is calm and composed, it sits with its wings drawn close to its sides, showing a mind secure from danger. Cf. also p. 2550 to xx, 2550 to xx.

3364. It is not that Moses is not reassured from all fear on account of the apparent snake which his rod had become, or from the sacred and unfamiliar surroundings in which he found himself. On this point his heart has been completely assured. But he is still new to his mission, and the future is obscure to his mind. Pharaoh was after him, to take his life, and apparently with good cause, because one of Pharaoh's men had been slain at his hands. And now he is commanded to go to Pharaoh and rebuke him and his Chiefs. The inner doubts and difficulties of his human mind he frankly lays before his Lord, and asis for a little human and visible support, which is granted him at once, viz.: the help of his brother Aaron.

3365 To touch you; to approach you anywhere near, in the wonders and Signs that you will show them under the divine authority with which you are invested.

3366 The potency of God's Light is such that its divine rays reach the humblest of those who seek after Him. The Prophets can certainly work wonders, but their sincere followers in Faith can do so also in their own spheres. Wonders may appeal to people, but they are not the highest signs of God's workings, and they are around us every day in our lives.

. 3367. This is what Moses was thinking of when he had said: "They may accuse me of falsehood". To accuse the purest Truth of lying is a favourite trick of those whose chief stock-in-trade is deception and sorcery and catching the attention of the vulgar by arts adapted to their ignorant minds!

3368. 'As to this higher talk of the worship of the One true God, why, our ancestors have worshipped power and patronage, as concentrated in Pharaoh, from the most ancient times t

- 37. Moses said: "My Lord
  Knows best who it is
  That comes with guidance
  From Him and whose End
  Will be best in the Hereafter:
  Certain it is that
  The wrong-doers will not

- 38. Pharaoh said: "O Chiefs! No god do I know for you sero But myself: therefore, O Haman! light me a (kiln To bake bricks) out of clay, And build me a lofty seri Palace, that I may mount up To the god of Moses:
  But as far as I am concerned, I think (Moses) is a liar!"
- 39. And he was arrogant and insolent
  In the land, beyond reason,—
  He and his hosts: they thought
  That they would not have
  To return to Us!" <sup>250</sup>
- 40. So We seized him
  And his hosts, and We
  Flung them into the sea: 8878
  Now behold what was the End
  Of those who did wrong!

3369. Cf. vi. 135. The only argument in such a case is an appeal to God, and to the ultimate Future. Both of these appeals require Faith. But even if you do not rely on anything so high, you can see that Falsehood or evils crystallised in ancestral customs are not going to do any one any good.

3370. Pharach claimed, himself, to be God,—not only one god among many, but the only god:
"I am your Lord Most High": lxxix. 24. At any rate he did not see why his people should worship any one but him

3371. I understand his speech to his minister Hämän to be sarcastic. But some Commentators have taken it very seriously and imagined that he actually thought of reaching the beavens by building lofty towers.

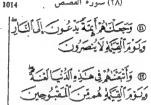

3377. They did not believe in the Hereafter. They did not understand that every deed must have its inevitable consequence, good or evil, unless the Grace of God intervenes to save us from ourselves!

3373, Pharaoh and his hests were drowned in the sea in their pursuit of the Israclites: see vii. 130-136. They are the type of men who lead—only to Destruction. They invite, not to Peace and Happiness, but to the Fire of Wrath, mutual Envy, and Hatred.

41. And We made them (but) Leaders inviting to the Fire : And on the Day of Judgment No help shall they find.

S. xxvIII. 41-43.1

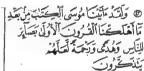

42. In this world We made A Curse to follow them: 8574 And on the Day of Indement They will be among The loathed (and despised).

C. 174.- As with Moses, so with the Aposcle Muhammad: (xxviii. 43-60.) Revelation was given to him, by which He knew and understood, and led men and was kind He was a Mercy to men, sent by God, to warn Those in sin, and, by precept and example. To bring the Light to their very doors. Those who had spiritual eyes rejoiced. And walked in God's ancient Way, now reopened, Valuing the things of the Spirit as God's Own gifts, to be their possession for ever !

SECTION 5.

43. We did reveal to Moses The Book after We had Destroyed the earlier generations. (To give) Insight to men And Guidance and Mercy That they might receive admonition.237

3374. Power and patronage may be lauded by sycophants and selfish place-hunters : but when they are misused, and when their exposure causes their fall, they suffer ignominy even in this life. If they manage to escape exposure while alive, it often happens that they are found out after their death, and the curses of many generations follow those whose oppressions and wrong-doing spoiled the fair face of God's earth. But even this is nothing to the true Punishment that will come in the Hereafter. There, true values will be restored, and some of the highest and mightiest will be in the lowest depths of degradation.

3375. After the destruction of the Pharaonic Tyranny and other similar Tyrannes before them. God began a new age of Revelation, the age of Moses and his Book, Humanity began as it were with a clean slate again. It was a full Revelation (or Shari'al) which may be looked at from three points of view: (1) as Light or Insight for men, so that they should not grope in darkness; (2) as a Guide to show them the Way, so that they should not be misled into wrong Paths; and (3) as a Mercy from God, so that by following the Way they may receive God's Forgiveness and Grace. In vi. 91, we have a reference to Light and Guidance in connection with the Revelation of Moses, and in vi. 154 we have a reference to Guidance and Mercy in the same connection. Here all three are combined, with the substitution of Başair for Nar. Basair is the plural of Basirat, and may also be translated Proofs, as I have done in vi 104. Cf. also vii. 203, n. 1175, where the word is translated "Lights"

<sup>3377.</sup> That is, there were many generations that passed between Moses and the holy Prophet. Yet he knew by inspiration of the events of those times. Even if he had lived then, he could not have known the events that took place among the Midianites, except by inspiration, as he did not dwell among them.

<sup>3378. &#</sup>x27;Though thou wast not among the Midlanites, Our inspiration has told thee of the momentous events that took place among them when Moses was with them. This is itself a Sign that Yould make thy people understand.

<sup>3379</sup> This people was the Quraish. 'Though thou didst not see how Moses was invested with the propheth-office at Mount Tir. thou hast had similar experience thyself, and We have sent thee to the Quraish'to warn them of all their sins, and to repent and come into the Faith.

<sup>330.</sup> Now that a warner has come among them with all the authority that previous apostles possessed, and with all the knowledge which can only come by divine inspiration, they have no excuse left whatever. They cannot say, "No warner came to us." If any evil comes to them, as the inevitable result of their ill, deeds, they cannot blame God and say that they were not warned. Cf. xx. 134.

Send us an apostle? We Should then have followed Thy Signs and been amongst Those who believe!"

Do they not then reject (The Signs) which were formerly Sent to Moses? They say: "Two kinds of sorcery, Each assisting the other!" Sess And they say: "For us, We reject all (such things)!"

338! When a Revelation is sent to them, in the Qurân, adapted to all their needs and the needs of the time they live in, they hark back to antiquity. The holy Prophet was in many respects like Moses, but the times in which he lived were different from the times of Bloses, and his age did not suffer from the deceptions of sorcery, like that of Moses. The remedies which his age and future ages required for his Message was universally were different. His miracle of the Quraên was different and more permanent than the Rod and the Radiant-White Hand of Moses. But supposing that the Quraish had been humoured in their insincere demands, would they have believed? Dut they believe in Moses? They were only put up by the Jews to make objections which they themselves tild not believe in.

338. Moses was called a sorcerer by the Egyptians, and the wonderful words of the Qur-lin were called sorcery by the Quraish. As the Qur-an confirmed the Message of Mose, the Quraish objectors said that they were in collusion. The Quraish did not believe in God's Revealtion at all.

3383. They were challenged to produce something better, to be a guide in life. But as they could not, it was evident that their objections were fractious. They were only following their own selfish lusts of power, monopoly, and exploitation of the poor and ignorant: How can such people receive guidance?

3385. There were Christians and Jews who recognised that Islam was a logical and natural development of God's revelations as given in earlier ages, and they not only welcomed and acceptal Talam, but claimed, and rightly, that they had allways been Muslims. In that sense Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, and Jesus had all been Muslims. There were Muslims who had been Christians or Jews, both in Mecca and Medina. But when some Commentators proceed to tilustrate their Meccan verse by referring, for example to the Christian converts who came from Abyssinia with Jafar the brother of Radhrat 'Alt, they make a historical sip. The verse is perfectly general. It applies even how. True adherents of the law of Moses and Jesus must be Muslims, and the converse is also true.

3386. Their credit is twofold, in that before they knew Islam, they followed the earlier Law in that and sincerity, and when they were offered Islam, they readily recognised and accepted it, suffered in patient perseverance for its sade, and brought forth the fruits of righteousness.

338. The righteous do not encourage idle talk or toolish arguments about things sacred. If they find themselves in some company in which such things are fashionable, they leave politely. Their only rejoinder is: "We are responsible for our deeds, and you for yours; we have no 11-will against you; we wish you well, and that is why we wish you to know of the knowledge we have received; after that knowledge we nanot expect us to go back to the increasage which we have left.

Peace be to you: we Seek not the ignorant."

- 56. It is true thou wilt not Be able to guide every one ***
  Whom thou lovest; but God Guides those whom He will.
  And He knows best those Who receive guidance.
- 57. Æhey say: "If we were
  To follow the guidance with thee,
  We should be snatched away saw
  From our land." Have We not Established for them a secure
  Sanctuary, to which are brought
  As tribute fruits of all kinds,—
  A provision, from Ourselves?
  But most of them understand not.
- 58, And how many populations
  We destroyed, which exulted
  In their life (of ease and plenty)!
  Now those habitations of theirs,
  After them, are deserted,—
  All but a (miserable) few!
  And We are their heirs! 3500

3388. The immediate occasion for this was the death of Alit Taths an uncle whom the holy American the advanced who had befreended and protected him. The Apostle was naturally anxious that he should die in the profession of the true Faith, but the pegan Quraish leaders persuaded him to remain true to the faith of his fathers. This was an occasion of disappointment and grief to the Apostle. We are told that in such circumstances we should not grove, all whom we love do not necessarily share our views or beliefs. We must nightidge. God will guide whom He pleases and as He pleases. He alone knows the true invariances of things.

3389. Some Quraish said: "We see the truth of Islam, but if we abandon our people, we shall load on the land, and other people will dispossess us." The notwer is twofold, one literal and the other of deeper import. (I) "Your land? Why, the sanctuary of Necca is sacred and secure because God has made it so. If you obey God's Word, you will be strengthened, not weakened." (2) 'Mecca is the symbol of the Fortress of Spiritual Well-being. The Pruit of every Deed comes or should come as a tribute to Spiritual Well-being. What are you afraid of? It is God's Fortress. The more you seek God, the stronger you are in the Fortress."

3300. A life of ease and plenty is nothing to boast of. Yet peoples or cities or civilisations grow insolently proud of such things. There were many such in the past, which are now mere names! Their very sites are deserted in most cases, or buried in the debris of ages. India is full of such sites nearly everywhere. The sites of Harappa and Mohenjo Daro are the most ancient hitherto unearthed in India, and they are themselves in layers covering centuries of time! And how many more there may be, of which we do not know even names! Fatehpur-Sikti was a magnificent ruin within a single generation. And there are thousands of Qaubas once flourishing and now reduced to small villages or altogether deserted. But God is merciful and just. He does not destroy or degrade a people until they have had full opportunities of turning in repentance to Him and they have deliberately rejected His Law and coastinued in the practice of intiguity.

60. The (material) things which Ye are given are but The conveniences of this life And the glitter thereof; sen But that which is with God Is better and more enduring: Will ye not then be wise?

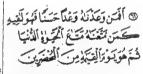

C. 175.—Material good is nothing compared (xxviii.61.75.)

To the spiritual. In the Fereafter
No plea 'that others misled' will avail.
Each soul must answer for itself,
Whether it honoured God alone
Or worshipped something else,
And whether it received or rejected
The Teachers sent by God. The Wisdom
And Plan of God are beyond all praise:
All mercy and truth proceed from Him,
And there is no other—none—besides Him.

SECTION 7.

ol. In re (these two) alike?—
One to whom We have made
A goodly promise, and who
Is going to reach its (fulfilment), 3509
And one to whom We have Given the good things of this Life, but who, on the Day
Of Judgment, is to be among Those brought up (for punishment)?

3391. The good things of this life have their uses and serve their convenience. But they are fleeting and their value is infinitely lower than that of Truth and justice and Spiritual Well-being, the gifts which come as it were from the very Presence of God. No wise soul will be absorbed in the one and neglect the other, or will hesitate for a moment if it comes to be a choice between them.

3392. The two classes of people are: (1) those who have faith in the goodly promise of God to the righteous, and who are doing everything in life to reach the fulfilment of that promise, i.e., those who believe and work righteousness, and (2) those who are ungrateful for such good things in this life as God has bestowed on them, by worshipping wealth or power or other symbols or idols of their fancy, i.e., those who reject Faith and lead evil lives, for which they will have to answer in the Hereslier. The two classes are poles assunder, and their future is described below,

62. That Day (God) will
Call to them, and say:
"Where are My 'partners'?—
Whom ye imagined (to be such)?,"

36. Those against whom the charge will be proved, will say:
"Our Lord! These are the ones Whom we led astray:
We led them astray, as we Were astray ourselves: we free Ourselves (from them) in Thy presence:

64. It will be said (to them):

"Call upon your 'partners'
(For help)": they will call
Upon them, but they will not
Listen to them; and they

It was not us they worshipped." 3994

Will see the Penalty (before them); (How they will wish) 'If only they had been

Open to guidance!

65. APA table (God) will see Call to them, and say:
"What was the answer
Ye gave to the apostles?"

66. Then the (whole) story that day Will seem obscure to them some (Like light to the blind) And they will not be able (Even) to question each other.

۵ مَضِلَ أَدْعُوا ثُمَرِكاً وَالْمَصَادُ وَعَوْهُمْ
 مَلَم بَسْنِجِيبُوا لَمُسْرَوراً وَالْسَنَابَ لَوَالْهَمْ
 كَانُوا بَهْكَ دُونَ

 وَهُ وَمُؤْمِنَا وَمِهُم فَيَعُولُ مَا أَا أَيْجَنَّهُ مَا اللَّهُ الْجَنْهُ مُا اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهِ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهِ اللَّهُ اللّ اللَّهُ اللَّ

فَيّبٌ مَلْيِهُ الْأَنْبَاءُ يُوْمَهِ ذِ
 فَعُدُلًا بَنْبَاءَ الْأَنْ

3393. This and the next verse are concerned with the examination of those who neglected truth tand righteousness and went after the worship of false gods, viz., their own justs. These were the "partners" they associated with God. In so far as they were embodied in false or wicked leaders, the leaders will discown responsibility for them. 'We ourselves went wrong, and they followed our example, because it suited them: they worshipped, not up, but their own justs.

3394. Cf. x. 28. False worship often names others, but really it is the worship of Self. The others whom they name will have nothing to do with them when the awful Penalty stands in the sight of both. Then each wong-doer will have to look to his own case. The wicked will then realise the gravity of the situation and wish that they had accepted the true guidance of God's Messengers.

3395. Now we come to the examination of those who rejected or persecuted God's Messengers on the earth. It may be the same men as those mentioned in xxviii. 62-64, but this is a different count in the charge.

3396. In their utter confusion and despair their minds will be blank. The past will seem to them unreal, and the present unintelligible, and they will not even be able to consult each other, as every one's state will be the same.

- 67. But any that (in this life)
  Had repented, believed, and worked
  Righteousness, will have hopes
  To be among those who Achieve salvation.
- 68. Phy Lord does create and choose
  As He pleases: 307 no choice
  Have they (in the matter):
  Glory to God! and far
  Is He above the partners
  They ascribe (to Him)!
- And thy Lord knows all That their hearts conceal And all that they reveal.
- 70. And He is God: there is No god but He. To Him
  Be praise, at the first
  And at the last:
  For Him is the Command,
  And to Him shall ye
  (All) be brought back.
- 71. Say: See ye? If God Were to make the Night 8889

3397, As He please: according to His own Will and Plan. God is not dependent on other people for advice or help. He has no partners. All creation is an act of His Will, and no one can direct Him how or why certain things should be, because He is supreme in, wisdom and knowledge. He chooses His apostles also by His own unfettered choice. Inspiration or spiritual knowledge and dignity cannot be judged of by our relative or temporary standards. Worldly greatness or even wisdom do not necessarily go with spiritual insight.

3398. Men may form all sorts of vain wishes or conceal their designs. But God's Will is supreme, and nothing can withstand its fulfilment.

3399. In the physical world the Night and the Day are both blessings, the one for rest and the other for work, and the alternation itself is one of the mercies of God, and none but He can give us these blessings. If we were perpetually resting, or screened from the light, our faculties would be blunted and we should be worse than dead. If we were perpetually working, we should be tired, and we should also be dead in another way. This daily mitacle keeps us alive and prepares us, in this our probationary life, for our final destiny in the Hereefert. So in the spiritual world. Some kinds of ignorance-such as ignorance of what is coming in the future—are necessary to conserve our powers and give rest to our minds and spirits, but if we were to remain ignorant perpetually, we should be spiritually dead. In the same way our spiritual strivings require periodical alternations of rest in the form of attention to our temporal concerns: hence the justification of a good and pure life on the plane of this carth also. Also, in the world's history, there resperieds when a living aposite stimulates intense spiritual activity, and periods when it is comparatively quiescent (the so-called Dark Ages); but both are examples of the working of God's Plan of wisdom and mercy. But this applies only up to the Day of Judgment. After that we shall be on another plane altogether

Perpetual over you to the Day Of Judgment, what god Is there other than God, Who can give you enlightenment? Will ye not then hearken?

- 72. Say: See ye? If God
  Were to make the Day
  Perpetual over you to the Day
  Of judgment, what god
  Is there other than God,
  Who can give you a Night
  In which ye can rest?
  Will ye not then see? 3600
- 73. It is out of His Mercy That He has made for you Night and Day,—that ye May rest therein, and that Ye may seek of His Grace;— And in order that ye May be grateful.
- 75. And from each people
  Shall We draw a witness, MOS
  And We shall say: "Produce
  Your Proof": then shall they Know that the Truth is in
  God (alone), and the (lies)
  Which they invented will Leave them in the lurch. MOS

<sup>3400.</sup> In verse 71 was mentioned a "perpetual Night," for which the faculty of "hearkening" was appropriate, as all light was shut out. In this verse a perpetual Day is mentioned, for which the faculty of "seeing" is appropriate. Through many doors can the higher knowledge enter our soula, Shall we not use each of them as the occasion demands?

<sup>3402.</sup> Cf. iv. 41. The Prophet from each People or Nation will bear testimony that he preached the true gospel of Unity, and the People who rejected him will be asked to show the Proof or authority on which they rejected him: C. Ji. 111,

3404, Qarun is identified with the Korah of the English Bible. His story is told in Nurn, xvi. 1-35. He and his followers, numbering 250 men, rose in rebellion against Moses and Aaron, on the ground that their position and fame in the congregation entitled them to equality in spiritual matters with the Priests, -that they were as holy as any, and they claimed to burn incense at the sacred Altar reserved for the Priests. They had an exemplary punishment: "the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and all the men that appertained unto Korah, and all their goods: they, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation."

3405. Qarun's boundless wealth is described in the Midrashim, or the Jewish compilations based on the oral teachings of the Synagogues, which however exaggerate the weight of the keys to be the equivalent of the load of 300 mules !

3406. 'Usbal: a body of men, here used indefinitely. It usually implies a body of 10 to 40 men. The old-fashioned keys were big and heavy, and if there were hundreds of treasure-chests, the keys must have been a great weight. As they were travelling in the desert, the treasures were presumably left behind in Egypt, and only the keys were carried. The disloyal Qarun had left his heart in Egypt, with his treasures.

3407. That is, spend your wealth in charity and good works. It is God Who has given it to you, and you should spend it in God's cause. Nor should you forget the legitimate needs of this life, as misers do, and most people become misers who think too exclusively of their wealth. If wealth is not used properly, there are three evils that follow: (1) its possessor may be a miser and forget all claims due to himself and those about him; (2) he may forget the higher needs of the poor and needy, or the good causes which require support; and (3) he may even misspend on occasions and cause a great deal of harm and mischief." Apparently Qarun had all three vices, 3409. Even Qārūn was given a long run of enjoyment with his fabulous wealth before he had to be removed for the mischief he was doing.

3410. When he was in the hey-day of his glory, worldly people envied him and thought how happy they would be if they were in his place. Not so the people of wisdom and discernment. They knew of a more precious and leating wealth, which is described in the next verse.

3411. See n 3404 above, Cf. also xvi, 45 and n, 2071. Besides the obvious moral in the literal interpretation of the story, that material wealth is fleeting and may be a temptation and a cause of fall, there are some metaphorical implications that occur to me. (1) gafth was with Israel in the wilderness; even his material wealth was of no use to him there; he had the mere empty keys; material wealth has no value in itself, but only a relative and local value. (2) In body he was with Israel in the wilderness, but his heart was in Egypt with its fertility and its alavery. Such is the case of many hypocrite, who like to be seen in rightenus company but whose thoughts, longings, and doings are inconsistent with such company. (3) There is no good in this life but comes from God. To think otherwise is to set up a false god besides God. Our own merits are so small that they should never but he object of our cidolatry. (4) If Qarin on account of his wealth was setting himself up in rivalry with Moses and Aaron, he was blind to the fact that spiritual knowledge is far above any little cleverness, in worldy saffars. Mob-leaders have no position before spiritual guides.

3412. Provision or Sustenance, both literally and aguratively: wealth and material things in life as well as the things that sustain our higher and spiritual faculties. The rabble, that admired Qaffin's wealth when he was in wordly prosperity, now sees the other side of the question and understands that there are other gifts more precious and desirable, and that these may actually be withheld from men who enjoy wealth and worldly prosperity. In fact it is false prosperity, or no prosperity in the real sense of the word, which is without spiritual well-being.

3413, High-handedness or arrogatice, as opposed to submission to the Will of God, Islam. Mischief, as opposed to doing good, bringing forth fruits of righteousness. It is the righteous who will win in the end.

3414. A good deed has its sure reward, and that reward will be better than the merits of the door. An evil deed may be forgiven by repentance, but in any case will not be punished with a severer penalty than justice demands.

3415. That is a ordered in His wisdom and merey that the Qur-an should be revealed, containing global confidence for conduct in this life and the next, and further ordered that it should be read out and taught and its principles observed in practice. It is because of this teaching and preaching that the holy Prophet was persecuted, but as God sent the Qur-an, He will see that those who follow it will not eventually suffer, but be restored to happeness in the Place of Return, for which see next note.

3416. Place of Resura: (1) a title of Alecca; (2) the occasion when we shall be restored to the Presence of our Lord. It is said that this verse was revealed at Jusia, on the road from Mecca to Madina, a short distance from Mecca, on the Hijrat journey. The Prophet was said at heart, and this was given as consolation to him. If this was the particular occasion, the general meaning would refer the Place of Return to the occasion of the Resurrection, when all true values will be restored, however they may be disturbed by the temporary interference of Evil in this line.

3417. God knows the true from the false, and if we are persecuted for our Faith and attacked or spoken ill of because we dare to do right, our surest refuge is an appeal to God rather than to men.

3418. Revelation and the preaching of Truth may in the beginning bring persecution, conflict, and sorrow in its train; but in reality it is the truest mercy from God, which comes even without expecting it, as it came to the apostles without their consciously asking for it. This is proved in the history of Moses related in this Sūra, and the history of the boly Prophet which it is meant to illustrate.

  No god but He. Everything
  (That exists) will perish
  Except His own Face. 3411
  To Him belongs the Command,
  And to Him will ye
  (All) be brought back.

3419. If God's Message is unpalatable to Evil and is rejected by it, those who accept it may in their natural human feelings) sometimes wonder that such should be the case, and whether it is really God's Will that the conflict which ensues should be pursued. Any such hesitation would lend unconscious support to the aggressions of evil and should be discarded. The servant of God stands forth boldly as His Mujahud (fighter of the good fight), during all, and knowing that God is behind him.

420. The soldier of God, having taken up the fight against Evil, and knowing that he is in touch with the true Light, never yields an inch of ground. He is always to the fore in inviting others to his own ranks, but he himself refuses to be with those who worship anything else but God.

3421. This sums up the lesson of the whole Sūra. The only Reality is God, 'His "Face" or Self, Personality or Beng is what we should-seek, knowing that it is the only enduring thing of which we can have any conception. The whole phenomenal world is subject to flux and change and will pass away, but He will endure for ever. If we think of an impersonal God, an abstract loce of good, we cannot reconcile it with the vital Self or Being, of which we have a faint echo or reflection in our intensest moments of spiritual exaltation. We know then that what we call our own Self has no meaning, for there is only one true Self, and that is God. This is also the Advaira doctrine of Shir Shankara in his exposition of the Britada-arrayka Uparishadia in Hindu oblisophy.

· INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXIX ('Ankabūt).

This Sûra is the last of the series begun with S. xvii, in which the growth of the spiritual man as an individual is considered, especially illustrated by the way in which the great apostles were prepared for their work and received their mission, and the nature of Revelation in relation to the environments in which it was promulgated. (See Introduction to S. xvii.) It also closes the sub-series beginning with S. xxvi which is concerned with the spiritual Light, and the reactions to it at certain periods of spiritual history. (See Introduction to S. xxvi.)

The last Süra closed with a reference to the doctrine of the Ma'ād, or final Return of man to God. This theme is further developed here, and as it is continued in the subsequent three Süras all bearing the Abbreviated Letters A.L.M., it forms a connecting link between the present series and those three Süras.

In particular, emphasis is laid here on the necessity of linking actual conduct with the reception of God's revelation, and reference is again made to the stories of Noah, Abraham, and Lot among the apostles, and the stories of Midian, 'Ad, Thamud, and Pharaoh among the rejecters of God's Message. This world's life is contrasted with the real Life of the Hereafter.

Chronologically the main Sûra belongs to the late Middle Meccan period, but the chronology has no significance except as showing how clearly the vision of the Future was revealed long before the Hijrat, to the struggling Brotherhood of Islam.

Summary.—Belief is tested by trial in life and practical conduct: though Noah Hwed 950 years, his people refused Faith, and Abraham's generation threatened to burn Abraham (axix. 1-27, and C. 177).

Lot's people not only rejected God's Message but publicly defied him in sin; the 'Ad and the Thamüd had intelligence but misused it, and Qarūn, Pharaoh, and Hamün perished for their overweening arrogance: they found their worldly power as frail as a spider's web (xxix. 28-44, and C. 178).

The Qur-an as a revelation stands on its own merits and is a Sign: it teaches the distinction between Kight and Wrong, and shows the importance and excellence of the Hereafter (xxix. 45.69, and C. 179).

C. 177.—Faith must be tested in the conflicts (xxix, 1-27.) Of practical life, but Good can never Be submerged. On the contrary God Will wash off all stains from those Who strive, and admit them to the Fellowship Of the Righteous. Not so are the hypocrites And those who reject Faith. Their hearts Are diseased, and they will not accept The right though a Noah preached to them For a thousand years, or an Abraham Reasoned with them on God's most wooderful Providence. But the true will ever search out The Truth, and Truth will always prevail.

3422. For these Abbreviated Letters see n. 25 to it. 1. We are asked to control on our present life the real inner life against the outer life, and learn from the past about the stongeles of the send which upholds God's Truth, against the environment of evil, which resists at, and to turn our thoughts to the Ma'ad, or man's future destiny in the Hereafter.

M23. Mere lip profession of Path is not enough. It must be truef and tested in the real titlevel lie. The test will be applied in all kinds of circumstances, in individual life and in celtains to the environment ansund us, to see whether we can strive constantly and put God above Soff. Much pain, sorrow, and self-sacrifice may be necessary, not because they are good in, the medical because they are good in, the medical because they dill putfully us, the fire applied to a goldsmith's circuith to bottom out the dress.

3424. The word "know " is used here more in the sense of testing than of acquiring knowledge. God is All-Knowing: He needs no test to increase His own knowledge but the test is so burn out the dross within ourselves, a sexplained in the last not.

3425. If the enemies of Truth imagine that they will "be first" by destroying Truth before it takes root, they are sadly at fault, for their own persecution may help to plant God's Truth more firmly in men's hearts.

3426. The men of Paith look forward to God. Their quest is God, and the object of their hopes is the meeting with God. They should strive with might and main to serve Him in this life, (of this life is short, and the Term appointed for their probation will soon be over.

J427. The Term (ajal) may signify: (1) the time appointed for death, which ends the probation of this life; (2) the time appointed for this life, so that we can prepare for the Hereafter; the limit will soon expire. In either case the ultimate meaning is the same. We must strive now, and not postpone anything for the future. And we must realise and remember that every prayer we make to God is heard by Him, and that every unspoken wish or motive of our heart, good or bad, is known to Him, and goes to swell our spiritual account.

3428. All our striving enures to our own spiritual benefit. When we speak of serving God, it is not that we confer any benefit on Him. For He has no needs, and is independent of all His Creation. In conforming to His Will, we are seeking our own good, as in yielding to evil we are doing harm to ourselves.

34(9). In stirving to purify our Faith and our Life, we are enabled to the above our own Karma, for God will forgive any evil in our past, purify any tendencies towards evil which we may have inherited from that past, and help to the attainment of a Future based on the best of what we have done rather than on the poor average of our own merits. The atonement or expiation is by God's Mercy, not by our merits or the merits or sacrifice of anyone else.

3430. That is, no certainty, in virtue of the spiritual light. In matters of faith and worship, even parents have no right to force their children. They cannot and must not hold up before them any worship but that of the One True God.

3431. Children and parents must all remember that they have all to gobefore God's tribunal, and assure, cach for his own deeds. In cases where one set of people have lawful authority over another set of people (as in the case of parents and children), and the two differ in important matters like that of Faith, the latter are justified in rejecting authority: the apparent conflict will be solved when the whole truth is revealed to all eyes in the final Judgment.

9. And those who believe

10. Mehen there are among men Such as say, "We believe In God"; but when they suffer Affliction in (the cause of) God, They treat men's oppression As if it were the Wrath Of God! And if help Comes (to thee) from thy Lord, They are sure to say, say "We have (always) been With you!" Does not God Know best all that is In the hearts of all Creation?

- And God most certainly knows Those who believe, and as certainly Those who are Hypocrites.<sup>344</sup>
- 12. And the Unbelievers say
  To those who believe:
  "Follow our path, and we
  Will bear (the consequences) ***

  In the least will they Bear their faults: in fact

3432. The picking up again of the words which began verse? above shows that the same subject is now pursued from another aspect. The expiation or reward which was first spoken of is not so much a tangible thing as a restoration of status. The striving in righteous deeds will restore fallen man to the society of the Righteous,—the ideal Fellowship described in iv 69 and in 386.

3433. Cf ix 56, and other passages where the cunning of the Hypocrites is exposed. The manwho turns a way from Faith in adversity and only claims the friendship of the Faithful when there is something to be gained by it, is worthy of a double condemnation: first because he rejected Faith, and Truth, and secondly because he falsely pretended to be of those whom he feared of hated in his heart. But hothing in all Creation is concealed from God.

344. Cf. xxix. 3 above. The general opposition between Truth and Falsehood is now brought do to the specific case of the Hypocrites, who are against the Faith militant but swear friends hip with it when it seems to be gaining ground. The argument is rounded off with the next two verses.

3435. Besides the hypocrite there is another type of man who openly scoffs at Faith. Take life and no one else can bear them. The principle also applies to the type of man who preaches vicarious atoment, for, if followed to its logical conclusion, it means both injustice and irresponsibility, and puts quite a different complexion on the nature of six.

13. They will bear their own Burdens, and (other) burdens Along with their own bear And on the Day of Judgment a They will be called to account For their falsehoods.

3436. Besides the burden of their own infidelity, they will bear the burden of deluding others with Jalsehood.

3437. The story of Noah and his Flood is not told here. It is told in other places; e.g., see xi. 23-49 or xxvi. 105-22. It is only referred to here to point out that Noah's period lasted a long time, 950 years. (C. Gen. ix. 28-29, where his whole age is declared to have been 950 years, of which 350 years were after the Flood). In spite of this long period, his contemporaries failed to listen, and they were destroyed. But the story of the Ark remains an everlasting Sign and Warning to mankind—a Sign of deliverance to the righteous and of destruction to the wicked.

3438. The story of Abraham has been told in various phases in different passages. The ones most germane to the present passage are: xxi. 51-72 (his being cast into the fire and being saved from hit; and xxi. 41-49 (his voluntary exile from the home of his fathers). Here the story is not told, but is referred to in order to stress the following points; (I) Abraham's people only responded to his preaching by threatening to burn him (xxix. 16-18, 24); (2) evil consorts with evil but will have a rude awakening (xxix. 25); (3) the good adhere to the good, and are blessed (xxix. 26-27). Note that the passage xxix. 19-23 is a parenthetical comment, though some Commentators treat a portion of it as part of Abraham's speech.

Then seek ye sustenance sees From God, serve Him, And be grateful to Him: To Him will be your return.

343), Sustenance: in the symbolic as well as the literal sense. Seek from God all that is necessary for your upkerp and development, and for preparing you for your future. Destiny. Lay all your hopes in Him and in no one else. Dedicate yourselves to His worship. He will give you all that is necessary for your growth and well being, and you should show your gratitude to Him by conforming your will entirely to fits.

3440 The originating of creation is the creation of primeval matter. The repetition of the process of creation goes on constantly, for at every moment new processes are being called into being by the creative power of God, and according to His Laws. And the final creation as far as man is concerned will be in the Ma Rd, when the whole world as man sees it will be entirely newly created on a different plane. As far as God is concerned, there is nothing final,—no first and tast, for the sinfinite. He was before our First and will be after our Last, and if there is any meaning in these relative terms. He is the real First and the real Last.

344. Transi through the earth; again, literally as well as symbolically. If we actually go through this wide earth, we shall see the wonderful things in His Creation—the Grand Canyon and the Niagaras in America, beautiful hárbours like that at Sydney in Australia, mountains like Fujiyama, the Himalayas, and Elburz in Asia, the Niie with its wonderful cataracts in Airca, the Fiords of Norway, the Gyester of Iceland, the city of the midnight sun in Tromsee, and innumerable wonders everywhere. But wonders upon wonders are disclosed in the constitution of matter itself, the atom, and the forces of energy, as also in the instincts of animals, and the minds and capacities of man, And there is no limit to these things. Worlds upon wonds are created and transformed every moment, within and presumably beyond man's vision. From what we know we can judge of the unknown.

3442. I think idahs tsqlabās is better translated "towards Him are ye turned" than "towards Him will be your return", as it implies not only the return of man to God in the Hereafter (In/Ja'ss in verse 17 above) but also the fact explained in verse 22 that man's needs are always to be obtained from God: man cannot frustrate tood's designs, and can have no help or protection except from God: man as always to face God, whether man obeys God or tries to ignore God. Man with never be able to defeat God's Plan. According to His wise Will and Plan, He will grant His grace or with-bold it from man.

3443. The emphasis is on "Ihey" (ulātha). It is only the people who ignore or reject God's Signa and reject a Hereafter, that will find themselves in despair and suffering. God's Mercy is open to all, but if any reject His Mercy, they must suffer.

3444. See xxi. 66-70. Abraham was cast into the fire, but he was unhurt, by the grace of God. So righteous people suffer no harm from the plots of the wicked. But they must leave the environment of evil even if they have to forsake their anecestral home, as Abraham die.

345. In sin and wickedness there is as much log-rolling as in politics. Evil men humour each other and support each other; they call acan other's vices by high-sounding names. They call it mutual regard or friendship or love; at the lowest, they call it toleration. Perhaps they flourish in this life by such arts. But they deceive themselves, and they deceive each other. What will be their relations in the Hereafter? They will disown each other when each hat o answer on the principle of personal responsibility. Each will accuse the others of misleading him, and they will curse each other. But there will then be no help, and they must suffer in the Fire.

Between yourselves in this life; But on the Day of Judgment Ye shall disown each other And curse each other: And your abode will be The Fire, and ye shall have None to help."

3446. Lot was a nephew of Ahraham. He adhered to Ahraham's teaching and faith and accepted voluntary exile with him, for Abraham left the home of his fathers in Chaldra and migrated to Syria and Palestine, where God gave him increase and prospetity, and a numerous family, who upheld the flag of Unity and the Light of God.

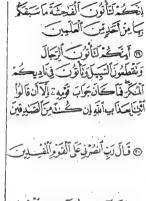

3447. Isaac was Abraham's son and Jacob his grandson, and among his progeny was included Isma'll the eldest son of Abraham. Each of these became a fountain-head of Prophery and Revelation, Isaac and Jacob through Moses, and Isma'll through the holy Apostle Muhammad. Jacob got the name of "Israel" at Bethel: Gen, 32: 28; 35; 10, and his progeny got the title of "The Children of Israel".

"Ye do commit lewdness, Such as no people in Creation 3409 (Ever) committed before you.

SECTION 4.

31. When Our Messengers came To Abraham with the good news, **** They said: "We are indeed Going to destroy the people Of this township: *** for truly They are (addicted to) crime."

3449 Cf. vii. 80. A discreet reference is made to their unspeakable crimes, which were against the laws of all nature.

<sup>3450.</sup> They infested highways and committed their horrible crimes not only secretly, but openly and publicly, even in their assemblies. Some Commentators understand "cutting off the highways" to refer, to highway robberes: this is possible, and it is also possible that the crimes in their assemblies may have been injustice, rowdiness, etc. But the context seems to refer to their own special horrible crime, and the point here seems to be that they were nor ashamed of it and that they practised it outbiller. Descriptions of the properties of the obstitute of the context seems to be the point the context seems to refer to their own special horrible crime, and the point here seems to be that they were nor ashamed of it and that they practised it outbiller. Descriptions of the point of the context seems to be that they were nor ashamed of it and that they practised it outbiller. Descriptions are not context as the context of the context of the context seems to be that they were nor ashamed of it and that they practised it outbiller. Descriptions are not context of the context

<sup>3451.</sup> This is another instance of their effrontery, in addition to that mentioned in vii.82; the two supplement each other. Here the point emphasised is that they did not believe in God or His Punishment, and dated God's Apostle Lot to bring about the Punishment if he could. And it did come and destroyed them.

<sup>3433.</sup> By translating "township" I imply the two neighbouring populations of Sodom and Gomerah, who had already gone too far in their crime, their shamelessness, and their defiance, to profit by any mercy from God.

3454. She was not loyal to her husband. Tradition says that she belonged to the wicked people, and was not propared to leave them. She had no faith in the mission either of her husband or of the angels who had come as his guests.

3455. This part of the story may be read in greater detail in xi. 77-83.

3437. The whole tract on the east side of the Dead Sea (where the Cities were situated) is covered with sulphureous salts and is deadly to animal and plant life. The Dead Sea itself is called in Arabic the Bahr-Lift (the sea of Lot). It is a scene of utter desolation, that should stand as a Symbol of the Destruction that a waits Sia.

3458. The story of Shu'aib and the Madyan people is only referred to here. It is told in xi. 84-95. Their besetting sin was fraud and commercial immorality. Their punishment was a mighty Blast, such as accompanies volcanic eruptions. The point of the reference here is that they went about doing mischief on the earth, and never thought of the Ma'aid or the Hereafter, the particular theme of this Sūra. The same point is made by the brief references in the following two verses to the 'Ad and the 'Thambid, and to Qartin, Pharaoh, and Hamia, though the besetting sin in each case was different. The Midianites were a commercial people and trafficked from land to land; their frauds are well described as spreading "mischief on the earth".

3459. For the 'Ad people see vii. 65-72, and n. 1040, and for the Thambd, vii. 73-79, and n. 1043. The remains of their buildings show (1) that they were gifted with great infelligence and skill; (2) that they were proud of their material civilisation; and (3) their destruction argues how the greatest material civilisation and resources cannot save a People who disobey God's moral law.

3462. For high (violent torando with showers of stones), see xvii. 68; this punishment was inficted on the Cities of the Plain, to which Lot preached (liv. 34). Some Commentators think that this also applied to the 'Ad, but their punishment is described as by a violent and unseasonable cold wind (xii. 16; liv. 19 and kix. 6), such as blows in sand-storms in the Abqaf, the region of shifting sands which was in their territory.

3463. For satifet (Blast) see xi. 67 and n. 1561, as also n. 1047 to vii, 78 and n. 1996 to xv. 73. This word is used in, describing the fate of (1) the Thambd (xi, 67); Madyan (xi, 94); the population to which Lib preached (xv. 73); and the Rocky Tract (Bijr, xv. 83), part of the territory of the Thambd; also in the Parable of the City to which came three apostles, who found a single believer (xxxvi. 29).

3466. The Spider's house is one of the wonderful Signs of God's creation. It is made up of fine slik threads spun out of slik glands in the spider's body. There are many kinds of spiders and many kinds of spider's houses. Two main types of houses may be mentioned. There is the tubular nest or web, a siik-lined house or burrow with one or two trap-doors. This may be called his residential or family manison. Then there is what is ordinarily called a spider's wab, consisting of a central point with radiating threads running in all directions and acting as tie-beams to the quasi-circular concentric threads that form the body of the web. This is his hunting box. The whole structure exemplifies economy in time, material, and strength. If an insect is caught in the net, the structure of the spider is the spider's the price of the spider, who can come and kill his prey in case the prey is powerful, the spider is furnished with poison glands, with which to kill his prey. The spider sits either in the centre of the web or hides on the under-side of a leaf or in some crevice, but he always has a single thread connecting him with his web, to keep him in telephonolic communication. The female spider is much bigger than the thale, and in Arabic the generic gender of 'Asabab is feminine.

346. Most of the facts in the last note can be read into the Parable. For their thickness the pider's threads are very strong from the point of view of relativity, but in our actual world they are filmsy, especially the threads of the gossamer spider fibrating in the air. So is the house and strength of the man who relies on material resources however fine or beautiful relatively; before the eternal Reality they are as nothing. The spider's most cunning architecture cannot stand against a wave of a man's hand. His poison glands are like the hidden poison in our beautiful worldly plans which may takk various shapes but have seeds of death in them.

34(8). The last verse told us that men, out of spiritual ignorance, bolid their hopes on filmy unabstantial things (like the spider's web) which are broken by a thousand chance attacks of wind and weather or the actions of animals or men. If they cannot fully grasp their own good, they should seek His Light. To Him everything is known,—men's fraity, their false hopes, their questionable motives, the false gods whom they enthrone in their midst, the mischief done by the neglect of Truth, and the way out for those who have entangled themselves in the snares of Evil. He is All-Wise and is able to carry out all He wills, and they should turn to Him.

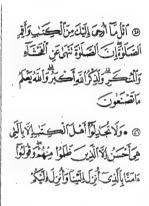

3469. Parables seem simple things, but their profound meaning and application can only be understood by those who seek knowledge and by God's grace attain it.

3470. Cf. vi. 73 and n. 896. In all God's Creation, not only is there evidence of intelligent Purpose, fitting all parts together with wisdom, but also of supreme Goodness and cherishing Care, by which all needs are satisfied and all the highest and treest cravings fulfilled. These are like beckoning signals to lead on those who pray and search in Faith, those who with the intensest desire of their soul can pray, as in Cardinal Newman's Hymn, "Lead, kindly Light! Amid the encircling gloom, lead Thou me on!"

C. 179.—Proclaim the Message of God, and pray

God's Revelation carries its own
Proofs and is recognised by men
Of wisdom. Its rejecters but lose
Their own chances of profiting
By the Truth, and attaining the Paths
That lead to God's own gracious Presence !

SECTION 5.

- 45. Recite what is sent an Of the Book by inspiration To thee, and establish Regular Prayer: for Prayer Restrains from shameful And unjust deeds; And remembrance of God Is the greatest (thing in life) Without doubt. And God knows The (deeds) that ye do.

  Who inflict wrong (and injury). **ara*
  But say, "We believe
  In the Revelation which has Come down to us and in that
  Which came down to you;

3471. The filliant bit the Quran implies: (4) rehearting or recting it, and publishing it abroad to the world; (2) reading it to ourselves; (3) studying it to understand it as it should be studied and understood (ii. 121); (4) meditating on it so as to accord our knowledge and life and desires with it. When this is done, it merges into real Prayer, and Prayer purges us of Anything fact, plan, thought, motive, words) of which we should be ashamed or which would work injustice to others. Such Prayer passes into our immost life and being, for then we realise the Presence of God, and that is true 4th or remembrance, for remembrance is the bringing to mind of things as present to us which might otherwise be absent to us. And that is the greatest thing in life. It is subjective to us: if fills our consciousness with God. For God is in any case always present and knows all.

3472. Mere disputations are futile. In order to achieve our purpose as true standard-bearers for God, we shall have to find true common grounds of belief, as stated in the fatter part of this verse, and also to show by our urbanity, kindness, sincerity, truth, and genuine anxiety for the good of others, that we are not cranks or merely seeking selfish or questionable aims.

3473. Of course those who are deliberately trying to wrong or injure others will have to be treated firmly, as we are guardians of each other. With them there is little question of finding common ground or exercising patience, until the injury is prevented or stopped.

(٢٩) سورة العنكبوت

- 47. And thus 3475 (it is) that We Have sent down the Book To thee. So the People Of the Book believe therein, 3476 As also do some of these 3477 (Pagan Arabs): and none But Unbelievers reject Our Signs,

3474. That is, the religion of all true and sincere men of Faith is, or should be, one; and that is the ideal of Islam, 3475. It is in this spirit that all true Revelation comes from God. God is One, and His Message cannot come in one place or at one time to contradict His Message in another place or at another time in spirit, though there may be local variations according to the needs or understanding of men at any given time or place.

3476 The sincere Jews and Christians found in the holy Prophet a fulfilment of their own religion. For the names of some Jews who recognised and embraced Islam, see n. 3227 to xxvi. 197. Among the Christians, too, the Faith slowly won ground. Embassies were sent by the holy Prophet in the 6th and 7th years of the Hijrat to all the principal countries round Arabia, viz., the capital of the Byzantine Empire (Constantinople), the capital of the Persian Empire (Madain), the Sasanian capital known to the West by the Greek name of Ctesiphon, (about thirty miles south of modern Bagdad), Syria, Abyssinia, and Egypt. All these (except Persia) were Christian countries. In the same connection an embassy was also sent to Yamama in Arabia itself (east of the Hijaz) where the Band Hanifa tribe was Christian, like the Harith tribe of Najran who voluntarily sent an embassy to Medina. All these countries except Abyssinia eventually became Muslim, and Abyssinia itself has a considerable Muslim population now and sent some Muslim converts to Medina in the time of the Prophet hiraself. As a generalisation it is true that the Jewish and the Christian peoples as they existed in the seventh century of the Christian era have been mainly absorbed by Islam, as well as the lands in which they predominated. Remnants of them built'up new nuclei. The Roman Catholic Church conquered new lands among the northern (Germanic) Pagans and the Byzantine Church among the eastern (Slavonic) Pagans, and the Protestantism of the 16th century gave a fresh stimulus to the main ideas for which Islam stands, viz., the abolition of priestcraft, the right of private judgment, the simplification of ritual, and the insistence upon the simple, practical, everyday duties of life.

3477. The Pagan Arabs also gradually came in until they were all absorbed in Islam.

ATR. The holy Prophet was not a fearned man. Before the Qurān was revealed to him, he never claimed to proclaim a Message from God. He was not in the habit of preaching eloquent truths as from a Book, before he received his Revelation, nor was he able to write or transcribe with his own hand. If he had had these worldly gifts, there would have been some plausibility in the charge of the talkers of vanities that he spoke not from inspiration but from other people's books, or that he composed the beautiful verses of the Qurān himself and committed them to memory in order to rectile them to people. The circumstances in which the Qurān came bear their own testimony to its truth as from God.

(۲۹) سورة العنكبوت

إِذَا لَأَرْنَابَ ٱلْمُطِلُونَ

The talkers of vanities Have doubted.

49. Nay, here are Signs
Self-evident in the hearts
Of those endowed with

- 50. Yet they say: "Why
  Are not Signs sent down
  To him from his Lord?"
  Say: "The Signs are indeed
  With God: and I am
  Indeed a clear Warner." ***
- 51. And is it not enough
  For them that We have Sent down to thee
  The Book which is rehearsed
  To them? Verily, in it
  Is Mercy and a Reminder
  To those who believe.

SECTION 6. .

52. Say: "Enough is God For a Witness between me أُرْفُوْ الْهِ أَمْ رَمَا يَعْمَدُ يَعِينَ الْإِلْقَالِيْوْنَ ﴿ وَمَا الْوَالْوَلِآ الْوِلَ عَلَيْهِ اللّهُ الْقَالِيُونَ رَيْدَ وَمُولَا لِمَا الْوَيْنَ عَنْكَ اللّهِ مِنْكَ عَنْكَ اللّهِ وَالْمُمَا اللّهُ وَيْدُونِهُ مِنْكُنَ ﴿ الْمَمَا اللّهُ وَيْدُونِهُ مِنْكُنَّ الْوَالْمَا عَلَيْكَ ﴿ الْمَمَا اللّهُ وَيَسِمُ فِيفِيدًا إِنَّا الْوَالْمَا عَلَيْكَ

@ قُلْكَوْنَ إِللَّهُ يَغِي

3479." "Knowledge" ("ilm) means both power of judgment in discerning the value of truth and acquaintance with previous revelations. It implies both literary and spiritual insight. To men so endowed, God's revelations-and signs are self-evident. They commend themselves to their hearts, minds, and understandings, which are twoffed in Arabic by the word soft," breast."

3480. Cf. the last clause of verse 47 above. There the argument was that the rejection of the Qurân was a mark of Unbeltef. Now the argument is carried a stage faither. Such rejection is also a mark of injustice, a deliberate perversity in going against obvious Signs, which should convince all bonest men.

3481. See last note. In the Qur-ân, as said in verse 49, are Signs which should carry-conviction to all honest hearts. And yet the Unbelievers ask for Signs! They mean some special kinds of Signs of Miracles, such as their own foolish muds dictate. Everything is possible for God, but God is not going to homour the follies of men or listen to their distingenuous demands. He has sent an Apostle to explain His Signs clearly, and to warn them of the consequences of rejection. Is it not enough?

3482. The perspicuous Qur-an, explained in detail by God's Messenger, in conjunction with God's Signs in nature and in the hearts of men, should be earlight for all. It is mere fractious opposition to demand vaguely something more. Cf. also vi. 124, and n. 946.

And you: He knows

Appointed, the Punishment
Would certainly have come
To them: and it will

54. They ask thee
To hasten on the Punishment: 346
But, of a surety,
Hell will encompass
The rejecters of Faith!—

 وَمِن تَحْتُ أَرْجُلِيهِ وَيَعْوَلُ دُوقُوا
 مَا كُنْتُ فَقَالُونَ

3483. The test of a Revelation is whether it comes, from God or not. This is made clear by the life and teachings of the Messenger who brings it. No fraud or falsehood can for a moment stand before God. All the most hidden things in heaven and earth are open before Him.

3484. If Truth is rejected, Truth does not suffer. It is the rejecters who suffer and perish in the end, 3485. Cf. xxii. 47 and n. 2826 The rejecters of Faith throw out a challenge out of bravado: Let us see if you can hasten the punishment on us! This is a vain taunt. God's Plan will take the course, and can neither be delayed nor hatened, It is out of His Mercy that He gives respite to sinners,—in order that they may have a chance of repentance. If they do not repent, the Punishment must certainly come to them—and on a sudden, before they perceive that it is coming? And then it will be too late for repentance.

3486. The challenge of the wicked for Punishment was answered in the last verse by reference to God's merciful Respite, to give chances of repentance. It is answered in this verse by an assurance that if no regentance is forthcoming, the Punishment will be certain and of an all-pervasive kind, Hell will surround them on all sides, and above them and below them.

3487. Cf. a similar phrase in vi. 65.

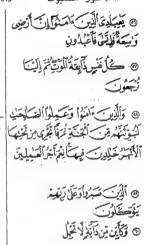

3488. This is not merely a reproach but a justification of the Punishment. "It is you who both it on yourselves by your evil deeds: blame none but yourselves. God's Mercy gave you many chances: His Justice has now overtaken you!"

- 56. My servants who believe!

  Truly, spacious is My Earth:

3490. There is no excuse for any one to plead that he could not do good or was forced to avil by his circumstances and surroundings, or by the fact that he lived in evil times. We must shun evil and seek good, and God's Creation is wide enough to enable us to do that, provided we have the will, the patience, and the constancy to do it. It may be that we have to change our vallage or city or country; or that we have to change our habits or our hours, our position in life or our human relationships, or our callings. Our integrity before God is more important than any of these things, and we must be prepared for exile (or tifired) in all these senses. For the means with which God provides us for His service are ample, and it is our own fault if we fail.

3490, Cf. iii, 183, n. 491, and xxi. 35 and n. 2697. Death is the separation of the soul from the body when the latter persists. We should not be afraid of death, for it only brings us back to God. The various kinds of kijrat or exile, physical and spiritual, mentioned in the last note, are also modes of death in a sense: what is there to fear in them?

3491. The goodly homes mentioned in xvi. 41 referred to this life, but it was stated there that the reward of the Herenter would be greater. Here the simile of the Home is referred to Heaven; it will be beautiful; it will be picturesque, with the sight and sound of softly-murmuring streams; it will be loftly or sublime; and it will be elemal.

3402. If we look at the animal creation, we see that many creatures seem almost helpless to find their own food or sustain their full life, being surrounded by many enemies. Yet in the Plan of God they find full sustenance and protection. So does man, Man's needs—are well as helplesness—are by many degrees greater. Yet God provides for him as for all His creatures. God listens to the wish and cry of all His creatures and Hig knows their needs and how to provide for them all. Man should not therefore hesitate to suffer exile or persecution in God's Cause.

(٢٩) سورة العنكبوت

Sustenance? It is God Who feeds (both) them and you: For He hears and knows (All things).

<sup>243).</sup> Cl. xxxii. 84-89. "Them" in both passages refers to the sort of inconsistent men who acknowledge the power of God, but are detuded by false notions into disobedience of God's Law and diseggard of God's Message.

<sup>3494.</sup> Cf, xiii. Z, and xxiii. 85. The perfect order and law in God's universe should be Signs to man's intelligence to get his own will into tune with God's Will; for only so can he hope to attain his full development.

<sup>3495,</sup> Cf. xiii 26. Unequal gifts are not a sign of chaos in God's universe. God provides for all according to their real needs and their most suitable requirements, according to His perfect knowledge and understanding of His creatures.

<sup>3496.</sup> In xxix 61 above, the point was that there is a certain type of man that realises the power of God. but yet goes after false ideax and false worship. Here the point is that there is anothet type of man to whom the goodness of God is made clear by rain and the gifts of nature and who realises the daily, seasonal, and secular changes which evidence God's goodness in giving us life (physical and spiritual) and retiving us after we seem to due,—and who yet falls to draw the right conclusion from it and to make his own life true and beautiful, so that, when his period of probation in this transitory life is ended, he can enter into his extendal heritage. Having comes of far, such men fall at the crucial stage. At that stage they ought to have praised and glorified God and accepted His Grace and Light, but they show their want of true understanding by faiting to profit by God's gifts.

3497. Cf. vi. 32. Amusement and play have no lasting significance except as preparing us for the serious work of life. So this life is but an interlude, a preparation for the real Life, which is in the Hereafter. This world's vanities are therefore to be taken for what they are world; but they a e not to be allowed to deflect our minds from the requirements of the funct life that really matters.

3498. Cf. vii. 29, where I have slightly varied the English phrase according to the context,

It was shown in the last verse that the life of this world is fleeting, and that the true life—that which matters—is the Life of the Spirit. In contrast with this inner reality is now shown the short-sighted folly of man. When he faces the physical dangers of the sea, which are but an incident in the phenomenal world, he actually and sincerely seeks the help of God; but when he is safely back on land, he forgets the Realities, plunges-into the pleasures and vanities of altering phenomena, and his devotion, which should be given exclusively to God, is shared by idols and vanities of his own imagination.

3499. Such folly results in the virtual rejection (even-though it may not be express) of God and His Grace. It plunges man into the pleasures and vanities that merely delude and are bound to pass away. This delusion, however, will come to an end when the true Reality of the Hereafter will shine forth in all its splendour.

3500. If they want evidences of their folly in the phenomenal world itself, they will see sacred Sanctuaries where God's Truth abides salely in the midst of the Deluge of broken hopes, disappointed ambitions, and unfulfilled plans in the world around. The immediate reference was to the Sanctuary of Mecca and the gradual progress of Islam in the districts surrounding the Quraish in the midst of the trying Meccan period. But the general application holds good for all lines and places.

3501, Cf. vi. 21. Even from a worldly point of view those who reject God's Truth are at a disadvantage. But those who deliberately invent lies and set up false gods for worship,—what punishment can we imagine for them except a permanent deprivation of God's grace,—or in theological language, a home in Hell?

3502. "Strive in Our Cause." All that man can do is to strive in God's Cause. As soon as he strive with might and main, with constancy and determination, the Light and Mercy of God come to meet him. They cure his delects and shortcomings. They provide him with the means by which he can raise himself above himself. They point out the Way, and all the Paths leading up to it. See next note.

3503. The Wav of God (sirā)-wi-Musloqim) is a Straight Way. But men have strayed from it in all directions. And there are numerous Paths by which they can get back to the Right Way, the Way in which the purity of their own nature, and the Will and Mercy of God, require them to walk. All these numerous Paths become open to them if once they give their hearts in keeping to God and work in right Endeavour (Jihād) with all their mind and soul and resources. Thus will they get out of the Spilder's web of this feal world and attain to eternal Bliss in the fulfilment of their true Destiny.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXX (Rum).

This Sūra, as remarked in the Introduction to the last Sūra, deals with the question of Ma'ad or the Final End of Things, from various points of view. In the last Sūra, we saw that Revelation was linked up with Life and Conduct, and Time flooking backwards and forwards) figured forth the frailty of this Life. In this Sūra the Time theme and its mystery are brought into relation with human history in the foreground and the evolution of the world in all its aspects in the background. The corruption introduced by man is cleared away by God, Whose Universal Plan points to the Hereafter. We shall see that the next two Sūras (xxxi. and xxxii.) present the theme in other aspects. All four are introduced with the Abbreviated Letters A. L. M., which (without being dogmatic) I have suggested as symbolical of the Past, Present and Future.

The chronology of this Sara is significant. It was revealed about the 7th or the 6th year before the Hijrat, corresponding to 615-16 of the Christian era, when the tide of Persian conquest over the Roman Empire was running strong, as explained in Appendix X (to follow this Sura).. The Christian Empire of Rome had lost Jerusalem to the Persians, and Christianity had been humbled in the dust. At that time it seemed outside the bounds of human possibility, even to one intimately acquainted with the inner resources and conditions of the Persian and Roman armies and empires, that the tables would be turned and the position reversed within the space of eight or nine years. The pro-Persian Pagan Quraish rejoiced exceedingly, and redoubled their taunts and persecution against the holy Prophet, whose Message was a renewal of the Message of Christ preached in Jerusalem. Then was this passage xxx, 1-6 revealed, clearly foreshadowing the final defeat of Persia (Appendix X, 14-16) as a prejude to the destruction of the Persian Empire. There is no doubt about the prophecy and its fulfilment. For the exulting Pagans of Mecca laid a heavy wager against the fulfilment of the prophecy with Hadhrat Abū Bakr, and they lost it on its fulfilment.

But the rise and fall even of such mighty empires as the Persian and Roman Empires, were but small events on the chequer-board of Time, compared to a mightier movement that was taking birth in the promulgation of Islam. In the seventh or sixth year before the Hijrat, and for a year or two after the Hijrat, Islam was struggling in the world like the still small voice in the conscience of humanity, It was scarcely heeded, and when it sought to insist upon its divine claim, it was insulted, assaulted, persecuted, boycotted, and (as it seemed) suppressed. The agony of Talf (two years before the Hijrat) and the murder-plot on the eve of the Hijrat were yet to come. But the purpose of God is not to be thwarted. Badr (A.H. 2= A.D. 624), rightly called the critical Day of Decision, began to redress the balance of outward events in early Islam, in the same year in which Issus (Appendix X. 16) began to redress the balance of outward events in Perso-Roman relations. Mightier events were yet to come. A new inner World was being created through Islam.

This spiritual Revolution was of infinitely greater moment in world-history. The toppling down of priestcraft and false worship, the restoration of simplicity in faith and life, the rehabilitation of this life as the first step to the understanding of the Hereafter, the displacement of superstition and hair-splitting theology by a spirit of rational enquiry and knowledge, and the recognition of the divine as covering not merely an isolated thing called "Religion" but the whole way of Life, Thought, and Feeling,—this was and is the true Message of Islam and its mission. Its struggle—tis fight—continues, but it is not without effect, as may be seen in the march of centuries in world-history.

Summary.—The ebb and flow of worldly power—as symbolised in the conflict of the Persian and Roman Empires—are but outward events: the deeper meaning is in the working of God's Universe—how Good and Evil reach their final End (xxx. 1-19, and C. 180).

The changes and changing variety in God's Creation, physical, moral, and spiritual, yet point to Unity in Nature and Religion: man should not break away from that Unity, but glorify Him, the One, for there is none like unto Him (xxx. 20-40, and C. 181).

The hands of men have wrought corruption and mischief: but God putifies the moral world as He does the world of physical nature, strengthening the weak and pulling down the mighty in due season: wait therefore in patience and constancy, and be not depressed (xxx. 41-60, and C. 182).

C. 180.—Great Empires rise and fall, conquer
(xxx. 1-19.) And are conquered, as nappened
To Reme and Persia: but the true Decision
Is with God, Who will make the righteous
Rejoice. Men may see but the outward
Crust of things, but in truth the End
Of things is all-in-all. In His own
Good time He will separate good from evil:
Praise and glory to Him for ever!

Rum, or The Roman Empire.

  And in the Future:
  On that Day shall

3504. See n. 25 to ii. I and Introduction to this Sara.

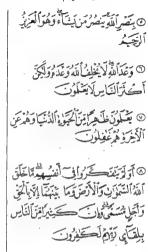

3505. The remarkable defeats of the Roman Empire under Heraclius and the straits to which it was reduced are reviewed in Appendix X (to follow this Sūra). It was not merely isolated defeats; the Roman Empire lost most of its Asiatic territory and was hemmed in on all sides at its capital, Constantisople. The defeat, "in a land close by "must refer to Syria and Palestone, Jerusalem was tost in 614-54. D., shortly before this Sūra was revealed.

3506. The Pagan Quraish of Mecca rejniced at the overthrow of Rome by Persin. They were pro-Persian, and in their heart of hearts they hoped that the nascent movement of Islam, which at that time was, from a worldly point of view, very weak and helpless, would also collapse under their persecution. But they mistead the tree Signs of the times. They are told here that they would soon be distillationed in both their calculations, and it actually so happened at the battle of Issus in 622 (the year of Hijrat) and in 624, when Heraclius carried his campaign into the heart of Persia (see Appendix X) and the Meccan Quraish were beaten off at Bate.

3507. Bidd's in the text means a short period—a period of from thee to nine years. The period between the loss of Jenusalem (614-15) by the Romans and their victory-at Issus (622) was seven years, and that to the penetration of Penia by Heraclius was nine years, See last note.

3508. See n. 3506 and Appendix X, pp. 1072-74. The battle of Badr (2 A.H.—624 A.D.) was a real time of rejoicing for the Believers and a time of disillusionment for the arrogant Quraish, who thought that they could crush the whole movement of Islam in Medina as they had tried to do in Mecca, but they were signally repulsed, See n. 352 to ii. 13.

- With the help of God, He helps whom He will, seen And He is Exalted in Might, Most Merciful.
- 6. (It is) the promise of God. SSNO Never does God depart From His promise: But most men understand not.
- They know but the outer <sup>3511</sup>
  (Things) in the life
  Of this world: but
  Of the End of things <sup>3512</sup>
  They are heedless.
- 8. Do they not reflect
  In their own minds?
  Not but for just ends ***
  And for a term appointed,
  Did God create the heavens
  And the earth, and all
  Between them: yet are there
  Truly many among men
  Who deny the meeting **
  With their Lord
  (At the Resurrection)!

3509, "Whom Hewill." As explained elsewhere, God's Will or Plan is not arbitrary: it is full of the highest wisdom. His Plan is formed in merry, so as to safeguard the interests of all his creatures, against the selfish aggrandizement of any section of them. And He is able to carry out His Plan in full, and there is no power that can stop or delay His Plan.

350. The promise refers to the Decision of all things by the Command of God, Who will remove all troubles and difficulties from the path of His righteous Believers, and help them for ejonee over the success of their righteous Cause. This refers to all times and all situations. The righteous should not despair in their darkest moments, for God's help will come. Ordinarily men are puffed up if they score a seeming temporary success against the righteous, and do not realise that God's Will can never be throwfield.

3311. Men are misled by the outward show of things, though the inner reality may be quite different. Many seeming disasters are really godsends if we only understood.

3513. Cf. xv. 85. Here the argument is about the ebb and flow of worldly power, and the next clame is appropriately added, "and for a term appointed". Let not any one who is granted worldly power or advantage run away with the notion that it is permanent. It is definitely limited in the high Purpose of God, which is just and true. And an account will have to be given of it afterwards on a basis of strict personal responsibility.

3514. It is therefore all the more strange that there should be men who not only forget themselves but even deny that there is a return fo God or an End or Hercafter, when a full reckoning will be due fot this period of probation. They are asked to study past history, as in the next verse.

- 9. Do they not travel
  Through the earth; and see
  What was the End
  Of those before them?
  They were superior to them
  In strength: they tilled
  The soil and populated it
  In greater numbers than these
  Have done: there came to them
  Their apostles with Clear (Signs), DIS
  (Which they rejected, to their Own destruction): it was not
  God who wronged them, but
  They wronged their own souls.
- 10. In the long run
  Evil in the extreme to the Will be the End of those Who do evil; for that
  They rejected the Signs
  Of God, and held them up
  To ridicule.

SECTION 2.

11. We tis God Who begins (The process of) creation, war Then repeats it; then Shall ye be brought back To Him.

3515. Let not any generation think that it is superior to all that went before it. We may be their to all the ages, in the foremost files of time." That is no reason for arregance, but on the contrary adds to our responsibility. When we realise what flourishing cities and kingdoms existed before, how they flourished in numbers and prosperity, what chances they were given, and how they perished when they disobeyed the law of God, we shall feel a sense of humbity, and see that it was rebellion and self-will that brought them down. God was more than just. He was also merciful, But they brought about their own ruin.

3516. The Arabic superlative feminine, referring to the feminine noun 'Aqibat, I have translated by "Evil in the extreme". In this life good and evil may seem to be mixed up, and it may be that some things or persons that are evil get what seem to be good rewards or blessings, while the opposite happens to the good. But this is only a temporary appearance. In the long run Evil will have its own evil consequences, multiplied cumulatively. And this, because Evil not only rejected God's Message of Good but laughed at Good and misled others.

3517, Nothing exists of its own accord or fortuitously. It is God Who originates all creation. What appears to be death may be only transformation; for God can and does recreate. And His creative activity is continuous. Our death is but a phenomenal event. What we become after death is the result of a process of recreation by God. Who is both the source and the goal of all things. When we are brought back to him, it will be as conscious, and responsible beings, to receive the consequences of our brief life on this earth.

- 12. On the Day that The Hour will be established, 2518 The guilty will be Struck dumb with despair.
- 13. No intercessor will they have Among their "Partners", and And they will (themselves) Reject their "Partners".
- 14. On the Day that The Hour will be established, — That Day shall (all men) <sup>26.9</sup> Be sorted out.
- 15. Then those who have believed And worked righteous deeds, Shall be made happy In a Mead of Delight.
- 16. And those who have rejected Faith and falsely denied Our Signs and the meeting Of the Hereafter,—such Shall be brought forth to Punishment.
- 50 (give) glory to God, When ye reach eventide acean

3318, The Hour will be established: in due time the Hour will come when Judgment will be stablished, and the seeming disturbance of balance in this world will be redressed. Then the Good will rejoice, and the Guilty, faced with the Realities, will lose all their illustons and be struck dumb with despair.

3519. False worship will then appear in its true colours. Anything to which we offered the worship due to God alone, will vanish instead of being of any help. Indeed the deluded false worshippers, whose eyes will now be opened, will theroselves reject their falsehoods, as the Truth will now shine with unquestioned solendour.

3520. In the fullness of time good and evil will all be sorted out and separated. The good will reach their destination of felicity in rich and luscious, well-watered meadows, which stand as the "me of all that is fair to see and pleasant to feel. The evil will no longer imagine that they are joying good fortune, for the testing time will be over, and the grim reality will stare them in the ace. That will be their punishment.

3521. The special times for God's remembrance are so described as to include all our activities in life,—when we rise early in the morning, and when we go to rest in the evening; when we are in the midst of our work, at the decline of the sun, and in the late afternoon. It may be noted that these are all striking stages in the passage of the sun through our terrestrial day, as well as stages in our daily working lives. On this are based the bours of the five canonical prayers afterwards prescribed in Medica; (i) early morning before sunrise (Fajr); (2) when the day begins to decline, just after soon (Fabr); (3) in the late afternoon, say midway between noon and sunset (Agr); and (4) and (5) the two evening prayers, one just after sunset (Magrib), and the other after the evening twilight has all Taded from the horizon, the hour indicated for rest and sleep (Ishō), Cl, xi. 114, nn, 1616-17; xvii. 78-79, n. 2237; xz. 130, n. 2650.

20. Among His Signs is this, That He created you see

5522. Cf. x. 31. From dead matter God's creative act produces life and living matter, and even science has not yet been able to explain the mystery of life. Life and living inatter again seem to reach maturity and again die, as we see every day. No material thing seems to have perpetual life, But again we see the creative process of God constantly at work, and the cycle of life, and death seems to go on.

a523. Cf. ii. 164. The earth itself, seemingly so inert, produces vegetable life at once from a single shower of rain, and in various ways sustains animal life. Normally it seems to die in the winter in northern climates, and in a drought everywhere, and the spring revives it in all its glory. Metaphorically many movements, institutions, organisations, seem to die and then to live again, all under the wonderful dispensation of God. So will our personality be revived when we apparently die on this earth, in order to reap the fruit of this our probationary life.

3524. Cf. xviii, 37 and n. 2379. In spite of the lowly origin of man's body, God has given him a mind and soul by which be can almost compass the farthest reaches of Time and Space. Is this not enough for a miracle or Sign? From a physical point of view, see how man, a creature of dust, scatters himself over the farthest corners of the earth!

3323. This refers to the wonderful mystery of sex. Children arise out of the union of the sexes. And it is always the female sex that brings forth the offspring, whether female or male. And the father is as necessary as the mother for bringing forth daughters.

3527. The variations in languages and colours may be viewed from the geographical aspect or from the aspect of periods of time. All mankind were created of a single pair of parents; yet they have spread to different: countries and climates and developed different languages and different shades of complexions. And yet their basic unity remains unalitered. They feel in the same way, and are all equally under Gods care. Then there are the variations in time. Old languages die out and new ones are evolved. New conditions of life and thought are constantly evolving new words and expressions, new syntactical structures, and new modes of pronunciation. Even old races die, and new races here born.

3528. If we consider deeply, sleep and dreams, the refreshment we get from sleep to, wakefulness as well as from wakefulness to sleep, as also the state of our thoughts and feings and sub-conscious self in these conditions, are both wonderful and mysterious. Normally wellsey by night and do our ordinary work. "In quest of the Bounty of God" by day. But sleep and rest may come and be necessary by day, and we may have to work by night. And our work for our livelihood may pass by insensible transitions to our work or thought or service of a higher and spiritual kind. These processes suggest a background of things which we know but vaguely, but which are as much miracles as other Signs of God.

- 25. And among His Signs is this, That heaven and earth Stand by His Command: 3251 Then when He calls you, By a single call, from the earth, Behold, ye (straightway) come forth.

3529. From verse 20 to verse 25 are mentioned a series of Signs or Miracles, which should awaken our souls and lead us to true Reality if we try to understand God. (1) There is our own origin and destiny, which must necessarily be our subjective starting-point: "I think; therefore I am": no particular exertion of our being is here necessary (xxx. 20). (2) The first beginnings of social life arise through sex and love; see iv. 1, and n. 506; to understand this in all its bearings, we must "reflect" (xxx. 21). (3) The next point is to understand our diversities in speech, colour, etc., arising from differences of climate and external conditions; yet there is unity beneath that diversity, which we shall realise by extended knowledge (xxx. 22), (4) Next we turn to our psychological conditions, sleep, rest, visions, insight, etc.; here we want teaching and guidance, to which we must hearken (xxx, 23), (5) Next, we must approach the higher reaches of spiritual hopes and fears, as symbolised by such subtle forces of nature as lightning and electricity, which may kill the foolish or bring prosperity in its train by rain and abundant harvests; to understand the highest spiritual hopes and fears so symbolised, we want the highest wisdom (xxx. 24), (6) And lastly, we may become so transformed that we rise above all petty, worldly, ephemeral things: God calls to us and we rise, as from our dead selves to a Height which we can only describe as the Heaven of stability; here no human processes serve, for the Call of God Hirpself has come (xxx, 25-27).

3530. See last note, item (3) Cf. xiii, 12. To cowards lightning and thunder appear as terrible forces of nature: lightning seems to kill and destroy where it is irresistible progress is not assisted by proper lightning-conductors. But lightning is also a herald of rain-bearing clouds and showers that bring fertility and prosperity in their train. This double aspect is also symbolical of spiritual fears and hopes;—fears lest we may not be found receptive or worthy of the irresistible perspicuous Message of God, and hopes that we may receive it in the right spirit and be blessed by its mightly power of transformation to achieve spiritual well-being. Note that the repetition of the phrass "gives life to the earth after it is dead" connects this verse with verse 19 above: in other words, the Revelation, which we must receive with wisdom and understanding, is a Sign of God's own power and mercy, and to voorhsafed in order to saleguard our own final Future.

3531, In the physical world, the sky and the earth, as we see them, stand unsupported, by the artistry of God. They bear witness to God, and in—that our physical life depends on them—the earth for its produce and the ky for rain, the heat of the sun, and other phenomena of nature—they call to our mind our relation to God Who made them and us. How can we then be so dense and to realise that our higher Future—our Ma*4d—is bound up with the call and the mercy of God?

- 3532. All nature in Creation not only obeys God, but devoutly obeys Him, i.e., glories in its privilege of service and obscience. Why should we not do likewise? It is part of our original unspoil nature, and we must respond to it, as all beings do, by their very nature,
- 3333 Cf xxx II above, where the same phrase began the argument about the beginning and end of all things being with God. This has been illustrated by reference to various Signs in Creation, and now the argument is rounded off with the same phrase.
- 3534. God's glory and God's attributes are above any names we can give to them. Human language is not adequate to express them. We can only form some idea of them at our present stage by means of Similitudes and Parables. But even so, the highest we can think of falls short of the true Reality. For God is higher and wiser than the highest and wisest we can think of.
- 3535. One way in which we can get some idea of the things higher than our own plane is to think of Parables and Similitudes drawn from our own plane and experience. And such a Similitude or Parable is offered to us now about false worship. See next note.
- 3336. God is far higher above His Creation than any, the highest, of His creatures can be above any, the lowest, of His creatures. And yet would a man share his wealth on equal terms with his dependants? Even what he calls his wealth is not really his own, but given by God. It is "his" in common speech by reason merely of certain accidental circumstances. How then can men raise God's creatures to equality with God in worship?

[S. xxx. 28-30.

Bestowed on you? Do ye Fear them as ye fear sen Each other? Thus do We Explain the Signs in detail To a people that understand.

- 30 So set thou thy face Steadily and truly to the Faith: 25 (Establish) God's handiwork

To the pattern on which He has made mankind: No change (let there be) In the work (wrought) 2541

3337. Men fear each other as equals in a state of society at perpetual warfare. To remove this fear they appoint an authority among themselves—a King or sovereign authority whom they consider just—to preserve them from this fear and give them an established order. But they must obey and revere this authority and depend upon this authority for their own tranquillity and security. Even with their equals there is always the fear of public opinion. But men do not fear, or obey, or revere those who are their slaves or dependents. Man is dependent on God. And God is the Bovereign authority in an infinitely higher sense. He is an osense dependent on us, but we must know a fear to disober his Will or His Law. "The fear of God is the beenings of wisdom."

3538. Cf. vi. 55, and vii. 32, 174, etc.

3540. For Hantf see n. 134 to ii. 135. Here "true" is used in the sense in which we say, "the magnetic needle is true to the north." Those who have been privileged to receive the Truth should never hesitate or swerve, but remain constant, as men who know.

3541. As turned out from the creative hand of God, man is innocent, pure, true, free, inclined to right and virtue, and endued with true understanding about this own position in the Universe and about God's goodness, wisdom, and power. That is his true nature, just as the nature of a lamb is to be gentle and of a horse is to be swift. But man is caught in the meshes of customs, superstitions, selfish desires, and false teaching. This may make him pugnacious, unclean, false, slavish, hankering alter what is wrong or forbidden, and deflected from the love of his fellow-men and the pure worship of the One True God. The problem before spiritual Teachers is to cure this crookedness, and to restore human anture to what it should be under the Will of God.

By God: that is The standard Religion: 3549 But most among mankind Understand not.

- 34. (As if) to show their ingratitude For the (favours) We have Bestowed on them ! Then enjoy (Your brief day); but soon

3542 In ix. 36 1 translated Din quiyim as "straight usage." Here the meaning is wider, as it includes the whole life, thoughts and desires of man. The "standard Religion," or the Straight Way is thus contrasted with the various human systems that conflict with each other and call themselves separate "religions" or "sects" (see verse 32 below). God's standard Religion is one, as God is One.

3543 "Repentance" does not mean sackcloth and ashes, or outting on a gloomy pessimism. It means giving up disease for health, crookedness (which is abnormal) for the Straight Way, the restoration of our nature as God created it from the falsity introduced by the enticements of Evil, To revert to the simile of the magnetic needle (n. 3540 above), if the needle is held back by obstructions, we must restore its freedom, so that it points true again to the magnetic pole.

3544. A good description of self-satisfied sectarianism as against real Religion. See n. 3542 above.

3545. Cf. x. 12. It is trouble, distress, or adversity that makes men realise their helplessness and turns their attention back to the true Source of all goodness and happiness. But when they are shown special Mercy-often more than they deserve-they forget themselves and attribute it to their own cleverness, or to the stars, or to some false ideas to which they pay court and worship, either to the exclusion of God or in addition to the lip-worship which they pay to God. Their action in any case amounts to gross ingratitude; but in the circumstances it looks as if they had gone out of their way to show ingratitude.

3546. Cf. xvs. 54. They are welcome to their fancies and false worship, and to the enjoyment of the legeaures of this Life, but they will soon be distillusioned. Then they will realise the true values of the things they neglected and the things they cultivated,

3547. Their behaviour is exactly as if they were satisfied within themsalves that they were entired or given a hierarce to worship God and Mammon. In fact the whole thing is their own invention or debusion.

3348. Cf. xxx, 33. In that passage the unreasonable behaviour of men in sorrow and in affluence is considered with reference to their attitude to God: in dixtress they turn to Him, but in prosperity they turn to other things. Here the contrast in the two situations is considered with reference to the single psychology: in affluence they are puffed up and unduly elated, and in adversity they lose all heart. Both attitudes are wrong. In prosperity men should realise that it is not their merits that deserve all the Bounty of God, but that it is given out of God's abundant generionity: in adversity they should remember that their suffering is brought on by their own folly and sin, and humbly pray for God's grace and mercy, in order that they may be set on their feet again. For, as the next very points out, God gives opportunities, gifts, and the good things of life to every one, but in a greater or less measure, and at some time or other, according to His All-Wise Plan, which is the expression of His holy and benevolent Will.

3552. RNB is any increase sought through illegal means, such as usury, brobary, profiteering, fraulutient trading; etc. See v. 25-277 and notes 242-257. All unlawful graping of wealth at other people's expense is condemned, Economic selfishness and many kinds of sharp practices, individual, national, and international, come under this ban. The principle is that any profit which we should seek should be through our own exertions and at our own expense, not through exploiting other people or at their expense, however we may wrap up the process in the spacious phraseology of high finance or City jurgon. But we are asked to go beyond this negative precept of avoiding what is wrong. We should show our active love for our neighbour by spending of our own substance or resources or the utilisation of our own talents and opportunities in the service of those who need them. Then our reward or recompense will not be merely what we deserve. It will be multiplied to many times more than our strict account.

3533 Seeking the "Face" or "Countenance" of God, i.e., out of our pure love for the  $Did\bar{a}_{r-1}$ - $Il\bar{a}h$ , the true vision of God's own Self. See also in 3550 above.

3334 The persons or things or ideas to which we give part-worship, while our whole and exclusive worship is due to God, are the "Partners" we set up Do we owe our existence to them? Do they sustain our being? Can they take our life or give it back to us? Certainly not. Then how foolish of us to give them part-worship?

3336. God's Creation was pure and good in itself. All the mischief or corruption was introduced by Evil, its., arrogance, selfishines, etc., See n. 3541 to xxx. 30 above. As soon as the mischief has come in God's mercy and goodness step in to stop it. The consequences of Evil must be evil, and this should be shown in such parnal punishment as "the hands of men have earned," to that it may be a warming for the future and an institution to enter the door of represtations.

337. The ultimate object of God's instice and punishment is to reclaim man from Evil, and to restore him to the pristine purity and innocence in which he was created. The Evil introduced by his possession of a limited free-will should be eliminated by the education and purification of man's own will. For, with his will and motives purified, he is capable of much greater heights than a creature not endowed with any free-will.

3558. If you contemplate history and past experience (including spiritual experience), you will find that evil and corruption tended to destroy themselves, because they had false idols for worship, false standards of conduct, and false goals of desire,

359. We should recover the balance that has been upset by Evil and Falsehood before it is too late. For a Day will surely come when true values will be restored and all falsehood and evil will be destroyed. Nothing but repentance and amendment can avert the consequences of Evil. When the Day actually comes, repentance will be too late; for the impassable barrier between Evil and Good will have been after, and the chance of return to God's pattern will have been lost,

س الدويوميديسد مون ه من كفر فقالناه كفر فقالناه كفر أو ترزيل المنطقة
3560. The sharp division will then have been accomplished between the unfortunate ones who rejected Truth and Faith and will suffer for their rejection, and the righteous who will attain Peace and Salvation: see next verse. Note that the state of the Blessed will not be merely a passive state. They will actively earn and contribute to their own happiness: "they will spread their couch of repose for themselves."

3361. Though the repose and bliss will have been won by the righteous by their own efforts, it not be supposed that their own merits were equal to the reward they will earn. What they will get will be due to the infanite Grace and Bounty of God.

3562. In form this clause is (here as elsewhere) negative, but it has a positive meaning: God loves those who have faith and trust in Him, and will, out of His Grace and Bounty, reward them in abundant measure.

356. The theme of God's artistry in the physical and the spiritual world was placed before us above in xxx 20-27. Then, in verses 28-0, two were shown how man and nature were pure as they came out of the hand of God, and how we must restore this purity in order to fulfilthe Will and Plan of God. Now we are told how the restorative and purifying agencies are sent by God Himself,—in both the physical and the spiritual world.

356F Cl. vii 57 and n, 1036 and xxv, 48 and n. 3104,

3565. In the physical world, the winds not only cool and purify the air, and bring the blessings of rain, which fertulese the soil, but they help international commerce and intercourse among men through sea-ways and now by air-ways. Those who know how to take advantage of these blessings of God prosper and replice, while those who ignore or fail to inderstand these Signs perish in storms. So in the spiritual would: heralds of glad tidings were sent by God in the shape of aposites: those who profited by their Alessage prospered in spiritual gain, and those who ignored or opposed the Clear Signs persished spiritually: see next verse.

(٣٠) سبورة الروم

- 49. Even though, before they received (The rain) - just before this-They were dumb with despair!
- 50. Then contemplate (O man !) The memorials of God's Mercy !-How He gives life 3508 To the earth after Its death: verily the Same Will give life to the men

3566. Again the Parable of the Winds is presented from another aspect, both physical and spiritual. In the physical world, see their play with the Clouds; how they suck up the moisture from terrestrial water, carry it about in dark clouds as needed, and break it up with rain as needed. So God's wonderful Grace draws up men's spiritual aspirations from the most unlikely places and suspends them as dark mysteries, according to His holy Will and Plan; and when His Message reaches the hearts of men even in the smallest fragments, how its recipients rejoice, even though before it, they were in utter despair!

3567. See last note.

3568. After the two Parables about the putifying action of the Winds and their fertilising action, we now have the Parable of the earth that dies in winter or drought and lives again in spring or rain, by God's Grace: so in the spiritual sphere, man may be dead and may live again by the Breath of God and His Mercy if he will only place himself in God's hands.

Who are dead: for He Has power over all things.

- 51. And if We (but) send A Wind from which also They see (their tilth) Turn yellow,—behold, They become, thereafter, Ungrateful (Unbelievers)!

3569. Another Parable from the forces of nature. We saw how the Winds gladdened, vivified, and enriched those who utilised them in the right sprit. But a wind might be destructive to tilth in certain circumstances: so the blessings of God may—by the wong-doers resisting and blaspheming—bring punishment to the wrong-doers. Instead of taking the punishment in the right spirit in the spirit in which Believers of God take their misfortunes,—the Unbelievers curse and deepen their sin!

3570. The malvels of God's creation can be realised in a general way by every one who has a dissipation to allow such knowledge to penetrate his mind. But if men, out of perversity, kill the very faculities which God has given them, how can they then understand? Besides the men who deaden their apiritual sense, there are men who may be likened to the deaf, who lack one faculty but to whom an appeal can be made through other taculties, such as the sense of sight, but if they turn their backs and refuse to be instructed at all, how can the Truth reach them?

3571. See last note. Then there is the case of men about whom the saying holds true, that none are so blind as those who will not see. They prefer to stray in paths of wrong and of sense-pleasures. How can they be guided in any way? The only persons who gain by spiritual teaching are those who bring a mind to it—who believe and submit their wills to God's Will. This is the central doctrine of Islam.

Then, after strength, gave (you) Weakness and a hoary head: 2672 He creates as He wills, And it is He Who has All knowledge and power.

- 55. On the Day that
  The Hour (of reckoning)
  Will be established, we will swear
  The transgressors will swear
  That they tarried not
  But an hour: thus were
  They used to being deluded!
- 56. But those endued with knowledge And faith will say: "Indeed ye did tarry, Within God's Decree, To the Day of Resurrection, And this is the Day will of Resurrection: but yeye ye were not aware!"
- 57. So on that Day no excuse Of theirs will Avail the Transgressors, 3612 Nor will they be invited (then) To seek grace (by repentance)

3372. What was said before about the results who make Grid's teaching "of tione effect" does not mean that Evil will defeat Good. On the contrary we are asked to contemplate the mysteries of God's wisdom with another Parable. In our physical life we see how strength is evolved out of weakness and weakness out of strength. The helpless habe becomes a flusty man in the pride of this manhood, and then ainks to a feeble old age; and yet there is wisdom in all these slagges in the Universal Plan. So God carries out His Plan in the spiritual world "as He wills" i.e. according to His Will and Plan, and none can gainsip if And His Plan is wise and can never be frostrated.

3373. Whatever the seeming inequalities may be now—when the good appear to be weak and the strong seem to oppress—will be removed when the balance will be finally redereded. That will happen in good time—mided so quickly that the Transgressors will be taken by surprise. They were deluded by the fact that what they took to be insert triumph or their freedom to do what they filed was only a reprise, a "Ferm Appointed", in which they could repeat and amend and get God's Mercy. Failing this, they will then be up against the Penalties which they thought they had evaded or defected.

3574. The men of knowledge and faith k, ew all along of the true values—of the things of this ephemeral life and the things that will endure and face them at the End,—unlike the wrong-cloers who were content with falsehoods and were taken by surprise, like ignorant men, when they faced the Realities.

3575. It will be no use for those who deliberately rejected the clearest warmings in God's liesange to say: "Oh, we did not realise his:" The excuse will be false, and it would be unreasonable to suppose that they would then be asked to seek Grace by repentance. It will then be too late.

- 58. We rily We have propounded For men, in this Qur-an. Every kind of Parable:
  But if thou bring to them
  Any Sign, the Unbelievers ****
  Are sure to say, "Ye
  Do nothing but talk vanities."
- 59. Thus does God seal up and The hearts of those Who understand not.
- 60. So patiently persevere: for Verily the promise of God Is true: nor let those <sup>2070</sup> Shake thy firmness, who have (Themselves) no certainty of faith.

<sup>3576-</sup>Things of the highest moment have been explained in the Qur-an from various points of view as in this Sūra itself, by means of parables and similitudes drawn from nature and from our ordinary daily life. But whatever the explanation, however convincing it may be to men who earnestly seek after Truth, those who deliberately turn their backs to Truth can find nothing convincing. In their eyes the explanations are more "varintalk" or falle arguments.

<sup>3577.</sup> When an attitude of obstinate resistance to Truth is adopted, the natural consequence (by God's Law) is that the heart and mind get more and more hardened with every act of deliberate rejection. It becomes more and more impervious to the reception of Truth, just as a sealed envelope is unable to receive any further letter or message after it is sealed. Cf. also if 7 and n. 31.

<sup>3578.</sup> The man of God does not slacken in his efforts of feel discouraged because the Unbehevers laugh at him or persecute him or even seem to succeed in blocking his Message. He has firm faith, and he knows that God will finally establish His Truth. He goes on in his divinely entrusted task, with patience and perseverance, which must win against the levity of his opponents, who have no faith or certainty at all to sustain them.

APPENDIX X.

FIRST CONTACT OF ISLAM WITH WORLD MOVEMENTS.

The contemporary Roman and Persian Empires (see xxx, 2-7 and notes).

The conflict between the Byzantine Emperor Heraclius and the Persian King Khusrau Parwiz (Chosroes II) is referred to in Sūra xxx. (Rūm). It will therefore be convenient now to review very briefly the relations of these two great empires and the way in which they gradually decayed before the cising sun of Islam. The story has not only a political significance, but a deep spiritual significance in world history.

- 2. If we take the Byzantine Empire as a continuation of the Empire that grew out of the Roman Republic, the first conflict took place in B.C. 53, when the Consul Crassus (famous for his riches) was defeated in his fight with the Parthians. If we go back further, to the time of the Greek City States, we can refer back to the invasion by sea and land by the united co-operation of the Greek States. The Persian Empire in those days extended to the western (Mediterranean) coast of Asia Minor. But as it included the Greek cities of Asia Minor, there was constant intercourse in war and peace between Persia and the Hellenic (Greek) world. The cities in Greece proper had their own rivalries and jealousies, and Greek cities or parties often invoked the aid of the Great King (Shahinshah of Persia) against their opponents. By the Peace of Antalcidas, B.C. 387, Persia became practically the suzerain power of Greece. This was under the Achamenian Dynasty of Persia.
- 3. Then came the rise of Macedonia and Alexander's conquest of the Persian Empire (B.C. 330). This spread the Hellenic influence as far east as Central Asia, and as far south as Syria (including Palestine). Egypt, and Northern Africa generally. Rome in its expansion westwards reached the Atlantic, and in its expansion eastwards absorbed the territories of Alexander's successors, and became the mistress of all countries with a Mediterranean sea-coast. The nations of the Roman Empire "insensibly melted away into the Roman name and people" (Gibbon, chap. ii).
- 4. Meanwhile there were native forces in Persia which asserted themselves and established (A.D. 10) the Dynasty of the Arsacids (Ashkāniān). This was mainly the outcome of a revolt against Hellenism, and its spear-point was in Parthia. The Arsacids won back Persia proper, and established the western boundary of Persia in a line drawn roughly from the eastern end of the Plark Sea Southwards to the Euphrates at a point north-east of Palmyra. This would include the region of the Caucasus (excluding the Black Sea coast) and Armenia and Lower Mesopotamia, in the Persian Empire. And this was the normal boundary between Persia and the Roman Empire until the Islamic Empire wiped out the old Monarchy of Persia snd a great part of the Byzantine Empire, and annexed Egypt, Palestine, Syria, and gradually Asia Minor, finally extinguishing the whole of the Byzantine Empire.

App. X.] 1070

- 5. Another stage in Persian history was reached when the Arsacids were overthrown and the Sasanians came into power under Ardashir I, A.D. 225. The Sasanian Empire was in a sense a continuation of the Achemenian Empire, and was a reaction against the corruptions of the Zoroastrian religion which had crept in under the Parthian Dynasty of the Arsacids. But the religious reforms were only partial. There was some interaction between Christianitv and the Zoroastrian religion. For example, the great mystic Mani, who was a painter as well as a religious leader, founded the sect of Manichwism. He flourished in the reign of Shapür I (A.D. 241-272) and seems to have preached a form of Gnostic faith, in which Alexandrian philosophy was mixed with Christian doctrine and the old Persian belief in the dual principle of Good and Evil. The Sasanians failed to purify religion and only adhered to fire-worship as the chief feature of their cult. In manners and morals they succumbed to the vices of arrogance, luxury, sensuality, and monopoly of power and privilege, which it is the office of Religion to denounce and root out. That office was performed by Islam.
- 6. When the seat of the Roman Empire was transferred to Constantinople (Byzantium) in the time of Constantine (A.D. 330), the conflict between Rome and Persia became more and more frequent. The true Peninsula of Arabia was never conquered either by Rome or by Persia, although its outlying parts were absorbed in either the one or the other at various times. It is interesting to notice that the Roman Emperor Philip (A.D. 244-249) was a born Arab and that the architecture of the Nabatzans in the city of Petra and in Hijr shows a mixture of Roman, Greek, Egyptian, and indigenous Arab cultures.
- 7. Arabia received the cultural influences of Persia and the Byzantine Empire, but was a silent spectator of their conflicts until Islam was brought into the main currents of world politics.
- 8. The Yemen coast of Arabia, which was easily accessible by sea to Persia, was the battle-ground between the Persian Empire and the Abyssinian Empire just across the Red Sea. Abyssinia and Arabia had had cultural and political relations for many centuries. Amharic, the ruling language of Abyssinia, is closely allied to Arabic, and the Amharic people went as colonists and conquerors from Arabia through Yemen. Shortly before the birth of holy Prophet, Abyssinia had been in occupation of Yemen for some time, having displaced a Jewish dynasty. The Abyssinians professed the Christian religion, and although their Church was doctrinally separate from the Byzantine Church, there was a great deal of sympathy between the Byzantines and the Abyssinians on account of their common Christian religion. One of the Abyssinian viceroys in Yemen was Abraha, who conceived the design of destroying the Temple at Elecca. He led an expedition, in which elephants formed a conspicuous feature, to invade Mecca and destroy the Ka'ba. He met a disastrous repulse, which is referred to in the Qur-an (Sura cv.). This event was in the year of the Prophet's birth, and marks the beginning of the great conflict which enabled Arabia eventually to obtain a leading place among the nations of the world. The year usually given for the Prophet's birth is 570 A.D., though the date must be taken as only approximate, being the middle figure between 569 and 571, the extreme-possible limits. The Abyssinians having been overthrown, the Persians were established in Yemen, and their power lasted there until about the 7th year of the Hijra (approximately 628 A.D.), when Yemen accepted Islam.

- 9. The outstanding event in Byzantine history in the 6th century was the reign of Justinian (527-565) and in Persian history the reign of Anaushirwan (531-579). Justinian is well-known for his great victories in Africa and for the great Digest he made of Roman Law and Jurisprudence. In spite of the scandalous life of his queen Theodora, he occupies an honourable place in the history of the Roman Empire. Anaushirwan is known in Persian history as the "Just King". They were contemporary rulers for a period of 34 years. In their time the Roman and the Persian Empires were in close contact both in neace and war. Anaushirwan just missed being adopted by the Roman Emperor. If the adoption had come off, he would have become one of the claimants to the Byzantine throne. He invaded Syria and destroyed the important Christian city of Antioch in 540-541. It was only the able defence of Belisarius, the Roman general, which saved the Roman Empire from further disasters in the east. On the other hand the Turanian Avars, driven in front of the Turks, had begun the invasion of Constantinople from the western side. Justinian also made an alliance with the Abyssinians as a Christian nation, and the Abyssinians and the Persians came into conflict in Yemen. Thus world conditions were hemming in Arabia on all sides. It was Islam that not only saved Arabia but enabled it to expand and to play a prominent part in world history after the annihilation of the Persian Empire and the partial destruction of the Byzantine Empire.
- 10. The sixth century of the Christian era and the first half of the seventh century were indeed a marvellous period in the world's history. Great events and transformations were taking place throughout the then known world. We have referred to the Roman Empire and the Persian Empire which dominated the civilised portions of Europe, Africa and Western Asia. The only two other countries of note in history in those days were India and China. In India there was the glorious period of Harsha Vardhana (606-647 A.D.), in which art, science, and literature flourished, political power was on a healthy basis, and religious enquiry was bringing India and China into close relationship. The famous Chinese Buddhist traveller Yuang-Chwang (or Yuang-Tsang or Hsuan-Tsang) perfomed his pious pik umage to India in 629-45. In China the glorious T'ang Dynasty was established in 618. The Chinese art of that Dynasty led the world. In political power Chinese extended from the Pacific in the east to the Persian Gulf on the west. There was unity and peace, and China-hitherto more or less isolated-received ambassadors from Persia, Constantinople, Magadha, and Nepal, in 643. But all this pomp and glitter had in it the seeds of decay. Persia and Byzantium collapsed in the next generation. India was in chaos after Harsha's death. The Chinese Empire could not long remain free from the "Barbarians"; the Great Wall, begun in the third century B.C., was soon to be out of date By about 683 the Khitans from the north-west and the Tibetans from the south were molesting China. The Germans, the Goths and the Vandals were pressing further and further into the Roman Empire. From Asia the Avars and the Turks were pressing both on the Romans and the Persians, and sometimes playing off the one against the other. The simpler and less suphisticated nations, with their ruder but more genuine virtues, were gaining ground. Into all that welter came the Message of Islam, to show up, as by galvanic action, the false from the rrue, the empty from the eternal, the decrepit and corrupt from the vigorous and pure. The ground of History was being prepared for the New Birth in Religion.

- 11. Anaushirwan was succeeded on the Persian throne by an unworthy son Hurmuz (579-590). Had it not been for the talents of his able General Bahram, his Empire would have been ruined by the invasions of the Torks on one side and of the Romans on the other. Eventually Bahram rebelled, and Hurmuz was deposed and killed. His son Kharau Parwiz (Chosroes II) took refuge with the Byzantine Emperor Maurice, who practically adopted him as a son and restored him to the Persian throne with Roman arms. Kharau reigned over Persia from 590 to 628. It was to him that the holy Prophet addressed one of his letters, inviting him to Islam towards the end of his life. It is not certain whether the letter was actually delivered to him or to his successor, as it is not easy to calculate precisely synchronous dates of the Christian era with those of the sarliest years of the Hijri era.
- 12. In Arabic and Persian records the term Kisrā refers usually to Kbusrau Parwiz (Chosroes II) and sometimes to Khusrau Anaushirwan (Chosroes I), while the term Khusrau is usually treated as generic,—as the title of the Kinga of Persia generally. But this is by no means always the case. "Kira" is an Arabic form of "Khusrau". The name of Anaushirwan has been shortened from the time of Firdausi onwards to Nüshirwan. The Pehlevi form is Anoshek-ruwan, "of immortal soul"
- 13. The Roman Emperor Maurice (582-602) had a mutiny in his army, and his capital revolted against him. The army chose a simple centurion called Phocas as Emperor and executed Maurice himself. The usurper Phocas ruled from 602 to 610, but his tyranny soon disgusted the Empire. Heraclius, the governor (exarch) of a distant province in Africa, raised the standard of rebellion, and his young son, also called Heraclius, was sent to Constantinople to depose Phocas and assume the reins of power. It was this younger Heraclius, who ascended the throne of Constantinople in 610 and ruled till 642, who figures in Muslim history as Hiraql.
- 14. Khusrav Parwiz called himself the son of the Emperor Maurice, During his refuge at Constantinople he had married a Byzantine wife. In Nizami's Romance she is known as Maryam. According to some historians she was a daughter of the Emperor Maurice, but Gibbon throws doubt on that relationship. In any case he used the resources of the Persian Empire to fight the usurper Phocas. He invaded the Byzantine Empire in 603. The war between the Persians and the Romans became a national war and continued after the fall of Phocas in 610. The Persians had sweeping victories, and conquered Aleppo, Antioch, and the chief Syrian cities, including Damascus, in 611. Jerusalem fell to their arms in 614-15, just 8 to 7 years before the sacred Hijrat. The city was burnt and pillaged, the Christians were massacred, the churches were burnt, the burial-place of Christ was itself insulted, and many relics, including the "true Cross" on which the Christians believed that Christ had been curcified, were carried away to Persia. The priests of the Persian religion celebrated an exultant triumph over the priests of Christ. In this pillage and massacre the Persians were assisted by crowds of Jews, who were discontented with the Christian domination, and the Pagan Arabs to whom any opportunity of plunder and destruction was in itself welcome. It is probably this striking event-this victory of the Persians over the Roman Empire-which is referred to in Sura XXX (Rum) of the Qur-an. The Pagan Arabs naturally sided with the Persians in their destructive zeal, and thought that the destruction of the Christian power of Rome would also mean's setback to the Message of the Prophet. the true successor of Jesus. For our holy Prophet had already begun his mission and the promulgation of God's Revelation in A.D. 610. While the whole world believed that the Roman Empire was being killed by Persia, it was revealed to him that the Persian victory was short-lived and that within a period of a few years the Romans would conquer again and deal a deadly blow at the Persians. The Pagan Arabs, who were then persecuting the holy Prophet in Mecca, hoped that their persecution would destroy the holy Prophet's new Revelation. In fact both their persecution and the deadly blows aimed by the Persians and the Romans at each other were instruments in God's hands for producing those conditions which made Islam thrive and increase until it became the predominant power in the world,

- 15. The Persian flood of conquest did not stop with the conquest of Jerusalem. It went on to Egypt, which was also conquered and annoxed to the Persian Empire in 616. The Persian occupation reached as far as Tripoli in North Africa. At the same time another Persian army ravaged Asia Minor and reached right up to the gates of Constantinople. Not only the Jews and Pagan Arabs, but the various Christian sects which had been persecuted as heretics by the Romans, joined in the fray and helped the Persians. The condition of Heraclius became indeed pitiable. With all these calamities, he had to deal with the Avars who were attacking from the other side of Constantinople, which was practically in a state of siege. Famine and pestilence added to the horrors of the situation.
- 16. In these desperate circumstances Heraclius conceived a brilliant plan. He knew that the Persians were weak in sea power. He used his sea power to attack them in the rear. In 622 (the year of the Hijral he transported his army by sea through the Ægean Sea to the bay just south of the Taurus Mountains. He fought a decisive battle with the Persians at Issus, in the same plain in which Alexander the Great had defeated the Persians of his day in his famous march to Syria and Egypt. The Persians were taken by surprise and routed. But they had still a large force in Asia Minor, which they could have brought into play against the Romans if Heraclius had not made another and equally unexpected dash by sea from the north. He returned to Constantinople by sea, made a treaty with the Avars, and with their help kept the Persians at bay round the capital. Then he led three campaigns, in 623, 624 and 625, along the southern shore of the Black Sea and took the Persians again in the rear in the region round Trebizond and Kars. Through Armenia he penetrated into Persia and got into Mesopotamia. He was now in a position to strike at the very heart of the Persian Empire. A decisive battle was fought on the Tigris near the city of Mosul in December 627. Before this battle, however, he had taken care to get the alliance of the Turks and with their help to relieve Constantinople in 626 against the Persians and the treacherous Avars who had then joined the Persians.

- 17. Heraclius celebrated his triumph in Constantinople in March 628. Peace was then made between the two Empires on the basis of the status quo ante. Heraclius, in pursuance of a vow he had made, went south in the autumn to Emessa (Hime) and from there marched on foot to Jerusalem to celebrate his victories, and restore to its place the holy Cross which had been carried away by the Persians and was returned to the Emperor as a condition of peace. Heraclius's route was strewn with costly carpets, and he thought that the final deliverance had come for his people and his empire Either on the way, or in Jerusalem, he met a messenger from the holy Prophet, carrying a letter inviting him to the True Faith as renewed in the living Apostle of the age. He apparently received the messenger with courtesy But he did not realise the full import of the new World which was being shaped according to God's plans, and the future that was opening out through the new Revelation. Perhaps in his heart he felt impressed by the story which he heard from the Arabs about the holy Prophet, but the apparent grandeur of his empire and the pride of his people prevented him from openly accepting the renewed Message of God. He caused a search to be made for any Arab who was sufficiently acquainted with the Prophet to tell him something about him. Abū Sufyan was then trading in a caravan in Syria. He was a cousin of the Prophet, and belonged to the Umaiva branch of the family. He was sent for to Jerusalem (Ælia Capitolina),
- 18. When Abū Sufyān was called to the presence of Heraclius, the Emperor questioned him closely about this new Prophet. Abū Sufyān himself was at that time outside Islam and really an enemy of the Prophet and of his Message. Yet the story he told—of the truth and the sincerity of the holy Apostle, of the way in which the poor and the lowly flocked to him, of the wonderful increase of his power and spiritual influence, and the way in which people who had once received the Light never got disillusioned or went back to their life of ignorance, and above all the integrity with which he kept all his covenants—made a favourable impression on the mind of Heraclius. That story is told in dramatic detail by Bukbāri and other Arabian writers.
- 19. The relations of the Persian Monarch with Islam wore different. Hemither Khusrau Parwiz or his successor—received the holy Apostle's messenger with contumely and tore up his letter. "So will his kingdom be torn up," said the holy Apostle when the news reached him. The Persian Monarch ordered his Governor in Yemen to go and arrest the man who had so far forgotten himself as to address the grandson of Anaushirwan on equal terms: When the Persian Governor tried to carry out his Monarch's command, the result was quite different from what the great Persian King of Kings had expected. His agent accepted the truth of Islam, and Yemen was lost as a province to the Persian Empire and became a portion of the new Muslim State. Khusrau Parwiz died in February 628. He had been deposed and imprisoned by his own cruel and undutiful son, who reigned only for a year and a half. There were nine candidates for the Persian throne in the remaining four years. Anarchy reigned supreme in the Sasanian Empire, until the dynasty was extinguished by the Muslim victory at the battle of Madain in 637. The great and glorious Persian monarchy, full of pride and ambition, came to an ignominious end, and a new chapter opened for Persia under the banner of Islam.

- 20. The Roman Empire itself began to shrink gradually, loosing its territory, not to Persia, but to the new Muslim Power which absorbed both the ancient Empires. This Power arose in its vigour to proclaim a new and purified creed to the whole world. Already in the last seven years of Heraclius's reign (635-642) several of the provinces nearest to Arabia had been annexed to the Muslim Empire. The Muslim Empire continued to spread on, in Asia Minor to the north and Egypt to the south. The Eastern Roman Empire became a mere shadow with a small bit of territory round its capital. Constantinople eventually surrendered to the Muslim arms in 1453.
- 21. That was the real end of the Roman Empire: But in the wonderful century in which the Prophet lived, another momentous Revolution was taking place. The Roman Pontificate of Gregory the Great (590-604) was creating a new Christianity as the old Christianity of the East was slowly dying out. The Patriarch of Constantinople had claimed to be the Universal Bishop, with jurisdiction over all the other bishops of Christendom. This had been silently but gradually questioned by the Popes of Rome. They had been building up a liturgy, a church organisation and a body of discipline for the clergy, different from those of the Holy Orthodox Church. They had been extending their spiritual authority in the Barbarian provinces of Gaul and Spain. They had been amassing estates and endowments. They had been accumulating secular authority in their own hands. Pope Gregory the Great converted the Anglo-Saxon invaders of Great Britain to his form of Christianity. He protected Italy from the ravages of the Franks and Lombards and raised the See of Rome to the position of a Power which exercised ample jurisdiction over the Western world. He was preparing the way for the time when one of his successors would crown under his authority the Frankish Charlemagne as Emperor of Rome and of the West (A.D. 800), and another of his successors would finally break away from the Orthodox Church of Constantinople in 1054 by the Pope's excommunication of the Patriarch of Constantinople and the Greeks, (See the last paragraph in Appendix V.)

References : - Among Western writers, the chief authority is Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire: mainly chapters 40-42, and 45-46: I have given references to other chapters in the body of this Appendix; his delineation of the characters of Heraclius and Chosroes II is brief but masterly, L. Drapeyton's French monograph, L'Empereur Héraclius (Paris, 1869) throws further light on an interesting personality. A J. Butler's Arab Conquest of Egypt (Oxford, 1902) gives a good account of Heraclius. The famous French dramatist Corneille has left a Play on Heraclius, but it turns more on an intricate and imaginary plot in the early life of Heracius than on the character of Heraclius as Emperor. Nizāmī, in his Khusrau-o-Sīhrīn (571 H.=1175-66 A.D.) makes a reference at the end of his Romance to the holy Prophet's letter to the Persian King, and does attempt in the course of the Romance a picture of the King's character. He is a sort of wild Prince Hal before he comes to the throne. Shirin is an Armenian princess in love with Khusrau; she marries Khusrau after the death of his first wife Maryam, daughter of the Roman Emperor, and mother of the undutiful son who killed Khusrau and seized his throne. Among the other Eastern writers, we find a detailed description of the interview of Abu Sufyan in Bukhart's Sahil (Book on the beginning of Inspiration): the notes in the excellent English translation of Muhammad Asad (Leopold Weiss) are helpful. Tabart's History is as usual valuable. Mirkhond's (Khawind-Shah's) Raudhat-up-Safa (translated by Rehatsek) will give English readers a summary (at second hand) of the various Arabic authorities, Maulana Shibli's otherwise excellent Siral-un-Nabi is in this respect disappointing, Mauläna Zafar 'Alt's Galaba-1-Rüm (Urdu, Lahore; 1926) is interesting for its comments.

A note on the Persian capitals may be interesting. So long as Persia was under the influence of the Semitic Elamites, the chief residence of the rulers was at Susa, near the modern Dizful, about 30 miles north-gast of Shustar. In the Medic or Median period (say B. C. 700 to 550) the capital was, as we should expect, in the highlands of Media, in Echatana, the site of the modern city of Hamadan, 180 miles west of modern Thran. Echatana remained even in Sasanian times the summer capital of Persia. With the Achaemenians (B.C. 550 to 330) we come to a period of full national and imperial life. Susa was the chief Achæmenian capital from the time of Darius I onwards, though Persepolis (Istakhr) in the mountain region near modern Shiraz, and about 40 miles north east of Shiraz, was used as the city of royal burial. Alexander himself, as Ruler in Persia. died in Babylon. Later, when the centre of gravity moved north and north-east, other sites were selected. The Arsacids (Ashkanian) or Parthians were a tribal power, fitly called in Arabic the muluk-ut tawait, and had probably no fixed or centralised capital. The Sasanians took over a site where there were a number of cities, among which were Ctesiphon and Seleucia on opposite banks of the river Tigris. This site is about 45 miles north of the old site of Babylon and 25 miles below the later city of Baghdad. Ctesiphon and Seleucia were Greek cities founded by one of Alexander's successors, Seleucia being named after Seleucus. This complex of seven cities was afterwards called by the Arabic name of Madain ("the Cities"). The Takht-i-Kisra (or Arch of Clesiphon) still stands in a ruinous, condition on this site. This seems to have been the chief capital of the Sasanians at the Arab conquest, which may be dated either from the battle of Qadistya or that of Madain (both fought in 637 A D), after which Persia which then included 'Iraq came into the Muslim Empire. The 'Abbasi Empire built Baghdad for its capital under Mangur in 762 A.D. When that Empire was broken up in 1258 A.D. there was some confusion for two centuries. Then a national Persian Empire, the Safawi (1499-1736) arose, and Shah Salir established his capital in the north-west corner in Tabriz. Shah 'Abbas the Great (1587 1628) had his capital at the more central city of Ispahan (or Islahan). After the Safawt dynasty confusion reigned again for about four decades, when the Afghans were in the ascendant When the Qachar (or Qajar) dynasty (1795-1925) was firmly established under Aga Muhammad Khan, Tihran (Teheran), near the Caspian, where his family originated, became the capital, and it still remains the capital under the modern Pehlevi

APPENDIX XI

COMPARATIVE CHRONOLOGY OF THE EARLY YEARS OF ISLAM

(See paras, 11 and 8 of Appendix X.)

The dates after the Hijrat, when given according to the Arabian Calendar, can usually be calculated exactly according to other Calendars, but it is not possible to synchronise exactly the earliest dates of the Arabian Calendar with the dates of the Christian Calendar, and for two reasons. In the first place, there seems to have been some discrepancy between the Calendars in Medina and in Mecca. In the second place, the Arabian Calendar was roughly luni-solar, before the years of the Farewell Pilgrimage (Zul-Haji, 10 H .= March 632). The Pagan Arabs were in the habit of counting months by the appearance of the moon, but irregularly intercalating a month once in about three years to bring the calendar : un into conformity with the seasons. They did not do it on any astronomical calculations or on any system, but just as it suited their own selfish purposes, thus often upsetting all the old-established conventions about the months of peace and security from war and thus getting an unfair advantage for the clique in powerin Mecca over their enemies (see my n. 1295 to ix, 36). Unless exact mathematical calculations are applied and reduced to a well-established system, there is ant to be confusion, and this can well be taken advantage of by arbitrary cliques in power. After the holy Prophet's adoption of the purely lunar calendar for ecclesiastica, purposes, there is no confusion. Every date after A.H. 10 is exactly convertible into a corresponding date in any other accurate calendar. Wüstenfeld's and other Comparative Tables of Muslim and Christian dates may therefore be relied upon for dates after A.H. 10, but much caution is necessary in synchronisation for earlier dates.

Maulana Shibli, in his Strat-un-Nabl, Vol. I, p. 124 (edition of 1335 H., 1918 C.), adopts for the Prophet's Birthday the date 20th April 571, following Mahmud Pasha. They go on the basis of an astronomical event, the total eclipse of the sun that was visible in Medina on the day that the Prophet's son Ibrahim was taken to the mercy of God. But there is no agreement among the authorities as to the exact date either by the Christian or the Arabian Calendar. Shibli. following Mahmud Pasha, takes the date of the eclipse to be the 7th November 632. Muir (Life, ed. 1923, p. 429), assumes some date in June or July 631. L. Caetani (Chronographia Islamica, A.H. 10) gives the date of the eclipse as 4th or 5th July 631, which he synchronises with the 28th or 29th of Rabi' I. A.H. 10, but he quotes authorities for the death of Ibrahim as on the 16th June 631, synchronising it with the 10th of Rabi' I, A.H. 10. There is something wrong here, as the death and the eclipse occurred on the same day. Waqidi gives the month as Rabi' I, A.H. 10. and gives Ibrahīm a life of 15 months. But if Aba Da-ūd and Baihaqī are correct, Ibrahim lived only 2 months and 10 days, and as his date of birth is given in Zul, Hajj A.H. 8, the date of death according to these authorities would be in

App. XI.] 1078

Rabi' I, A.H. 9. On a review of all the authorities I feel inclined to accept the date for the eclipse and the death of Ibrabim as 28th or 29th of Rabi' I, A.H. 10 = 4th or 5th July 631. But this cannot be asserted with certainty. The French work of reference, L'art de odriffer les dates, Paris 1818 (Vol. I, p. 310), gives the date of the solar eclipse as the 3rd of August 631, 2-30 P.M., and according to the system adopted in that book, the corresponding Hijra date would be the 28th Rabi' II. A.H. 10,

Even if this particular date was certain and exact, a certain amount of uncertainty remains in counting dates backwards. Most authorities assume a purely lunar year of 354 days for working backwards. Probably the Muslims in Medina counted in this way even before the lunar year was fixed exactly in A.H. 10. But the mass of Pagan Arabs in Mecca and elsewhere probably were all the time intercalating a month roughly once in three years, as has been stated before, until their power was utterly destroyed by the conquest of Mecca; and therefore precise exactitude in pre-Conquest dates or in the counting of people's ages in years before 8-10 A.H. is unattainable. See a note on this subject in Margoliouth's Life of the Prophet (p. xix. of the 3rd edition) and in Muir's Life (p. x. of the 1923 edition).

The date of the actual Hijrat as given in Caetani may be accepted as Sept.-Oct. 622, being in the month of Rabi' I. If the ninth of that month be accepted as the date of departure from the cave of Thaur, the best synchronised date would be 22nd September 622 C. But as the first month of the Arab year was (and is) Muharram, the Hijri year I is counted as beginning on the 15th or 16th July 622(=1 Muharram A.H. 1). The formal adoption of the Hijri era in official documents dates from the Khilafat of Hadhrat 'Umar,-from the year 17-18 H. according to Tabari.

Sir Wolseley Haig's Comparative Tables of Muhammadan and Christian Dates (London, Luzac, 1932), gives in a handy form three comparative Tables which enable the synchronisation of Hijfi years from A.H. 1 to A.H. 1421. The main Table for these years was printed earlier at the end of S. Haïm's Now English-Persian Dictionary, Teheran, 1931. The exact title of Wöstenfeld's German Tables is: Wüstenfeld-Mahler, Vergleichungs-Tabellen, Leipzig, 1926 (2nd edition).

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXI (Lugman).

The argument of the Final End of Things is here continued from another point of view. What is Wisdom? Where shall she be found? Will she solve the mysteries of Time and Nature, and that would higher than physical Nature, which brings us nearer to God? "Yes," is the answer; "if, as in the advice of Luqman the Wise, human wisdom looks to God in true worship, ennobles every act of life with true kindness, but avoids the false indulgence that infringes the divine law,—and in short follows the golden mean of virtue." And this is indicated by every Sign in nature.

The chronology of this Sura has no significance. In the main, it belongs to the late Meccan period.

Summary.—The earnest seekers after righteousness receive guidance, unlike the seekers after vanity, who perish: all Creation bears witness to this: Wisdom, as expounded by Luqman the Wise, is true service to God, and consists in moderation (xxxi. 1-19, and C. 183).

True Wisdom is firm and enduring, and discerns God's Law in the working of His Creation: It looks to the Final End of Things, whose mystery is only known to God (xxxi. 20-34, and C. 184).

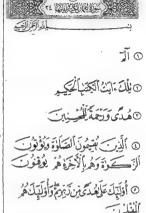

C. 183.—What is the Book of Wisdom? It is (xxxi. i-19.)

A Guide and a Mercy to men, and teaches
Them how to attain Bliss. God's Mercies
Are infinite: how can men deny them?
Luqman the Wise taught grateful worship
Of the One True God, and the service of men,
Beginning with Parents: every good deed
Is known to God and is brought to account.
So walk in the Golden Mean, and serve
Him with constancy and firmness of purpose.

3579. See n. 25 to ii. I and Introduction to S. xxx.

3590. This Stra relates to Wisdom, and the Qurân is appropriately called the Wise Book, or the Book of Wasdom. In verse 12 below there is a reference to Luquiān the Wise, "Wise" in this sense (Hakim) means not only a man versed in knowledge human and divine, but one carrying out in practical conduct ("amal) the right course in life to the utmost of his power. His knowledge is correct and practical, but not necessarily complete: for no man is perfect. Such an ideal involves the conception of a man of heroic action as well as of deep and workman-like knowledge of nature and human nature,—not merely dreams or speculation. That ideal was fulfilled in a most remarkable degree in the holy Apostle, and in the sacred Book which was revealed through him. "The Wise Book" (Kritiba-li-jakim) is one of the titles of the Qurân.

3381. A guide to all, and, to those who accept its guidance, a source of mercy as leading them to Salvation.

3582. The righteous are distinguished here by three marks, which are summed up in the phrase "doers of good", usz.: (1) they yearn towards God in duty, love, and prayer, (2) they love and serve their fellow-men in charity, (3) they win peace and rest for themselves in the assured hope of the Future.

3584 Life is taken seriously by men who realise the issues that hang upon it. But there are men of a fivolous turn of mind who prefer idle tales to true Realities and they are justly rebuked here, in the time of the holy Prophet there was a pagan Nadhr ibn al-#ārith who preferred Persian romances to the Message of God, and turned away ignorant men from the preaching of God's Word,

3586 He is Exalted in power, and can carry out His Will, and nothing can stop the carrying out of His promise. He is also infinitely Wise . His promise is therefore full of meaning : it is not merely without purpose; it has a place in the Universal Plan.

3588. Cf. xvi. 15 and n 2038, 3589. Cf. ii. 164 and n. 166.

3590. Note the change of the pronoun at this stage in the verse. Before this, God was spoken of in the third person, "He", and the acts of Creation referred to were acts that in the main were completed when the universe as we see it came into being, though its slow age-long evolution continues. After this, God speaks in the first person "We"-the plural of honour, as explained before (see n. 56 to ii 38); and the processes spoken of are those that go on continually before us, as in the case of rain and the growth of the vegetable kingdom. In some way the creation of the heavens and the earth and animal life on it may be considered impersonal to man, while the processes of rain and vegetation may be considered in special personal relationship to him,

3591. I think that sex life in plants is referred to, as in xiii. 3, where see n. 1804, though the pairs here may refer to animals also. "Noble" (kariw) may refer to the more beneficent plants and trees (and animals), which God has created for man's use.

3594. The transition from "We" in the last verse to "Me" in this verse means a still more personal relation to God: (see n. 56 to it. 38); as we are now asked about the true worship of God, as against the false worship of others besides God.

3594. Cf. xiv. 8. The basis of the moral Law is man's own good, and not any benefit to God, for God is above all needs, and "worthy of all praise"; is even in praising Him, we do not advance His glory. When we obey His Will, we bring our position into conformity with our own nature as made by Him.

3595, Luqmän is held up as a pattern of wisdom, because he realised the best in a wise life in this world, as based upon the highest Hope in the inner life. To him, as in Islam, true human wisdom is also divine wisdom: the two cannot be separated. The beginning of all wisdom, therefore, is conformity with the Will of God (axxi, 12). That means that we must understand our relations to Him and worship Him aright (xxxi, 13). Then we must be good to mankind, beginning with our own parents (xxxi, 14). For the two duties are not diverse, but one. Where they appear to conflict, there is something wrong with the human will (see a. 3597).

3597. Where the duty to man conflicts with the duty to God, it means that there is something wrong with the human will, and we should obey God rather than man. But even here, it does not mean that we should be arrogant or insolent. To parents and those in authority, we must be kind, considerate, and courteous, even where they command things which we should not do and therefore drosbedience becomes our highest duty.

The worship of things other than God is the worship of false things, things which are alien to our true knowledge, things that go against our own pure nature as created by God,

3598. In any apparent conflict of duties our standard should be God's Will, as declared to us by His command. That is the way of those who love God; and their motive in disoberience to parents in human authority where disobedience is necessary by God's Law, is not self willed rebellion or defiance, but love of God, which means the true love of man in the highest sense of the word. And the reason we should give is: "Both you and I have to return to God; therefore not only must I follow God's Will."

3599. These conflicts may appear to us strange and puzzling in this life. But in God's Presence we shall see their real meaning and significance. It may be that that was one way in which our true mettle could be tested: for it is not easy to disobey and love man at the same time.

3600. Verses 14-15 are not the direct speech of Luqman but flow by way of commentary on his teaching. He was speaking as a father to his son, and he could not very well urge respect for himself and draw the son's attenuou to the limitations of flial objections. These verses may be supposed to be general directions flowing from Luqman's teaching to men, and not directed to his son; though neither case, as Luqman got wisdom from God, it is divine principles that are enuncated, 3601. The mustard-seed is proverbially a small, minute thing, that people may ordinarily pass by, Not so God. Further emphasis is laid by supposing the mustard-seed to be hidden beneath a rock or in the cleft of a rock, or to be lost in the spacious expanse of the earth or of the heavens. To God everything is known, and He will bring it forth, i.e., take account of it.

3602. For Latif as a title applied to God, see n. 2844 to xxii. 63.

3603. The word "cheek" in English, too, means arrogance or effrontery, with a slightly different should added, or : effrontery from one in an inferior position to one in a superior position. The Arabic.usage is wider, and includes smug self-satisfaction and a sense of lotty superiority.

3604. The "Golden Mean" is the pivot of the philosophy of Luqman as it is of the philosophy of Aristotle and indeed of Islam. And it flows naturally from a true understanding of our relation to God and His universe and to our fellow-creatures, especially man. In all things be moderate. Do not go the pace, and do not be stationary or slow. Do not be talkative and do not be silent. Do not be loud and do not be tumid or half-hearted. Do not be to confident, and do not be cowed down. If you have patience, it is to give you constancy and determination, that you may bravely earry on the struggle of life. If you have humility, it is to save you from unseemly swagger, not to curb your right spirit and your reasoned defermination.

3606. God's grace and bounties work for us at all times. Sometimes we see them, and sometimes the do not. In things which we can apprehend with our senses, we can see God's grace, but even in them, sometimes it works beyond the sphere of our knowledge. In the inner or sputitual world, sometimes, when our vision is clear, we can see it working, and often we are not conscious of it. But it works all the same.

3601. Such men lack knowledge, as they make no use of their intellects but are awayed by their passions; they lack guidance, as they are impatient of control; and the fruits of revelation, or spiritual insight, do not reach them, as they reject Faith and Revelation.

3608. They do not realise that in the spiritual world, as in the physical world, there is constant progress for the live ones: they are spiritually dead, as they are content to stand on ancestral wavs, many of them evil, and leading to perdicine.

They do not do the duties which, if they rightly understood their own nature and position, they should take a delight in doing.

"God". Say: "Praise be to God!" ***

But most of them Understand not.

26. To God belong all things
In heaven and earth: verily
God is He (that is)
Free of all wants,
Worthy of all praise. 2015

Yet would not the Words Bosto
Of God be exhausted
(In the writing): for God
Is Exalted in power,
Full of Wisdom.

28. And your creation
Or your resurrection
Is in no wise but
As an individual soul: ***
For God is He Who
Hears and sees (all things).

3614. This ejaculation expresses our satisfaction that at least this is recognised,—that the Creator of the whole world is God. It is a pity that they do not go further and recognise other facts and duties (see the last note).

3615. Cf. above, xxxi 12. There was begun the argument about showing gratitude to God. Introducing Luqman's teaching and philosophy. Surh gratitude is shown by our understanding His love and doing our duty to Him by serving our fellow-men. For God Himself is Free from all wants and is in no way dependent on our service. That argument has been illustrated in various ways. But now we are told that it can never be completed, for no human tongue or human resources can be adequate either to praise him or to expound His Word.

3616. "Words of God": His wonderful Signs and Commandments are infinite and cannot be expressed if all the trees were made into pens, and all the wide Ocean, multiplied seven times, were made into ink. Any Book of His Revelation would feat with matters which man can understand and use in his life: there are mysteries beyond mysteries that man can never fathom. Nor would any praise that we could write with infinite resources be adequate to describe His power, glory, and wisdom.

3617. God's greatness and infinitude are such that He can create and cherish not only a whole mass, but each individual soul, and He can follow its history and doings until the final Judgment. This shows not only God's glory and omniscience and omnipotence: it also shows the value of each individual soul in His eyes, and lifts individual responsibility right up into relations with Him.

- 29. Seest thou not that
  God merges Night into Day 868
  And He merges Day into Night;
  That He has subjected the sun
  And the moon (to His Law),
  Each running its course
  For a term appointed; and
  That God is well acquainted
  With all that ye do?
- 30. That is because God is
  The (only) Reality, and because
  Whatever else they invoke™
  Besides Him is Falsehood;
  And because God,—He is
  The Most High, Most Great.

  SECTION 4.
- 31. Seest thou not that
  The ships sail through
  The Ocean by the grace
  Of God?—that He may
  Show you of His Signs?
  Verily in this are Signs
  For all who constantly persevere
  And give thanks.
- 32. When a wave covers them Like the canopy (of clouds), They call to God, Offering Him sincere devotion. 2693.

3618. Cf., xxxx bl and n 2841. Even when we can form a conception of God's infinitude by His dealings with each individual in His Creation as in verse 28 above, it is still inadequate. What is an individual himself? What is his relation to the universal Laws of God? In outer nature we can see that there is no clear-cut line but veen night and day; each merges into the other. Yet the sun and moon obey definite laws. Though they seem to go on for ever, yet there existence and duration themselves are but an atom in God's great universe. How much more "merging" and imperceptible gradation there is in the inner and spiritual world? Our actions themselves cannot be classified and ticketed and labelled when examined in relation to motives and circumstances. Yet they are like an open book before God.

36.19. Cf. xxii. 62 and notes 2842 and 2843. All the wonderful complexities, gradations, and meases, that we find in Creation, are yet blended in one harmonious whole, that obeys Law and exemplifies Order. They therefore point to the One True God. He is the only Reality. All other things are but shadows, and 'I any of them is put up in competition or equality with Him, it can be only Falsehood. For He is higher and greater than anything we can imagine.

3670. Even the things that man makes are, as using the forces of Nature, evidence of the grace of Ood, Who has subdued these wonderful forces to the use of man. But this gift of mastery can only be understood and appreciated by constant perseverance, combined with a recognition of the divine gifts ("giving thanks"). Sabbār is an intensive form from sabr and I have indicated it by the adverb "constantly".

3621. Cf. vii 29 Unlike the people mentioned in the last verse, who constantly seek God's help and give thanks for His mercies by using them aright and doing their duty, there is a class of men whose worship is merely inspired by terror. When they are in physical danger—the only kind of danger they appreciate,—e.g., in a storm at sea, they genuinely think of God. But once the danger is past, they become indifferent or wish to appear good while dallying with evil. See next verse,

But when He has delivered them Safely to land, there are Among them those that halt **Between (right and wrong). But none reject Our Signs Except only a perfidious Ungrateful (wretch)!

- 33. O mankind! do your duty
  To your Lord, and fear
  (The coming of) a Day
  When no father can avail
  Aught for his son, nor
  A son avail aught
  For his father.**
  Verily, the promise of God
  Is true: let not then
  This present life deceive you,
  Nor let the Chief Deceiver.*
  See Total Common See Total
  Deceive you about God.
- 34. Verily the knowledge
  Of the Hour is
  With God (alone).
  It is He Who sends down
  Rain, and He Who knows
  What is in the wombs """.

3622. They hall between two opinions. They are not against good, but they will not eschew evil. They are a contrast to those who "constantly persevere and give thanks". But such an attitude amounts really to "perficious ingralitude".

3623 On the Day of Reckoning no one can help another. The most loving father cannot help his son or be a substitute for him, and vice versa. Each will have his own personal responsibilities.

36.14 The Chief Deceiver is the Power of Evil. It may make us forget that Time is fleeting and delude us by suggesting that the Reckoning may not come, whereas it is certain to come, because God's primise is true. We mast not play with Time nor be deceived by appearances. The Day may come to day or to-morrow or when we least expect it.

3625. The question of Knowledge or Mystery governs both clauses here, vis. : Rain and Wombs, In fact it governs all the five things mentioned in this verse; wie. (1) the Hour; (2) Rain; (3) the Birth of a new Life (Wombs); (4) our Physical Life from day to day; (5) our Death. See n. 3627 below. As regards Rain we are asked to contemplate how and when it is sent down. The moisture may be sucked up by the sun's heat in the Arabian Sea or the Red Sea or the Indian Ocean near fast Africa, or in the Lake Region in Central Africa. The winds drive it hither and thither across thousands of miles, or it may be, only short distances. "The wind bloweth where it listeth." No doubt it obeys certain physical Laws established by God, but how these Laws are interlocked, one with another! Meteorology, gravity, bydrostatics and dynamics, climatology, hygrometry, and a dozen other sciences are involved, end no man can completely master all of them, and yet this relates to only one of the millions of facts in physical nature, which are governed by God's Knowledge and Law. The whole vegetable kingdom is primarily affected by Rain. The mention of Wombs brings in the mystery of animal Life, Embryology, Sex, and a thousand other things. Who can tell-to take man alone-whether the child conceived is male or female, how long it will remain in the womb, whether it will be born alive, what sort of a new individual it will be,-a blessing or a curse to its parents, * : ... Society ?

(٣١) سورة لقمان

Nor does any one know What it is that he will Earn on the morrow: ****
Nor does any one know In what land he is To die. Verily with God Is full knowledge and He Is acquair **ed (with all things).**

وَمَا تَدْرِي نَفْنُ مَا ذَا تُحَصُّبِ عَلَّا وَمَا نَدْرِي نَفْنُ بِأَخِارُضِ ثَوْنُ إِن اللهِ عَلِيْهُ حَبِيرُ

3626, "Earn" here, as elsewhere, means not only "earn once livelihood" in a physical sense, but all of the physical sense, but all of the physical sense (good or ill) of one's conduct generally. The whole sentence practically means: "no man knows what the morrow may bring forth."

3627. See the five Mysteries summed up in n. 3625 above. The Argument is about the mystery of Time and Knowledge. We are supposed to know things in ordinary life. But what does that knowledge amount to in reality? Only a superficial acquaintance with things. And Time is even more uncertain. In the case of rain, which causes vegetable life to spring up, or in the case of new animal life, can we answer with precision questions as to When or How or Wherefore? So about questions of our life from day to day or of our death. These are great Mysteries, and full knowledge is with God only. How much more so in the case of the Mead, the Final Hour, when all true values will be restored and the balance redressed? It is certain, but the When and the How are known to God alone.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXII (Saida).

This short Sūra closes the series of the four A. L. M. Sūras, which began with the 29th. Its theme is the mystery of Creation, the mystery of Time and the mystery of the Ma<sup>2</sup>ād (the Final End) as viewed through the light of God's revelation. The contemplation of these mysteries should lead to Faith and the advertion of God. In chronology it belong to the middle Meccan period and is therefore a little earlier than the last, but its chronology has no significance.

Summary.—The mystery of Czeation, the mystery of Time, and the mystery of the End of Things are but known by external symbols to man; Revelation brings faith and humble adoration, and is a blessing like Rain, which brings life to dead soil (xxxii. 1-30, and C. 185).

C. 185.—How can Unbelievers realise the Mystery (xxxii. 1-30.) Of Revelation? They do not even

See the marvel and Mystery of Time

And God's Creation, and how they were themselves

Created! If they could but see how the End

Will shape itself,—how the Good will be sorted out

From Evil! The two are not equal in Goal.

Clear are the Signs and the Revelation of God—

In nature, history, and the Message of His living

Prophets. If they learn not now, alas!

It will be too late when Time's wines are furled.

3628. See n. 25 to ii, 1, and Introduction to S. xxx.

3629. By the time of the holy Prophet the earlier Books of Revelation had been corrupted, by human ignorance or selfishness or fraud, or misinterpreted, or lost attogether. There were sects violently disputing with each other as to their true meaning. Such doubts had to be set at rest, and they were set at rest by the revelation of the Qur-an. The Quianic inspiration came direct from God, the Lord of the Worlds, and did not consist merely of human conjectures or a reconstructed philosophy, in which there is always room for doubly or dispute. Cf. lab ui. 2.

3630. The force of "or" (am in Arabic) is that the only alternative to the acceptance of the Book as a divine revelation is the supposition that it was a forgery by the foly Prophet. But the supposition is absurd on the face of it; because (1) the Quraish, his critics, knew him to be an honest and truthful man; (2) he was unlettered, and such a Book would have been beyond his powers as a simple unlettered Arab, unless God inspired it; and (3) there was a definite reason for its coming as it did, because the Arabs had received no Messenger before him, and God has sent Messengers to every nation.

3631. The Arabs very much needed guidance for themselves, and the advent of a World Prophet through them was what might have been expected in view of the past course of God's Revelations.

3632. Six Days: See n. 1031 to vii. 54. The "Day" does not mean a day as we reckon is, viz. one apparent course of the sun round the earth, for it refers to conditions which began before the earth and the sun were created. In verse 5 below, a Day is compared to a thousand years of our reckoning, and in ixx 4 to 50,000 years. These figures "as we reckon" have no relation to "timeless Time", and must be taken to mean very long Periods, or Ages, or Æons. See further xii, 9-12, and notes.

3633, Cf. x. 3 n. 1386. God created the World as we see it in six great Stages. But after the initial creation, He is still in authority and directs and controls all affairs. He has not delegated His powers to others, and Hismself retried. Also see Vij. 34.

36.4. How could the immense mystery of Time behind our ideas of it be entored on our nimed, better? Our Day may be a thousand or fifty thousand years, and our years in proportion. In the immense Past was God's act of creation it still continues, for He guides, rules, and controls all safeties; and in the immense Pature all faffairs will go up to JoHm, for He will be the Judge, end His restoration of all values will be as in a Day or an Hour or the Twinking of an eve, and yet to our detail will be as a thousand even?

3635. God's attributes, then, may be summed up with reference to Knowledge, Power, and Mercy. When our knowledge is partial and uncertain, It is somplete and certain. Where our power, otten falls short of the carrying out of our will, or needs the help of Time, His scomplete and contempous with His Will. Where our mercy seems to be bounded by or opposed to justice, His is absolute and unconditioned.

3636. God's creation in itself is good: it is benutiful, in proper proportions and a layer discretion functions it has to perform. There is no evil or disorder in it. Such evil or disorder is greeps in ridge to man's will as far as the world of man is concerned, and sprittual Teaching is directed to main and cure that will and bring it into conformily with the Universal Order and Plan.

3637. Man is asked to contemplate his own humble beginning. His material body equal with the is a piece of earth or elsy, which is another term for princeval matter. Manter is the first stage, but even matter was not self-created. It was exceed by 500-1.

- 8. And made his progeny From a quintessence Of the nature of A fluid despised: 3636
- 9. But He fashioned him In due proportion, and breathed Into him something of 8689 His spirit. And He gave You (the faculties of) hearing And sight and feeling said (And understanding): Little thanks do ve give!
- 10. And they say: "What! When we lie, hidden And lost, in the earth. Shall we indeed be In a Creation renewed? 8641 Nay, they deny the Meeting With their Lord!"
- 11. Say: "The Angel of Death, Put in charge of you, Will (duly) take your souls: " Hers Then shall ye be brought Back to your Lord."

3638. Then comes life and the reproduction of life. We are still looking at the purely physical aspect, but it is now a stage higher; it is an animal. Its reproduction is through the sperm or semen, which is a quintessence of every part of the body of man. Yet it issues from the same part of his body as the urine, and is therefore despicable in man's sight. It is a living cell or cells, summing up so much ancestral life-history. Cf. xxiii, 12, and n 2872.

3639. The third stage is indicated by "fashioned him in due proportion". Cf. xv. 29. After fertilisation of ovum by the sperm, an individual life comes into existence, and it is gradually fashioned into shape; its limbs are formed; its animal life begins to function; all the beautiful adaptations come into play. The fourth stage here mentioned is that of distinctive Man, into whom

God's spirit is breathed. Then he rises higher than animals,

3640. As a complete man he gets the higher faculties. The five animal senses I understand to he included in the third stage. But in the fourth stage he rises higher, and is addressed in the second person, "you," instead of the third person "him". He has now the spiritual counterpart of hearing (i.e., the capacity of hearing God's Message) and seeing (i.e., the inner vision), and feeling the nobler heights of love and understanding the bearings of the inner life (both typified by the Heart). Yet with all these gifts, what thanks does unregenerate or corrupted man give to God?

3641. Cf. xiii 5. It has been the cry of Materialists and Sceptics through the ages not only to bound their horizon with this brief life, but to deny dogmatically that there can be a future life. Though this is against the professed principles of Sceptics, in practice they take up that attitude, Here "they" refers to those "who give little thanks" to God, mentioned in the last verse. The argument used against them is; if God can produce such a wonderful creation the first time, why can He not make it again? That points to the possibility : our own general inner hope and expectation of a future life, coupled with Faith in God's work, is the ground of our certainty.

3642 If death is certain, as it is, and this life by itself in no way satisfies our instincts and expectations, we may be sure that the agency which separates our soul from our body will bring us into the new world. If we believe in a soul at all-the very foundation of Religion-we must believe in a Future, without which the soul has no meaning,

SECTION 2.

3643. In life on the new plane, there will be no room for deception or self-deception. The most hadened sanner will see the truth and the justice of the Day of Account. He will with he could be sent back, but it will be too late. The world as we know it will have already passed away.

3644, Could evil have been avoided? Certainly everything is in God's power. If it had been this Will and Plan, He could have created a world in which there would have been no choice or will in any of His creatures. But that was not His Will and Plan. In the world as we see it, man has a certain amount of choice and free-will. That being to, He has provided Signs and means of instruction for man, in order that man's will may be straight and pure. A necessary corollary will be Punishment for the infraction of His Law. That Punishment must come to pass, for God's Word is true and must be fulfilled.

3645. Cf. xi. 119, n. 1623, and vii. 18, and see last note. Jinns are the evil spirits that tempt men, and the men who will suffer punishment will be those who have succumbed to their temptations.

3646, "Farget": Cf. n. 1029 to vii. 51. "Forget" is here in the sense of "to ignore deliberately, to reject with scorn". In the sense of mistake or defect of knowledge it is inapplicable to the All-Perfect Being, for we are expressly told: "My Lord never errs, nor forgets"; xx. 52.

They are recited to them. Fall down in adoration. 3647 And celebrate the praises Of their Lord, nor are they (Ever) puffed up with pride.

23. We did indeed aforetime Give the Book to Moses: وَإِنَّا الذِينِ مَسْقَوْا مُنَا وَبَهُ وَالنَّالِ اللهِ مِنْ مُسْقَوْا مُنَا وَبَهُ وَالنَّالِ اللهِ مِن مُسْقَوْا مُنَا وَبَهُ وَالنَّالِ اللهِ مَنْ النَّهِ وَمِن وَقِيلَ الْمُنْ وَوَلَّا اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهُ وَاللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهُ مَنْ اللهُ مَنْ اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مَنْ اللهِ مَنْ اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مَن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهُ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهِ مِن اللهُ مِ

3633, Cf xxii 22. Just as the garden is the type of Bliss; so is the Fire the type of Penalty and suffering. There will be no getting away from it. What will be the thoughts of those who had earned it? "We used to reject the idea of the Consequences as a mere thimera; and now we find it to be true!" What will be their feelings then? How will they like it?

3654. The final Penalty is to come in the Hereafter. There is no doubt about it. But before it comes, a minor Penalty comes in this very life. It may be in some kind of misfortune, or it may be in the pange of a fortured conscience or secret sorrow. But this funtor Penalty may be really a mercy, as it gives them a change of repentance and amendment.

3655. The worst and most hardened sinner is the man to whom God's Signs are actually brought home and who yet prefers Evil and turns away from the Light of God. The Signs may be in the words and guidance of a great Peacher or in some minor sorrow or warning, which he disregards with contumely. Or it may be in a catastrophic blow to his conscience, which should open his eyes, but from which he deliberately refuses to profit. The penalty—the Nemesis—must necessarily come eventually.

At the "The Both is not here consequences with Revolution. Mores bad, revealed to burn, a Law, a stratter, which was to evide his people in all the practical affairs of their life. 3657. "Its reaching (the)": ligat-hi. Commentators differ as to the construction of the pronoun hi, which may be translated either "its" or "his". I construe it to refer to "the Book", as that gives the most natural meaning, as explained in the last note.

3638 The series of Judges, Prophets, and Kings in Israel continued to give good guidance, in accordance with God's Law, as long as the people continued in Faith and Constancy (persevering patience). When that condition ceased, God's grace was withdrawn, and the people broke up into wranging sects and practically suffered national annihilation.

3659. These wrangles and disputes among them will continue until the Day of Judgment, but materiate a new $\mathcal{Ummat}$ (that of Islam) will arise and take its place, with a universal and unified Massage for mankind.

3660. If a nation gone astray could only learn from the history of earlier nations that were destroyed for their evil! They could see vestiges of them in their daily goings to and fro; the Jews could see vestiges of the Philistines, Amalekttes, etc., in Palestine, and the pagan Arabs, of the 'Ad and Thamild in Arabia.

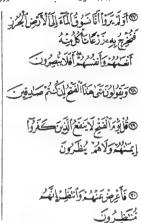

3661. "Listen": i.e., listen to the warnings conveyed in God's Signs. Notice how naturally the transition is effected from the physical to the spiritual—from the ruined physical vestiges of ungodly nations on this earth to the mote intangible Signs conveyed by History and Revelation. Here the sense of Hearing is mentioned, both in its physical and its metaphysical or spiritual aspect. In the next verse the sense of Sight is mentioned in both aspects.

27. And do they not see
That We do drive Rain SMAA
To parched soil (bare
Of herbage), and produce therewith
Crops, providing food
For their cattle and themselves?
Have they not the vision?

28. Mhey say: "When will This Decision be, if ye ""Are telling the truth?"

29. Say: "On the Day
Of Decision, no profit
Will it be to Unbelievers
If they (then) believe!
Nor will they be granted
A respite."

 So turn away from them, And wait: they too 3004 Are waiting.

3662. Again, as in the last verse, there is an easy transition from the physical to the spiritual. In physical nature there may be parched soil, which is to all intents and purposes dead. God sends rin, and the dead soil is converted into living land producing net crops of fodder and corn, nuts and fruits, to satisfy the hunger of man and beast. So in the spiritual world. The dead man is revivified by God's grace and mercy, through His Revelation. He becomes not only an asset to himself but to his dependents and those around him.

3663. The verse begins with "do they not see?" (a' wa lom yaran), a physical act. It ends with "weve they not the virion?" (afa lâ yubhirūn), a matter of spiritual insight. This is parallel to the two kinds of "hearing" or "listening", explained in n. 3661 above.

3664. The Unbelievers may say: "If all this which you say is true, tell us when this final restoration of Realtities, Life, and true Values will come about." The answer is: "If you mean that you will postpone your repentance and reform till then, it will be no use: it will be too late for repentance, and no respite will be granted then; this is the Respite, and this is your chance."

3665. Read vi. 138 and n. 984 as a commentary on this, There it is said to the Unbeliavers:
"Wait ye: we too are waiting." Here the Righteous one is told: "Wait (thou): they too are waiting." The reversal of the order is appropriate: in each case the person (or persons) addressed is mentioned first. Cf. also vii. 71.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXIII (Ahzāb).

The series of mystic Sūras beginning with S. xxvi. having been closed with the last Sūra, we now come back to the hard facts of this life. Two questions are mainly considered bere, viz., (1) the attempt by violence and brute force to crush the truth, and (2) the attempt, by slander or unseemly conduct, to poison the relations of women with men.

As regards the first, the story of the Alizab or Confederates, who tried to surround and annihilate the Muslim community in Medina, is full of underhand intrigues on the part of such diverse enemies as the Pagan Qiraish, the Jews (Banū Nadhīr) who had been already expelled from Medina for their treachery, the Gatafat tribe of Bedouin Arabs from the interior, and the Jewish tribe of Banū Quraiza in Medina. This was the unholy Confederacy against Islam. But though they caused a great deal of anxiety and suffering to the beleaguered Muslims, Islam came triumphantly out of the trial and got more firmly established than ever.

The Oursish in Mecca had tried all sorts of persecution, boycott, insult, and bodily injuries to the Muslims, leading to their partial hijrat to Abyssinia and their Hijrat as a body to Medina. The first armed conflict between them and the Muslims took place at Badr in Ramadhan A.H. 2, when the Quraish were signally defeated. (See n. 352 to iii, 13). Next year (Shauwal A.H. 3) they came to take revenge on Medina. The battle was fought at Uhud, and though the Muslims suffered severely, Medina was saved and the Meccans had to return to Mecca with their object frustrated. Then they began to make a network of intrigues and alliances, and besieged Medina with a force of 10,000 men in Shauwal and Zul-qa'd A.H. 5. This is the siege of the Confederates referred to in xxxiii, 9-27, which lasted over two weeks: some accounts give 27 days. It caused much suffering, from hunger, cold, an unceasing shower of arrows, and constant general or concentrated assaults. But it ended in the discomfiture of the Confederates, and established Islam firmer than ever. It was a well-organised and formidable attack, but the Muslims had made preparations to meet it. One of the preparations, which took the enemy by surprise, was the Trench (Khandaq) dug round Medina by the Prophet's order and under the supervision of Salman the Persian. The siege and battle are therefore known as the Battle of the Trench or the Battle of the Confederates.

As regards the position and dignity of the ladies of the Prophet's Household and the Muslim women generally, salutary principles are laid down to safeguard their honour and protect them from slander and insult. The ladies of the Household interested themselves in social work and work of instruction for the Muslim women, and Muslim women were being trained more and more in community service. Two of them (the two Zainabs) devoted themselves to the poor. The nursing of the wounded on or by the battlefield was specially necessary in those days of warfare. The Prophet's daughter Fatima, then aged about 19 to 20, lovingly nursed her father's wounds at Uhud (A.H. 3); Rufaida nursed Sa'd ibn Mu'se's wounds at the Siege of Medina by the Confederates (A.H. 5); and in the Khaibar expedition (A.H. 7) Muslim women went out from Medina for nursing service.

A portion of this Sūra sums up the lessons of the Battle of the Trench and must have been revealed some time after that Battle (Shauwal A.H. 5). The marriage with Zainab referred to in verse 37 also took place in the same year. Some portions (e.g., verse 27, see n. 3705) were probably revealed in A.H. 7 after the  $\underline{K}$ haibar settlement.

Summary.—The pagan customs in human relationships should be abandoned, and men and women should be held in honour according to natural relationships and spiritual position (xxxiii, 1-8, and C. 186).

The Battle of the Trench and its lessons: hypocrites and their fears: Truth and noble examples to be followed (xxxiii. 9-27, and C. 187).

High position and seemly conduct for the Apostle's wives: unhappy marriages (like Zainab's) not to be perpetuated on false scruples: Prophet's wives to be treated kindly and gently (axxiii), 28-52, and C, 188).

Respect due to Apostle and his family: slander to be avoided and punished guard your words and your responsibilities (xxxiii. 53-73, and C. 189).

C. 186.—The issue of all things depends
(**xxiii. 1-8.) On God alone: we must put our trust
On Him as the Guardian of all affairs.
He loves truth in all things, both great
And small: call things by their right names.
If false relationships by custom or superstition
Do harm to men or women, shun them.
The spiritual Guide is more than Father:
The ladies of his household are Mothers
To the Believers—in rank, dignity, and duty.
The Guide will have to give an account;
In the Hereafter, of how the Truth was received
Which he was charged to proclaim to men.

وَلِلنَّفِقِينَ فَاللَّهُ كَالنَّ عَلِيمًا حَكِمُمًا ٥ وَانَّئِهُمَ الْوَحَىٰ لِلْنَكَ مِن زَيِكَ ۚ إِنَّ لَلْمَا كَالَيْمَا

۞ وَنُوَكُلْ عَكُلْ لِلَّهِ وَكُفَّى إِللَّهِ وَكِي اللَّهِ

@ مَّاجَعَكُلُ اللَّهُ لِرَجُلِ مِنْ قَلْبَيْنِ

1666. The fifth year A.H. was a critical year in the external history of early Islam, and this Stramust he read in the light of the events that them took place. A sexplained in the introduction, the Grand Confederacy against Islam came and invested Medina and failed utterly. It consisted of the Meccau Unbelievers, the desert Arabs of Central Araba, the Jews previously expelled for treachery from Medina, the Jews remaining in Medina, and the Hypocrites led by 'Abdullah ibn Ubai, who have already been described in its. 43-110. Their bond of union was the common hatred of Islam, and it snapped under the everies they met with. It is important to note three points. (1) The Jews as a body now lost their last chance of bearing the standard of Islam: the best of them had already accepted the renewal of God's Alessage. (2) A definite status was given to the Prophet's household, after the slanders on $\pi_{\text{dhirat}}\text{Aisha had been stilled (xxiv. 11-26, and the true position of the Mothers of the Believers had been cleared. (3) A further exposition of the proprist of the status of the Believers had been cleared. (3) A further exposition of the Prophet's points will be referred to in later notes.

3667. In the most adverse circumstances, in the midst of the assaults of Evil, the plots of treason and hypocrisy, the darts of slander and false charges, and stupid superstitions and taboos, the man of God should steer his course steadily according to God's Law and not fear human evil, in whatever form it appears. Men may misjudge, but God knows all. Men may try to overthrow Good, but Wisdom is with God.

3668. We must wholly trust God; He is the true and efficient Guardian of all interests, Cf. iv. 81, and n. 600.

3669. "Two hearts in his (que) breast": two inconsistent attitudes: such as serving God and Mammon; or subscribing to both Truthand Superstition; or hypocritically pretending one thing and intending another. Such a thing is against God's Law and Will. Apart from the condemnation of general hypocrity, two pagan customs of the Times of Ignorance are mentioned, and their iniquity pointed out. See the notes 3670 and 3671. Nor can a man love two women with equal love-hence the injustice of marrying more than one wife; see the second clause in iv. 3.

In his (one) body: nor has He made your wives whom Ye divorce by Zihār 3676 Your mothers : nor has He Made your adopted sons 8671 Your sons. Such is (only) Your (manner of) speech By your mouths. But God Tells (you) the Truth, and He Shows the (right) Way.

5. Call them by (the names Of) their fathers : that is Juster in the sight of God. But if ye know not 3678 Their father's (names, call Them) your Brothers in faith. Or your Maulas. But there is no blame On you if ye make arra A mistake therein: (What counts is) The intention of your hearts: And God is Oft-Returning. Most Merciful.

3670. This was an evil Arab custom, by which the husband selfishly deprived his wife of her conjugal rights and yet kept her tied to himself like a slave without her being free to remarry. He pronounced words importing that she was like his mother. After that she could not demand conjugal rights but was not free from his control and could not contract another marriage. Set also Iviii, 1.5, where this is condemned in the strongest terms and punishment is provided for it, A man sometimes said such words in a fit of anger : they did not affect him, but they degraded her position.

3671. If a man called another's son "his son ", it might create complications with natural and normal relationships if taken too literally. It is pointed out that it is only a facon de parler in men's mouths, and should not be taken literally. The truth is the truth and cannot be altered by men's adopting "sons". "Adoption" in the technical sense is not allowed in Muslim Law. Those who have been "wives of your sons proceeding from your loins" are within the Prohibited Degrees of marriage; iv. 23: but this does not apply to "adopted" sons.

3672. Freedmen were often called after their master's name as the "son of so and so". When they were slaves, perhaps their fathers' names were lost altogether. It is more correct to speak of them as the Maula of so and so. But Maula in Arabic might also imply a close relationship of friendship; in that case, too, it is better to use the right term instead of the term "son". "Brother" is not objectionable, because "Brotherhood "is used in a wider sense than "fatherhood" and is not likely to be misunderstood.

3673. What is aimed at is to destroy the superstition of erecting false relationships to the detriment or loss of true blood relations. It is not intended to penalise an unintentional slip in the matter, and indeed, even if a man deliberately calls another his son or father, who is not his son or father, out of politeness or affection, "God is Oft-Returning, Most Merciful". It is the action of mischievous parties which is chiefly reprehended, if they intend talse insinuations. A mere mistake on their part does not matter.

- 1104
- And remember We took From the Prophets their Covenant: 2877

As (We did) from thee: From Noah, Abraham, Moses, And Jesus the son of Mary: We took from them A solemn Covenant: ٥ الْتَحِثَّا وَلَى الْلُوَّمِّتِ مَنْ مِنْ أَنفِيهِ مِنْ وَلَهُ وَالْحَهُ الْمُؤْمِّدِ مِنْ أَنفِيهِ الْمُؤْمِدُ وَالْمُؤْمِنَ الْمُؤْمِنِ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُومِنِينَا الْمُؤْمِنِينَا الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَا الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَا الْمُؤْمِنِينَا الْمُؤْمِنِينَا الْمُؤْمِنِينَ ا

۞ڡٛٳۮ۪ڶڂۮٮٵڝ۬ٵڵؽڽۼؽ؞ؿۺ۠ڡٞۿۄٞۅڡؙؽٮڬ ۅؿڽٷڿٷٳڒۿؚڝڡۅۘڡ؈ٛ؈ؽڝڰٲؠڒۣؠ؆ڔٛؖ ۊٲٞڂؘۮؙڎٲؠؿؙۿؠ؞ێؾ۫ڰٲۼٚڸڟڴ

3674. In spiritual relationship the Prophet is entitied to more respect and consideration than blood-relations. The Bellevers should follow him rather than their fathers or mothers or brothers, where there is condict of dutes. He is even nearer—closer to our real interests—than our own selves. In some Qirats, like that of Ubal ibn Karb, occur also the words "and he is a father to them", which imply his spiritual relationship and connect on with the words "and his wives are their mothers". Thus his spiritual fatherhood would be contrasted pointedly with the repudiation of the vulgar superstition of calling any one like Zaid ibn Blantha by the appellation Zaid ibn Muhammad (xxxiii. 40): such an appellation is really disrespectful to the Prophet.

3675. See last note. This Sura establishes the dignity and position of the Holy Prophet's wives, who had a special mission and responsibility as Mothers of the Believers. They were not to be like ordinary women: they had to instruct women in spiritual matters visit and minister to those who were ill or in distress, and do other kindly offices in aid of the Prophet's mission.

3676 No man should deprive his blood-relations of such rights of maintenance and property as they might have. The community of Believers, inhabitants of Medina and those who had migrated to Medina from Mecca, also had their mutual rights, but they were not to be put forward as an excuse to defeat the prior rights of natural relationship. In the early Medina days, Anjat were allowed to inherit from Muhäjirs whose natural relations had not emigrated, but this practice was discontinued when normal relations were re-established between Mecca and Medina.

3677 Cf: iii 81. There is an implied covenant on all created things to follow God's Law, which is the law of their being: see v. 1. But there is a special implied covenant with all Prophets, strict and solemn, that they shall carry out their mission, proclaim God's Truth without lear or favour, and be ever ready in His service in all circumstances. That gives them their position and dignity as explained in the last verse, and their tremendous responsibility in respect of the people whom they come to instruct and lead to the right Path.

C. 187.—When the formidable forces of a whole Confederacy (xxxiii. 9-27.) Bent on destroying Islam burst

Upon Medina, it was God's grace that saved The Muslims. The enemies and the Hypocrites Did their best to defeat the purpose of God, But they were foiled. In the Apostle was found The ideal Leader for the men of God, Who became heirs to the heritage misused By enemies to Faith and the Laws of God.

SECTION 2.

9. Py who believe?
Remember the Grace of God,
(Bestowed) on you, when
There came down on you
Hosts (to overwhelm you):
But We sent against them

3678. The men to whom God's Truth has been committed for promulgation will be asked in 'the Hereafter as to how the Truth fared in the world—how it was received, who opposed it, and who assisted in. Like all trustees, they will have to give a full account of their trust. God knows all, and it will not add to His information. But it will be evidence for and against those to whom it was preached, so that the, responsibility of those who dishonaured it may be duly enforced. The primary custodians of spiritual Truth are the Prophets, but in descending degrees all men to whom God's Méssage comes are included.

3679. In this verse is summed up the beginning and the end of the fateful struggle of the Siege of Medina in A.H. 5. The composition of the unhallowed Confederacy that came to destroy lalam is referred to in the Introduction. They came with a force of ten to twelve thousand fighting men, an unprecedented army for that time and country. The battle is known as the Battle of the Trench

3680. After à close investment of two lo four weeks, during which the enemy were disheartened by their ill success, there was a piercing blast of the cold east wind. It was a series writter, and February can be a very cold month in Medina, which is about 3,000 ft. above the sea-i-wel. The anemy's tents were torm up, their fires were extinguished, the sand and rain beat in their faces, and they were terrified by the portents against them. They had already wellnigh fallen out amongst themselves, and beating a hasty retreat, they melted away. The Medina fighting strength was no more than 3,000, and the Jewish trobe of the Boati Qurraya who were in their midst was a source of weakness as they were treacherously intriguing with the anemy. And further there were their theories clients: see a 3,006 above. But there were thickler forces that helpe 'the Muslims. Besides the forces of nature there were moral forces—mutual distrust and bickerine "he enemy camp, and on the chars idea perfect discipline among the real Muslims, and the year! a description is folly Prophet.

S. xxxiii. 9 13, 1

A hurricane and forces
That ye saw not:
But God sees (clearly) and
All that ye do.

- 10. Behold! they came on you From above you and from Below you, and behold, The eyes became dim And the hearts gaped 3002! Up to the throats, And ye imagined various (Vain) thoughts about God!
- 11. In that situation Were the Believers tried: They were shaken as by A tremendous shaking.
- 12. And behold! The Hypocrites
  And those in whose hearts
  Is a disease (even) say: "God
  And His Apostle promised us
  Nothing but delusions!" 3858
- 13. Behold! A party among them Said: "Ye men of Yathrib! Ye cannot stand (the attack)! Therefore go back!" And a band of them Ask for leave of the Prophet,

3681. God sees everything. Therefore we may conclude that the discipline and moral fervour of the Muslims, as well as the enemy's insincerities, intrigues, and reliance on brute force, were all contributory causes to his repulse, under God's dispensation. There were many hidden causes which neither party saw Clearly.

3683. Before this year's mass attack on Medina, the Muslims had successfully reached the Syriaff border on the north, and there were hopes of reaching Yemen in the south. The holy Prophet had seen clear signs of expansion and victory for the Muslims. Now that they were shut in within the Trench on the defensive, the Hypocrites taunted them with having indulged in delusive hopes. But the event showed that the hopes were set delusive. They were realised beyond expectations in a few years.

(٣٣) سورة الاحزاب

Saying, "Truly our houses seed Are bare and exposed," though They were not exposed: They intended nothing but To run away.

- 14. And if an entry had

  From the sides of the (City),
  And they had been
  Incited to sedition.
  They would certainly have Brought it to pass, with None but a brief Jelay!
- 15. And yet they had already
  Covenanted with God not to turn
  Their backs, and a covenant sees
  With God must (surely)
  Be answered for.
- 16. Say: "Running away will not Profit you if ye are Running away from death *** Or slaughter; and even if (Ye do escape), no more Than a brief (respite) Will ye be allowed to enjoy!"

بَعُولُونَ مِنْ بَهُوْنَاعُوْرَةٌ وَمُلَّا هَيْ بِعُورَةٌ وَمُلَّا هِي بِعُورَةٌ وَمُلَّا هِي بِعُورَةٌ وَمَلَّا هِي الْمُنْ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ الْمُنْ الْمُنْ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُلُولُ اللَّهُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُولُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْل

3685. The brunt of the fighting will on the north side, but the whole Trench was guarded. At one or two points enemy warriors did break in within the circuit of the Trench, but they were soon disposed of, Badjinta 'All particularly distinguished himself in many fights, wearing the Prophet's own sword and armour. If any of the enemy had been able to penetrate into the City, the disaffected element, which was only sitting on the fence, would have risen against the Muslims at once—with no delay except what might have been necessary to put on their armour and arms,

3686. Apparently, after the battle of Ubud, certain men who had then shown cowardice were forgiven on undertaking that they would behave better next time. A solemn promise made to the Anostie of God is a promise to God, and it cannot be broken with impunity.

3687. The coward in a fight does not usually save himself from death. He is subject, nater desertion, to the fury both of the enemy and of his own side for cowardice and desertion. Assuming that he did escape with his life, where could be go to? The brand d cowardice will be on him, and he will be subject to the vengeance of his own people. In any a his life would be in ignominy and would be brief, and he would have lost irretireably the met. or shour.

<sup>3684.</sup> All the fighting men of Medina had come out of the City and camped in the open space between the City and the Trench that had been dug all round. The disaffected Hypocrites sowed defeatist rumours and pretended to withdraw for the defence of their homes, though their homes were not exposed, and were fully covered by the vigitant defensive force isolate the Tench.

- 17. Say: "Who is it that can Screen you from God If it be His wish To give you Punishment Or to give you Mercy?" Nor will they find for themselves, Besides God, any protector Or helper.

3688 It is still worse if the cowardice or desert's a is shown in a Cause, which, because of the high issues of truth and justice, may be called the Cause of God. How can any one escape God's Punishment? And in the same way, how can any one prevent another from obtaining God's Mercy by repentance and amendment? The better path, therefore, is to stand firm in God's Way, and if you fail through human weakness, to repent and seek God's Mercy. Of xxxiii 24, and n 30% below.

3689. Ashibhatas: covetous, grasping, niggardly. Here the meaning is towfold: (1) they spare themselves in the fight as compared with you; they are niggardly with themselves as against you; they contribute little either in personal effort or with their money and resources; and (2) they covet any gains made or booty won, on the part of the real fighters.

3690. In times of danger, they would look to the holy Prophet for protection, and keep themselves sougly from the fight. When the danger is past, they will come and brag and wrangle and show their covetousness or greed for gain though they gave of themselves but sparingly.

3691. Even any good they may have done becomes vain because of their motives of curv, greed, and covetousness, and their cowardice.

3692. It is not surprising that men's deeds fall as it were dead because there is no pure motive behind them. For men it may be difficult to probe motives, but it is easy for God, Whom hyporrisy or false show one news deceive

20. They think that the Confederates Have not withdrawn; and if The Confederates should come (again).

٥ لَقَدْكَانَ لَكُمْرَ فِي رَسُولِكَا لَهُ الْمُوَةُ حَسَنَهُ لِنِّنْكَانَ يَرْجُولُا لَلْهَ وَالْيُومُ ٱلْأَخِرُ وَذَكَرَ اللَّهَ كَيْنِيرًا

3693. This completes the picture of the psychology of the Hypocrites, begun at verse 12. Let us analyse it. (1) When they first saw the nearly there were already in a defeatest mood, and thought all was not (verse 12). (2) Not content with dislocality themselves, they trued to infect others, who made patity excuses to withdraw from the fight (verse 13). (3) They were ready to betray the City to the energy of once the energy had gained entrance (verse 13). (4) They frogot all the promuses of fidelity which they had previously sworn (verse 15). (5) In their patity calculations they forgot that cowards, and was does not pay (verses 6 15). (6) Without taking which part in the actual defence, they were ready to talk glibly and claim a lion's share in the fruits of the victory (verses 18 19), (7) Even when the enemy had without way, their cowardly minds were still afraid that the enemy would return and were already meditating what they would do in that case: perhaps they would well in the deserts and spy on Medina from a safe distance; and if caught in Medina they would fell intrigue much.

It was a miracle that with such men in their midst, the holy Prophet and his band won through 3694 We now have the psychology of the Believers,—God-fearing men, led by that pattern of men and of leaders, Muhammad Muetalla.

3695 Cf. xxvi. 227: see especially the last clause of that verse in a Mercan Sura, which was amply fulfilled in Medina.

22. When the Believers saw
The Confederate forces,
They said: "This is
What God and His Apostle Mod
And His Apostle told us
What was true." And it
Only added to their faith
And their zeal in obedience

23. Among the Believers are men
Who have been true to
Their Covenant with God:
Of them some have completed ***
Their vow (to the extreme),
And some (still) wait:
But they have never changed
(Their determination) in the least:

۞ؽڗٵٞڵٷؽڹڽ۞ڔۣٙٵڷ ڝؠؙڎڡؙۅٲ؆ۘۼۿۮۅؙٲڶڎؠؘٙۼڷڲڎۣۨڣٙڹۿۄػڹ ڡٛۻؙڬۼٛڝؠؙۅڡٙؿۿۅؿۜڹ ؾڹؾۜڟؙڕؖ۫ڰٵؠڵڶۅٲۺؽڔڸڰ

3697. In the fight for Truth were (and are) many who sacrificed their all—resources, knowledge, influence, life itself—in the Cause, and never wavered. If they wan the crown of martyrdom, they were blessed. Such a none was Sard in hi Muffey, the chief of the Austribe, the intripid standard-bearer of Islam, who died of a wound he had received in the Battle of the Trench. Other heroes fought valiantly and lived, always ready to lay down their lives. Both classes were staunch: they never changed or wavered.

1698, Before the Throne of God's Mercy there is always room for repentance and forgiveness, even after treason and crime: but the forgiveness will be according to God's Will and Plan, which will judge the penitent's sincerity and capacity for good to the nicest degree in his favour. Cf. also extill 17 above.

3699, In spite of the mighty preparations and the great forces which the Meccans, in concert with the Central Arabian Bedoulns, the discontented Jews, and the treacherous Hypocrites, brought to the siege of Medina, all their plans were frustrated. Their fury availed them nothing. They departed in hot haste. This was their last and dying effort. The initiative thererafter lay with the forces of Islam.

3700. For the meaning of 'Aziz, see n. 2818 to axis. 40.

3701. The reference is to the Jewish tribe of the Banti Quraiza. They counted among the citizens of Medina and were bound by solemn engagements to help in the defence of the City. But too the occasion of the Confederate steep by the Quraish and their citize they intrigued, with the snemies and treacherously aided them. Immediately after the steep was raised and the Confederates had ded in hot baste, the Prophet turned his attention to these treacherous "friends" who had betraved his City in the hour of dangs, r.

3702. The Band Quraiza (see last note) were filled with terror and dismay when Medina was free from the Quraish danger. They shot themselves up in their castles about these or four miles to the cast (or north east) of Medina, and sustained a siege of 25 days, after which they surrendered, stipulating that they would abide by the decision of their fate at the hands of Sa'd ibn Mu'ay, chid of the Aus tribe, with which they had been in alliance

3703. Sa'd applied to them the Jewish Law of the Old Testament, not as strictly as the case waternated. In Deut, xx, 10-18, the treatment of a city "which is very far off from thee" is prescribed to be comparatively more lenient than the treatment of a city "of those people, which the Lord thy God does give thee for an inheritance," i.e., which is near enough to corrupt the religion of the Jewish people. The punishment for these is total annihilation: "thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth "their, xx, 16). The more lenient treatment for far-off cities is described in the next mole. According to the Jewish standard, then, the Quraiga deserved total extermination—of men, women, and children. They were in the territory of Medina itself, and further they had broken their engagements and helped the enemy.

3704 Sa'd adjudged them the milder treatment of the "far-off" cities which is thus described in the Jewish Law. Thou shalt smile every male thereof with the edge of the sword; but the women and the little nors, and the cattle, and all that is in the city, even all the spot thereof, shalt thou take unto thy-elf; and thou shalt eat the spoil of thine elemes, which the Lord thy God nath given there "(Deut, ax 13-14). The men of the Qurața were slain; the women were sold as captives of war; and their lends and properties were divided among the Mulaijirs.

370. If this part of the Sura was revealed after the autumn of the Hijira year 7, it refers to the result of the Ha har expedition of that autumn. Khaibaria Karator volcanic tract, well-watered with many storage issuing from its basalic rocks. 3700. We now come to the subject of the position of the Consorts of Purity (ass. a) impublication the wives of the holy Prophet. Their position was not like that of viditiars women or ordinars wives. They had special dottes and responsibilities. The only youthful marriage of the boly Prophet was his first marriage-stoat with Badhrat Khadija, the best of women and the best of wives. He married be influence as before he received his call to Apostleship, then married life lasted for twentyfive veris, and their implical devotion was of the noblest, judged by spiritual as well as social standards. During becalifying head no other wife, which was invivid for a man of his standing among his people. When she died, his age was 50, and but for two considerations, he would probably never have married again, as he was most abstermous in his physical life. The two considerations which governed his later manages were: (1) compassion and climetics, as when he wanted to provide for suffering widows, who could not be provided for in any other way, in that stage of society; some of them, like Sauda, had issue by their former marnage, requiring protection; (2) help in his duties of leadership, with women, who had to be instructed and kept together in the large Muslim family where women and men had similar social rights. Hadhrat 'Aisha, daughter of Hadhrat 'Abb Bakr, was clever and learned, and in Badith she is an impostant authority on the life of the Prophet, Badhiat Zamab, daughter of Khuzama, was specially devoted to the poor; she was called the "Mother of the Poor" The other Zamals, daughter of Jalish, also worked for the poor, for whom she provided from the proceeds of her manual work, as she was skilful in leather work. But all the Consorts in their high position had to work and assist as Mothers of the Ummat. Theirs were not idle lives, like those of Odalisques, either for their own pleasure or the pleasure of their husband. They are told here that they had no place in the sacred Household if they merely wished for ease or worldly glitter. If such were the case, they could be divoiced and amply provided for,

Enjoyment and set you free In a handsome manner. وَأَسُرِحُكُنْ مَرَاحًا جِيدَادُ

29. But if ye seek God And His Apostle, and The Home of the Hereafter, Verily God has prepared For the well-doers amongst you seen A great reward. ۞ وَإِن كُنْثُنَّ أَرِدُ نَا لَلْهَ وَرَسُولُهُ وَالذَارَ لَايْحَرَهُ فَإِنَّ اللَّهُ أَعَدَّ لِلْمُعِيَّنِيَ يَنْكُرُ ۖ أَجْرًا عَقِلْهُمُّا

30. O Consorts of the Prophet
If any of you were guilty
Of evident unseemly conduct,
The Punishment would be Doubled to her, and that
The Seasy for God,
The seasy for God,

۞ؽؽؽؖٵۛ؞ٲڶؾٙؾۣٙ؈۬ٲؙۮۣۻڬٞۺٙڂڞۿ ؿؠؾۜڎؚڝٛڬڡڬڶٲڶڡٙڶڮڝٝڡ۫ڡؘؽڽ۠ ڡؘڪؙؙؙؙؙٮٛڎڶؚڰػڶڶڡٙؽڛؚؠڒؙ

3707. They were all well-doers. But being in their exalted position, they had extra responsibility, and they had to be specially careful to discharge it. In the same way their reward would be "great", for higher services bring higher spiritual satisfaction, though they were asked to deny themselves some of the ordinary indulgences of this file.

3708. "Evident unseemity conduct": i.e., proved misconduct, as opposed to false slanders from enemies. Such alanders were of no account, but if any of them had behaved in an unseemly manner, it would have been a worse oftence than in the case of ordinary women, on account of their special position. Of course none of them were in the least guilty.

3709. Cf xxxiii 19 and n. 3692. The punishment in this life for a married woman's unchastity is very severe: for adultery, public flogging with a hundred stripes, under xxiv. 2; or for lewdness (see iv. 15) imprisonment; or stoning to death for adultery, according to certain precedents established in Canon Law. But here the question is not about this kind of punishment or this kind of offence. Even minor indiscretions, in the case of women who were patterns of decorum, would have been reprehensible; and the punishment in the Hereafter is on a higher plane, which we can scarcely understand. But God ran appreciate every shade of motive in us. More or less is possible there, which might not be possible in the rough and ready law which we administer here

- 31. But an if you that is

  And God only wishes To remove all abountation.

<sup>3710.</sup> Treice, i.s. once as a righteous woman, and again as a Mother of the Believers, serving the believing women and thus showing her devotion to God and His Apostle.

<sup>3711.</sup> Sustenance; in the spiritual sense; all that is necessary to sustain her in happiness in her future life.

<sup>3712.</sup> This is the core of the whole passage. The Prophet's Consorts were not like ordinary women, nor was their matriage an ordinary marriage, in which only personal or social considerations enter. They had a special position and special responsibilities, in the matter of guiding and instructing women who came into the fold of Islam. Islam is a Way of Life, and the Muslims are a family: women have as much place in Islam as men, and their intimate instruction must obviously be through women.

<sup>3713.</sup> While they were to be kind and gentle to all, they were to be guaffed on account of their special position lest gross people right misunderstand or take advantage of their kindness. They were to make no vulgar worldy deplays as in the times of Paganism.

3715. Notice the transition in this clause to the masculine gender, while before this the verbs and pronouns were in the feminine gender as referring to the consorts. The statement in this clause is now more general, including (besides the Consorts) the whole family, namely, Radghart Fajima the daughter. Hadhrat 'All the son-in-law, and their sons Basan and Busain, the beloved grandsons of the Prophet. The missculine gender is used generally, in speaking of a mixed assembly of men and women.

3716 The verb is uphurna, feminine gender, as referring to the Azico, again. It means not only "remember", but "recite", "teach", "make known", "publish", the Message which ye learn at home from the holv Prophet, the fountain of spiritual knowledge. The "Signs of God" refer specially to the verses of the Qur an, and Wisdom to the resulting Instruction derived therefrom.

3717. Cf. xxii, 63, and n. 2814. God's understanding is perfect in every detail, however minute. Therefore use His Revelation for every phase of life.

3718, Islam, or submitting our will to God's Will, includes all the virtues, as particularly specified in this verse. See n. 3720.

3719. A number of Muslim virtues are specified here, but the chief stress is laid on the fact that these virtues are as necessary to women as to men. Both sexes have spiritual as well as human rights and duties in an equal degree, and the future "reward" of the Hereafter, viz., Spiritual Biss, is provided for the one as for the other,

3720. The virtues referred to are: (1) Faith, hope, and trust in God, and in His benevolent government of the world; (2) devotion and service in practical life; (3) love and practice of truth, in thought and intention, word and deed; (4) patience and constancy, in suffering and in right endeavour; (5) humility, the avoidance of an attitude of arrogance and superiority; (6) charity; i.e., help to the poor and unfortunate ones in life, a special virtue arising out of the general duty of service (No. 2); (7) self-denial, typically in food, but generally in all appetites; (8) chastity, purity in sex life, purity in motive, thought, word, and deed; and (9) constant attention to God's Message, and cultivation of the desire to get nearer to God.

3721. We must not put our own wisdom in competition with God's wisdom. God's decree is offer known to us by the logic of facts. We must accept it loyally, and to the best we can to help in our own way to carry it out. We must make our will consonant to the Universal Will.

3722. This was Zaid son of Baritha, one of the first to accept the faith of Islam. He was a freedman of the holy Prophet, who loved him as a son and gave him in marriage his own cousin Zainab.
The marriage however turned out to be unhappy. See next note, a??. Zaid's marriage with the Prophet's cousin Zainab daughter of Jabsh was celebrated in Mecca eight years before the Hijnat, but it did not turn out happy. Zainab the high-born looked down upon Zaid the freedman who had been a slave. And he was not comely to look at. Both were good people in their own way, and both loved the Prophet, but there was mutual incompatibility and this is fatal to married life. Zaid wished to divorce her, but the Prophet asked him to hold his hand, and he obeyed. She was closely related to the Prophet; he had given a handsome marriage gift on her marriage to Zaid; and people would certainly talk if such a marriage was broken off, and poor Zainab's reputation would be ruined. This was the fear in the mind of the Prophet, But marriage are made on earth, not in heaven, and it is no part of God's Plan to torture people in a bond which should be a source of happiness but actually is a source of misery. Zaid's wish-indeed the mutual wish of the couple—was for the time being put away, but it became eventually an established fact, and everybody came to know of it.

More fitting that thou shouldst 5734 Fear God. Then when Zaid Had dissolved (his marriage) With her, with the necessary area (Formality), We joined her In marriage to thee: In order that (in future) There may be no difficulty To the Believers in (the matter Of) marriage with the wives 8798 Of their adopted sons, when The latter have dissolved With the necessary (formality) (Their marriage) with them. And God's command must Be fulfilled.

3724. All actual facts are referred to God. When the marriage is unhappy, Islam permits and expects the bond to be dissolved, provided that all interests concerned are safeguarded. Apparently there was no issue here to be considered. Zainab had to be considered, and she obtained the dearest wish of her heart in being raised to be a Mother of the Believers, with all the dignity and responsibility of that position. See n. 3706 to xxxiii. 28 above.

3725. The 'Iddat or period of waiting after divorce (ii. 228, and n. 254) was duly completed.

3726. The Pagan superstition and taboo about adopted sons had to be destroyed. See xxxiii. 4-5 and notes 3671-3672 above.

3727. See n. 3724 above.

2728. The next clause is parenthetical. These words then connect on with verse 39. Among the people of the Book there was no taboo about adopted sons, as there was in Pagan Arabia.

3729, God's ordering of the world is always full of wisdom. Even our unhappiness and missey must not murmur and repine, but retrieve the position by adopting a course which appears to be the best possible in the light of our duties as indicated by God. For God's Plan is framed on universal principles that cannot be altered by human action.

3730. Our responsibility is to God, not to men Men's opinions may have a bearing on our own interpretation of duty, but when that duty is clear, our only course is to obey God rather than men.

3732. Blessings: good wishes and mercies. God wishes well to all His creatures, and His angels carry out His work, for their will is in all things His Will. His chief and everlasting blessing is that He gives us a knowledge of the spiritual world, and helps us towards its attainment. For the symbolic meaning of Light and Darkness, see xxiv, 33-40 and notes.

3733. His Mercies are for all His creatures, but for those who believe and trust in Him, there are special mercies, "a generous Reward" as in the next verse,

<sup>3731.</sup> When a document is sealed, it is complete, and there can be no further addition. The holy Prophet Muhammad closed the long line of Apostles. God's teaching is and will always be continuous, but there has been and will be no Prophet after Muhammad. The later ages will want thinkers and reformers, not Prophets, This is not an arbitrary matter. It is a decree full of knowledge and wisdom: "Or God has full knowledge of all things."

3734. The Prophet was sent by God in five capacities. Three are mentioned in this verse, and the other two in the verse following. (1) He comes as a Witness to all men about the spiritual truths which had been obscured by ignorance or superstition, or by the dust of sectarian controversy. He did not come to establish a new religion or sect. He came to teach Religion. He is also a witness to God about men's doings and how they receive God's Message: see iv. 41 and n. 50. (2) He comes as a bearer of the Glad Tidings of the Mercy of God. No matter how far men may have transgressed, they have hope if they believe, repent, and live a good lite. (3) He also comes as a Warner to those who are heedless. This life will not last. There is a Future Life, and that is all-important. See next note.

3733. See last note. The two other capacities in which the Prophet was sent are here specified. (4) He comes as one who has a right to finite all then to repentance and the forgiveness of sins; but he does this, not of his own authority, but by the permission and authority given to him by God. This is said lest people may deity the Prophet as they did with other Prophets before him. The personal responsability of each individual remains, but the Prophet can lead him on to the Right and help him. (5) The Prophet also comes as a Light or a Lamp (Sirāj) to illuminate the whole world, In Ixxi. 15 and elsewhere the same word (Sirāj) is used for the sun. The comparison is apt. When the sun appears, all the lesser lights pale before his light. And the Message of Islam, i.e., of the Universal Religion, is to diffuse Light everywhere.

3736. The light of Islam is the Biggest Bounty possible and if they truly understand it, they should glory in it.

3737. Men of little or no Faith will often lay down the law and tell better men than themselves what to do. In case of refusal they shower insults and injuries. No attention is to be paid to them. It is their way. All will be right under the government of God.

3738. See n. 254 to ii. 228. The 'iddat counts for three monthly courses, or if there are no courses, for three months: see law. 4.

3739. This present is held, by some, to be in addition to the half dower due to them under il. 237, If the dower had not yet been fixed, the gift would presumably be larger, and it would absorb the gift prescribed in il. 236.

3740. The gift should be given with good grace, and the freedom of the woman should not be interfered with in any way. It she chooses to marry again immediately, no obstacle should be . placed in her path. On no pretext should she be allowed to remain doubtful about her freedom.

374). This introduces no new exemption or privilege. Verses 50-52 merely declare the points in which, on account of the special circumstances (see n. 3706 above), the Prophet's marriages differed from those of ordinary Mushms. This is considered under four heads, which we shall examine in the four notes following.

3742. Head 1. Marriage with dower (iv. 4): this is the universal Muslim marriage. ;The difference in the Prophet's case was that there was no limitation to the number of four (iv. 3), and women of the People of the Book (v. 6) were not among his wives, but only Believers. These points are not expressly mentioned here, but are inferred by his actual practice. Obviously women who are expected to instruct other women in I alam must be Muslim.

3743. Head 2. Women Prisoners of War: the same remark as in the last note. The point does not now arise, as the whole conditions and incidents of war have been aftered and slavery has been abolished by international agreement.

3744. Head 3. These are first cousins, and not within the Prohibited Degrees of Marriage (see 12.142). These are specially mentioned here by way of limitation. None of them could marry the Prophet unless she had performed the Hijrat with him. If she had not so performed it in spite of her close relationship, she could not be credited with any great fervour for Islam, or be considered suitable for instructing other women in Islam.

To the Prophet if the Prophet ****
Wishes to wed her; — this
Only for thee, and not
For the Believers (at large);
We know what We have

There should be no difficulty
For thee. And God is

51. Thou mayest defer (the turn 3769 Of) any of them that thou Pleasest, and thou mayest receive Any thou pleasest: and there Is no blame on thee if Thou invite one whose (turn) 3750

3745, Head 4. A believing woman who dedicates her soul to the Prophet: obvjously this case, like the last, is only applicable to the Prophet, and it is hedged round with the limitation that the Prophet considers it a suitable and proper case of true service to the commonly and not merely a sentimental woman's freak. Some Commentators think there was no such case. But others, with whom I agree, think that this applies to Zainab bint (Buzaima, who had dedicated herself to the poor and was called the Mother of the Poor (Umm-ul-mosākia). Similarly the last head might possibly refer to Zainab bint [Japsh, who was a daughter of the Prophet's paternal aunt, herself a daughter of 'Abd-ul-Muqalib'.

3746. The ordinary law of Muslim marriage will be found chiefly in ii. 221-235, iv. 3-4, iv. 19-25, iv. 34-35, and v. 6.

3747. The words "this only for thee...right hands possess" are parenthetical, and the words "in order that..." connect on with the previous clauses beginning with "O Prophet, We have made lawful...wishes to wed her".

3748. Marriage is an important relationship not only in our physical life, but in our moral and spiritual life, and its effects extend not only to the parties themselves but to children and future generations. A number of special problems arise according to special circumstances. Every man and woman must seriously consider all sides of the question and must do the best in his or her power to temper instincts and inclinations with wisdom and guidance from God. God wishes to make every one's path easy, for He is indeed "Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciblu"?

3749. In iv. 3 It is laid down that more than one wife is not permissible "if ye fear that ye shall not be able to deal justly with them". In a Muslim household there is no room for a "favourite wife". In the special circumstances of the Prophet there were more than one, and he usually observed the rule of equality with them, in other things as well as in the rotation of conjugal rights. But considering that his marriages after he was invested with the Prophetic office were mainly dictated by other than conjugal or personal considerations (see n. 3706, xxxiii. 28), the rotation could not always be observed, though be observed it as much as possible. This verse absolves him from absolute adherence to a fixed rotation. There are other interpretations, but I agree with most of the Commentators in the view I have explained.

3730. Where the rotation was for some reason interfered with, it was permissible, by another interference with the usual rotation, to bring satisfaction to one who had been previously set aside. This was not only permitted, but commended, as tending to remove dissatisfaction and cheer and comfort the eyes and hearts of those who were disappointed in their turn.

So should all women protect their honour
And uphold their dignity. The Hour
Will come when all Evil will be punished.

375), Cooling the syss: an Arabic idum for cheering and comforting eyes which yearn to see those they love. A verse of Zeb-un-nisäa, daughter of the Mugal Emperor Aurangzeb, may be rendered thus:

"My heart is glad whenever lover-wise I dwell upon thy beauties and thy grace! But how can I content my hungry eyes, That ask continually to see thy face?"

3752. There was not much in the way of worldly goods or satisfaction that the Prophet could give then: see xxxii. 28 above. But he was kind, just, and true,—the best of men to his family, and they all clung to him.

3753. Our human hearts, however good on the whole, may yet, in their motives, have possibly some baser admixture. The feminine hearts are not more immune in this respect than the masculine. But everything, is known and understood by God, Who will in His mercy make all allowance for our human weaknesses. His title of "Most Forbearing" (fultim) also gives His devoted worshippers the cue: why should we not also forbear with the faults and weaknesses of our neighbours and fellow-creatures?

3754. This was revealed in A.H. 7. After that the Prophet did not marry again, except the handmaiden Mary the Copt, who was sent as a present by the Christian Muqauqas of Egypt. She became the mother of libithm, who glied in his infancy.

Fear God, and always speak the word That leads to Right. Ardsous is the Quest Of Mankind's high and noble Destiny,— Beyond the reach of other creatures: Let man but strive in Faith, and fulfil God's Trust,—by the grace and mercy of God.

3755. The rules of refined social ethics it is as necessary to teach to-day 45 it was with the rude Arabs whom the holy Prophet had to teach in his day. Those mentioned in this verse may be briefly recapitulated thus: (I) Enter not a frend's house without permission; (2) it invited to dine, don't go too ently; you are asked to dine, not to wait for the preparation of the food; (3) be there at the time appointed, so that you enter when you are expected and invited; (4) after the meal, don't get familiar with your host, especially if there is a great distance between him and you; (3) don't waste time in title-tattle, causing inconvenience and perhaps annoyance to your host; (6) understand what is proper behaviour for you; he may be too polite to ask you to depart. All this has a sprittual as well as a social bearing: respect and delicate consideration for others are among the highest virtues.

3756. The actual manner of showing respect to ladies may be different in different circumstances. But it is an essential principle of good society to show the greatest deference to them. To the "Mothers of the Belevers" this respect was due in an exceptional degree.

3757. Considering his position, the holy Prophet deserved to be respected before all other men and nothing should be done to cause him the least harm and annoyance. This applied not only during his life-time, but it applies now, because his teaching and personality are alieve to us. It was not fitting that his widows, both for their own position and for the position of the Prophet, should be married by other men after him. And this mark of respect was duly observed in history.

(٣٣) سورة الإحزاب

In a minor degree the "Mothers of the Behevers" are also entitled to respect

3759. Respect or opposition may be shown overtly or in devious hidden ways. All good and evil are open before God, and He will take due account of everything, 3760. This refers back to the (lijāb (screen) portion of verse 53 above. The list of those before whom the Prophet's wives could appear informally without a screen is their fathers, sons, brothers, brothers' or sisters' sons, serving women, and household slaves or servents. Commentators include uncles (paternal and maternal) under the heading "fathers", "Their women" is held to mean all women who belonged to the Mushim community; other women were in the position of strangers. whom they received not so intimately, but with the formality of a screen as in the case of men, Compare with this list and the wording here the list and the wording in zxiv. 31, which applies to all Muslim women. In the list here, husbands and husbands' relatives are not necessary to be mentioned, as we are speaking of a single household, that of the central figure in Islam; nor men-servants nor children, as there were none. In the wording, note that for Muslim women generally, no screen or Hijab (Parda) is mentioned, but only a veil to cover the bosom, and modesty in dress. The screen was a special feature of honour for the Prophet's household, introduced about five or six years before his death.

3761. God and His angels honour and bless the holy Prophet as the greatest of men. We are asked to honour and bless him all the more because he took upon himself to suffer the sorrows and afflictions of this life in order to guide us to God's Mercy and the highest inner Life,

3765. Cf. iv. 112. In that passage we were told that any one who was himself guilty but accused an innecent man of his guilt, was obviously placing himself in double jeopardy; first, for his own original guilt, and secondly for the guilt of a false accusation. Here we take two classes of men instead of two individuals. The men and women of faith (if they deserve the name) and doing all they can to serve God and humanity. If they are insulted, hurt, or annoyed by those whose sins they denounce, the latter suffer the penalties of a double guilt, vie., their sins to start with, and the insults or injuries they offer to those who correct them. Instead of resenting the preaching of Truth, they should welcome it and profit by it.

3764. This is for all Muslim women, those of the Prophet's household, as well as the others. The times were those of insecurity (see next verse) and they were asked to cover themselves with outer garments when walking abroad. It was never contemplated that they should be confined to their houses like prisoners.

3765. Jilbāb, plural Jalābtb: an outer garment: a long gown covering the whole body, or a cloak covering the neck and bosom.

3766. The object was not to restrict the liberty of women, but to protect them from harm and molestation under the conditions then existing in Medina. In the East and in the West a distinctive public dress of some sort or another has always been a badge of honour or distinction, both among men and women. This can be traced back to the earliest civilisations. Assyrian Lawinits palmiest days (say, 7th century B.C.), enjoined the veiling of married women and forbade the veiling of slaves and women of ill fame: see Cambridge Ancient History, III, 107.

(As such) and not molested. And God is Oft-Forgiving, 3767 Most Merciful.

- 60. Truly, if the Hypocrites,
  And those in whose hearts
  Is a disease, and those who
  Stir up sedition in the City, sies
  Desist not, We shall certainly
  Stir thee up against them:
  Then will they not be
  Able to stay in it
  As thy neighbours
  For any length of time:
- 61. They shall have a curse step On them: wherever they Are found, they shall be Seized and slain, (Without mercy).
- 62. (Such was) the practice (Approved) of God among those with Who lived aforetime: No change wilt thou find In the practice (approved) Of God.

٥ سُنَةَ اللهَ فِ الذِيرَ عَلَوْا مِن فِسَلَّ وَلَنْ نَفِيدَ لِلسُنَا وَاللَّهِ تَبْدِيدًا

3767. This rule was not absolute: if for any reason it could not be observed, "God is Oft-Returning, Most Merciful".

3768 It was necessary to put down all kinds of unseemly conduct in the Prophet's City. And here is the warning in the plainest terms. And the warning had its effect. The "Hypocrites" were men who pretended to be in Islam but whose manners and morals were anti-Islamic. Those "with diseased hearts" may have been the ones that molested innocent women. "Those who surred up sedition" put false rumours in circulation to excite the crowd. Alast we must ask ourselves the question: "Are these conditions present among us to-day?"

3769. They will be deprived of the blessing and guidance of God. They sought to cause disorder. In God's world—moral as well as material; but they will themselves be destroyed. Those who become outlaws, rebels against the Law, will themselves be destroyed by the Law. Capital punishment is the only adequate punishment for treason and crimes of sustained concerted violence—for the protection of the hearths and homes of indocent citizens and the honour of their women.

3770. The Jewish law was much more severe; see notes 3703 and 3704 to xxxiii, 26. That seventy is mitigated in Islam. But it is a universal principle that any element which deliberately refuses to obey law and aggressively tries to subvert all order in society, secretly and openly, must be effectively suppressed, for the preservation of the life and health of the general community.

63. Men ask thee concerning

The Hour is nigh!

- 64. Verily God has cursed The Unbelievers and prepared For them a Blazing Fire,—
- 65. To dwell therein for ever: No protector will they find, Nor helper.
- 66. The Day that their faces

  In the Fire, they will say:
  "Woe to us! would that
  We had obeyed God
  And obeyed the Apostle!"
- 67. And they would say: "Our Lord! We obeyed Our chiefs and our great ones, And they misled us As to the (right) path.
- 68. "Our Lord! Give them Double Penalty **** And curse them With a very great Curse!"

٥ تشكاراً لنّارُ عَن النَّاعَةُ قُولُ إِنَّا عَلَمُا ١٤٤١ المائية المرابعة المائية المائية

3771, Cf. vii. 187 and n. 1159, where the idea is further explained. The knowledge of the Final Hout is with God alone. The fact of its coming is certain; the exact time when it will come has not been revealed. If it were, it would disturb our thoughts and life. "Heavy were its burden through the heavens and the earth." But at any given moment it cannot be far distant. In theological language, each individual's death is a Final Hour, a Cyfamal Supra's Lesser Day of Judgment). In that sense it is not the same for all individuals, and is certainly always near. "In the midst of life we are in death", as the Anglican Prayer-Book says in its Burial Service.

3772. The face is the expression of their Personality, their Self; and turning upside down is a sign of degradation and ignominy. When the Retribution comes, the evit ones will be humilated, and they will wish that they had followed right guidance when they had the chance. They will then fall to accusing their leaders who misled them. But they forget their own personal responsibility.

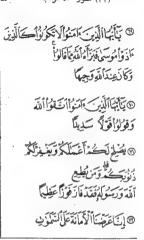

<sup>3773.</sup> Cf. xxv 69 and n. 3129, and xi. 20 and n. 1515. The double Penalty invoked will be because (1) they went wrong themselves and (2) they misled others.

SECTION 9.

70. O ye who believe! Fear God, and (always) say A word directed to the Right: 3775

71. That He may make
Your conduct whole and sound
And forgive you your sins:
He that obeys God
And His Apostle, has already Attained the highest Achievement.****

72. Me did indeed offer
The Trust 3777 to the Heavens

3714, The people of Moses often vexed him and rebelled against him and against God's Law. Here the reference seems to be to Num, xii. 1-13. It is there said that Moses's own sister Mirman and his brother Aaron spoke against Moses because Moses had married an Ethiopian woman. God cleared Moses of the charge of having done anything wrong: "My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine house." Mirman was afflied with leproy for seven days as a punishment, after which she was forgiven, as also was Aaron. This is the Old Testament story. The holy Prophet was also attacked because of his marriage with Zainab but Jahsh, but not by his own circle; his motives were of the highest and were completely vindicated as we have seen above,

3775. We must not only speak the truth as far as we know it, but we must always-try to hit the right point; i.e., we must not speak unseasonably, and when we do speak, we must not beat about the bush, but go straight to that which is right, in deed as well as in word. Then God will make our conduct right and cure any defects that there may be in our knowledge and character. With our endeavour directed straight to the goal, we shall be forgiven our errors, shortcomings, faults, and sins of the past,

3776. This is salvation, the attainment of our real spiritual desire or ambition, as we are on the highway to nearness to God.

377. The Trust is something given to a person, over which he has a power of disposition; he is expected to use it as directed or expected, but he has the power to use it otherwise. There is no trust if the truste has no power, and the trust implies that the giver of the trust believes and expects that the trustee would use it according to the wish of the creator of the trust, and not otherwise.

S. XXXIII. 72.)

(٣٣) سورة الاحزاب

And the Earth
And the Mountains;
But they refused 2079
To undertake it, 2000
Being afraid thereof:
But man undertook it;
He was indeed unjust 2000
And foolish;—

نَالْأَنْضَ وَالْحِبَالِ فَأَيْرَكَ أَن يَحْمِلْنَهَا وَالْفَفَقُ نَيْبُ الْوَحَلَمَا ٱلْإِنسَانُ إِنْهُكَانَ طَلَوْمًا تَعْمُولُا

3778. What is the meaning of the offer of the Trust to the Heavens, the Earth, and the Mountains? C.I. Itx. 21, where the hepothetical sending down of the Quran to the Mountains is mentioned, and it is mentioned that such Parables are put forth in order to aid men to reflection. We may therefore take the Mountains, the Earth, and the Heavens as symbolical. The mountains stand for firmness and stability: they have been created for this quality, and they are always true to that quality. An earthquake or a volcano has to do with moments within the earth's crust: it has nothing to do with the Mountain's will. In fact it has no free-will of any kind: there is no question of any Trust here. If we take the Earth as a whole, as a part of the solar system or a compendium of the terrestrial Nature we see around us, it obeys the fixed laws of God, and there is no Will or Trust. If we take the Heavens either as celestial space, or as symbolical of the Angels, they absolutely obey God's Will and law: they have no will of their own.

3779. The Heavens, the Earth, and the Mountains, i.e., other creatures of God, besides man, refused to undertake a Trust or a responsibility, and may be imagined as happy without a choice of good or evil being given through their will. In saying that they refused, we imply a will, but we limit it by the statement that they did not undertake to be given a choice between good and evil. They preferred to submit their will entirely to God's Will, which is All-Wise and Perfect, and which would give them far more happiness than a faculty of choice, with their imperfect knowledge, Man was too audacious and ignorant to realise this, and the result has been that man as a rehasheen disrupted: the evil ones have betrayed the Trust and brought Punishment on themselves, though the good have been able to rise far above other Creation, to be the mugarrabin, the nearest node; i.v.l. I and Ivi. 88. What can be higher than this for any creature?

It follows incidentally from this that the Heavens and the Earth were created before man was created, and this is in accordance with what we know of the physical world in science: man came on the scene at a comparatively late stage.

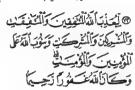

370. Hamsle: to undertake, bear, carry (the Trust or responsibility), to be equal to it. This is the ordinary meaning, and the majority of Commentator construe so. But some understand it to mean "to carry away, run away with, to embezzle (the thing entrusted); hence to be false to the Trust, to betray the Trust." In that case the sense of verses 72-73 would be: "God offered the Trust to other creatures, but hat case the sense of verses 27-73 would be: "God offered the Trust to other creatures, but they refused, lest they should betray it, being afraid from that point of view: but man was less fair to himself: in his ignorance he accepted and betrayed the Trust, with the result that some of his race became Hypogrates and Unbelievers and were punished, though others were faithful to the Trust and received God's Mercy." The resulting conclusion is the same under both interpretations.

3781, See ii. 30.34 and notes. God intended a very high destiny for man, and placed him in his uncorrupted state even above the angels, but in his corruption he made himself even lower than the beasts. What was it that made man so high and noble? The differentiating quality which God gave man was that God breathed something of His own spirit into man (xxxii. 3; xx. 29 and n. 1966; and other passages.) This meant that man was given a limited choice of good and evil, and that he was made capable of Forbearance, Love, and Mercy. And in himself man summed up God's great world: man is in himself a microsom.

3782. That man should undertake the God-like attributes (in however small a degree) of Will, Forbearance, Love, and Mercy, brought him nearer to God than was possible for any other creature of God. This was part of God's Will and Plan, but little did man realise then what a tremendous task he was undertaking or question himself whether he would be equal to it. Zaiām (translated "unjust") and Jakal (ignorant) are both in the Arabic intensive form; as much asto say, "man signally failed to measure his own powers or his own knowledge". But God's Grace came to his assistance. Where man did his best, he won through by God's Grace, even though man's Best was but a poor God.

How did man generically undertake this great Responsibility, which made him Vicegerent of God (ii. 30)? Here comes in the mystic doctrine of a Covenant, express or implied, between God and Humanity. See vii. 172-73 and notes 1146-88, also v. 1 and n. 682. A Covenant (Mthaq) necessarily implies Trust, and its breach necessarily implies Ponishment.

73. (With the result (that God has to punish ****)
The Hypocrites, men and women, And the Unbelievers, men
And women, and God turns
In Mercy to the Believers, ****
Men and women: for God
Is Oft-Foreiving. Most Merciful.

<sup>3783.</sup> Man's generic Covenant, which flowed from his exercising the option given him, choosing Will, Porbearance, Love, and Mercy, made it necessary that breach of it should carry it soo punishment. Breach of it is hence isased under two heads; those who betray their Trust act either as Hypocrites or as Unbelievers. Hypocrites are those who profess Faith but bring not forth the fruits of Faith. Unbelievers are those who openly defy Faith, and from whom therefore no fruits of Faith are to be expected.

<sup>3784.</sup> Those who remain firm to their Faith and their Covenant (see notes 3781-82) will receive the aid of God's Grace; their faults and weaknesses will be cured; and they will be made worthy of their exalted Destiny. For God is Oft-Returning and Most Merciful.

So ends a S0ra which deals with the greatest complications and misunderstandings in our throbbing life here below, and points upwards to the Great Achievement, the highest Salvation.

INTRODUCTION TO STRA XXXIV (Saba).

Now we begin a series of six Sūras, S. xxxiv. to S. xxxix, which recapitulate some of the features of the spiritual world. This Sūra leads off with emphasis on God's Mercy and Power and Turth. Then (in S. xxxv.) we are told how angels manifest the Power of God, and how different is Good from Evil and Truth from Falsehood. S. xxxvii. is devoted to the holy Prophet and the Qur-an that came through him. In S. xxxviii. the emphasis is on the snares of the Evil One; in S. xxxviii., on the conquest of evil by wisdom and power as in the case of David and Solomon, and by Patience and Constancy as in the case of Job; and in S. xxxix. on the Final Judgment, which will sort out Faith from Unfaith and give to each its due.

The chronology has here no significance. This Sara belongs to the early Meccan period.

Summary.—No Good or Truth is ever lost: Human Power and Prosperity are fleeting; but God's Power and Justice endure, and will enforce personal responsibility on man on the Last Day (xxxiv. 1-30, and C, 190).

Faith and Unfaith will eventually find their true places and true values; Falsehood has no power: Truth is with God (xxxiv. 31-54, and C. 191).

C. 190.—God's Mercy and Power endure for ever:
(xxxiv. 1-30.) Man should understand and not resist
God's Revelation. Human wisdom and Power,
As given to David, were only for establishing Righteousness. Human glory, like Solomon's,
Rested on slender foundations. Saba
But enjoyed her fair and prosperous state
As long as she obeyed the Law
Of God, but perished for unrighteousness.
Learn, then, that the Mercy and Power, Wisdom
And Justice, of God are beyond all comparison.
Do right and prepare for the Final Day.

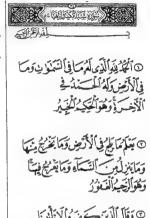

Sura XXXIV

Sabā, or the City of Sabā (see verse 15).

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- I. Praise be to God, mes
  To Whom belong all things
  In the heavens and on earth:
  To Him be Praise
  In the Hereafter:
  And He is Full of Wisdom,
  Acquainted with all things.
- 2. He knows all that goes *****
  Into the earth, and all that Comes out thereof; all that Comes down from the sky ****
  And all that ascends thereto
  And He is the Most Merciful,
  The Oft-Forgiving.

3. The Unbelievers say, **** "Never to us will come

3785. The declaration of God's Praise has much mystic meaning. All Creation declares His Praises, is, manifests His Mercy and Power, Goodness and Truth—all the sublime attributes summed up in His Most Beautiful Names (vii. 180 and xwi 110 and notes). For man, to contemplate these is in itself a Revelation. This sentiment opens five Sūras of the Qur-an evenly distributed, viz. i., vi., xwii., xxxiv., and xxxv. Here the point most emphasised is that His wisdom and mercy comprehend all things, extended in space or in time—here and everywhere, now and evermore.

3786. An ignorant man may think that water absorbed in the soil or seed so win beneath the sod is lost, but it replenishes numerous rills and streams, and feeds and sustains numerous roots and forms of life, and throws up all kinds of vegetable life. So with things that come out of the earth; who can count the myriad forms of herbs and trees that grow and perish, and yet sustain a continuous life for ages and ages? Yet these are symbolical of other things or entities beyond time or space, and beyond physical form. We see the birth and death of the animal part of man: when the is buried beneath the soil, the ignorant man thinks there is an end of him. But what counter stages still like before him for his inner and spiritual life? And so with the Platonic Porms of Things: Goodness, Virtue, Mercy, and the various functions of the souls. They are never lost, but go up to God,

3787. The vapours that rise from the earth and ascend to the sky descend again as rain and anow and as symbols of God's Mercy. So are the prayers of the devout and the call of those in agony for help and light, answered by the descent of mercy and guidance, help and light from the Throne of Majesty. The imagery indicated in the last note can be worked out to moral and spiritual forces, and they all centre in God. Do not forget that, just as there; is the element of Mercy, so there is an element of Justice and Punishment—in the physical forces as well as in the moral and spiritual forces, all centring in God.

3788. The last two verses prepared us to realise the position of Unbelievers in God's great Universe. They are the discord in the universal harmony of Prayer and Praise. Their existence is due to the grant of a limited free-will, the Trust which the Unbelievers have betrayed (see xxxiii, 72 and notes). But they must and will be eliminated: see verse 5 below. For there is nothing more certain in the world, physical, moral, and spiritual, than that every cause, great or small, must have its corresponding consequences.

S. xxxiv. 3-6.1

The Hour": sav. "Nav! But most surely By my Lord. 318 it will come Upon you :- by Him Who knows the unseen .-From Whom is not hidden The least little atom In the Heavens or on earth : Nor is there anything less Than that, or greater, but Is in the Record Perspicuous: 8790

- 4. That He may reward Those who believe and work Deeds of righteousness: for such Is Forgiveness and a Sustenance 3784 Most Generous."
- 5. But those who strive Against Our Signs, to frustrate 3005 Them.-for such will be A Penalty,-a Punishment Most humiliating.
- And those to whom area Knowledge has come see That the (Revelation) sent down To thee from thy Lord-That is the Truth. And that it guides 3789. The strongest emphasis and the most perfect assurance of certainty are indicated by reference to the authority of God Himself, the Ruler of the Day of Judgment.

3790. In the symbolical language of our own human experience, a record is more enduring than memory; in fact (if properly preserved) it is perpetual. If, further, it is expressed in clear language, without any obscurity, it can always be read with perfect precision and without any doubt whatever. Apply these qualities, free from human defects, to God's laws and decrees. They are unerring and enduring. Everything, great or small, will receive due recognition-a Reward for Good and a Punishment for Evil.

3791. "Sustenance": Spiritual in things spiritual, and physical in things physical. It implies not only the satisfaction of desire, but the provision of means for sustaining the ground won and for winning more ground in the march of progress.

379Z. Cf. xxii. 51. God's Plan cannot be frustrated. It is those who work against it, who will be eliminated and destroyed.

5793, Against the doubts and valu imaginings of the Ignorant is the certainty of knowledge of the Enlightened; that God reveals Himself, and that His Revelation is true, and leads to the Path of true Guidance. That Path is the Path of God, Who, in His infinite Love and Mercy, is Worthy

It is possible to connect this with the "Record Perspicuous" in verse 3 above: 'it is perspicuous..., for the Enlightened do see...'

To the Path of the Exalted (In Might), Worthy Of all praise.

- Mehe Unbelievers say (In ridicule): "Shall we Point out to you a marner That will tell you, When ye are all scattered To pieces in disintegration, That ye shall (then be Raised) in a New Creation?
- 8 "Has he invented a falsehood Against God, or has A spirit (seized) him?"—$^905 Nay, it is those who Believe not in the Hereafter, That are in (real) Penalty, And in farthest Error.
- 9. 3794. This is a taunt against the holy Prophet, and it is applicable to all who preach the doctrine of a Future Life. How is it possible, say the Unbelievers, that when a man's body is reduced to dust and scattered about, the man should rise again and become a new Creation? They add that such a preacher is inventing a deliberate falsehood or is demanted.

. 3795. The answer is: the Future Life is the truest of all Truths; so far is the man who teaches it from being demented, that it is those who deny it, that lack knowledge and are in real joopardy for their souls; for they persecute Truth and must not only suffer defeat, but go farther and farther from Realities and thus suffer the worst hallucination about the spiritual world.

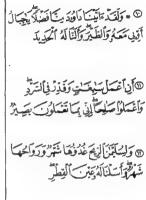

3796. The men who walk in spiritual darkness and laugh at a Hereafter, have but to observe the Power of God in the nature around them. He Who created the heavens and the earth and sustains them can surely make a new Creation! And the cosmuc Laws which are so just and inevitable should surely give them an idea of the inexorable justice that must redress all balance.

3797. Cf. xvi. 45, and n. 2071. Who are these puny creatures—sceptics that question the might and majesty of God?

3798. Cf. xxvi. 187. This was actually a challenge hurled at Shu'aib and a shower of ashes and cinders came from above and overwhelmed the challengers!

SECTION 2.

- 12. And to Solomon (We Made) the Wind (obedient): 3008 Its early morning (stride) Was a month's (journey), And its evening (stride) Was a month's (journey); And We made a Font 5004 Of moliten brass to flow 3799. Cf. xxi. 79-80, and notes 2733-34. David had the gift of song and sacred music, and this is shown in his Psalms. All nature—hills and birds—sing and echo back the Praises of God.

3800. Iron or steel is hard stuff; but in the hands of a craftsman it becomes soft and pliable, and with can be made instruments for the defence of rightcousness. These, in the literal sense, are coats of mail, and defensive armour, and the manufacture of them is traditionally attributed to David. But, for warfare in the moral and spiritual world also, armour is required, and this can be made of some of the toughest and hardest facts of life.

3801. Coats of chain armour have to be made with cunning art, if the chains are to fit into each other and the whole garment is to be worn in comfort in flerce warfare.

380Z. Note the transition from the singular, " make them coats of mail", to the plural, " and work ye righteousness". The first is addressed to David, who was the artifacer of defensive armour; and the second is addressed to him and his whole people. He made the armour, but it was to be worn not only by him but all his warriors. But he and all his people were to be careful to see that they did not deviate from the paths of righteousness. Fighting is a dangerous weapon and may well degenerate (as it so often does) into mere violence. They were to see that this should not happen, and they were told that God was watching over them all with the personal solicitude implied in the singular pronoun "1".

3803. Cf. xxi. 81-82, n. 2736, and xxxviii. 36-38. See also xxvii 38-39. The winds are swift and can cover in a short morning's or evening's flight the distance which it takes a whole month to cover on foot or by bullock cart. In our own day, with air speeds of 400 miles and more per hour, this seems a moderate statement.

3804. In the Old Testament, II. Chronicles, Chapters iii, and iv, are described the various costly materials with which Solomon's Temple was built, and it was furnished with vessels, candle-sticks lamps, ceasers, etc. . "Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for the weight of the brass could not be found out" (II. Chronicles, iv, 18). "Also he made a molten sea of ten cubits from brint to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about" (II. Chronicles, iv, 2). The receptacle or "sea" or Font was made of molten brass; presumably it contained flowing water for washing with.

3805. See xxvii 17, and n. 3257. The workers who are called Jinns were only rough workers, working "in front of Solomon", i.e., under his eyes and the supervision of his men. They should be distinguished from the skilled workers who worked heart and soul for the Temple, and who are addressed as the "Sons of David" in the next verse.

3806. Misröb (Plural Mešārrb), translated "arch", may be applied to any fine, elevated, spacious architectural structure. As the reference here is to the Temple of Solomon, the word "arches" is I think most appropriate. "Arches" would be structural Ornaments in the Temple. Images would be like the images of oxen and Cherubin mentioned in II. Chronicles, iv. 3 and in II. 4; the Basons (II. Chronicles iv. 23 were perhaps buge dishes round which many men could sit together and eat, according to ancient Eastern custom, while the cooking Cauldrons or Pots (II. Chronicles, iv. 16), were fixed in one place, being so large in capacity that they could not be moved about. Indian readers will get some idea of them from the huge cooking Dags, which they use in the 'Una at Ajnin' Sharif.

1807. The building of the Temple was a great event in Israelite history. The motto here give is "Work!"; for only hat would justify the maintenance of the Kingdom of David, which reached its zenith under Solomon. Without work, both literally, and figuratively for "righteous deeds", all that glory and power would be out of place, and it fell away in a few generations, with the decline of the moral spirit which was at its back.

3606. This allegory illustrates three points: (1) however great and glorious human power and grandeur may be, it is only for a time, and it may fade a way even before people know of its decline; (2) the most remarkable events may be brought to light, not by a flourish of trumpets, but by a humble individual, unknown and unseen, who works imperceptibly and undermines even so strong a thing as staff, on which a great rann may lean; (3) work done by men merely on the basis of brute strength or fear, as in the case of the Jinns, will not endure. This is brought up in strong contrast against the Power and Majesty of God, which will endure, which cannot be sapped, and which can only be fully appreciated by a training of the will and heart. In the same way, in David's story above, his mighty strength as a warrior (see ii. 231) and hi skill in making armour are only to be valued when used, as it was used, in the service of God, in ri; theous works (xxxiv.) the

3810. This is the same city and territory in Yemen as is mentioned in xxvii. 22: see note there as to its location. There the phenod was the time of Solomon and Queen Bitqls. Here it is some entiuries later. It was still a happy and prosperious country, amply irrigated from the Maānb dam. Its roads or perhaps its canals, were skirted by gardens on both sides, right and left: at any given point you always saw two gardens. It produced fruit, spices, and frankincense, and got the name of Araby the Blest for that part of the country.

3811. The land was fair to look upon; the people happy and prosperous: and they enjoyed the blessings of God. Who is Gracious and does not punish small human faults or weaknesses.

39.12. Into that happy Garden of Eden in Arabia Felix (Araby the Blest came the insideus snake of Unfaith and Wongdoing. Perhaps the people became arrogant of their prosperity, or of their science, or of their skill in irrigation engineering, in respect of the wonderful works of the Dam which their ancestors had constructed. Perhaps they got broken up into rich and poor, privileged and unprivileged, high-caste and low-caste, disregarding the gifts and closing the opportunities given by God to all His creatures. Perhaps they broke the laws of the very Nature which fed and sustained them. The Nemesis came It may have come suddedly, or it may have come slowly. The pent-up waters of the eastern side of the Yemen highlands were collected in a high lake confined by the Dam of Mašin A mighty flood came; the dam burst, and it has never been repaired since. This was a spectacular crisis: it may have been preceded and followed by slow desiccation of the country.

3613. ""47m" "(""") Jama or Embankments) may have been a proper noun, or may simply mean the great earth-works lined with stone, which Tormed the Madrid dam, of which traces still exist. The French traveller T. J. Aronaud say the town and ruins of the Dam of Madrid to 1813, and described its gigantic works and its inscriptions: See Journal Assatique for January 1874: the account is in French. For a secondary account in English, see W. B. Harris, Journay Though Yeune, Edinburgh, 1893. The dam as measured by Arnaud was two miles long and 120 ft. high. The date of its destruction was somewhere about 120 AD, though some authorities put it much later.

3814. The flourishing "Garden of Arabia" was converted into a waste. The lincious fruit trees became wild, or gave place to wild plants with bitter fruit. The feathery leaved tamarisk, which is only good for twigs and wattle-work, replaced the fragrant plants and flowers. Wild and sunned kinds of thorny bushes, like the wild Lote-tree, which were good for neither fruit nor shade, grew in place of the pomegranates, the date-palms, and the grape-vines. The lote-tiene belongs to the family Rhamnaceae, Zirzybhus Spina Christi, of which (it is supposed! Christ's crown of thorns was made, alled to the Zizybhus Jajuba, or ber tree of India. Wild, it is shrubby, thorny and useless. In cultivation it bears good fruit, and some shade, and can be thornless, thus becoming a symbol of heavenly bliss: ivi. 28

3815. Kafar; intensive form: "those who deliberately and continuously reject God and are

J816. An instance is now given of the sort of covetousness on the part of the people of Sabla, which ruined their prosperity and trade and cut their own throats. The old Franklinethse route was the great Highway (imām mubīn xv. 79; sablī mugīm, xv. 76) between Arabin and Syria. Through Syria is connected with the great and flourishing Kingdoms of the Euphrates and Tigns valleys on the one hand and Egypt on the other, and with the great Roman Empire round the Mediterranean. At the other end, through the Vemen Coast, the road connected by sea transport, with India, Malaya, and China. The Vemen-Syria road was much frequented, and Madāin 58lib was one of the stations on that route, and alterwards on the Pigrim route: see Appendix IX to S xxiv, p.975. Syria was the land on which God "had poured His blessings", being a rich fertile country, where Abraham had lived: it includes the Holy Land of Palestine. The route was studded in the days of its prosperity with many stations (cities) close to each other, on which merchants could travel with ease and safety, "by night and by day". The close proximity of stations prevented the inroads of highwaymen.

3817. Said: in this and other places in the Qur-an, "language" is used for thought or deed. The Commentators call it the "language of actual facts" (zabān hāi) as opposed to the "language of words" (zabān hāi).

3818. The covetous Sabā people, in order to get more profit from travellers' supplies by concentrating them on a few stations which they could monopolise, tended to choke off traffic and run in be big rade. Selfshhers often runs counter to true self interest, it is a historical fact that the great Yemen-Syria route in Arabia declined with the decline of Yemen. There were no doubt physical causes, but supreme above all were the moral causes, the grasping nature of the people, and their departure from the highest standards of rightheousness,

3819. The people of Sabä were given every chance. They had prosperity, skill, trade and commerce, and a healthy and beautiful country. They also had, apparently, great virtues, and is long as they remained true to their virtues, i.e., to the Law of God, they remained happy and contented. But when they became evoreous and selfish, and became jealous of other people's prosperity, instead of rejoicing in it, they fell from grace and declined. It may be that the climate changed, the rainfall became scannier, perhaps on account of the culturing down of hill forests; trade routes changed, on account of the people falling off in the virtues that make men popular; behind all the phisx cal causes was the root-cause, that they began to worship mammon, self, greed, or materialism. They fell into the snare of Satan. They gradually passed out of history, and became only a namein a story. Morat: it is only God's Mercy that can give true happiness or prosperity, and happiness or prosperity is only a snare unless used for the highest service of God and may 3820. Cf. xvii. 62. Satan out of arrogance had said, when he asked for respite from the Most High: "I will bring (Adam's) descendants under my sway, all but a few." This was now proved true on the Saba people. He had no power to force them. It was their own will that went wrong and put them into his power.

3821. Might lest: the word in the original is might know. It is not that God does not know all.
Why does He want to test? It is in order to help us subjectively, to train our will, to put us elschittly the question. "Will you nobey God or other than God?" Cf. a. 467 to iii, 154.

- 3824. C/ xx 109, n. 2034, where I have explained the two possible modes of interpretation. Each some is individually and personally responsible. And if there is any intercession, it can only be by God's gractions permission. For the Day of Judgment will be a terrible Day, or Day of Wish (Duss I read) according to the Latin hynn, when the purest souls will be stupehed at the manifestation of God's Power. See next most.
- 3825. "Their hearts": the pronoun "their" is referred to the angels nearest to God. Out the Day of Judgment there will be such an irresistible manifestation of Power that even they will be silent for a while, and will scarcely realise what is happening. They will question each other, and only thus will they regain their bearings. Or "their" may refer to those who seek intercession.
- 3826. In their mutual-questionings they will realise that God's Judgment, as always, is right and just. Dues this mean that no sort of intercession is required?
- 3827. There are six propositions introduced here with the word "Say", at verses 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, and 30. They clearly explain the doctrine of Unity (verse 22), the Mercy of God (verse 24), man; Personal Responsibility (verse 25), the Final Justice of God (verse 26), God's Power and Wisdom (verse 27), and the linevitability of the Judgment, by which true values will be restored (verse 20).

3828. Right and Wrong, Good and Evil, are incompatible, one with another. In this matter we can make no compromise. It is true that in men there may be various degrees of good or evil mixed together, and we have to tolerate men as our fellow-creatures, with all their faults and shortcomings. But this does not mean that we can worship God and Mammon together. Wrong is the negation of Right as light is of darkness. Though there may be apparently varying depths of darkness, this is only due to the imperfection of our vision; it is varying strengths of light as perceived by our relative powers of sight. So we may preceive the Light of God in varying degrees according to our spiritual vision. But in simple questions of Right or Wrong, we are faced by the Categorical Immerative.

3879 Therefore do not persecute us, or bring personal animus to bear on us. We must do our duty in declaring the universal Message, which is for you as much as for us.

3830 Human controversies are vain and inconclusive. If you put your trust in God and we put our trust in God, we belong to one Brotherhood, and we shall see the perfect Truth finally when the Time comes.

3831 Wisdom and Power only belong to God. If you put your trust in other things, they will fail you, because they do not exist—as objects of win-hip. All else that you set your hearts upon will and must fail you, because they cannot in any wize be brought into rivalry with God.

383. God's Revelation, through the "by Prophet, was not meant for one family ortible, one face or set of people. It was meant for all mankind, to whom, if they turn to Cof, it is a Message of the glad tidings of His Mercy, and if they do not jurn to hop, it is a warming against on and the inevitable Pointshment. That the Pointshment does not come immediately as far as they proceed is no reason for doubling it. It has been declared in clear and unequivocal terms, and nothing can be mote certain. Why delay? Why ask carping questions? Why not profit by the Message, turn to God in repentance, and bring forth the Iruits of nightousness?

3833. When that Day actually arrives, your period of probation will have passed. It will be too late. Now is the time for action and spiritual profit.

1831. To the Pagans all scriptures are taboo, whether it be the Qurān or any Revelation that came hefore it. The people of the Book despised the Pagans, but in their arrogant assumption of superiority, prevented them, by their example, form accepting the latest and most universal Scripture when it came in the form of the Qurān. This relative position, of men who fancy themselves on their knowledge, and men whom they despise but exploit and mislead, always exists on this earth I have mentioned the people of the Book and the Pagan Arabs merely by way of illustration.

3833. One dishelief is as bad as another. Their is little to choose between them. But when the final account will be taken, there will be mutual recriminations between the che and the other.

3836 The Pagans will naturally say to the people of the Book: "You misled us; you had previous Revelations, and you should have known how God sent His Messengers; had it not been for your bad cample, we should have received God's Revelation and become Believers." Or the humble followers will say this to their leaders, or those less gifted will say to those by whom they were misled and exploited. The dichotomy is between such as pretentiously held their heads high in the world and auch as they profited by but held in contention.

3837. In the mutual reproaches between the misleaders and the misled ones, there will be a grain of truth on both sides, and yet both were guilty in not realising their own personal responsibility.

3838. The more intelligent ones who exploit the weaker ones are constantly plotting night and day to keep the latter ignorant and under their thumb. They show them the ways of Evil, because by that means they are more in their power,

889. It all men worshipped the true God, and none but Him, they could not on the one hand be trampled upon, and on the other hand they could not be unjust. It is in the worship of false ideals or false gods that alluring structures of fraud and injustice are built up.

380. Cf. x 54, and n. 1445. All these mutual recruminations would be swallowed up in the general realisation of the Triph by both sides in the Hereafter. They would be prepared openly to declare their repentance, but it would be too late. The voke of slavery to Evil will be on their necks. God's justice put it there but what else could it do? Thoir own sins will cry out against them and hold them under their vokes.

On the necks of the Unbelievers: It would only be a requital For their (ill) Deeds.

34. Rever did We send

- 36. Say: "Verily my Lord enlarges And restricts the Provision 2845 To whom He pleases, but Most men understand not."

SECTION 5.

3841. Whenever the Message of God comes, the vested interests range themselves against it, Worldly power has made them arrogant; worldly pleasures have deadened their sensibility to Truth. They reject the Message because it attacks their false position.

3842. Their arrogance is openly based on their worldly power and position, their family influence, and he strength of their man-power. Turn back again to the contrast drawn between the arrogant ones and those whom they despised, in verses 31-33.

1843, Provision (or Sustenance): good things of all kinds in this life, material goods as well as power, opportunities, influence, mental gifts, etc. These do not necessarily all go to the good, nor is their dental to be interpreted to ment that it is a withdrawal of Goo's favour. Very often the contrary is the case. Their distribution is in accordance with the Universal Plan and Purpose, which is all-wise and all-good. But ignorant people cannot understand this.

3844. The true test of progress in spiritual life is to be measured by other things than material wealth and influence. What we have to ask ourselves is: are we the least bit nearer to God?

3645. Cf. xxx. 39. All worldly good is but a shadow that will pass away. Its intrinsic and eternal value is small. But those who work righteousness in Faith are on the true path of self-development. The reward they will get will be infinitely more than their merits entitle them to. For they will partake of the boundless Bounties of God.

3846. Their happiness will not only be great in quantity ("multiplied"), but it will be of a specially sublime quality ("dwellings on high"), and it will endure without any chance of its loss or diminution ("secure they reade").

3847. Cf. XXXIV. 5, where the argument was urged that human efforts to defeat God's Plan will only bring humiliation to those who indulge in them. Here the argument is rounded off by the statement that such efforts, besides their failure, will land them in an abyss of punishment contrasted with the "dwellings on high" of the blessed ones.

3848. Cf. xxxiv, 35 above, and n. 3843.

3849. Even in the seeming inequality of distribution of the good things of life, God has a wise americally purpose; for nothing arises by chance. He is the best to give us, now and evermore, just those things which subserve our real needs and advance our inner development.

3850 Here we have the case of the worship of angels or supposed Powers of God, or supposed beneficent spirits that men turn to instead of worshipping the true God. In fact these are mere names to the false worshippers. It is not the Good that they worship but the Evil, which leads them satray.

3851. Wall in Arabic may mean Friend either in the sense of Protector and Benefactor or in the sense of the Beloved. The tie of benevolence, confidence, and friendship is implied, either active or passive. The angels first proclaim their dependence on God and their need of His protection, and then disclaim any idea of their having protected or encouraged the false worshippers to worship beings other than God. They go further, and suggest that when men pretended to worship angels, they worshipped, not angels, but Jinns. See next note.

The Jinns: see most of them

- 42. So on that Day

  Over each other, for profit
  Or harm: and We shall Say to the wrong-doers,
  "Taste ye the Penalty

  Ye were wont to deny!"
- 43. AM hen Our Clear Signs
  Are rehearsed to them,
  They say, "This is only
  A man who wishes

  Which your fathers practised."
  And they say, "This is Only a falsehood invented!"
  And the Unbelievers say
  Of the Truth when it comes
  To them, "This is nothing
  But evident magic!"
- 44. But We had not given
  Them Books which they could
  Study, nor sent apostles sess
  To them before thee
  As Warners.

الْمِنْ كَانْهُمْ مِنْهُ مُؤْمِنُونَ ۞ الْمُؤْرِّلَا يَلِكُ بَسْمَنْكُمْ لِبَضِ أَمْنَا وَلَاضَرًا وَتَعُوكُ لِلَّذِينَ طَلُواْ ذُوْفُاً عَنَابَالْنَارِ الْمَعْكُ مُنْدُمِ الْكُذِيونَ

3852. Jinus: see vi. 100 and ii. 929. The false worshippers prefended to worship the bright and radiant angels of good, but in reality worshipped the dark and hidden forces of evil,—the devils hidden within themselves or in the life around them. They trusted and beheved in such forces of evil, although such forces of evil had reality no power.

3853. The supposed "rivals" of God—the false things whereon men set their hopes and fears—will have no power whatever when true values are restored; and the Fire—the Penalty—which they doubted or derided, will become the dominating real thing in their experience.

3814. Apart from the worship of Evil in the giuse of the Powers of Light, there is another form of false worship, which depends on ancestral tradition. "Why "it is said "should we not do as our fathers did." They reject a new apostle of Truth simply because his teaching does not agree with the ways of their ancestors. The answer to this is given in verse 45 below. But meanwhile the rejectors objection to new Truth is stated in three forms; (1) our ancestors knew nothing of this; (2) the story of inspiration is false; it is merely an invention; we do not believe in inspiration; (3) when in some particular points, the new Truth loss work wonders in merels hearts, they account for it by saving it is magic. The third objection is merely traditional. What is magic? If it was merely deeption, surely the Truth has proved itself to be above deception. The second objection is answered by the fact that the Apostle who comes with new spiritual Truth is acknowledged to be truthful in other relations of life; why should he be false where his preaching brings him no gain but much sorrow and persecution? For the ancestral objection seen next note.

3855. The ancestors (as in the case of the Arabs of the Times of Ignorance) had received no revelation of the clear kind which on apostle and a Book bring them. This is a reason for welcoming, not for rejecting, new Touth

45. And their predecessors rejected (The Truth); these have Not received a tenth Of what We had granted To those: yet when they rejected My apostles, how (terrible) Was My rejection (of them)!

3856. Passing to Peoples before the immediate ancestors, the People of the Book, or the People of Sabā and the "Ad and Thambd, had received favours and gifts, power and wealth, ten times more than were enjoyed by the Pagan Quraish. Yet when they turned away from God's Truth, God turned away from them, and what terrible consequences descended on them when they lost God's Grace! This should make everyone humble, not least the posterity of Muhammad the Apostle if they forsake God's Truths! For they have received a, higher "leaching!

3837. A crowd mentality is not the best for the perception of the final spiritual truths. For these, it is necessary that each soul should commune within itself with earnest sincerity as before God: if it requires a Teacher, let it seek out one, or it may be that it wants the strengthening of the inner convictions that dawn on it, by the support of a sympathiser or friend. But careful and heart-felt reflection is necessary to aporaise the higher Truths.

3858. Note that in verses 46, 47, 48, 49, and 50, arguments are suggested to the Prophet, by which be can convince any right-thinking man of his suncenty and truth. Here the argument is that he is not possessed or out of his mind. If he is different from ordinary men, it is because he has to give a warning of a terrible spiritual danger to the men whom he loves but who will not understand his Message.

3859. Cf. x. 72. The second argument is that he has nothing to gain from them. His message is for their own good. He is willing to suffer persecution and insult because he has to fulfill his mission from God,

> ۞ وَلَوْتَرَكَ لِذُفَيْعِ وَافَلَافَوْنَ وَلُيْدِدُوَا مِن مَّكَانِ فَرَيْبٍ

3860. God's Truth is so vast that no man in this life can compass the whole of it. But God in His mercy selects this servants on whom it is cast like a mantle. They see enough to be able to teach their fellow men. It is through that maintle-that mission received from God-that an apostic can speak with authority to men. He cannot explain the exact mystery of inspiration, but he knews it is from God, and this is his third argument.

3861. The lowfit argument is that the Truth is final; it does not come and go; it creates now stuations and new developments, and if by any chance it seems to be defeated for a time, it comes back and restores the true balance;—unlike Falsehood, which by its very nature is doomed toperish; xvv. 81. The Prophet's credentials are known by the test of Time. This was already becoming apparent to discerning eyes when this Sûra was revealed in Mecca, but it became clear to the whole world with the story of Islam's progress in Medica.

3862. If it could possibly be supposed that the Prophet was a self-deceived visionary, it would affect him only, and could not I sail to appear in his personality. But in fact he was steady in his constancy and Faith, and he not only went from strength to strength, but won the enduring and whole-hearted love and devotion of his nearest and dearest and of those who most came into contact with him. How was this possible, unless he had the Truth and the inspiration of God behind him? This is the fifth and last argument in this passage.

3863. After the arguments for the reality and triumph of Truth, we are asked to contemplate the position of the opposers of Truth when Truth is established. They will be struck with terror: for Truth is all-compiling. They will wish they could get away from that position, but that would be impossible. They will not be able to move far; they will be held fast to the consequences of their own earlier conduct. They will be caught quite close to the point of their departure from Truth.

3601 They will now profess their faith in Truth, but of what value will such profession be? Faith is a belief in things unseen; how everything is plain and open before them. The position in which they could have received Faith is left far off behind them, when Truth was struggling and asked for help or asylum, and they cruelly, arrogantly, insultingly repudated Truth.

3865. Not only did they reject the Truth of the Unseen (the true Reality), but they spread all sorts of false and malicious insinuations at the preachers of Truth, calling them dishonest men, liars, hyporrites, and so on. They did it like a coward taking up a sneaking position far from the fight and speeding arrows at a distant target.

3867. Note that verses 51-54 are a powerful description of the conflict between right and wrong, and may be understood in many meanings. (1) The description applies to the position in the final Hereafter, as compared with the position in this Jile. (2) It applies to the position of trumphant Islām in Medina and later, as compared with the position of persecuted Islām in its early days in Mecca. (3) It applies to the reversal of the position of right and wrong at various phases of the world's history, or of (4) individual history.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXV (Falir).

See Introduction to the last Sura.

This Sura deals with the mystery of Creation and its maintenance, with various forces typifed by the wings of Angels. Whether we look to outer nature or to man. God's Grace proclaims His Glory, and protects His votaries from Evil.

It is an early Meccan Sura, but its chronology has no significance.

Summary.—The forces which maintain Creation, as typified by angels, were themselves created by God, to Whom alone all praise is due: all else is naught (xxxv. 1:26. and C. 192).

All good is from God: who then will choose Evil, and reach the doom that goes with Evil? (xxxv. 27-45, and C. 193).

C. 192.—God is the source of all things: all Power,
(xxxv. 1-20.)

Wisdom, Beauty, and Truth flow from Him.

It is Evil that deceives and plots in the dark.

All knowledge is with God. The things

That are good and pure and true are not

As the things that are evil, deceitful, and false.

God is free of all needs: it is we

That need Him: let us seek His love and live.

His Message will save us from wrong, while dark

Is the fate of those who reject Him.

Praise and glory to Him, the Cherisher of all!

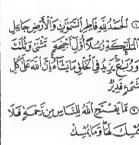

Stira XXXV.

Fatir, or The Originator of Creation; or Malaika, or The Angels.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. Praise be to God, who created (out of nothing) who created (out of nothing) who can be seen and the earth, who made the angels will be seen great which will be seen great which will be seen great to the control of the seen great which will be seen great which will be seen great which will be seen great with the seen great with which will be seen great with the seen great
- What God out of His Mercy Doth bestow on mankind There is none can withhold: What He doth withhold,

3809, See n. 3763 to xxxxx. 1. When we praise God, it means that we understand and bring to maid that His glory and power are exercised for the good of His Creation, and this is the subject-matter of the Stra.

3570. As mans knowledge of the processes of nature advances, he sees how complex is the evolution of matter itself, leaving out the question of the origin of Life and the spiritual forces, which are beyond the ken of experimental screecy. But this knowledge itself becomes a sort of "veil of Light" (see Appendix VIII, p. 923): man becomes so conscious of the proximate causes, that he sapt, in this pide, to forget the pinnal Cause, the Cause of Causes, the ultimate hand of God in-Creation. And then, Creation is such a complex process: see some of the ultimate hand of God, the different words in n, 120 to in. 117. The word fajiara here used means the creation of primoval matter, to which further creative processes have to be ridded by the hand of God, for God "adds to His Creation as He pleases", not only in quantity, but in qualities, functions, relations, and variations in infinite ways.

IST. The grosser ideas which men have of angets must be chain-sed from our minds. They are beings expressive of qualities or powers, which may be typified by "wings". We need not suppose that angelic "wings" have muscles and feathers, like the wings of birds. If they had, how could there be three, or lary odd number? We may suppose "two, three, or lour" to refer to pairs of wings. But we must not suppose "two, three, or lour" to e-Extress Protein numbers, for in sacred interative we find mention of angels with six hundred wings. And we can imagine angels with just one pair of wings. They are Alessengers or Instruments of God's Will, and may have a tew or numerous Errands entrusted to them. (f) the description of the Spirit of hispitration in XXXI 193, and of the spirits on angels for executing the Commands of God in InXXI. 1-5.

3672. See n. 3570 above, where the complexities of the creative processes is referred to. God's Creative did not stop at some past time: it continues, for He has all power, and His'mercies are ever poured forth without shirt. (٣٥) سورة فاطر 1153

There is none can grant, sees Apart from Him: And He is the Exalted In Power, Full of Wisdom.

- 3. men! call to mind
  The grace of God unto you!
  Is there a Creator, other with
  Than God, to give you
  Sustenance from heaven
  Or earth? There is No god but He: how
  Then are ye de!uded
  Away from the Truth?
- 5. O men! certainly
  The promise of God ****
  Is true. Let not then
  This present life deceive you.****

فَلا مُرْسِلَ الْمُرْنَ هَ لَهُ وَهُوَالْكَ نِيرُ الْمُكَالِمُ الْمُحْكِمُ وَهُوَالْكَ نِيرُ الْمُحْكِمُ الْمَحْكِمُ الْمُعَلِّمَ اللّهَ الْمُوْلَةُ الْمُحْلَقُ الْمُحْلَقُ الْمُحْلَقُ اللّهُ اللّه

3873. As God is the Creator and Sustainer of all beings and things, so does His kindness extend to all Creatures. No one can intercept God's mercies and gifts. Whatever is His Will and Plan and Purpose He can and does carry out. And if from any creature He withholds any particular gifts, there is no other person or power that can give those gifts. But such withholding is not arbitrary. He is full of wisdom and goodness, and every act of His, whether He withholds or gives, is full of kindness and mercy to His creatures.

3874. As the primal Cause of all things is God, an appeal is made to man to turn to God instead of running after false fancies. God is not only the source, but the centre of all life and activity and all affairs return to Him. The world is sustained, and human life is sustained, by God's grace and providence. "Sustenance" is to be taken, in Quranic language, for all that helps to maintain and develop every aspect of life, physical and spiritual. It would be the height of folly, then, for man to ignore God's gracious Message, as explained in His Revelation.

. 3875, And yet there will be human perversity, which will reject the True and accept the False. The man of God is not discouraged by this, as everything ultimately returns to God, and we must trust to His Wisdom in His Universal Plan.

3876, In verse 3 above the appeal was on the basis of the Past and the Present: now the appeal is on the basis of the Futura. Our origin is from God; we live, move, and have our being now in God; but remember also that there is a Future, in which we have to render an account of ourselves to God. God's prace has promised us the Garden of Bilss; His justice has promised us the Fire of Suffering. Both promises are certain to be fulfilled, On which side shall we range curselved.

3877. Cf. xxxi. 33 and n. 3624. The deception of Evil takes two forms. (1) The seductive temptations of this world may deceive us into forgetting the Horeafter. (2) The Arch Enemy himself may so blind our spiritual vision that we may say with him, "Evilt he thou my good!" We may be misled by easy stages. Are we on our guard?

Nor let the Chief Deceiver Deceive you about God.

- 6. Verily Šatan is an enemy To you: so treat him <sup>shi</sup> As an enemy. He only Invites his adherents, That they may become Companions of the Blazing Fire.
- For those who reject God, sees
   Is a terrible l'enalty: but
   For those who believe
   And work righteous deeds,
   Is Forgiveness, and
   A magnificent Reward.

SECTION 2.

- 8. Æs he, then, to whom
  The evil of his conduct
  Is made alluring, so
  That he looks upon it was
  As good, (equal to one
  Who is rightly guided)?
  For God leaves to stray
  Whom He wills, and guides
  Whom He wills. So
  Let not thy soul go out
  In (vainly) sighing after them:
  For God knows well
  All that they do!
- 9. It is God Who sends Forth the Winds, so that 3878. Evil is our enemy and should be freated as such. It is really foreign to our nature, however much it may disguise itself to deceive us as our friend, or a part of our own nature. Personifying the Spirit of Evil, we may say that he wants us to share in his own damnation. Shall we allow ourselves to fall into his snare?

3879. To reject God is to reject all the good which He has implanted in our nature. Are we go to be false to the true Pattern according to which He created us, and suffer the consequences? Or are we going to be true to that Pattern and achieve the high and noble Destiny intended for us?

3880,  $C_I$ , a, 3877 above. When a stage is reached at which a man accepts Evil as his Good, his case is hopeless. Can such a man profit by preaching or guidance? He has himself deliberately rejected all guidance. Such a man it best left to stray. Perhaps, even in the paths in which he is straying, some sudden flash of light may come to him! That may be as God wills in His holy and wise Purpose and Plan. But the man of God is not to worry or feel disheattened by such men's attitude. He must go on tilling the soil that is open to him. For God's Plan may work in all sorts of unexpected ways, as in the allegory in the next verse.

They raise up the Clouds, 3601 And We drive them To a land that is dead, And revive the earth therewith After its death: even so (Will be) the Resurrection!

10. If any do seek
For glory and power,—ass!
To God belong
All glory and power,
To Him mount up
(All) Words of Purity:
It is He Who exalts
Each Deed of Righteousness.
Those that lay Plots ass!
Of Evil,—for them
Is a Pénalty terrible;
And the plotting of such
Will be void (of result).

11. And God did create **s*i
You from dust;
Then **s*s* from a sperm-drop;
Then He made you
In pairs. And no female
Conceives, or lays down
(Her load), but with His Knowledge. Nor is a man

قَالْغَيْثِيَا بِهِ الْأَرْضَ بَعْدُ مُوْنِهَا كَيْلَا النَّشُورُ ۞ من كات يُونِيُ الْسِرَّةَ فَلِيَّهِ الْفِرَةَ جَيْماً الْلَهِ الْمَعْلِمُ وَالْلَيْنِ وَالْفَسَالُ الْصَلِيمَ وَنَصْمُ وَالْلَيْنِ يَعْصَدُونَ السَّيِّنَا لِي الْمُنْعَانَاتِ شَيْدِيدٌ وَمَعْتَ رُفُولَةٍ لِكَ مُحَوِيدُورُ صَارِيدٌ وَمَعْتَ رُفُولَةٍ لِكَ مُحَوِيدُورُ

٥ وَاللّهُ خَلَقَكُم يَن رُّوابِ كُمْ مِن ظُلْمَةِ
 كُمْ جَسَكُ أَنْ وَاجْنًا وَيَكَا تَخِيلُ مِن
 أَنْفَ وَلانْفَت عُ إِلاَّ بِعِلْوْ وَمَا

3881. The allegory here is double. (1) Dry, unpromising soil may seem to all intents and purposes dead; there is no source of water near; moisture is sucked up by the sun's heat in a far-off ocean, and clouds are formed; winds arise; it seems as if the wind "blowesh as tipstath", but it is really God's Providence that drives it to the dead land; the rain falls, and behold there is life and motion and beauty everywhere! So in the spiritual world, God's Revelation is His Mercy and His Rain; there may be the individual resurrection (Nashar) or unfolding of a soul. (2) So again, may be the general Resurrection (Nashar), the unfolding of a new World in the Hereafter, out of an old World that is folded up and dead (Takus 1.5 lazza).

3882. Good and Evil are to be distinguished sharply. No good is ever lost: it goes up to the Throne of God. The humblest Good, in word or deed, is exalted to high rank. If man seeks for mera glory and power, there is no such thing apart from God. But seeking God, we attain to the highest glory and power.

3883, It is the nature of Evil to work underground, to hide from the Light, to plot against Righteousess; bit Evil inevitably carries its own punishment. Its plots must fail miserably. And eventually Evil little! is to be blotted out.

3894. Cf xviii. 37 and n. 2379; xxii. 5 and n. 2773; and xxx. 20, and n. 3524. Here the argument that man's physical origin's lowly; his physical body is but dust; his life-sperm issues from a part f his body which he hides and considers as a place of shame; and the mystery of sex shows that no one individual among mankind is sufficient in himself. Glory and power and knowledge are not in him, but in God, from Whom alone he derives any glory, or power, or knowledge that he possesses.

3885, "Then" in this and the following clause refers, not to stages of time, but to stages in the argument. It is almost equivalent to "further,", "also", "and in addition".

3886. Things that appear most secret and mysterious to man are all known and ordained by God. They are all subject to God's Laws and Decrees. The mystery of human birth (see n. 3625 to xxxi, 34), the mystery of sex, the mystery of Life and Death and many other things, seem to man inexplicable. But they are all ordained by God, and their reasons are fully known to Him.

3887. Man's knowledge may be acquired laboriously and may be a burden to him. God's knowledge is different; it is no task or burden to Him. Cf. xxxiii, 19 and 30.

3888. See xxv. 33 and notes 3111 and 3112. The great sait Ocean with its sens and gulfs is all one: and the great masses of sweet water in rivers, lakes, ponds, and underground springs are also one: and each is connected with the other by the constant circulation going on, which sucks up vapours, carries them about in clouds or atmospheric moisture, and again brings them condensed into water or snow or hail to mingle with rivers and streams and get back into the Ocean.

3899. For this whole passage see xvi. 14 and notes 2034 and 2035. Both from the sea and from rivers and lakes we get fish, of which some kinds have a flesh particularly fresh and tender, and of a most delicate flavour.

3890. Such as pearls and coral from the sea, and such delicately tinted stones as the 'Aq5q (carnelian), the agate, the goldstone, or other varieties of quartz pebbles found in river-beds, and considered as gems. Many such are found in the Ken river in Banda District (Bundelkhand). Some river sands also yield minute quantities of gold. In large navigable rivers and big Lakes like those of North Amenca, as well as in the sea, there are highways for shipping and commerce.

3891, Cf. xxii. 61. The phases of Light in nature may have other uses. But for man they mark periods of rest and activity, and have great influence on his physical, moral, and spiritual life.

3892. Cf. xiii. 2. The sun and the moon mark phases of light, and serve man during the periods of the day and the night. The sun marks the seasons, and is the source of heat and energy and physical life for the whole solar system. The sun and the moon run according to fixed laws, and they will continue to do so, not for ever, but for the period appointed for their duration by God.

3893. God's might and majesty, and God's goodness and wisdom, having been shown by a few expenses, it follows that it is folly to seek or worship any other power but God. It only throws off man into false paths, and takes him farther and farther away from the Truth.

3934. Qijmīr: the thin, white skin that covers the date-stone. It has neither strength nor texture, and has no value whatever. Any one relying on any power other than that of God relies on nothing whatever. The Qijmīr is worse than the proverbial "broken red". C fiv. 53 and iv. 124, where the word mayīr, 'the groove in a date-stone', is used similarly for a thing of no value or significance.

3895. False or imaginary objects of worship serve no purpose whatever. They cannot hear; if they could hear, they could not grant prayers or petitions. In fact, if they are real creatures, such as angels or defined human beings, they will very rightly repudiate any such worship as brings them into competition or "partnership" with God. See next note.

3896. Cf. z. 28 and n. 1418; also xxxiv. 40-41. No false ideas or false impressions will remain when true values are restored. Why not then accept the Truth now in this life, and get on to the true path of Grace?

3897. None can tell you the Truth better than He Who is All-Wise and All-Knowing. Why not accept His Message and receive His guidance?

3900. Bearer: hamilatun; feminine in Arabic, as referring to the soul (nafs), as in vi. 164.

3901. Natural relationship may be considered as a reasonable cause or opportunity for bearing each other's burdens. For example, a mother or a father might offer to die for her or his child, and vice uresa. But this does not apply to spiritual matters. There the responsibility is strictly personal and cannot be transferred to another. In xxix. 13 we are told that the misleaders "will bear other burdens along with their own"; but the context shows that the "other" burdens are the burdens of deluding others with their falsehoods. Both sins are their own, vix., their original sin, and the sin of deluding the others. But the responsibility will be doublety.

3902. Bil.gaibi: unseen in the adverbial sense. The man, who, though he does not see God, so realises God's Presence in himself as if he saw Him, is the man of genuine Faith, and for him God's Revealation comes through many channels and is always fruitful.

3903. Prayer is one of the means of purifying ourselves of lower motives in life, for in prayer we seek the Presence of God. But the purity which we seek is for our own souls: we confer no favour on God or on any Power in the spiritual world, as some imagine who make "gifts" to God. In any case the destination of all is to God.

Does so for the benefit Of his own soul; and The destination (of all) Is to God.

304. Now we are offered some contrasts between those who obey God's Law and are thus ostiaws, thoughout of Heaven and those who are rebels against God's Kingdom and are thus ostlaws. How can they be considered alike? The godly are like those who see, as contrasted with those who are blind; and their motives and actions are like the purest and highest Light, contrasted with the depths of darkness or, to take another metaphor, their lives are like the genial and warmth-giving heat of the sun, which benefits all who come within its influence, contrasted with the chilly shadows of gloom in which no vegetation flourists.

3905. The final contrast is between the Living and the Dead; those whose future has in it the promise of growth and fulfilment, and those who are inert and on the road to perish. With God everything is possible: He can give Life to the Dead. But the human Teacher should not expect that people who are (spiritually) dead and buried will by any chance hear his call.

3906. The function of a Prophet is to preach God's Truth, to point out the right Way, to show me the need of repentance, and to warn them against the dangers which they incur by living a life of evil. He cannot compet them to accept the Truth or listen to the Message.

3907. It is God Who sends the Revelation. While there is warning in it for the heedless, there is good news (in Christen terms, the gospel) for those who listen and repent. The warning always came to all peoples before punishment,

SECTION 4.

27. Seest thou not that
God sends down rain
From the sky? With it
We then bring out produce
Of various colours.
And in the mountains

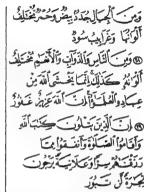

3908. The three things here mentioned are also mentioned in iii, 184, where I have explained the meaning in a. 490. All spiritual teaching centres round the evidences of God in our lives, the mystic utterances of men of God, and the rules and laws which guide holy living.

3909. Cf. xxii. 44 and xxxiv. 45. The fejecters of God hardly realise the terrible consequences to them individually and collectively, if God's grace is withdrawn from them and they are left to persish in their own sins and wrong-doing.

3910. Everyone can see how God's artistry produces from rain the wonderful variety of crops and fruits-golden, green, red, yellow, and showing all the most beautiful tints we can think of. And each undergoes in nature the gradual shading off in its transformation from the raw stage to the stage of maturity.

Are tracts white and red,<sup>3911</sup> Of various shades of colour, And black intense in hue.

- 28. And so amongst men
  And crawling creatures and cattle,
  Are they of various colours. State
  Those truly fear God,
  Among His Servants,
  Who have knowledge: State
  For God is Exalted in Might,
  Oft-Forgiving.
- 29. Those who rehearse the Book Of God, establish regular Prayer, And spend (in Charity) ***
  Out of what We have provided For them, secretly and openly, Hope for a Commerce ***
  That will never fail:

3911. These wonderful colours and shades of colours are to be found not only in vagetation but in rocks and mineral products. There are the white veins of marble and quartz or of chalk, the red laterite, the blue basaltic rocks, the inchback fints, and all the variety, shade, and gradation of colours. Speaking of mountains, we think of their "azure hue" from a distance, due to atmospheric effects, and these atmospheric effects lead our thoughts to the glories of clouds, sunsets, the zodiacal light, the auvera berealts, and all kinds of Nature's gorgeous pageantry.

3912. In the physical shapes of human and animal life, also, we see variations in shades and gradations of colours of all kinds. But these variations and gradations, marvellous though they be, are as nothing compared with the variations and differences in the inner or spiritual world. See mext note.

3913. In outer nature we can, through colours, understand and appreciate the finest shades and gradations. But in the spiritual world that variation or gradation is even more subtle and more comprehensive. Who can truly understand it? Only God's servants, who have, i.e., who have the inner knowledge which comes through their argulatizance with the spiritual world,—it is such people who truly appreciate the inner world, and it is they who know that the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom. For such fear is-akin to appreciation and fove,—appreciation of all the marvellous beauttes of God's outer and inner world ("God is Exalted in Might") and love because of His Grace and Kindness ("Oft-Forgiving"). But God's forgiveness extends to many who do not truly understand Him.

3914. The man of God takes God's Revelation ("the Book") to heart, ever seeks to got closer and closer to God ("regular Prayer"), and in doing so, is moved more and more to practical Charity for his fellow-creatures. He is not asliamed of his Charity ("openly"), but he does not do it to be seen of men ("secretly"): he just does what is necessary for his fellow-creaturus, whether people talk about it or not.

3915. Here is a metaphor from commerce. The good man's Charity comes not merely out of upperfaulties, but out of "what God has provided" for him. He therefore recognises two things: (I) that his wealth (literal and metaphorical) is not his absolutely, but that it is given to him by God; and (2) that he must deep himself the use of some of it, as a merchant puts by some of his wealth to invest as capital. Only, the godily man's Commerce will never fail or fluctuate; because God guarantees him the return, and even adds something to the return out of His own Bounty. That is, God gives more than ever our merits deserve.

30. For He will pay them
Their meed, nay, He will Give them (even) more

31. Me hat which We have revealed To thee of the Book Is the Truth,—confirming What was (revealed) before it: For God is assuredly—With respect to His servants—Well acquainted and *** Mell acquainted and *** Fully Observant.

32. Then **** We have given
The Book for inheritance
To such of Our servants
As We have chosen:
But there are among them ***
Some who wrong their own

إِنْ وَيَعَمُّمُ أَجُورَهُ مُورَهُ وَكَنْ يَدَهُمْ مِنْ فَصَلَّا إِنَّهُ الْمُؤْتِدُ الْمُؤْتُلُونَ الْمُؤْتُلُونِ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ اللللّهُ اللّهُ اللّ

۞ڎؙمَٱوۡرَمُنَا ٱلۡصِحَنَا ٱلۡدِينِ ٱصۡعَلَمۡنِكَا مِن عِبَادِمَا ۗ وَتَا ۚ وَمُعۡدُ طَالِرٌ لِيَقَيْدِهِ

3916. No man is perfect. Everyone has his faults. But when a man tries his best in the service of Goul. his faults are blotted out, and he is treated as if he had committed no faults: "for God is Oft-Forgiving, and ready to appreciate service"

3918. All Revelation is one. The Qur-an therefore confirms the main and uncorrupted features of previous revelations. It must be so, because God'is fully cognisant of the needs of every age and people; and therefore His Alessage, while it meets those needs, must in essence be the same. His Messengers did not meet each other as men; but their contact with God through inspiration unified their Message. And He cares for and watches over all men, and He knows fully what their needs are, even better than they know themselves.

3919. The force of "then" is that of finality. The Qur-an is the last Book revealed. Or it may be here to point the contrast between "to thee" in the last verse, i.e., the holy Apostle, in contrast distinction to the People of Islam, who inherited the Book after him.

3930. The custodians of the Qur-an after the holy Apostle were the People of Islam. They were chosen for the Book, not in any narrow sense, but in the sense that the Book was given for their age and they were charged to obey it and preserve and propagate it, so that all mankind should receive the Message. But it does not follow that they are all true and faithful to their charge, as indeed we see too painfully around us to-day. Just as mankind was chosen collectively to be Vicegerents for God, and yet some among mankind fell into evil,—even so, some in the house of Islam hait to follow the Light given to them, and flus "wrong their on souls". But some follow a middle course; in their case "the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak": their intentions are good, but they have much to learn yet of the true Missim pite and Muslim vitrues. Then there is a third class: they may not indeed be perfect, but both sheri-intentions and their conduct are sound, and they form an example to other men: they are "foremost." in every good deed. They are so, not by their own merits but by the Grace of God. And they have reached the highest Achievement,—the salvation, which is typingled by the various metaphors that follow, Souls; some who follow A middle course; and some Who are, by God's leave, Foremost in good deeds; That is the highest Grace.

- 33, Gardens of Eternity will they Enter: therein will they
  Be adorned with brace'ets
  Of gold and pearls;
  And their garments there
  Will be of silk.
- 34. And they will say:
  "Praise be to God.
  Who has removed from us
  (All) sorrow: for our Lord
  Is indeed Oft-Forgiving
  Ready to appreciate (service): ""
- 35. "Who has, out of His Bounty. Scttled us in a Home That will last: no toil Nor sense of weariness." Shall touch us therein."
- 36. But those who reject (God)— For them will be The Fire of Hell: 3025 No term shall be determined 3921. "The Garden" signifies their environment; all they see about them will give them comfort, rest, and satisfaction, and a feeling of beauty and dignity. The jewels and clothes signify their personal external state; here, again, everything will give them a sense of beauty and dignity, comfort, rest, and satisfaction. And finally, most important of all, comes their internal state, where again they will have the same sense of beauty, dignity, comfort, rest, and satisfaction; this is indicated by their worlds of Paice (verse 34-35).

3922. Cf. xviii. 31 and xxii. 23.

3973 Cf. above, xxxv. 30. Note how beautifully the argument is munded off. In verse 30 they were told that "God is Oft-Forgiving, Most Ready to appreciate service". Now they have reached the Goal, and they have found the Promise profoundly true. All their hopes are fulfilled, and their sorrows ended.

3924 In case it should be thought that perpetual happiness might cloy or be dull, as would be the case in this life, it is added—as the experience of three who attain that state—that it is not so on that plane of existence. Not only is there joy, but it remains fresh and leads to no wearmess.

3925. The "Fire" is the opposite to the "Garden". Instead of there being comfort, rest, and satisfaction in their environment, there will be pain, suffering, and anguish. Instead of there being dignity there will be humiliation. And there will be no hope of its termination or abatement, not even a bope of annihilation.

393). Their rejection and ingratitude only causes injury to theniselves. They lose all honour and incur odium in the sight of God, and they complete their own undoing

3912. The people who enthrone in their hearts for worship anything besides God may well be asked a few questions. Some of such questions are indicated in the text with terse precision: (I) Have you seen these gods of yous? Do they exist? "Seeling" of course does not necessarily mean physical sight. We do not see them it, but no one doubts that it exists. And the air is a physical substance. There are forces that we know exist, but we do not see them. To us, who have Fatth, God to a truer Reality than anything else that we know, including ourselves. Can the false worshippers say that of any of their false gods? (2) Have your gods created or originated anything on earth? You may worship power or wealth, but that is a scramble for things as between selfah men. Power or wealth does not create new men or new worlds. 3.3 Have they a share in the ordering of the leavens? "The leavens" may usean what you see in the physical wayers of astronomy, or the still substitute inner life. Obviously your false gods fall there. (4) Or have these false gods a book or revelation from the Supreme God, with clear evidence, to give them authority to teach men? The Prophets or Messengers of God have such authority, and they bring evidence of the One True God. The fart is that falsebood is falsehood, however much one form of it may support another by delications.

3933. The universe, as we know it, shows not only evidence of initial design, but also the working of an intelligent Providence, which constantly sustains it. That is God, if you could imagine that removed, what is there to keep it going? There would only be chaos, 5934. God's world goes on according to the laws and decrees established by Him. There are occasional layers and deviations on the part of His creatures. But He does not punish every petty fault. One of His merciful qualities is that of repeated forbearance and forgiveness.

3935. Cf. vi. 137. In the first instance this referred to the Quraish. Their attitude to the People of the flook had been one of lotty superiority or of insincere excuses. They twitted the Jews and Christians with deviating from their own lights and their own revelations; and for themselves, they said they had received no direct revelation from God, or they would have shown themselves the most amenable to discipline, the most ready to follow God's Law. This was before the holy Prophet received his mission from God. When he received it and announced it, they turned away from fit. They fied from it and put a greater and, greater distance, between it and themselves. But this is the way of all sinners. They find much to carp at in others, and much to excuse in themselves. But when all grounds for excuse are removed, they will be found, not nearer, but farther and farther away, from truth and righteousness.

3937. In all history, men who followed evil were dealt with in three stages by God: (1) He was forbaring and mercilul, and gave them respite; (2) He sent them admonition through His Messengers, or His Signs, or His revelation; (3) He dealt out justice and punishment. At any given moment, those given to iniquity may well be asked: "Are you going to wast through all these stages or are you going at once to repent, obtain forgiveness, and walk in the ways of righteousness?"

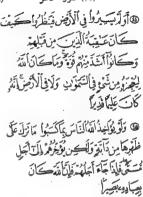

3938. God's Laws are fixed, and His ways of dealing with those who follow iniquity are the same in all ages. Our human will may falter or turn away from its course, but God's Will ever follows its course and cannot be turned away by any cause whatever.

3939 Cl. xxx.9. If no other argument will convince men who follow evil, let them travel through space or time, and learn from the experience of others. Evil always came to an evil end. Let not any one individual or generation think that it could escape by some special trick or power. Far wiser and more powerful men were personally brought to account for their insignities.

3940. Cf. xvi. 61. There would be no salvation for any of us if we went merely on our deserts. It is God's mercy that saves us and helps us to a better and better life until we attain the goal of our existence.

3941. A single living ereature. This may refer to man, the living crawling creature, with so many possibilities and yet so many weaknesses. But it may mean all creatures intrally, as the life of this planet moreor less centres round the life of man. He has been given dominion on this earth, and in his state of purity he is God's vicegerent.

3942. Has in His sight all creaturps: is, to deal with, accordingly to His laws of Forbearance, Mercy, and Justice 'see-a. 3937 above. The respite does not mean that any one escapes His vigilant eye. All will be dealt with according to their deeds, with justice temperad with Mercy.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXVI (Yā-Sīn).

See Introduction to S. xxxiv. This particular Sūra is devoted to the holy Prophet and the Revelation which he brought. The Abbreviated Letters Yā-Sīn are usually construed as a title of the holy Prophet: But it is not permissible to be dogmatic about the meaning of Abbreviated Letters. See Appendix I after S. it. This Sūra is considered to be "the heart of the Qur-an", as it concerns the central figure in the teaching of Islam and the central doctrine of Revelation and the Hereafter. As referring to the Hereafter, it is appropriately read in solemn ceremonies after death.

In chronology it belongs to the middle or early Meccan period.

In S. xxxvii. 130 (a cognate Sūra) occurs the word Il-yā-sīn : See n. 4115-A.

Summary.—The Qur-an is full of wisdom, and those are unfortunate who cannot profit by it r Parable of the City that defied—all but one—the Messengers of Grace and Mercy (xxxvi. 1-32, and C. 194).

Various Signs of God in nature and Revelation (xxxvi. 33-50, and C. 195).

The Resurrection and the Hereafter (xxxvi. 51-83, and C. 195).

C. 194.-The wisdom of Revelation-the Our-an received (xxxvi, 1-32.) Through the holy Prophet-is a guide To the Straight Path, and a warning against The terrible state in which the vokes Of Sin enslave us. The righteous receive it With joy, for they believe in the Hereafter. Behold, there was once a City, to which Came two righteous men with the Gospel of Truth, But they were rejected and persecuted : they were joined By a third, But the City refused to believe Or to turn from iniquity. Only one man was found In its outskirts, to bear witness to Truth, Faith, and Righteousness, and he did suffer Martyrdom. He attained Peace, but mourned For his people, in that they shut the gates Of Salvation and God's Mercy on themselves. Alas for man's short-sighted folly in defying The Grace that would shield and deliver him !

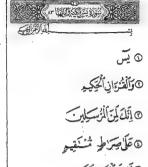

S. xxxvi. 1-6.

۞ڸؽؙٮڍڒٷٞؽؙٲ؉ۧٲڷؙؠٳٚڒٵؠٙٲۉؙڰۯ ۏؘۺ۫ۼؽڸۅؙڹ

3943 Some Commentators take Yā to be the vocative particle, and Six to be the abbreviation of Irsān, Six being the only "Firm Letter" in the word. In that case it would be an address to man, O' man!" But "man" in this connection is understood to mean the Leader of man the noblest of mankind, Muhammad the Prophet of God. For this Sūra deals mainly with the holy Prophet and his Message. But no dogmatic assertion can be made about the Abbreviated Letters, for which see Aopendy E, following S. it. "$5$ is susually treated as a mystic title of the holy Prophet.

394. The best credentials of the holy Prophet are: (I) the revelation which he brought ("the Quran"), and the heroic unselfish life which he led ("on a Straight Way"). The appeal is therefore made on the testimony of these two facts.

3945. The Revelation again is characterised by two attributes which we find most beinful in contemplating the insture of God. It has force and power; for God is Exalted in Mieht and able to enforce His Will. And it brings a Message of hope and mercy; for God is Most Merciful, By in characteristics we know that the Qui-An is from God.

3946. The Quraish had received no Prophet before, and therefore one of themselves was made the vehicle for the universal Message to the whole world. See C. 12-15.

3947. Cf. vii. 30, and n. 1012; also xvii. 16, and n. 2193. If people deliberately and obstinately refuse "to believe", i.e. to receive guidance and admonition, the result must be that God's grace and mercy are withdrawn from them. Their own perversity inevitably blocks-up all channels for their correction.

3948. Man's misdeeds inevitably call forth the operation of God's Law, and therefore the result is in Quranic language attributed to God. The result of man's wilful disobedience is now described in a series of metanhors. (1) Refusal of God's Light means less and less freedom of action for man; the yoke of this fastered round man's neck, and it gets' more and more lightened, right up to the ctin. (2) The head is forced up and kept in a stift position, so that the mind becomes befogged. Moral obliquity taints the intellect. According to the Sanskrit proverb, "When destruction comes near, understanding is turned upside down." According to the Latin proverb, "Whom God whise to destroy, He first makes demented." In other words, iniquity not only is folly, but leads deeper and deeper into folly, narrowness of vision, and blindness to the finer things of life, (3) This state of deprivation of Grare leads to such a decline in spiritual vitality that the victim can neither progress nor turn back, as explained in the next verse.

3949 Their retreat is cut off, and their progress is impossible. Further, the Light that should come from above is cut off, so that they become totally devoid of any hope, and the last gleam of any spiritual understanding is extinguished in them

3950. When the stage just described is reached. Revelation or spiritual teaching ceases to have any value for them Why then preach? The answer is given in the verses following.

11. Whou canst but admonish and Such a one as follows The Message and fears The (Lord) Most Gracious, unseen:

Give such a one, therefore, 3843
Good tidings, of Forgiveness
And a Reward most generous.

٥ الْمَالُندُرُ مَن الْتَحَالِا صَرَوْقَوْقُ الْأَثَانَ الْمُنْتِ مَنِيْرُ وَالْمَوْتُونِ الْأَثَانَ الْمُنْتِ مُنْفِرُ وَالْمُؤْتِكِيدِهِ

12. Verily We shall give life <sup>204</sup>
To the dead, and We record
That which they send before
And that which they leave <sup>201</sup>
Behind, and of all things
Have We taken account

3951, $\hat{C}$, XXXV. 18. As far as those are concerned, who have obstinately delivered themselves to evil, the preaching of God's Message has no appeal, because their own will shuts them out. But there are others who are anxious to hear God's Message and receive God's grace. They love God and fear to offend against His holy Law, and their fear is not merely superficial but deep-seated; for while they do not yet see God, nor do other people see them, they have the same sense of God's presence as if they saw thin, and their religion is not a mere nose. "To be seen of men"

3932 See n. 3002 to xxxv. 18. If "assen is here adverbial; their reverence for God is unaffected by the central they do not see him, or that other people do not observe them, because their attitude arises out of a genuine love for God.

3953. To such persons the Message of God comes as a gospel or good news; because it shows them the way of forgiveness for anything wrong in their past, and it gives them the promise of a full reward in the future,—generous beyond any deserts of their own, but arising out of God's unbounded Bounty.

3954. All this is possible, because there is the assurance of a Hereafter, in which God will be all-in-all, and evil will no longer bestride the ward, as the term of its respite will have expired.

3955. Our deeds, good and bad, go to God's Judgment-seat before us. They will of course be brought to our account; but our account will also be swelled by the example we left behind us and the consequences of our deeds, that will come into play or continue to operate after our earthly life has ceased. Our moral and spiritual responsibility is therefore much wider than as affects our own person.

13. Set forth to them,
By way of a parable,
The (story of) the Companions ***
Of the City. Behold,
There came anostles to it.

14. When We (first) sent

They rejected them:
But We strengthened them with
With a third: they said,

3956. Cf. n. 124 and n. 124. All our account will be exactly preserved as in a book of record.

3957. Many of the classical Commentators have supposed that the City referred to was Antioch, Now Antioch was one of the most important crities in North Syria in the first century of the Christian era. It was a Greek city founded by Seleucus Nicator, one of the successors of Alexander, abnut 300 B.C. in memory of his father Antiochus. It was close to the sea, and had its sea-port at Seleucus. Soon after Christ his disciples successfully preached there, and they "were called Christians first in Antioch": Acts, xi. 26. It afterwards became the seat of a most important Bishopic of the Christian Church. In the story told here "by way of a parable", the City rejected the Message, and the City was destroyed: xxxvi. 29. Following lib Neglity, I rejected the identification with Antioch decisively. No name, or period, or place is mentioned in the text. The significance of the story is in the lessons to be derived from it as a parable, for which see the next note, That is independent of name, time, or place.

3958. God sends His apostles or teachers of Truth by ones and twos, and where the opposition is great and He considers it necessary, he supports them with others. Their mission is divine, but they do not claim to be more than men. This is used by the unjust and the ungodly as if it were a reproach, whereas it should commend them to men, for mankind is glorified by such commission and by God's Self-revelation. The Message is clearly expressed in human language, but because it exposes all evil, men think it unlucky, as it checks their selfshness. It is often the poorest and most despised of mankind, from the outskirts or "farthest parts of the City", that accept the Message and are willing to work and die for it. The stiff-necked resist and accomplish their own destruction.

- 15. The (people)-said: "Ye are Only men like ourselves; "** and (God) Most Gracious Sends no sort of revelation: ***.00 Ye do nothing but lie."
- 16. They said: "Our Lord doth Know that we have been sent On a mission to you: ***1
- "And our duty is only To proclaim the clear Message." 300
- 18: The (people) said: "For us, We augur an evil omen ""

الْمَا مَنَّا أَنْ تُعْرُلِاً بَعَثْرٌ مِنْ فَلْمَنَا وَمَّا الْمَعْرُ مِنْ فَلْمَنَا وَمَّا الْمَنْدُ الْمُنْدُ الْمُنْدُونَ الْمَنْدُ الْمُنْدُ الْمُنْدُ الْمُنْدُونَ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ

3959. Cf Acts, xiv. 15, where Paul and Barnabas say, in the city of Lystra near the modern Konia: "We also are men with like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanites..."

1960. They not only reject the mussion of the particular apostles, but they deny the possibility of God's sending such mission. Note how they convict themselves of inconsistency by using God's name "Most Gracious", even though they may mean it from closely!

3061. Just as a Messenger whose credentials are doubled can refer to the authority granted by his Principal, as the highest proof of his mission, so these men of God invoke the authority of God in proof of their mission. In effect they say: "The knowledge of God is perfect, and He knows that our mission is from Hum; if you do not, it is your own misfortune."

3962. Then they proceed to explain what their mission is. It is not to force them but to convince them. It is to proclaim openly and clearly God's Law, which they were breaking,—to denounce their sins and to show them the better path. If they were obstinate, it was their own loss. If they were rebellious against God, the punishment rested with God.

363, 78ir means a bird. Like the Roman augurs, the Arabs had a superstition about deriving omens from birds. Cf. the English word "auspicious", from the Latin avis, a bird, and specio, I see. From 78ir (bird) came al-ajusara, or ijialyara, to draw evil omens. Because the men of God denounced evil, the evil-doers thought that they brought ill luck to them. As a matter of fact any evil that happened to them was the result of their own ill-deeds. Cf. vii. 131, where the Egyptians ascribed their calamities to the ill-luck brought by Moses; and xxvii. 47, where the Thamüd ascribed ill-luck to the preaching of Satih.

From you: if ye desist not, We will certainly stone you, And a grievous punishment Indeed will be inflicted On you by us." ؠٙڹڷڒۘؠؙڹڞؙۅٳڵڹٛڿؙٛؠؾۜٛػڋ ڡٙڵۣؠٙٮۜٙڹٞػٛ؞ڒڽٵۘػڵٲڰؚٲڮڐ

20. Then there came running, F1...a the farthest part Of the City, a man, 806 Saying, "O my People! Obey the apostles:

۞ *ڗؠؠۜٙٵ؞ٙؽ*ڒٙٛٲڞٵڵڵۮؚؾٷڗۻؙڵؽٮؽٵ ؠۜڡٚۊ۫؞ٳؾٞؠٷٲڵڶڗؙڛڸڹ

- 22 (For themselves), and who have
- 30 Themselves received Guidance.

3964. What we call omens arise from your own ill-deeds. Do you suppose that a man who comes to warn you and teach you the better way brings you ill-luck? Fie upon you!

3965. To call Good evil and accuse of falsehood men of truth who come unselfishly to bring the message of the beneficent Mercy of God, is the very height of extravagance and transgression

3966. While the wealthy, influential, and fashionable men in the City were doubtful of God's providence and superstitiously believed in Chance and evil omens, the Truth was seen by a man in the outskirts of the City, a man held in low esteren by the arrogant. He had believed, and he wanted his City to believe. So, in Arabia, when the arrogant chiefs of the Quraish exiled the holy Prophet, it was men from Medina and from the outskirts, who welcomed him, believed in him, and supported his mission in every way.

3967. Prophets do not seek their own advantage. They serve God and humanity. Their hope lies in the good pleasure of God, to Whose service they are devoted. Ct. x. 72; xii. 104; etc.

- 22. It would not be reasonable In me if I did not Serve Him Who created me, shad And to Whom ye shall (All) be brought back.
- 23. "Shall I take (other) gods
  Besides Him? If (God)
  Most Gracious should Intend some adversity for me. ""
  Will be their intercession
  For me, nor can they Deliver me.
- 24. "I would indeed,
  If I were to do so,
  Be in manifest Error.
- 25. "For me, I have faith
  In the Lord of you (all): ""
  Listen, then, to me!"
- 26. It was said: "Enter thou will
  The Garden." He said:
  "Ah me! Would that
  My People knew (what I know)!--

3968. The argument throughout is that of intense personal conviction for the individual littliself, coupled with an appeal to his people to follow that conviction and get the benefit of the sprinted satisfaction which he has himself achieved. He says in effect: 'how is it possible for me to do otherwise than to serve and adore my Maker?' I shall return to Him, and so will you, and all this applies to you as much as to me.' Note how effective is the transition from the personal experience to the collective appeal.

3969. The next plea is that for exclusive service to God. "Suppose it were proper to worship other gods—Mammon, Self, or imaginary deities set up as idols,—yet of what benefit would that be? All power is in God. In His universal Plan, He may think fit to give me some worrow or punishment: would these subordinate deities be able to help me or intercede for me with Him? Not at all. What use would they be? In fact I should obvlously be going astray,—wandering from the true Path."

3070. Again a transition from the assured personal conviction to the appeal to all to profit by the speaker's experience. 'I have found the fullest satisfaction for my soul in God. He is my God, but He is your God also. My experience can be yours also. Will you not follow my advice, and prove for yourselves that the Lord is indeed good?...

397]. This godly and righteous man entered into the Peace of God, typified by the Garden of Rest and Beauty. Perhaps it is implied that he suffered martyrdom. But even then his thoughts were always with his People. He regretted their obtainest, and want of understanding, and wished even then that they might repent and obtain salvation, but they were obdurate and suffered for their sins as we learn from verse 25.29 below.

27. "For that my Lord ***

Has granted me Forgiveness

And has enrolled me

Among those held in honour!"

28. And We sent not down Against his People, after him, Any hosts from heaven, Nor was it needful-For Us so to do.

29. It was no more than
A single mighty Blast, <sup>2072</sup>
And behold i they were (like ashes) <sup>2074</sup>
Ouenched and silent.

30. Ah! alas for (My) servants!
There comes not an apostle
To them but they mock him!

BYTO

31. See they not how many Generations before them
We destroyed? Not to them
Will they return:

3972. This man was just a simple honest soul, but he heard and obeyed the call of the apostles and obtained his spiritual desire for himself and did his best to obtain subration for his people. For he loved his people and respected his ancestral traditions as far as they were good, but had no hesitation in accepting the new Light when it came to him. All his past was forgiven birn and he fews raised to dignity and honour in the Kingdoni of Heaven.

3973. God's Justice or Punishment does not necessarily come with pomp and circumstance, not have ne forces of human evil or wickdness the power to require the exertion of mighty spiritual forces to subdue them. A single mighty Blast—either the rumbling of an earthquake, or a great and violent wind—was sufficient in this case. (1, xi 67 and n. 1361 which describes the fate of the Thambd ; also, n. 3463 to xxix. 40.

3974. C/, xxi. 15 They had made a great deal of noise in their time, but they were reduced to silence, like spent ashes

3975 Cl. vi. 10 and many other passages of similar import. Ignorant men mock at God's apostles, or any one who takes Religion seriously. But they do not reflect that such levity reacts on themselves. Their own lives are ruined and they cease to count. If they study bistory, they will see that countless generations were destroyed before them because they did not take Truth seriously and undermined the very basis of their individual and collective existence.

My servants is here equivalent to "men" God regrets the folly of men, especially as He cherishes them as His own servants, 3976 Not to them will they return. What do the two pronouns them and they refer to? Commentators and translators have construed them differently, and some of them evade the question. To my mind the best construction seems to be: the generations which we have destroyed before the people addressed ('do they not see?') will not be restored to the people addressed: generations (qurain standing for the periods of prosperity and good fortune enjoyed by the ancestors. They have all been wiped out: they will never be restored, but all people will be brought before the Judgmentseat for giving an account of their deeds.

32. But each one of them
All-will be brought
Before Us (for judgment).

- 34. And We produce therein Orchards with date-palms **** And vines, and We cause Springs to gush forth therein:
- 35. That they may enjoy. Who the fruits of this (artistry): It was not their hands who that made this: Will they not then give thanks?

3977. Lest any one should say, 'if they are destroyed, how can they be brought before the Jupenent-seat' a symbol is pointed to. The earth is to all little lints and purposes dead in the winter, but God revies it in the spring  $C_1$ , ii 161, xxx. 19, and many other passages to that effect,

3978. Date-palms and vines stand as symbols for fruit-trees of all kinds, these being the characteristic fruits of Arabia. Grain was mentioned in the last verse; fruit is mentioned now. All that is necessary for food and the satisfaction of the choicest palate is produced from what looks like inert soil, fertilised by rain and springs. Here is wonderful evidence of the artistry and providence of God,

3979. Literally, eat (akala), "Cf. vn. 19, n. 1004 and v, (6), n. 776. The same wide meaning of profit, satisfaction, and enjoyment may be attached to the word "eat," in verse 33 above.

3980. Man may till the soil-and sow the seed, but the productive forces of nature were not made by man's hands. They are the handlwork and artistry of God, and are evidence of God's providence for His creatures, See n. 3978 above.

3981. The mystery of sex runs through all creation.—in man, in animal life, in vegetable life, and possibly in other things of which we have no knowledge. Then there are pairs of opposite forces in nature, e.g., positive and negative electricity, etc. The atom isself consists of a positively charged nucleus or proton, surrounded by negatively charged electrons. The constitution of matter itself is thus referred to pairs of opposite energies.

1962. "Withdrateing the Day from the Night" is a striking phrase and very apt. The Day or the the Light is the positive thing. The Night or Darkness is merely negative. We cannot withdraw the negative. But if we withdraw the real thing, the positive, which filled the void, nothing is left but the void. The whole of this section deals with Signs or Symbols,—things in the physical world around us, from which we can learn the deepest spiritual truths if we earnestly apply ourselves to them.

3983. Mustaqarr may mean: (1) a limit of time, a period determined, as m vi, 67, or (2) a place of sets or quiescence; or (3) a dwelling place, as in it. 36. I think the first meaning is best applicable here; but some Commentators take the second meaning. In that case the simile would be that of the sun running a race while he is visible to us, and taking a rest during the might to prepare himself to renew his race the following day. His stay with the antipodes appears to us as his period of rest.

3984. The lunar mansions are the 28 divisions of the Zodiac, which are supposed to mark the daily course of the moon in the heavens from the time of the new moon to the time when the moon fades away in her "inter-lunar swoon", an expressive phrase coined by the poet Shelley.

3985 'Urjūn: a raceme of dates or of a date-palm; or the base or lower part of the raceme, When it becomes old, it becomes yellow, dry, and withered, and curves up like a suckle. Hence the comparison with the sickle-like appearance of the new moon. The moon runs through all her phases, increasing and decreasing, until she disappears, and then reappears as a little thin curve,

- 40. It is not permitted
  To the Sun to catch up was
  The Moon, nor can
  The Night outstrip the Day

  Their race (through the Flood)
  In the loaded Ark:
- 42. And We have created
  For them similar (vessels) ****
  On which they ride.
- 43. If it were Our Will, wo We could drown them: Then would there be No helper (to hear Their cry), nor could They be delivered,

﴿ الْمُنْ اللّهُ اللّهِ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ

. 3986. Though the sun and the moon both traverse the belt of the Zodiac, and their motions are different, they never catch up each other. When the sun and the moon are on the same side and on a line with the earth there is a solar eclipse, and when on opposite sides in a line, there is a lunar eclipse, but there is no clash. Their Laws are fixed by God, and form the subject of study in astronomy. Similately Night and Day follow each other, but being opposites cannot coincide, a fit emblem of the opposition of Good and Evil, Truth and Falshood: see also, 3982 above.

3988. Besides the beauty of the Night, with the stars and the planets "swimming" in their rounded courses according to perfect Law, suggesting both symmetry and barmony, there are other Signs touching closely the life of man himself, projected through Time, in the past history of his race and in his own personal experience. The past history of his race takes us to the story of the Flood, which is symbolical of the deliverance of man from the forces of nature. Nosh's Ark is the symbol of that deliverance. But the symbol still remains as a memorial: the Ark was a "Sign to all Peoples": xxix, 13. Man's own personal experience is appealed to in every ship affoat: see next note.

3989. The stately ships sailing through the seas, heavier than air, yet carrying man and his goods safely and smoothly across the waters, are another Sign for man. Ships are not mentioned, but (weesels) like the Ark: they would cover all kinds of sea-craft, but also the modern aircraft, which "awims" through air instead of through water.

. 3990. Were it not that God gives man the intelligence and ingenuity to construct and manage sea-craft and sir-craft, the natural laws of gravity would lead to the destruction of any who attempted to pass through se,or sir. It is the glift (mercy) of God that saves him.

1991 Cf. xvi. 8). God has given mao all these winderful things in nature and utilities produced by the skill and intelligence which God this given to man. Had it not been for these cufts, man's life wind have been precautions on sea. I hand of in the air. It is only foulf Mercy that saves man from destruction for man's own folioes, and that saving or the enjoyment of these utilities and conveniences he should not consider as eternal; they are only given for a time, in this life of probation.

392). Man should consider and beware of the consequences of his past and guard against the consequences in his future. The present is only a fleeting moment passed between the past and the future, and gone even while it is being mentioned or thought about. Man should review his whole life and prepare for the Hereafter. If he does so, God is Mercifal: He will forgive, and give strength for a better and higher life in the future. But this kind of teaching does not suit those steeped in this coherental life. They are bored, and turn away from it, to their own loss.

3933. The Signs of God are many in His great world,—in nature, in the heart of man, and in the Revelation sent through His aposites. They turn away from all of them, as a man who has ruined his eyesight turns away from the light.

3994. To selfish men, the good may make an appeal, and say: "Look! God has given you wealth, or influence, or knowledge, or talent. Why not spend some of it in charity, i.e., for the good of your fellow-creatures?" But the selfish only think of themselves and laugh such teaching to scorn.

3993. They are too full of themselves to have a corner in their hearts for others. "If," they say, "God gave them nothing, why should we?" There is arrogance in thinking that they are favoured because of their ments, and blasphemy in taying the blame of other people's metoritines on God. They further try to turn the others on the Believers by perending that the Believers are entirely on a wrong track. They forget that all men are on probation and trial: they hold their gifts on trus; those apparently less favoured, in that they have fewer of this world's goods, may be really more fortunate, because they are learning patience, self-reliance, and the true value of things ephemeral which is apt to be very much exaggerated in men's eyes.

SECTION 4.

51. Me trumpet shall be ***
Sounded, when behold!
From the sepulchres (men)
Will rush forth
To their Lord!

3996 In addition to the arrogance and blasphemy referred to in the last note, they not only refuse Faith, but they taunt the men of Faith as if the men of Faith were dealing in falsehood: "If there is a Herseffer, tell us when it will be !" The answer is "It will come sooner than you expect; you will yet be disputing about things of Faith and neglecting your opportunities in Life, when the Hour will sound, and you will have no time even to make your dispositions in this life; you will be cut off from everyone whom you thought to be near and dear to you, or able to help you.

3997. Traditionally, the angel who will sound the Trumpet is Israfill, but the name does not occur in the Qur-an. The Trumpet is mentioned in many places: e.g., vi. 73; [xxvii]. 18, etc.

S. XXXVI. 52-55.1

52. They will say: "Ah!
Woe unto us! Who
Hath raised us up
From our beds of repose?"
(A voice will say:)
"This is what (God)
Most Gracious had promised,
And true was the word
Of the apostles!"

- 53. It will be no more Than a single Blast, were When lo! they will all Be brought up before Us!
- 54. Then, on that Day,
  Not a soul will be
  Wronged in the least,***
  And ye shall but
  Be repaid the meeds
  Of your past Deeds.
- 55. We errly the Companions 6001 Of the Garden shall That Day have joy In all that they do;

المَّالُ مَعْدَالُ الْمُعْلَدُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْدَالُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْدَالُهُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْدَالُهُ اللَّهُ الْمُعْدَالُهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللْمُعْلِي اللْمُعَالِمُ اللْمُعَالِمُ الْمُعِلِي اللْمُعَالِمُ اللْمُعِلِيَّةُ اللْمُعِلِّ اللْمُعِلِي اللْمُعِلِّ اللْمُعِلِي الْمُعْلِي

3998. The dead will rise as in a stupor, and they will be confused in the new conditions! They will gradually regain their memory and their personality. They will be reminded that God in His grace and mercy had already announced the Hereafter in their probationary lives, and the word of God's aposties, which then seemed so strange and remote, was true and was now being fulfilled!

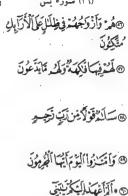

3999. Thus and Space, as we know them here, will be no more. The whole gathering will be as in the twinkling of an eye. Cf. xxxvi. 49 above.

4600. The Judgment will be on the highest standard of Justice and Grace. Not the least merit will go unrewarded, though the reward will be for the righteous far more than their deserts. No penalty will be exacted but that which the doer himself by his part deeds brought on himself. Cf. Zzvili. 84.

3-60. We now have the symbolism for the indescribable Bliss of the Hereafter, in the four verses So. Notice the subtle gradation in the description. First, in this verse, we have the nature of the miss en solve and the nature of the joy therein. It will be a Garden, i.e., everything agreeable to see and hear and feel and taste and smell; our bodily senses will have been transformed, but we can imagine something corresponding to them in our spiritual being: elliphtfully green lawns and meadows, trees and shubs; the murmur of streams and the songs of birds: the delicate texture of flowers and leaves and the shapes of beauty in clouds and mist; the flavours of fruits; and the perfumes of flowers and scents. The joy in the Garden will be an active joy, without fatigue: whatever we do in it, every employment is which we engage there, will be a source of joy without alloy.

- 56. They and their associates on Will be in groves Of (cool) shade, reclining On Thrones (of dignity);
- 57. (Every) fruit (enjoyment) will be there for them; They shall have whatever They call for;
- 58. "Peace!"—a Word 6004
  (Of salutation) from a Lord
  Most Merciful!
- 59. "And O ye in sin! "
  Get ye apart this Day!
- 60. "Did I not enjoin 4006 On you, O ye children

4002. Secondly, the joy or happiness is figured to be, not solitary, but shared;—shared by associates like those we imagine in repiritual Love or Marriage; in whose fair faces "some ray divine reflected shines" (Jamy; whose society is enjoyed in homes of happiness, situated in soothing shade, and furnished with thrones of dignity and peace.

4003. Thirdly, besides any external conditions of Bliss, the Bliss in the Hereafter has an inner quality, expressed by the word fakindsum. The root fakinds means 'to rejoice greatly,' 'to be full of meriment.' The ordinary meaning of 'fruit attached to fakinds is derived from the idea, that the flavour of choice, ripe fruit, delights the heart of man, Just as akala (to eat) is used for 'enjoyment', vo. 69, n. 76 and xiii. 35, n. 1854, so fakinds, 'fruit', stands here for that specially choice enjoyment, which goes with a fastidious and well-cultivated taste. In other words, it suggests that highest kind of joy which depends upon the inner faculty rather than any outward circumstance. This is further emphasised by the second clause, 'they shall have whatever they call for'. Again using the language of this life, the musiciant's have will be full of music: the mathematician's will be full of mathematical symmetry and perfection; the artist's will be full of beauty of form, and so on.

4004. Fourthly, we reach the highest grade of bliss, the mystic salutation "Peace!".from God Most Merciful. Cf. x. 10. That Word sums up the attainment of the final Goal. For it explains the nature of the Most High;—He is not only a Lord and Cherisher, but a Lord Whose supreme glory is Mercy, Peace, and Harmony!

4005. Notice how this finely balanced passage, after reaching the summit of sublimity in describing the state-of the Blessed, in the word Salām, gradually takes us down to contemplate the state of the Sinners in a graduated descent.

In the first pisco, it refers to their negative state, their state-of isolation. From this Day of Judgment, they will no longer have the chance of being with the Biessed and perhaps of profitting spiritually by that proximity. The first feature of the Day of Judgment is that it is a Day of Separation—of sorting out. Each soul now finds its own true level, as the period of probation is over.

4006. Secondly, there is a gentle reproach to the wrong-doers, more in sorrow than in anger. They are addressed as "children of Adam", to emphasise two facts, (1) that they have disgraced their ancestry, for Adam after his-fall repented and was forgiven, and the hish Destiny of mankind has been the prize open to all his descendants, and (2) that, God Most Merciful has throughout the ages continued to warm mankind against the snares laid by Satan, the avowed enemy of man, and that God's Grace was ever on the watch to help all to freedom from those snares,

(۳۹) سورة يسي

Of Adam, that ye Should not worship Satan; For that he was to you An enemy avowed?—

61. "And that ye should ""
Worship Me, (for that) this Was the Straight Way?

62. "But he did lead astray
A great multitude of you.
Did ye not, then, understand?

63. "This is the Hell took Of which ye were (Repeatedly) warned!

64. "Embrace ye the (Fire) **000 This Day, for that ye (Persistently) rejected (Truth)."

65. Mehat Day shall We set A seal on their mouths. wil But their hands will speak To Us, and their feet Bear witness, to all That they did. ادَّمُرَّانُ لاَنَعَبُدُواْ اَلشَّيُطَنَّ اِنَّهُ نَكَ دُعَدُوْشِينٌ ۞ وَأَنِاعُهُدُونِيَّ هَلَاصِرُطُّ سُسَيَقٍ ۞ وَلَقَدَّ آصَنَلَ بِكُرْجِولَاكَتِينِرُّا أَفَامَ ۞ وَلَقَدَّ آصَنَلَ بِكُرْجِولَاكَتِينِرُّا أَفَامَ ۞ وَلَوْاتَتَعُولُونَ ۞ وَلَوْاتَتَعُولُونَ ۞ وَلَوْاتَتَعُولُونَ

®أصْلَوْهَا ٱلْيَوْمَ بِيَاكُنْتُهُ تَكُفُرُونَ

۞ٵؽۊؘۯڬٞۼؙؽؙٷٙڵٙڷٷٚؠڡۑۮۊؿڞڲڷٵ ؙٙؿڔۑڣڗۯؿؙۜڂؠڎٲۯڿؙڶۿ؞ؽٵػٲٷٛٳڮڂۣٮڋۊڽ

4008. Fourthly, it is pointed out that they were given Understanding ('aql), so that by their own faculties they could have judged their own best interests, and yet they betrayed or misused those faculties, and dehberately threw away their chances! And not only a few, but so many! They 'went gregariously to ruin: in spite of the individual care which their Lord and Cherisher bestowed on them!

4009. Fifthly, the naked fact is now placed before them,—the Hell,—the state of damnation, which they could so easily have avoided!

4010. As they deliberately and persistently rejected all teaching, guidance, and warnings, they are now told to experience the Fire of Punishment, for it is but the consequence of their own acts.

4011. The ungodly will now be dumbfounded. They will be unable to speak or offer any defence. (The consequences of all acts, which follow according to God's Law, are, in Quranci language, attributed to God). But their silence will not matter. Their own hands and feet will speak against them. "Hands and feet" in this connection are symbolical of all the instruments for action which they were given in this life, including their faculties and opportunities. The same extended meaning is to be understood for "eyes" in the following verse. Ct. also xii. 20.21, where eyes, ears, and skins are all mentioned as bearing witness against such as misused them.

٣٦) سورة يس

66. If it had been Our Will, we we could surely have Blotted out their eyes; Then should they have Run about groping for the Path, But how could they have seen?

67. And if it had been
Our Will, We could
Have transformed them
(To remain) in their places; ***
Then should they have been Unable to move about,
Nor could they have returned
(After error).

SECTION 5.

68. If We grant long life
To any, We cause him
To be reversed in nature: NII
Will they not then understand?

69. The have not instructed The (Prophet) in Poetry, and Nor is it meet for him:

This is no less than

ؠڞ۫ۼڵٷڹۜ ۞ۊػٵۼڵۜۺؙڎؙٲڶۺ۫ڠڕٙڲٵؠؙڹؙڹڿڵڋؙؙۄڶۣۿٷٷ؆

- 4012. "If it had been Our Will" : Let, it such had been the Will and Plan of God. If God had not intended, to give man his hinted free will, or power of choice, the case would have been different; there would have been in moral responsibility which could have been enforced. They could have had no sight or intelligence, and they could not have been blamed for not seeing or understanding. But such is not the case.
- 4013. If God's Plan had been to grant no limited freedom of choice or will to min. He could have created them quite different or could have transformed them into stationary creatures, either in physical form es in the case of trees, or in moral or spiritual qualities, where there was no possibility either of progress or determation. Man would then have been unable to reach the heights of grandeur which are now open to buin, or if he goes wrong, to return through the duto of repentance and mercy, and still pursue his path of ascent. But it was God's Plan to give man all these privileges, and man must shoulder all the responsibilities that go with them.
- 4014. This connects on with the last, verse. Everything is possible with God. If you doubt how man can be transformed from this present nature, contemplate the transformations he already undergoes in his present nature at different ages. As a child his powers of mind and body are still undeveloped. As he grows, they grow, and certain moral qualities, such as courage, daring, the will to conquer, unfold themselves. In extreme old age these are again obscured, and a second childhood supervenes. The back of the man who walked proudly straight and erect is now bent. If these transformations take place even in his present nature and constitution, how much caster was it for God to cast him in an immobile mould? But God granted him instead the high possibilities and responsibilities referred to in the last note.
- 4015, Cf. xxv. 224 and n. 3237. Here "Poetry" is used as connoting fairly tales, imaginary descriptions, things futile, false, or obscure, such as decadent l set: is, whereas the Quran is a practical guide, true and clear.

S. xxxvi. 69-74.1

A Message and a Our-an Making things clear:

- 70. That it may give admonition To any (who are) alive. 4016 And that the charge 4017 May be proved against those Who reject (Truth).
- 71. See they not that it is We Who have created For them-among the things Which our hands have fashioned-Cattle, which are under 4018 Their dominion ?-
- 72. And that We have Subjected them to their (use)? Of them some do carry them And some they eat:
- 73. And they have (other) profits 1019 From them (besides), and they Get (milk) to drink. Will they not then Be grateful? 4030
- 74. Yet they take (for worship) Gods other than God.

4016 "Alive", both in English and Arabic, means 30t only "having physical life", but having all the active qualities which we associate with life. In religious language, those who are not responsive to the realities of the spiritual world are no better than those who are dead. The Message of God penetrates the hearts of those who are alive in the spiritual sense.

4017. Cf. xxviii. 63. If people reject Truth and Faith after they have been admonished and warned, the charge against them, of wilful rebellion, is proved. They cannot then plead either ignorance or madvertence.

4018. If they are blind to other Signs of God, they can at least see the simple homely things of life in which they receive so many benefits from God's mercy. How is it that wild animals can be domesticated, and in domestication can be so useful to man? Man can use them for riding or for draught; he can use their flesh for food and drink their milk; he can use their hair or wool. Cf. xvi. 66, 80 and xxiii, 21-22,

4019. Such as skins for leather, furs for warmth, sheeo's wool or camel's hair for blankets or textiles, musk for perfume, and so on.

4020. The whole argument turns on this. 'Our teaching is for your own benefit. We confer all these blessings on you, and yet ye turn away from the Giver of all, and run after your own vain imaginations t

<sup>4021.</sup> There is some difference of opinion among Commentators as to the exact meaning to be attached to this clause. As I understand it, the meaning seems to be this. Man is apt to forget or turn away from the true God, the source of all the good which he enjoys, and to go after imaginary powers in the shape of gods, heroes, men, or abstract things like Science or Nature or Philosophy, or superstitious things like hagie, or Good-Fortune or Ill-Fortune, or embodiments of his own selfish desires. He thinks that they might help him in this Life or in the Hereafter (if he believes in a Hereafter). But they cannot thelp him: on the contrary all things that are false will be brought up and condemned before God's Judgment-seat, and the worshippers of the Falsehoods will also be treated as a troop favouring the Falsehoods and therefore worthy of condemnation. The Falsehoods when the false has the property of the false has the contrary to their condemnation.

<sup>4022.</sup> If men are 50 foolish as to reject God, let not the men of God greeve over it. They should do their duty, and leave the rest to God. God knows all the open and secret motives that sway the wicked and His Plan must ultimately prevail, however much appearances may be against it at any given time.

<sup>4024.</sup> That is, man thinks that God is like His creaturea, who at best have very limited powers, or man draws side parallels like that mentioned at the end of this verse. Who can give life to dry bones, and decomposed ones at that? Man certainly cannot, and no power in nature can do that. But why compare the powers and capacities of God's creatures with the powers and capacities of the Creator? The first creation—out of nothing—is far more difficult for \(\text{ to imagine than a second or subsequent process for which there is already a basis. And God mas \(\text{ were over all things}\).

4025. God's creative artistry is evident in every phase of nature, and it works every minute or second. The more man understands himself and the things within his reach, the more he realises this. How foolish, then, for any one to set imaginary limits to God's powers? There are more ways of creation than are dream for in man's imagination!

4026. Even older and more primitive than the method of striking fire against steel and finit is the method of using twigs of trees for the purpose. In the E. B. 14th edition, iz. 262, will be found a picture of British Guiana boys making a fire by totating a stick in a round hole in a piece of wood lying on the ground. The Arab method was to use a wooden instrument called the Zinād. It consisted of two pieces to be rubbed together. The upper one was called the Afar or Zand, and the lower the Markh. The markh is a twig from a kind of spreading tree, the Cyanachum visiniale, of which the branches are bare, without leaves or thorns. When they are tangled together, and a wind blows, they get ignited and strike fire (Lane's Arabic Lexicon). In modern Arabic Zand is by analogy applied to the first piece used for striking fire with steel.

4027. Cf. laxis. 27. Which is the more difficult to create,—man, or the heavens and the earth, with all creatures? God created the heavens and the earth, with all creatures, and Ha can create worlds and worlds like these in infinity. To him it is a small matter to raise you up for the Hereafter.

4028. And His creation is not dependent on time, or instruments or means, or any conditions whatsoever. Existence waits on His Will, or Plan, or Intention. The moment He wills a thing, it becomes His Word or Command, and the thing forthwith comes into existence. Cf. vi. 117; xvi. 40, n. 2066; etc.

4029. All things were created by God; are maintained by Him; and will go back to Him. But the point of special interest to man is that man will also be brought back to God and is answerable. To Him, and to Him alone. This Message is the core of Revelation; it explains the meaning of the Hereafter; and it fifty closes a Sûra specially connected with the name (Ya-Sia) of the Holy Prophet.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXVII (Saffat)

As explained in the Introduction to S. xxxiv, this is the fourth of a series of Sūtas in which the mysteries of the spiritual world are manifested in different ways, tending to the defeat and final extirpation of Evil. The defeat of Evil is throughout connected with Revelation, and here the ranged fight is illustrated by a reference to the angels in heaven and to the earlier Prophets in our earthly history, from Noah to Jonah. In chronology this Sūra belongs to the early middle Meccan period.

Summary.—Through all the mysteries of the heavens and the earth, there is a sorting out of the evil against the good: their final destinations contrasted (xxxvii. 1.74, and C. 197).

Peace and victory came to Noah, Abraham, Moses and Aaron, Ilyas and Lūt, in their conflict with Evil (xxxvii, 75-138, and C. 198).

So was it with Jonah when he glorified God. But men will ascribe to God what is unworthy of Him: God's apostles strive for His glory, and shall be victorious (xxxvii. 139-182, and C. 199).

C. 197.—God is One, the Source and Centre (xxxvii.1.74.) Of all affairs, and we must work In discipline, harmony, and unity To put down Evil. The Hereafter Is sure, when personal responsibility Will be enforced. For the true And sincere servants of God, There will be the highest Bliss, Unmixed and everlasting:

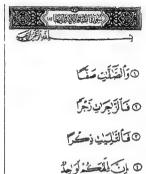

For those who dely God's Law There will'be the deepest enduring Misery. Which will men choose?

4020. At a later stage, we shall study the general meaning of the adjurations in the Quran interfaced by the particle wa. See App. xiv. p. 1786. Here we may note that the last Stra (Y&Sta) practically legan with the adjuration "by the Quran, full of wishoom "fremphasising the fact that Revelation was the evidence by which we could learn the highest wisdom of the spiritual world. Here our attration is called in three verses or clauses, to three definite attitudes which illustrate the triumph of Good and the frustration of Keil. See the noise following.

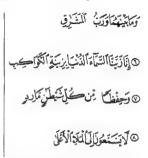

401. Two questions arise: (1) are the doing of the three diffings holded in verses 1-3 the same persons, whise actions or qualities are differently described. For whe'they three distinct sets of persons? (2) in either case, who are they? As to (3) the index authoritative, view is that the three clauses describe the same set of persons in different appects. As to (3) some take them to refet to angels, and others understand by them the good inner, the men of God, who strive and range themselves it God's service. The words are perfectly general, and I interpret them to refet to both classes. The femiliant form is grammatically used in Arbitic vidious for the undefinite plural. In xxxvii. 165 blow, the word $dd as is, used in the definite plural, and seems to be spoken by these beings, angels or men of God or both, according to how we interpret this verse.

4032. The three acts in verses 1-3 are consecutive, as shown by the particle fa. I understand them to mem that angels and good men (1) are ever ready to range themselves in ranks in the service of Gd and work in perfect discipline and accord at all times; (2) that they check and frustrate evil wherever they find it and they are strengthened in doing so by their discipline and their ranging themselves in ranks; and (3) that this service furthers the Kingdom of God and proclaims Hi Message and His glory to all creation,

4033. That divine Message is summed up in the gospel of Divine Unity, on which the greatest emphasis is kid; "verily, verily your God is One". It is a fact intimately connected with our own life and destay. "Your Lord is one Who cares for you and cherishes you; you are dear to Him And He is One: it is only He that you have to look to, the source of all gondness, love, and power. You are notthe sport of many contending forces or blind channes. There is complete harmony and unity inheaven and you have to put yourselves into unison with it—by discipline in ranks, by unity of plan and purpose in repelling evil, and by concerted action in promoting the Kingdom, of God. Here it he mystery of the manifold variety of creation converging into the absolute Unity of 4034. That Unity comprehends everything that exists—'the heavens and the earth, and all between them'. For He is their Lord. He is the Lord of the Jushārīq-of-every post at the rising of the sun. As the Commentators tell us, there are in the solar year only two equinocial days, when the sun rises due east: no every other day the sun rises at a shifting point either north or south of due east. In vil. 137 we have mashārīq al arthi tea magārībahā, where the plural of the words for East and West is negligible, as the conjunction of the two embraces all points. The same may be said of Ixx. 40, where God is called "Lord of all points in the East and the West". If we are speaking of longitudes, they may embrace all latitudes. In iv, 17 God is called "Lord of the sus, as the rising of the two wests," referring to the extreme points in either case. A curstyr reader may ask, why is only the East referred to here? The reply is that it is not so much the East as the rising of the sun, on which stress is laid. The Arabic mashing or mashārīq is close enough to the root-word sharaqa, to suggest, not so much the East as the rising of the sun, especially when the plural form is used. The glorious sun rises from different points, as seen by us, but it illuminates the whole heaven and earth. It is an emblem of Unity. We can see things from different points of view, but the centre of all things is God, and He is One.

4037. Verses 7-11 seem to refer to shooting stars. Cf. xv. 17-18, and notes 1951-3. The heavens typify not only beauty but power. The Good in God's world is guarded and protected against every assault of Evil. The Evil is not part of the heavenly system: it is a thing in utilaway, merely a self-willed rebellion,—"cast away on every side, repulsed under a perpetual penaly" (verses 8-9).

4038. We can form a mental picture of the Court of the Most High, in the highest heaven, conording to the highest idea we can form of goodness, beauty, purity, and grandev. The Exasted Assembly of angels is given some knowledge of the Plan and Will of God. Dit is altogether foreign to such an atmosphere, but is actuated by feelings of jealousy and curjaity. It tries to approach by stealth and overhear something from the august Assembly. It is repusted and pursued by a flaming fire, of which we can form some idea in our physical world by the serving trait of a shooting star.

40.1 Although the Hereafter, and the spiritual life of which it is a corollary, are the most solid facts in our intelligent existence, materialists deny them. They cannot believe that they could have any existence beyond the grave—still less their ancestors who died ages and ages ago, how could they ever come to life again?

4014. They are assured that the fourse life is a solid fact, but that it will be in very different conditions from those they know now. All their present arrogance will have been humbled in the dist. There will be another plane, in which souls will have a speriences outre different from those in their probationary life here. In that life the virtues they lacked will court, and the arrogance they hogged will be brought low.

4048. That is, if their wives were also wrong-doers. They are separately mentioned, because the Arabic phrase for "wrong-doers" is of the masculine gender. All the associates in wrong-doing will be marshalled together. There will be personal responsibility: neither husband nor wife can lay the blame on the other,

P 4049. The scene here is after judgment. As, in an earthly tribunal, the prisoner or his advocate is asked why sentence should not be pronounced upon him, so here those who are proved to have been guilty of wrong are allowed to consider if anything or any one can help them. Then comes the exposure of the misleaders.

4050. Obviously no one can stand and intercede, for it is a question of personal responsibility for each soul. No one can help another.

4051. All the previous arrogance of this life will be gone, but they will face each other, and those who were given a false lead, as in the story of Pharaoh (Cf, xx, 79), will question their misleaders as in the following verses.

4052. This is the mutual recrimination of the sinners—those who sinned, against those whose installation or evil example led them into sin. The misicaders is the life here below often used Their power and influence to spread eyil. The "right hand is the hand of power and authority. Instead of using it for righteous purposes, they used it for evil, – selfishly for their own advantage, and mischievously for the degradation of others.

4033. But the fact that others unslead, or that their avil example is before us, does not justify us in falling from right conduct. Faith should save us from the fall. But if whe have ourselves no Paith—in righteousness, or a future life, or the reality of God's Law, how can we blame others? The misleaders can well say, "You will be judged according to your misdeeds!" The responsability is personal, and cannot be shifted on to others. The others may get a double punishment,—for their own evil, and for misleading their weaker brethren. But the weaker bethren cannot go fee form responsibility for their own deeds, for evil means a personal treblion against God, if we believe in a personal food. Evil has no authority over us, except in so far as we deliberately 4054. God's decree of justice requires that every soul should taste the consequences of its own sins, and that decree must be fulfilled. No excuses can serve to sonly God's mercy that can save.

4055. Further, the misleaders can well urge against those who reproach them for misleading them: "How could you expect anything better from us? You were already warned by God's Message that we were astray."

4056 Selfish arrogance was the seed of sin and rebellion; ii, 34 (of Satan): xxviii, 39 (of Pharach); etc. It is that kind of arrogance which prevents man from mending his life and conduct. When he speaks of ancestral ways, or public opinion, or national honour, he is usually thinking of himself or of a small clique which thrives on injustice. The recognition of the true God, the one God, as the only standard of life and conduct, the only Reality, cuts out Self, and it therefore disagreeable to Sin. If false gods are imagined, who themstyes would have weaknesses that fit in with sin, they give countenance to evils, and it becomes difficult to give them up, unless God's grace comes to our assistance.

4058. The message of Islam, so far from being "mad" or in any way peculiar, is eminently conformable to reason and the true facts of nature as created by God. It is the Truth in the purest sense of the term, and confirms the Message of all true Messengers that ever lived.

<sup>4063.</sup> The passing round of the social cup, as in the case of other pleasures, is without any of the drawbacks and evil accompaniments of the pleasures of this world, which are taken as types, In drink there is no intoxication: in fruit there is no satiety, Cf. Dante: "the bread of Angels upon which One liveth here and grows not sated by it." (Paludiso, Canto II., Longfellow's translation.)

4070 After he realises the great danger from which he narrowly escaped, his yoy is so great that he can hardly believe it! Is the danger altogether past now? Are the portals of death closed for ever? Is he sade now from the temptations which will bring him to ruin and punishment?

407]. The answer is: Yes. "Beyond the flight of Time, Beyond the realm of Death. There surely is some blassed clime, Where Life is not a breath!" In the words of Longfellow this was an aspiration on this earth. In the Hereafter it is a realisation!

Some interpret verses 60-52 as a continuation of the speech of the man in heaven. The meaning would in that case be the same.

4073. This dreadful bitter Tree of Hell is truly a trial to the wrong-doers. (1) It grows at the bottom of Hell; (2) even its fruit-stalks, which should have been tender, are like the heads of devils: (3) its produce is eaten voraciously; (4) on top of it is a boiling mixture to cut up their entrails (see next note); and (5)-every time they complete this round of orgies they return to the same game. A truly lurid picture, but more lurid in reality are the stages in spiritual Evil. (1) it takes its rise in the lowest depths of corrupted human nature; (2) its (enderest affections are degraded to envy and hate; (3) the appetite for Evil grows with what it feeds on; (4) its "cuters" serve but to aggravate the disease; and (5) the chain of evil is unending; one round is followed by another in interminable succession.

4074, The parable of fruits and drinks in the contrasted fortunes of the Good and the Evil is further elaborated in xivii. 15, where the boiling water given to the evil ones cuts up their entrails.

4075. When they eat of the raqqu's in the lowest depths of hell, they are apparently brought up to drink of the mixture as a further punishment, after which they go back to repeat the round,

C. 198.—The Prophets of God formed a series
(zzzvii. 75-136.) That worked in God's service to instruct
Their fellow-men. In case of distress
God helped and delivered them. Men did flout
And persecute them, but they carried out
Their mission with constancy; and God's Purpose
Always won, to the destruction of Evil.
So was it in the story of Noah and the Flood,
Of Abraham the True, of Isma'il
Ready for self-sacrifice, of Isaac

<sup>4076.</sup> A grim reproach. 'You found your fathers doing wrong; and you must rush headlong in their footsteps to perdition!'

<sup>4077.</sup> It is human to err. The error is forgiven if there is repentance and amendment. The posteries that God in His mercy at all times in history sent apostles and teachers to give His Message, and men deliberately rejected that Message.

<sup>4078</sup> It is on the reception or rejection of God's teachings and guidance that judgment will come. In this world itself, see what is the teaching of history. Unrighteousness and wrong doing never prosper in the long run.

<sup>4079.</sup> But there is always a band of sincere and devoted men who serve God, and the highest spiritual life is open to them,

Note that this verse occurs at xxxvii. 40 above, where the argument of the difference between the fates of the righteous and the unrighteous was begun. Here it is rounded off with the same phrase, and now we proceed to take libustrations from the early Prophets.

The righteous, of Moses and Aaron, of Elias And Lot: all men of Faith, who receive The blessings of posterity and Peace And Salutation from God Most Gracious.

  - 4082. Noah's posterity survived the Flood in the Ark, while the rest perished.
- 4083. His name is remembered for ever, commencing a new era in religious history. Note that the words in verses 78-81, with slight modifications, form a sort of refrain to the following paragraphs about Abraham, Moses, and Elias, but not about Lot and Jonah. Lot was a nephew of Abnaham, and may be supposed to belong to the story of Abraham. Jonah's career nearly ended in a tragedy for himself, and his people got a further lease of power "for a time" (xxxvii. 148). And both Lot and Jonah belong to a limited local tradition.
- 4094. The story of the Flood is found in some form or other among all nations, and not only neutral to the follow the Mosaic tradition. In Greek tradition the here of the Flood is neutralion, with his wife Pyrtha in Indian tradition (Shaispatha Brākmara and Makābārata) it is the aage Manū and the Fish. The Chinese tradition of a great Flood is recorded in Shā-King, Among American Indians the tradition was common to imany tribes.

4085. The main story will be found in xxi 51.73; but the episode about his readiness and that of his onto submit to the most extreme form of self-sacrifice under trial (in verses 101-107 below) is told here for the first time, as this Sora deals with the theme. "Not my will, but Thine be done!" In "followed his way", the pronoun "his" refers to Noah, "he", of verse 81 above.

4066. A sound heart: quite salter is heart that is pure, and unaffected by the diseases that affiled others. As the heart in Arabic is taken to be not only the seat of feelings and affections, but also of intelligence and resulting action, it implies the whole character. Cf. Abraham's title of Hani (the True): ii, 135 and n. 134. Cf. also xxvi, 89: "only he will prosper who brings to God a sound heart."

408? False worship—worship of idols or stars or symbols, or Mammon or Self—is due eather to false and degrading conceptions of God, or to a tort of make-believe, where practice is inconsistent with knowledge or ignores the inner promptings of Conscience. <sup>4993.</sup> The argument of Abraham was so sound that it could not be met by argument. In such cases Evil resorts to violence, or secret plotting. Here there was both violence and secret plotting. The violence consisted in throwing him into a blazing Furnace. But by the mercy of God the free did not harm him (axi. 69), and so they resorted to plotting. But the plotting, as the next verse (xxxvi), 489, shows, was a bonnerang that recoiled on their own heads.

4095. This was the Hijrat of Abraham. He left his people and his land, because the Truth was dearer to him than the ancestral falsehoods of his people. He trusted himself to God, and under God's guidance he laid the foundations of great peoples. See n. 2725 to xxi. 69.

4096. This was in the fertile land of Syria and Palestine. The boy thus born was, according to Muslim tradition, (which however is not unanimous on this point), the first-horn son of Abraham, of Ismail. The name itself is from the root Samu, to hear, because God had heard Abraham's age when Ismail was born was 86 (Gen. zvi. 16).

4097. The boy's character was to be Hellm, which I have translated "ready to suffer and forbear". This title is also applied to Abraham (in ix. 114 and xi. 75). It refers to the patient way in which both father and son cheerfully offered to suffer any self-sacrifice in order to obey the Cammand of God. See next verse.

4099. At what stage in Abraham's history did this occur? See n. 2725 to xxi 69. It was obviously after his arrival in the land of Cannan and after Isma't had grown up to years of discretion. Was it before or after the building of the Ka'ba (ii. 127)? There are no data on which this question can be answered. But we may suppose it was betwee this event, and that event may itspif have been commer oractive.

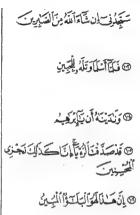

Thou will find me, If God so wills one Practising Patience and Constancy!"

106. For this was obviously

4100 Note that the sacrifice was demanded of buth Abraham and Isma'il It was a trial of the will of the falther and the son. By way of trial the father had the command conveyed to him in a vision. To make sure that it was not an ulle dream, and, if it was a real order, to make sure that his son rousemed, he consulted the son. The son readily consented, and offered to stand true to the promose if his self-issertifier was really required. The whole thing is symbolical. God does not require the flesh and blood of animals (xxxi. 37), much less of human brings. But he does require the giving of our whole being to God, the symbol of which is that we should give up something you dear to us, if Duty requires that sacrifice.

410). Our version may be compared with the Jewish-Christian version of the present Old Testament. The Jewish tradition, in order to glorily the younger branch of the family, descended from Isaac, ancestor of the Jews, as against the elder branch descended from Ismail, lancestor of the Arabs, refers this sacrifice to Isaac (Gen. xxii.). 18. Now Isaac was burn when Abraham was 100 years old (Gen. xxii.) while Ismail'i was born to Abraham was born to Abraham was been do Abraham; at no time was born to Abraham was herefore 14 years older than Isaac. During his his-114 years Ismail'i was the oddy son of Abraham; at no time was Isaac the oddy son of Abraham. Yet, in speaking of the sacrifice, the Old Testament says (Gen. xxii. 2): "And He said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah: and offer him there for a burnt offering..." This ship shows at any rate which was the older version, and how it was overland, like the present Jewish records, in the interests of a tribal religion. The "land of Moriah" is not clear: it was three days Journey from Abraham's place (Gen. xxii. 4). There is less warrant for dentifying it with the hill of Moriah on which Jerusalem was afterwards built than with the hill of Marwa which is identified with the Arab tradition about Ismail.

4102. In the Biblical version Isaac's consent is not taken; in fact Isaac asks, 'where is the lamb for sacrince?' and is told that 'God would provide it'. It is a complete human sacrince like those to Moloch. In our version it is as insuch a sacrifice by the will of Isma'il as by that of Abwham. And in any case it is symbolic; "this was obviously a trial"; "thou hast already fulfilled thy vision"; etc.

4106, So long as the Children of Israel upheld the righteous banner of God, they enjoyed God s bissing, and their history is a portion of sacred history. When they fell from grace, they did not steps God's Plant: they injured their own souls.

<sup>4103.</sup> The adjective qualifying "sacrifice" here, 'essim, (great, momentous) may be understood both in a literal and a figurative sense. In a literal sense it implies that a fine sheep or ram was substituted symbolically. The figurative sense is even more important. It was indeed a great and momentous occasion, when two men, with concerted will, "ranged themselves in the ranks" of those to whom self-bacerise in the service of God was the supreme thing in life. This was a type of the service which Innam flusain performed, many ages later, in 60 A.H. as I have explained in a separate pumphlet. But note that the ransom, is, the commutation of sacrifice, was made not by the men, but by God. God wants our will and devotion, not necessarily our lives in a physical sense. He will find means, if we offer ourselves, to use us not for our destruction, but for our further advancement. In this sense, said Jesus, "the bat loseth his life for my sake shall find it." 4112. See n. 903 to vi. 85. Elias is the same as Elijah, whose story will be found in the Old Testament in 1 Kinga xvii:xix, and 2 Kinga i-li. Elijah lived in the reign of Ahab (B. 996 874) and Anaziah (B.C. 874-872), kinga oil the (northern), kingdom oil fisated or Samaria. He was a prophet of the desert, like John the Baptist,—vinlike our holy Prophet, who took part in, controlled, and guided lithe affairs of his people. Both Ahab and Azertah were prone to lapse into the worship of Baal, the surfigod worshipped in Syria. That worship also included the worship of nature-powers and procreative powers, as in the Indian worship of the Lingam, and led to many abuses. King Ahab had married a princess of Sidon, Jezebel, a wicked woman who led her husband to forsake God and dopt Baal-worship. Elijah denounced all Ahab sis nas a well as the sins of Ahaziah and had to file for his life. Eventually, according to the Old Testament (2 Kings, ii-11) he was taken up in a whitewing to heaven in a chargiot of fire after he had left his mantle with Elishs the prophet.

- 4113. For Baal-worship see last note.
- 4114. They personned him and he had to flee for his life. Eventually he disappeared mysteriously; see n. 4112,
  - 4115, See above, xxxvii. 78-81, and n. 4083.
- 4115-A. Ilyāsīs may be an alternative form of Ilyās: Cf. Saināa (xxiii. 20) and Sīnān (xcv. 2). Or it may be the plural of Ilyās, meaning "such people as Ilyās"

C. 199.-So was it also with Jonah; he had (xxxvii. 139-182.) His trials, but God had mercy on him. And his mission was successful, How Can men ascribe to God qualities And relations derogatory to His nature? High is He above all creatures. The ranks of angels and apostles stand firm In His service. Evil is sure to be overcome. So Praise and Glory to God, the Lord Of Honour and Power, and Peace to His apostles!

<sup>4116.</sup> The best illustration of this passage about LB; will be found in vit. 80-84. He was an apostle sent to Sodom and Gomorrah, Cities of the Plain, by the Dead Sea. The inhabitants were given over to abominable crimes, against which he preached. They insulted him and threatened to expel him. But God in His mercy saved him and his family (with one exception, see the following note), and then destroyed the Cities.

<sup>4118,</sup> Cf xv. 76, and n, 1998 The tract where they lay is situated on the highway to Syria where the Arab caravans travelled regularly, "by day and by night". Could not future generations learn wisdom from the destruction of those who did wrong?

SECTION 5.

139. So also was Jonah 4119 Among those sent (by Us).

140. When he ran away
(Like a slave from captivity) 4180
To the ship (fully) laden.

141. He (agreed to) cast lots, 121
And he was condemned:

142. Then the big Fish 4124 Did swallow him, And he had done 4129 Acts worthy of blame.

143, Had it not been That he (repented and) . Glorified God, <sup>(18)</sup>

144. He would certainly have Remained inside the Fish 4180 Till the Day of Resurrection. 4119, For illustrative passages, see xxi. 87-88, n. 2744, and Ixviii. 48-50. Jonah's mission was to the city of Nineveh, then steeped in wickedness. He was rejected and he denounced God's wrath on them, but they repented and obtained God's forgiveness. But Jonah "departed in wrath" (xxi. 87), forgetting that God has Mercy as well as forgiveness. See the notes following. Cf. x. 98, n. 1478.

4120. Jonah ran away from Nineveh like a slave from captivity. He should have stuck to his part and merged his own will in God's Will. He was hasty, and went off to take a ship. As if he could escape from God's Plan!

4121. The ship was fully laden and met foul weather. The sailors, according to their superstition, wanted to find out who was responsible for the ill-luck; a fugitive slave would cause such ill-luck. The lot fell on Jonah, and he was cast off.

$122. The rivers of Mesopotamia have some huge fishes. The word used here is $fat, which may be a fish or perhaps a crocodile. If it were in an open northern sea, it might be a whale. The locality is not mentioned: in the Old Testament he is said to have taken ship in the port of Jopa (now jaffa) in the Mediterranean (Jonah, i, 3), which would be not less than 600 miles from Nineveh. The Tigris river, mentioned by some of our Commentators, is more likely, and it contains some fishes of extraordinary size.

4123, See n. 4120.

5124. "But he cried through the depths of darkness, 'There is no god but Thee: glory to Thee! I was indeed wrong!" (xxi. 87.)

4125. This is just the iddom. This was to be the burial and the grave of Jonah. If he had not repented, he could not have got out of the body of the creature that had swallowed him, until the Day of Resurrection, when all the dead would be raised up.

[S. XXXVII. 145-151.

(٣٧) سورة الصافات

Say, from their own invention.

4126. Cf. xxxvii 89 above. His strange situation might well have caused him to be ill. He wanted fresh air and solitude. He got both in the open plain, and the abundandly shady Gourd Plant or some fruitful tree like it gave him both slade and sustenance. The Gourd is a creeper that can spread over any roof or ruined structure.

4127. The city of Nineveh was a very large city. The Old Testament says: "Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey " (Jonah, iii.3); " wherein are more than six score thousand persons" (Jonah, iv. 11). In other words its circuit was about 45 miles, and its population was over a hundred and twenty thousand inhabitants.

4128. They repented and believed, and Nineveh got a new lease of life. For the dates to which Jonah may be referred, and the vicissitudes of the City's history as the seat of the Assyrian Empire, ser notes 1478-79 to x. 98.

The lessons from Jonah's story are: (1) that no man should take upon himself to judge of God's wiath or God's mercy; (2) that nevertheless God forgives true repentance, whether in a righteous man, or in a wicked city; and (3) that God's Plan will always prevail, and can never be defeated.

4129. We begin a new argument here. The Pagan Arabs called angels daughters of God. They themselves were ashamed of having daughters, and preferred to have sons, to add to their power and dignity. See zvi. 57-59, and n 2082. Yet they invented daughters for God !

147. And We sent him (On a mission) To a hundred thousand ust (Men) or more.

148. And they believed: So We permitted them To enjoy (their life) eles For a while.

149. Dow ask them their opinion: 4199 Is it that thy Lord Has (only) daughters, and they Have sons?-

<sup>4130.</sup> Any attribution to God of ideas derogatory to His Oneness and His supreme height above all creatures is likely to degrade our own conception of God's Universal plan, and is condemned in the strongest terms.

<sup>4132.</sup> The angels are at least pure beings engaged in the service of God. But the Pagan superstitions not only connect them with God as daughters but even connect God by relationship with all kinds of spirits, good or evil! In some mythologies the most evil powers are gods or goddesses as if they belonged to the family of God the Creator and had some semblance of equality with Him! This, too, is requisited in the strongest terms.

If they were fortified against Evil by Faith, Patience, and Constancy, Evil would have no power to hurt them. God would protect them.

169. "We should certainly have Been Servants of God, "151" Sincere (and devoted)!"

<sup>4135.</sup> To round off the argument of the Sūra we go back to the idea with which it began. Those who range themselves in ranks for the united service of God (see above, xxxvi. I and n. 401]—whether angles or men of God—are content to keep their ranks and do whatever service is assigned to them. It is not for them to question God's Plan, because they know that it is good and that it will ultimately triumph. Any seeming delays or defeats do not worry them. Nor do they ever break their ranks

<sup>4136.</sup> There were the sceptics or Unbelievers,—primarily the Pagan Arabs, but in a more extended sense, all who doubt God's providence or revelation.

<sup>4137.</sup> Such men take refuge in ancestral tradition. "If our forefathers had had an inkling of Revelation or miracles, or had worshipped as we are now taught to worship, we should gliddly have accepted. Or if they had had anything of the miracles which other nations of old are said to have received, we could then have accepted." But now stronger and more convincing proofs have come to them in the Our-An in their own longue, and they doubt and relect it.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXVIII (Sad).

For the place of this Sura in the series of six, dealing with some of the mysteries of the spiritual world; see Introduction to S. xxxiv.

This Sûra, both in chronology and subject-matter, is cognate to S.xxxvii., and carries forward the same argument. But here the emphasis is laid on the working of earthly power when combined with spiritual power, and it is pointed out how much more significant (and real) spiritual power is. For this reason the illustrative stories are mainly those of David and Solomon who were kings as well as prophets, and a parallel is suggested with the unfolding public life of our holy Prophet.

Summary.—Worldly and evil men are surprised at the renewal of Truth and Righteousness; but righteousness has more power than worldly strength, as is seen in the story of kings like Dayid, who had both (xxxyiii, 12-26, and C. 200).

So also Solomon loved the Lord more than worldly power, which may be good but may be misused by evil men; so also Job and other men of power and insight, chose the path of final bliss rather than final misery (xxxviii. 27-64, and C 201).

So also in the case of the final Messenger: his Gospel of Unity must triumph over all Jealousy and Arrogance in God's good time (xxxviii. 65-88, and C. 202).

C. 200.—Self-glory and Separatism, these
(REEVILL 1-26.)

Are among the roots of Evil, also Envy
And Suspicion. Not all the combinations
Of Evil can for a moment reverse
God's Purpose or His Justice. David,
Endowed with worldly Power and the Virtues,
Had yet to purge himself of the thought
Of Self-glory, which he did; and thus
He became one of those nearest to God.

Sura XXXVIII.

۞وُعَحُنُ أَازِ جَاءَهُ مُنْذِنَّ

4146, $8d is a letter of the Arabic alphabet. It is used here as an Abbreviated Letter, for which see Appendix I (at the end of $\text{Str} a \text{ii}\). See also the second para, of n, 898 to vii, I for this particular letter. No dopmatism is permissible in trying to interpret Abbreviated Letters. But it is suggested that it may stand for $\text{Gisps} ("\text{Stories}")\), in which the dominant concommant is $p$. For this $\text{Star is} concerned mainly with the stories of David and Solomon as illustrative of the relative positions of spiritual and worldly power. Sale's note: "it may stand for $\text{Solomon}": is a real howler: for in Arabic the letter $\text{Sd does not occur at all in the name of $\text{Solomon}$."

4447. Full of admost/ion: the word sith is far more comprehensive than any single, word or phrase that I can think of in English; it implies (I) remembrance in a spirit of reverence; (2) recital, cleabrating the praises of God; (3) teaching, admonition, warning; (4) Message, Revelation, as in Ab.ius.pikr, "those who possess the Message" (xvi. 43, and n. 2069). In $90f phraseology it implies mystical enlightenment, both the aspiration and the attanment, for in the highest spiritual atmosphere, the two are one. Devotional exercises are also called size, with reference to meaning (2) above.

448. The great root of Evil and I nbelief is Self-glory or Arrogance, as is pointed out in several places with regard to Satan: cf. below, xxxviii, 74-76. This leads to Envy and Separatism, or a desire to start a peculiar doctrine or-sect of one's own, instead of a desire to find common grounds of belief and life, which lead to the Religion of Unity in God. This teaching of Unity was what the Pagans objected to in the holy Propher (verse 5 below).

4149. Teaching, Warning, Signs have been given by God to all nations and at all times, and yet nations have rebelled and gone wrong and suffered destruction. If only later generations could learn that wrong doing results in self-destruction! For the justice of God merely carries out the result of their own choice and actions. At any time during their probation they could repent and obtain mercy, but their "Self-giory and Separatism" stand in the way. Ultimately they do cry for a way of escape, but it is then too late.

They are full of envy and spite against one of themselves who has been chosen by Godic be His Messenger, and they vent their spite by making all sorts of false accusations. - 4151. And what is the offence of the Apostle of Unity? That he has made all their faniastic gods dispepar; that in place of choos he has brought harmon; that in place of conflict he brings peace! It is a wonderful thing, but not un the sarcastic sense in which the Unbeliever's scoff at it!
- 4132. When the message of Islam was being preached in its infancy, and the Preacher and his followers were being persecuted by the Pagans, one of the devices adopted by the Pagan leaders was to get the Prophet's uncle Abil Talib to denounce or renounce his beloved nephew. A conference was held with Abil Talib for this purpose. On its failure the leaders walked away, and began to discredit the great movement by falsely giving out that it was designed against their personal influence, and to throw power into the hands of the Prophet. Hadhrat 'Umar's conversion occurred in the sixth year of the Mission (seventh year before the Hijirath. The circumstances connected with it (see introduction to S. xx) greatly alarmed the Quransh chiefs, who, greedy of autocracy themselves, confused the issue by accusing the righteous Preacher of plotting against their power.
- 4153. 'Whatever may have been the case in the past', they said, 'our own immediate ancestors worshipped these idols in Mecca, and why should we give them up?' Self-complacency was stronger with them than Truth; and so they call 'Truth' a made-up tale'! Some Commentators interpret millot abhirds to refer to the last religion preached before Islam, viz. Christianity, which had itself departed from Monotheism to Trinity, but the Pagan Arabs had little love for Christianity and could not have used these terms for it.

4135. They have no clear idea of how God's Message comes! It is not a worldly thing to be given to any one. It is a divine thing requiring spiritual preparation. If they close their eyes to  $\alpha$  now, it will be brought home to them when they take the consequences of their folly:

4136. If they set themselves to judge God, have they anything to show, comparable to God's Mory and Power? He has both in infinite measure. Who are they to question the grant of His Mercy and Revelation to His orn Chosen One?

4157. Weak and puny creatures though they are, they dare to raise their heads against the Omnipotent, as if they had dominion over Creation and not He! If they had any power, let them mount up to heaven and use all the means they have to that end, and see how they can frustrate God's Purpose!

4159. Of course they cannot frustrate God's Purpose. In that world—the spiritual world—they will be ignominiously routed, even if they form the strongest confederacy of the Powers of Evil that ever could combine. Cf. the last clause of verse 13 below.

4159. In their day, Noah's contemporaties, or the 'Ad and the Thamild, so frequently mentioned, or Pharaoh the mighty king of Egypt, or the people to whom Lot was sent tcf, xxxvii. 75-82; vii. 103-137; vii. 80-84; were examples of arrogance and rebellion against God: they rejected the divine Message brought by their apostles, and they all came to an evil end. Will not their posterity learn their lesson?

4160. The title of Pharaoh, "Lord of the Stakes", denotes power and arrogance, in all or any of the following ways: (1) the stake makes a tent firm and stable, and is a symbol of firmness and stability; (2) many stakes mean a large camp, and a numerous army to fight; (3) impairing with stakes was a cruel punishment resorted to by the Pharaoha in arrogant pride of power.

Such interval will be quite short. The derived meaning is that when the inevitable just punishment for sin arrives, it will not tarry, but do its work without delay.

4166. Cf. xxvi. 204 and n. 3230. Those who do not believe in the Hereafter say ironically: "Let us have our punishment and sentence now; why delay it?" The last verse and the next verse supply the commentary. As to those who mock, they will find out the truth soon enough, when it is too late for repentance or mercy. As to the men of God, who are mocked, they must wait patiently for God to fulfil His Plan: even men who had worldly strength and power, like David, had to exercise infinite patience when mocked by their contemporaries.

4167 David was a man of exceptional strength, for even as a raw youth, he slew the Philistine glant Goliath. See ii. 249-252, and notes 286-87. Before that fight, he was mocked by his enemies and chidden even by his own elder brother. But he relied upon God, and won through, and afterwards became king.

4168. See n. 2733 to xxi. 79. All nature sings in unison and celebrates the praises of God. David was given the gift of music and psalmody, and therefore the fills and birds are expressed as singing God's praises in unison with him. The special hours when the hills and groves eith on the songs of birds are in the evening and at dawn, when also the birds gather together, for those are respectively their roosting hours and the hours of their concerted flight for the day.

4169. Note the mutual echo between this verse and verse 17 above. The Arabic awass is common to both, and it furnishes the rhyme or rhythm of the greater part of the Strat, thus echoing the main thems: "Turn to God in Prayer and Praise, for that is more than any worldly power or wisdom."

4170, Cf. n. 2732 to xxi. 79, for David's sound judgment in decisions; he could also empress himself aptly, as his Pasims hear witness.

4171. This story or Parable is not found in the Bible, unless the vision here described be considered as equivalent to Nathan's parable in Il Samuel, xi, and xii. Baidhawi would seem to favour that view, but other Commentators reject it. David was a pious man, and he had a well-guarded private chamber (wifayrab) for Prayer and Praise.

4172. David used to retire to his private chamber at stated times for his devotions. One day, suddenly, his privacy was invaded by two men, who had obtained access by climbing over a wall. David was frightened at the apparition. But they said: "We have come to seek thy justice as king; we are brothers, and we have a quarrel, which we wish thee to decide."

- 23. "This man is my brother: "Be has nine and ninety
  Ewes, and I have (but) one:
  Yet he says, 'Commit her

  Harsh to me in speech."
- 24. (David) said: "He has Undoubtedly wronged thee 4174 In demanding thy (single) ewe To be added to his (flock Of) ewes: truly many Are the Partners (in business) 4178 Who wrong each other: Not so do those who believe And work deeds of righteousness, And how few are they?" ... And David gathered that we Had tried him: he asked Forgiveness of his Lord." Fell down, bowing (In prostration), and turned (To God in repentance).
- 25. So We forgave him This (lapse): he enjoyed, Indeed, a Near Approach to Us, And a beautiful Place Of (final) Return.

- 4173. The brother who was most aggrieved said: "This my brother has a flock of ninety-nine sheep, and I have but one; yet he wants me to give up my one sheep to his keeping; and moreover he is not even disr-spoken. He talks like one meditating mischief, and he has not even the grace to ask as an equal, or one sharing in a business or an inheritance. What shall I do?"
- 4174. The circumstances were mysterious; the accusation was novel; it was not clear why the unjust brother should also have come with the complainant, risking his life in climbing the wall to evade the guard, and he certainly said nothing. But David was so full of self-complacence and kingly pride that he took them literally, and began to preach about the faisehood and the fraud of men, who should be content with what they have, but who always cover more.
- 4175. Especially, said David, is it wrong for brothers or man in partnership to take advantage of each other; but how faw are the men who are righten...s? He had in his mind his own devotion and justice. But lo and behold! the men disappeared as mysteriously as they had come. It was then that David realised that his vision had been a trial or temptation—a test of his moral or spiritual fabre! Great though he was as a rain, and just though he was as a judge, the moment that he though of these things in cell gride, his merit vanished. In himself he was as other men: it was God's great othat gawe him wisdom and justice, and he should have been humble in the sight of God.
- 4176. Judged by ordinary standards, David had done no wrong; he was a good and just king Judged by the highest standard of those nearest to God (Magarrabin, Ivi. 11), the thought of self pride and self-righteousness had to be washed off from him by his own act of self-realisation and repentance. This was freely accepted by God, as the next verte shows,

SECTION 3.

27. Dot without purpose did We 4179 Create heaven and earth And all between! That Were the thought of Unbelievers! But woe to the Unbelievers Because of the Fire (of Hell)!

4177. Cf in. 30, and n. 47. David's kingly power, and the gifts of wisdom, justice, psalmody, and apostleship were bestowed on him as a trust. These great gifts were not to be a matter of self-glory.

4178. As stated in n. 4171 above, this vision and its moral are nownere to be found in the Bible, Those who think they see a resemblance to the Parable of the prophet Nathan (2 Samuel, xii. 1-12) have nothing to go upon but the mention of the "one ewe" here and the "one little ewe lamb" in Nathan's Parable. The whole story is here different, and the whole atmosphere is different. The Biblical title given to David, "a man after God's own heart" is refuted by the Bible itself in the scandalous tale of heinous crimes attributed to David in chapters xi and xii of 2 Samuel viz. adultery, fraudulent dealing with one of his own servants, and the contriving of his murder. Further, in chapter xiii, we have the story of rapes, incest, and fratricide in David's own household! The fact is that passages like those are mere chroniques scanduleuses, i.e., narratives of scandalous crimes of the grossest character. The Muslim idea of David is that of a man just and upright, endowed with all the virtues, in whom even the least thought of self-elation has to be washed off by repentance and forgiveness. The spiritual lessons here taught soar into the highest regions of mysticism, 4179, Cf. iii 191. Unbelief is the subjective negation of a belief in Order, Beauty, Purpose, and Eternal Life. Unlimbed is to Latth as Chaos is to Cosmos, as the Fire of Misery is to the Garden of Bi159.

- 28. Shall We treat those Who believe and work deeds **180*

  As those who do mischief
  On earth? Shall We treat
  Those who guard against evil,
  The same as those who

  How excellent in Our service!
  Ever did he turn (to Us)!
- Behold, there were brought 488
   Before him, at eventide,
   Coursers of the highest breeding, 488
   And swift of foot;

وَوَوَمَنِسُ اللّهُ وَوَهُ سَلَّتُ ثَنِّ مِنْمُ الْمِثِ أَنْهُ
 وَنَمْ وَأَوْمِ اللّهِ مَنْ اللّهُ وَاللّهُ مِنْ مَا اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّه

- 4180. The reference to the Hereafter at the end of verse 26 above is of a piece with the whole tenor of this Sūra, which deals with the superiority of the spiritual kingdom and the Hereafter. If there were no Hereafter, how could you reconcile the inequalities of this world? Would not the Unbelievers be right in acting as if all Creation and all life were futile? But there is a Hereafter and God will not treat the Good and Evil alike. He is just and will fully restore the balance disturbed in this life.
- 4181. Revelation is not a mere chance or haphazard thing. It is a real blessing—among the greatest that God has bestowed on man. By meditation on it in an earnest spirit man may learn of himself, and his relation to nature around him and to God the Author of all. Men of understanding may, by its help, resolve all genuine doubts that there may be in their minds, and learn the true lessons of spiritual life.
- 4182. The greatest in this life have yet need of this spiritual blessing: without it all worldly good is futile. Referring back to the story of David, we are now introduced to Solomon, who was a great king but greater still because he served God and turned to Hun. The Qur-lan, unlike the Old Testament, represents Solomon as a righteous king, not as an idolater, doing "evil in the sight of the Lord" (I Kings, xi. 5).
- 4183. The passages about David and Solomon have been variously interpreted by the Commentators. The versions which I have suggested have good authority behind them, though I have followed my own judgment in filling at the details.
- 4184. Şāfināi: literally, horses that stand, when at ease, on three legs. firmly planted, with the hoof of the fourth leg resting lightly on the ground. This would imply breeding and a steady temper, to match with their quality of swiftness mentioned in the next clause.

® قالَ رَبِنَاغُ فِرْ لِي وَهَبْ لِي

4185. The story is not found in the Old Testament. I interpret, it to mean that, like his father David, Solomon was also most questiculous in not allowing the least motive of self to be mixed up with his spiritual virtues. He was fond of horses; he had great armies and wealth; but he need them all in God's service. Of, xxvii 19, n 3259; xxvii. 40, n 3276, etc. His battles were not fought for ulse of blood, but as jihads in the cause of righteousness. His love of horses was not like that of a mere race-goer or of a warnor: there was a spiritual element in it. He loved by a kind of love which was spiritual—the love of the highest God.

4186. His review of his fine horses was interrupted by his evening devotions, but he resumed it after his devotions.

4187. Like all lovers of horses, he paited them on their necks and passed his hands over their fore-legs and was proud of having them—not as vanities but as a "lover of Good".

4188. What was the trial of Solomon? All the power, wealth, and glory, which were given to hime were a spiritual trial to him. They might have turned another man's head, but he was staunch and true, and while he enjoyed and used all the power he had—over spirits, men, and the forces of nature, (see below), he kept his mind steady to the service of God. Cf. viii. 28, where "your possessions and your progeny" are declared to be "but a trib.

4189. "The body without life" or his throw has been variously interpreted. The interpretation that appeals to me most is that his earthly power, great as it was, was like a body without a soul, unless it was vivified by God's spirit. But Solomon did turn to God in true devotion, and his real power lay there. He did his best to root out tolositry, and he completed the Trimple in Jerusalem for the worship of the One True God. Cf. his conversion of Bildgs the Queen of Sheba, axvii. 40, n. 3276. See also viii. 148, where the same word Jazad is used in connection with the image of a calf which the Israellites had set up for worship in the absence of Moses. Men may worship wordly Power as they may worship an idol, and there is great temptation in such Power, though Solomon withstood such temptations.

I do not think that a reference to xxxiv. 14 (n. 3808) will fit the context here, 4190. The seeking of worldly Power, even if intended to be used for God's service, has a little of Self in it. It may be quite legitimate and even meritorious in ordinary men, but even the thought of it in a Prophet is to be apologused for. See a similar idea in the case of David explained in n. 4176 to xxxviii. 24 above.

4191. He asked for a Power that he would not misuse, though others might not be able to refrain from misusing it,—such as power over forces of nature or forces of violence (see the next three verses).

4194. Cf. xxi. 82, and n. 2738. Cf. also xxxiv. 12-13 and notes there: in the latter passage the spirits mentioned are called Jinns. The divers were probably those employed in pearl-fisheries.

4195, Cf. xiv. 49, where the same expression "bound together in fetters" is applied to Sinners on the Day of Judgment,

4196. God bestowed such abundant powers and bounties on Solomon that they could not be counted or measured; and he was free to give away anything he liked or keep anything he iked. In this was great temptation for an ordinary man. Solomon as a prophet withtend it and asked to be forgiven for power and such a kingdom as others might not be able to use lawfully. His earthly kingdom went to pieces after his death, Buf his name and fame endure. And what is more, he obtained a place among the Nearest Ones to God. See next verse.

4197 The same words are used of David in xxxviii, 25 above, thus symmetrically closing the argument about the two greatest kings in Israel.

<sup>4199.</sup> The distress was of many kinds, physical, mental, and spiritual. See n. 2739 to xx. 83. He suffered from loathsome sores; he lost his home, his possessions, and his family; and almost his balance of mind. But he did not lose Faith but turned to God (see verse 44 below), and the recuperative process began.

<sup>4202.</sup> In his worst distress Job was patient and constant in faith, but apparently his wife was not. According to the Book of Job (ii. 9.10), "Then said his wife unto him. Dost thou still retain thine integrity? Curse God, and die. But he said unto her, Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive wil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips." He must have said in his haste to the woman that he would beat her: he is asked now to correct her with only a wisp of grass, to show that he was gentle and humble as well as patient and constant.

<sup>4203,</sup> Cf. xxxviii. 30 above, where similar words are spoken of Solomon. Patience and constancy as a los a form of service, if our attitude is due to an active faith in God, and not mere passivity. So Milton in his Sonnet: "They also serve who only stand and wait."

<sup>4204</sup> In the last SUra (xxxvii, 83-113) Abraham and Isaac' (and by implication Jacob) were mentioned as resisting Evil and wanning through. Here they are mentioned as men with spiritual power and vision, Israelite patriarchs, who bore witness to the Gospel of the Hereafter, and were therefore a blessing to their people, for they taught the Truth.

(6) مُقَكِوْبِينَ فِيهَايَدْعُونَ فِيهَا بِفَكِهَ فِي كَنِيْرَةٌ وَشُرَابٍ

4205, Ismā'll, the Patriarch of the Arab race, was also mentioned (xxxvii. 101-107) as a pattern of self-sacrifice; now he is mentioned in the company of the Good, i.e., of those who were a blessing to their people. Here he is bracketed with Elisha (for whom see n. 906 to v. 86), and Zul-Kif (for whom see n. 2743 to xxi. 85). All these three were examples of constancy and patience under suffering.

4206, Some of the pre-eminent examples of the Elect and the Good having been mentioned, we have now a reference to the Rightenous as a body (rank and file as well as leaders) and their future in the Hereafter as won by victory over Evil.

4207. The Final Bliss will not be a hole-and-corner thing, a pale reflection of some Palace or Retreat, where mystery reigns behind closed doors. Its doors will be open, and its immates will be free to go in and out as they will, because their wills will be purified and brought into accord with the Universal Law.

4208. See n. 4003 to xxxvs. 57. The free Gardens are types of satisfaction in external surroundings; the comfortable reclining thrones, the fruit, and the drink are types of the soul's individual satisfaction; and the society of pure-minded companions, of equal ages, is the type of a soul's social satisfaction.

4209. C/, xxxvii. 48 and n. 4064, and xxxvi. 56, n. 4002. As we conceive happiness in this life, it is not complete if it is only solitary. How we hanker after some one who can share in our highest joy!, That feeling is also figured here.

4210. To make the metaphor of social happiness complete, we want companionship of equial age. Age and youth cannot be happy together. It is not suggested that in the "I meless state figured here, there will be old age: but if it is possible to conceive of temperamental differences then the company will be so arranged that it will be congenial. Or we can accept the type of youth and freshness as common to all in that happy state.

4211. This is in parallel contrast to the state of the Blessed in xxxviii. 49 above.

4212. Cf. xiv. 29. This continues the parallel contrast to the state of the Blessed already described.

4213, Cf. x. 4, and n. 1390. The conjunction of the boiling fluid with the dark, murky, intensely cold fluid heightens the effect of the Penalty. In place of harmony, there is the discord of extreme opposites. And the discord is not confined to this: it runs through the whole idea of Hell. See the next verse.

4214. The wonder is that so many people should embrace Evil, and in so much hurry and eageness! Here they may be welcomed by the leaders of Evil, but in the final state it will be the opposite of welcome. They will be followed with reproaches and curse.

4215. It is the nature of Evil to shift the blame on to others. The followers will reproach the leaders, but none can escape personal responsibility for his own acts and deeds !

4217. The bad ones: i.s., the ones whom they (evil ones) ridiculed as fools sure to come to an evil end, because they refused to join in with the evil ones in their plots. The values are now reversed. The good ones are among the Blessed, and are not to be seen in the "Bed of Misery". The ridicule is now against the evil ones.

4218. The mutual recriminations and spite are themselves a part of the Penalty, for such feelings increase their unhappiness.

C. 202 .- The Gospel of Unity is the true Cure (xxxvui. 65-88,) For Evil : for it gives the good news Of God's Power Supreme, and His Mercy And Forgiveness again and again. It warns I's to avoid Evil for Evil grose From selfish Pride and Rebellion. No power Has it over God's servants, sincere And true: while Revelation comes As a gift free to all God's Creation.

4219, Cf. xu. 39, where Joseph preaches to the men in prison. The one supreme Message of importance to mankind was (and is) the Unity of God; that He is the Creator and Sustainer of all; that His Will is supreme; that He can carry out His Will without question, and no powers of Evil can defeat it; and that He forgives by His grace again and again. This Message the holy Prophet came to deliver, and he delivered it,

4220. In n. 2818 to xxii. 40, I have explained the full import of 'Asiz as a title applied to God. and I have expressed two of the leading ideas involved, in the two lines here. The argument in this Sura turns upon the contrast between earthly Power and the Divine Power; the one is impotent and the other is supreme,

4221. Gaffar is the emphatic intensive form, and I have accordingly translated it as "Forgiving again and again ". Cf. xx. 82.

4222. The Message which is of supreme import to mankind, -- from that they turn away. Instead of profiting by it, they turn away to side issues, or unprofitable speculation; such as: what is the origin of Evil; when will Judgment come? etc.

4223. The hierarchy in Heaven, under God's command, discuss questions of high import in the Universe. Those are not necessarily revealed to men, except in so far as it is good for men to know, as in verses 71.85 below. But the chief thing for man is to know that God is Most Merciful, that He forgives again and again, and that Evil has no nower over those who trust in God.

70. 'Only this has been revealed To me: that I am To give warning Plainly and publicly." 42.6

- 71. Behold, thy Lord said 6255 To the angels: "I am About to create man From clay: 6855
- 72. "When I have fashioned him (In due proportion) and breathed Into him of My spirit; san Fall ye down in obeisance Unto him."
- 73. So the angels prostrated themselves, All of them together:
- 74. Not so Iblis: he
  Was haughty, and became 4838
  One of those who reject Faith.
- 75. (God) said: "O Iblis!" What prevents thee from Prostrating thyself to one Whom I have created With My hands? **** Art thou haughty?

إن يُوسَى الْمَ الْمَ الْمَ الْمَ الْمُ اللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ الللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ اللللّهِ الللللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ الللّهِ اللللّهِ الللللّه

4224. Two things are implied in Mubin: (1) that the warning should be clear and perspicuous; there should be no mincing of matters, no ambiguity, no compromise with evil, vii, 184; (2) that the warning should be delivered publicly, hefore all people, in spite of opposition and persecution, xxvi. 113. Both these ideas I have tried to express in this passage.

4225. Two passages may be compared with this: via.; (1) ii. 30-39, where merely the first stages of the Rebellion against God and its consequences to mankind are mentioned, and (2) xv. 19-40, where the further intrusion of evil in man's life here below is referred to, and an assurance is given that Evil will have no power except over those who yield to it. The latter is the passage most relevant here, as we are now dealing with the spiritual power of Revelation to defeat the machinations of Evil.

4226. This shows that the material world round us was created by God before God (ashioned man and breathed of His soul into him. Geology also shows that man came on the scene at a very late stage in the history of this planet.

- 4227. See p. 1968 to xv. 29, where the spiritual significance of this is explained.
- 4228. Arrogance (self-love) is thus the root of Evil and of Unfaith.

4229. With My hands: i.e., by My power and creative skill. This is the point. Man, as typified by Adam, is in himself nothing but frail clay. But as fashioned by God's creative power, into something with God's spirit breathed into him, his dignity is raised above that of the highest creatures.

۳۸۱) سورة ص

4230. If, then, Satan refuses, it is a rebellion against God. It arises from arrogance or haughtiness, an exaggerated idea of Self. Or, it is asked, are you really sufficiently high in rank to dispute with the Amagent's Of course he was not.

4231. See n. 1972 to xv. 35, where it is explained why the respite is to the Day of Judgment. The whole of that passage in S. xv. forms a good commentary on this.

4232. For the significance of the respite see n. 1973 to xv. 36.

4233, It is not an indefinite respite. It is for a period definitely limited, while this our Probation last in this world. It is part of the test as to how we use our limited free will. After that, our whole existence will be on a different plane. The good will have been sorted out, the chain of consequences of the present world will be broken, and "a new Creation" will have taken the place of the present World.

- 4238. Cf. xxv. 57; xxvi. 109; and many other passages. The prophet of God neither seeks nor expects any reward from men. On the contrary he suffers much at those hands. He is unselfish and offers his services under God's inspiration. He is satisfied with the hope "that each one who will may take a straight Path to his Lord". That is his reward. And the reward he hopes for from God is similarly unselfish. He earnestly hopes to win His Good Pleasure—or, to use another metaphor, "to see His Face"

- 4240. So far from there being any false or selfish motive in the Message proclaimed in Revelation, it is a healing mercy to all mankind. More, it is in accord with all parts of God's Creation, and makes us kin with all Creation, the handiwork of the One True God.
- 4241. There may be many things which we in out "muddy vesture of decay" may not fully understand or take in. If we only follow the right Path, we shall arrive at the Goal in the Hereafter, and then everything will be clear to us.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XXXIX (Zumar).

This is the last of the series of six Sūras beginning with S. xxxiv., which deal with the mysteries of the spiritual world, as leading up to the Ma'ad, or the Hereafter. See Introduction to S. xxxiv.

Its subject-matter is how Creation in its great variety is yet sorted out in Groups or Classes, all governed by one Plan, and created and sustained by One God, Who will separate Good from Evil at the last Day. The word sumar occurs in verses 71 and 73.

Its chronology has no significance. It belongs to the later Meccan period,

Summary.—The variety in Creation yet points to unity of Plan: there is only One God: to Him is due all worship and from Him flow all Justice and Grace (xxxix. 1-21, and C. 203).

There is unity in Revelation, and guidance comes from God alone: turn to Him only, for all else is false (xxxix. 22-52, and C. 204).

God's Mercy is all-embracing: despair not: seek it before it is too late: for Judgment and Justice will come for certain (xxxix. 53-75, and C. 205).

C. 203.—To God is due sincere devotion, and to Him
(xxxix 1 21.) Alone: there is none like unto Him.,
All nature obeys His laws, and our own
Growth and life proclaim Him Lord
And Cherisher. How can we blaspheme?
We must serve Him, the One, the True,
With sincere devotion, and follow His Law
In its highest meaning: or else the loss
Is our own. All nature proclaims
Aloud His Grace and Loving-kindness,

Stira XXXIX.

Zumar, or the Crowds.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful.

- 1. The revelation
  Of this Book
  Is from God, 4448
  The Exalted in Power,
  Full of Wisdom.
- 2. Verily it is We Who have Revealed the Book to thee In Truth: so serve God, Offering Him sincere devotion.
- 3. Is it not to God 493
  That sincere devotion
  Is due? But those who Take for protectors others
  Than God (say): "We only Serve them in order that
  They may bring us nearer 494
  To God," Truly God
  Will judge between them
  In that wherein they differ. 493
  But God guides not
  Such as are false
  And ungrateful.

4242. In connection, with Revelation two qualities of God are mentioned: (1) that He is All-Powerful and can carry our His Will in spite of all opposition; and (2) that He is full of knowledge and wisdom. The first answers those who question how God can send Revelation to man; the second explains that true wisdom consists in carrying out God's Will as revealed to us.

4243. In the many Signs in Creation as described below, there yet is a clear indication of the unity of Plan, pointing to the Unity of the Creator. Worship or service is due to none but Him, And He wants exclusive and sincere devotion.

4244. Worshippers of Idols or of deities other than God, e.g., saints or perhaps Wealth and Power, Science or Selfish Desire, may pretend that these are symbols that may get them nearer to their self-development, nearer to the goal of their life, nearer to God, but they are altogether on the wrong track.

4245. This departure of theirs from true worship, this divergence from the right way, produces endless disputations and sects. God will judge between them. But if they are determined to go after falsehoods and forget the gratitude and service which they owe to God, and God alone, they are putting themselves on a Path where they will get no guidance. They are cutting themselves of from revealed Truth.

- 4. Is ad God wished
  To take to Himself
  A son, He could have Chosen whom He pleased
  Out of those whom He
  Doth create: but Glory
  Be to Him! (He is above
  Such things.) He is God,
  The One, the Irresistible.
- 5. He created the heavens
  And the earth
  In true (proportions): Har
  He makes the Night
  Overlap the Day, and the Day
  Overlap the Night:
  He has subjected
  The sun and the moon
  (To His law):
  Each one follows a course
  For a time appointed.
  Is not He the Exalted
  In Power—He Who forgives these
  Again and again?
  - 6. He created you (all)
    From a single Person: ****
    Then created, of like nature,
    His mate; and He Sent down for you eight head ****
    Of cattle in pairs:
    He makes you,
    In the wombs

الآوارا والمذار تنفيذ وللألاضطن عنا عض لن المنطق عنا عض لن المنطق
4246. It is blaspliemy to say that God begot a son. If that were true. He should have had a wife (vi. 101), and His son would have been of the same kind as Himself; whereas God is one, with no one else like unto Him (texi. 4). Begeting is an animal act which goes with sex. How can it be consistent with our conception of One Who is above all Creatures? If such a blasphemous thought were possible, as that God wanted some one else to help Him. He could have chosen the best of His creatures instead of lowering Himself to an animal act. But glory to God! He is above such things! His Unity is the first thing that we have to learn about Him. As He is Omnipotent, He requires no recatures to help Him or bring other creatures to Him.

4247, Cl. vi. 73, and n. 896.

4248. His Power is equalled by His Mercy. Who can there be like unto Him?

4249. Cf. iv. 1. and n. 504.

4250. See vi. 143-4, where four kinds of cattle are mentioned in pairs in connection with certain Arab superstitions which are there condemned. Here the same four kinds are mentioned as representative of domesticated cattle given by God as useful to man. These are sheep, goats, camels, and oxen. In Arab idiom the horse is not included among "cattle".

For the wisdom and goodness of God in granting man dominion over cattle, see xxxvi, 71-73,

Of your mothers, In stages, one after another, east In three veils of darkness. Such is God, your Lord And Cherisher: to Him belongs (All) dominion. There is No god but He: then How are ye turned away esss (From your true Centre)?

  Of you; but He liketh not esset
  Ingratitude from His servants:
  If ye are grateful, He
  Is pleased with you.
  No bearer of burdens esset
  Can bear the burden

٠ • قَافَا مَسَنَ ٱلْإِنسَانَ مُرَّيَّةُ عَادَتَهُمُ

<sup>4251.</sup> See xxii. 5, where the gradual physical growth of man in several successive stages is mentioned as one of the Signs of God's creative Power and chenshing care.

<sup>4252.</sup> The three veils of darkness which cover the unborn child are; the caill or membrane, the womb, and the hollow in which the womb is enclosed. But we might understand "three" in a compilative rather than a numerical sense.

<sup>4253.</sup> It is clear that you owe your very existence and your maintenance, growth, and preservation, to God. He is the centre of your being: how is it that you are turned away by chance things from Him?

<sup>4234.</sup> God is independent of all wants, and therefore man's ingratitude does not affect God, But God cares for man, and therefore man's gratitude and service earn God's Good Pleasure, and man's ingratitude and rebellion are displessing to God.

<sup>4255.</sup> Cf. vi. 164. The account is between you and God. No one else can take your burdens or carry your sins. Vicanous atonement would be unjust. You have to return to God in the Herafter. You will find that He knows all that you did in this life, and its full significance. He will explain to you even better than you can understand yourself; because all your secret hidden motives, which you sometimes tried to ignore yourself, are fully known to Him.

<sup>4256.</sup> Cf. x. 12. Trouble and adversity often bring a man to his bearings. But if he is not firm and constant, he forgets the lessons which life is meant to teach him. As soon as he gets a little prosperity, he forgets that it is from God, and attributes it to something which may only be a secondary cause, e.g., his own efforts or the Powers of Nature, or something which he has invented and made into a god, e.g., idols or fate. God is the Ultimate Cause of all things. To set up rivials to Him in this way is not only wrong and degrading to the false worshipper himself, but misleads countless ignorant people, who may not be able to make allowances for the figures of speech or the symbolism by which subtlet minds can explain away falseboods.

Turning to Him in repentance:
But when He bestoweth

4257. Those who practise and those who teach evil and blasphemy may seem to flourish in this world. But their satisfaction will be of very short duration. They are treading all the while the Path that leads to the Fire of Perdition.

4258, Cf. iii. 113-117. It is a great thing when a man gets into the attitude of humble devotion to God. To him the hereafter is a real thing, and he prepares for it with good works. He does not build his hopes on the vanities of this world, but on God's Grace and Mercy. Such a man is "endued with understanding" and receives God's Message with fervour and alterity. He is not to compared with the cynic or the unbeliever, who knows nothing of the real value of the inner life.

4259, Cf. iii, 19,

4260. The "fear of God" (Taqwa) is explained in n. 26 to ii. 2. See also n. 2912 to xxiii, 60. The fear of God is akin to love, for it means that we are afraid to displease Him.

4261. Cf. xxix. 56 and it. 3489. We must always do right. We cannot plead that the circumstances in which we find ourselves force our hands. If our home conditions do not allow us to act according to the Faith that is in us, we must be prepared to suffer ostraction or even exite.

4262. Cf. vi. 14. "The first" need not necessarily be chronological: it may also refer to the first rank in zeal, and in readiness to suffer for the Cause.

4263, Cf. vi. 15. The worst Penalty in a spiritual sense is the Displeasure of God, just as the highest achievement, the fulfilment of all desire, is the attainment of God's Good Pleasure; vi. 16.

4264, This is not a command or permission but a reproach and warning. The address of the unit of God may be paraphrased bus: 'Whatever happeas' I will follow the command of God. He has revealed Himself, and I know that He is One, supreme over all creatures. Him alone will serve. Is there any so ignorant as to seek anyone else? Let him do so and see the result. The loss will be bis own. For he falls from Grace into Evil.

4265. The cult of Evil results in the destruction of all that is best and most valuable in us, as well as poisons all the affections which link us to our families, friends, and people, in the Final Adjustment, which we call the Day of Judgment.

- 16. They shall have Layers the Of Fire above them, And Layers (of Fire) Below them: with this Doth God warn oil the His Servants: "O My Servants! Then fear ye Me!"
- 17. Mhose who eschew Evil, —
  And fall not into ""
  Its worship, —and turn
  To God (in repentance), —
  For them is Good News:
  So announce the Good News
  To My Servants. —
- 18. Those who listen
  To the Word,
  And follow
  The best (meaning) in it: ***
  Those are the ones
  Whom God has guided, and those
  Are the ones endued
  With understanding.
- 19. Is, then, one against whom The decree of Punishment

4266. The consequences of Sin when Judgment comes are antly figured by Layers upon Layers of Fire, which hem in the sinners above and below. It is also suggested that the Layers, though of Fire, have something dark in them—the scorching quality of Sin.

4267. But God does not leave mankind without warning. Man has been granted a limited clearly explained to him. To those who will listen to Reason are given arguments which can be apprehended by their own intelligence; in those who will listen to Reason are given arguments which can be apprehended by their own intelligence; in those who are swaved by affections and emotion, an appeal is made in the name of the love of God; to those who understand nothing but fear, the warning is conveyed by a portrayal of the dreadful consequences of wrong-doing.

4269. There is always the danger that Evil may seize us even if we approach it out of mere curiosity. If we take an interest in it we may become its worshippers or slaves. The wise man eschews it altogether, and so he enrols among the Servants of God, and gets the good news of His Mercy and Grood Pleasure.

4269. The Commentators construe this clause in two alternative ways. (1) If "word" be taken as any word, the clause would mean that good men listen to all that is said and choose the best offer. (2) If "word" be taken to mean God's Word, it would mean that they should listen reverently to it, and where permissive and alternative courses are allowed for those who are not strong enough to follow the higher course, those "endued with understanding" should prefer to attempt the higher course of conduct. For Example, it is permitted (within limits) to punish those who wrong us, but the nobler course is to repol evil with good (xxii). 361; we should try to follow the nobler course. I prefet the latter construction: it accords better with my interpretation of the last verse; see a. 4266.

C. 204.—What distance separates the man
(xxxix. 22.52.) Whose heart is melted by the Message
Of God and enlightened by His Light,
And him who rejects Revelation! God

<sup>4270.</sup> If a man is already steeped in sin and has rejected God's Grace, how can we expect Reveiation to work in his soul?

<sup>4271.</sup> Cf xxix. 58, and xxxiv. 37. The idea of heaven here is that of a Home of sublimity and beauty, with a picturesque outlook, such as we would describe in this life by the type of a palace by gently-flowing streams. The mansions will also suggest generous space and architectural beauty, tiers upon tiers piled one upon another.

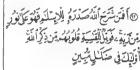

<sup>4272.</sup> Mirād: the time, place, and manner of the fulfilment of a Promise. God's promise will be fulfilled in all particulars better than we can possibly imagine.

<sup>4273.</sup> The circuit of water, by which the rain falls from the clouds, in absorbed through the earth, and flow sthrough rivers or underground streams to the rea, where it again rises as vapour and forms clouds, was explained in notes 311142 to xxv, 53. Here our attention is drawn to one portion of the process. The rain fructifies the soil and the seeds. Produce of various kinds is raised. The harvest ripens and is gathered in. The plants wither, dry up, and crumble away. Men and animals are fed. And the circuit starts again in another season. Here is a Sign of the Grace and Goodness of God, clear to those who understand.

Teaches men by Parables: straight is His Word and clear. Any doubts in the minds Of men will be resolved after Death: Even now, God's Signs are enough: no other Can guide. Death and his twin-brother, Sleep, are in the hands of God: to Him Is our Goal. He will judge in the End. His Will is all-in-all. No other thing Can be of any account before His Law.

SECTION 3.

- God has opened to Islam, 1774
  So that he has received
  Enlightenment from God,
  (No better than one hard-hearted)?
  Woe to those whose hearts
  Are hardened against celebrating 1773
  The praises of God! They
  Are manifestly wandering:
  (In error)!
- 23. God has revealed
  (From time to time)
  The most beautiful Message
  In the form of a Book,
  Consistent with itself, 492
  (Yet) repeating (its teaching

<sup>4274.</sup> Those who listen to God's Message find at each stage God's Grace helping them more to expand their spiritual understanding and to receive God's light, so that they travel faither and faither to their God in the Path of Truth and Rightcourness. They are not to be compared to those who shut out God's Light from their hearts. See next note

<sup>4275.</sup> Just as there is spiritual progress for those who seek God, so there is more and mure spiritual retrogression for those who close their hearts to God. Their hearts get hardened, and they allow less and less God's Grace to penetrate within. But it is obvious that they flounder on the Way, and cannot walk with the firm steps of those of assured Paith.

<sup>4276</sup> is MultashBub here to be understood in the same sense as in iii. 7, where I have translated tas "allegoricat"? See n. 347 to iii 7. The better opinion is that there is a slightly different shade of meaning here, as suggested by the context. In the earlier passage, it was opposed to Matham: here it is contrasted or compared to Matham: The root meaning its: 'having something similar: working by analogy or allegory, or parable; having its parts consistent with each other.' The last meaning I adopt here. The Gurán was revealed in parts at different times. And yet its parts all conform to each other. There is no contradiction or unconsistency anywhere.

In various aspects): 477
The skins of those who

To the celebration of God's praises. Such is
The guidance of God;

Can have none to guide.

24. Is, then, one who
Has to fear the brunt

Guarded therefrom)? It will

نَصْنَعَوُمِنِهُ جُلُودُ اللَّذِينَ يَعْنَفُونَ رَبَّهُهُ تُرْتَلِينَ جُلُودُهُمْ وَفَلُويُهُمْ الْمِلْذِكِلِيَّةً هُدَى اللَّهِ بَمْدِى بِمِعْمَن لِيَّا أَهْ وَمَن يُمَنْ اللَّهِ لَلهُ فَالَّهُ مِنْهَا إِ

4277, Mathart; Cf. xv. 87, where we have translated "off-repeated"; "the seven oft-repeated ("tyrses)". See n. 2008 to that passage. Here the meaning is similar, but the context gives a different colour in it. as is seen in the translation.

4278. The skin is the outer integument of the body. It receives the first shock from the impact of anything unusual, and it trembles and its hair stands on end under excitement. So in spiritual matters the first stimulation, from God's Message is external. Those who receive Paith do it as it were with tremor and not with apathy. But the next stage is that it penetrates their outer nature and goes right into their hearts. Their whole nature is "softened" to receive the beneficent Message, and it transforms them through and through.

4279, "Whom He pleases" and "leaves to stray" are explained fully in n. 2133 to xvi. 93. See also xiv, 4 and n. 1875.

4250. The unrepentant Sinners will receive the full Penalty on the Day of Judgment. They will receive it full in the fare, i.e. their whole being will be affected by it. Their hands (figuratively) will be tied, and they cannot therefore use their hands to ward off the Penalty of the Fire; in any case their hands will not bave the power to ward it off. Are such helpless people to be compared for a moment with people who have received Grace and are therefore guarded from all harm and danger? Certainly not," To the evil the fruit of their deeds, and to the good the grace of their Lord!

Be said to the wrong-doers:
"Taste ye (the fruits
Of) what ye earned!"

- 4282. Cf. xvi. 26. They will be punished from quarters or in ways they do not perceive. From the Unbelief and Rebellion they think they derive great advantages, but they suddenly find out, when 100 late, that that which they exulted in was the cause of their own undoing.
- 4283. Cf. ii. 14. Sin often brings disgrace and humiliation in this life, but the greater and truer punishment is in the Hereafter. But men often do not know the inwardness of this matter, if they flourish here for a time, they think they will escape the real consequences in the Hereafter. Or if they suffer a little harm here, they think that will make up the Penalty, and they will escape the Hereafter. Both debas new wrong.
- 4284. Men can only understand high spiritual truths by parables and similitudes and these are given abundantly in the Quran. The object of not merely to tell stones, but to teach lessons of spiritual wistom.
- 4285 Previous revelations had been in other languages. Now the revelation was given in Arabia in Arabic itself, the language of the country which all could understand. And it is a beautiful language, straight and flexible, and fit to be the vehicle of sublime truths. Cf. C. 12.

Crookedness (therein): 6286 In order that they May guard against Evil.

4286 See xviii. 1 and n. 2326. Cf. also vii. 45, n. 1024; and xix, 36, n. 2488.

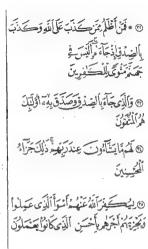

4287. The difference between the creed of Polytheism and the Gospel of Unity is explained by the analogy of two men. One belongs to many masters; the masters disagree among themselves, and the poor man of many masters has to suffer from the quarrels of his many masters; it is an impossible and unnatural position. The other serves only one master; his master is good, and does all he can for his servant; the servant can concentrate his attention on his service; he is happy himself and his service is efficiently performed. Can there be any doubt as to (1) which of them is the happier, and (2) which of them is in a more natural position? No man can serve two, still less numerous, masters.

4288. God is praised that He has put us, not under gods many and lords many, but has, out of His infinite Mercy, allowed us direct approach to Him, the One, the True, the Eternal.

4289. Even the prophets are not exempt from bodily death, much less the righteous, but they live in their beneficent work and the memories they leave behind them. All men have to die, good and bad alike But there is a life after death, and in that life all the unexplained things about which people dispute in this world will be made clear in the presence of God.

SECTION 4.

- 32. Me ho, then, doth more wrong Than one who utters A lie concerning God, And rejects the Truth When it comes to him! Is there not in Hell! 451 An abode for blassphemers?
- 33. And he who brings the Truth And he who confirms 4784 (And supports) it—such are The men who do right.
- 34. They shall have all
  That they wish for, exect
  In the presence of their Lord:
  Such is the reward
  Of those who do good:
- 35. So that God will Turn off from them
  (Even) the worst in their deeds ***
  And give them their reward
  According to the best
  Of what they have done.

429]. When the creature deliberately adopts and utters falsehoods against his own Creator, in spite of the Truth being brought, as it were, to his very door by God's Signs, what offence can we imagine more henious than theil? In Christian theology this is the blaspheny "against the Holy Ghost" spoken of in Matt, xii. 31-32: "whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man", (Christ)," it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, either in this world, neither in the world to come "

- 4292. Biasphemers have really no place to go to. The question form suggests that even Hell is not an abode for them; it is merely a place for punishment or a state of punishment.
- 4293. This is true of the Prophet, and all men of God and all righteous persons. Any one who preaches the Truth and brings home God's Signs to men is performing the duty of a right and noble life. In this he confirms the teaching of all previous men of God. Any one who supports and confirms such a teacher is also doing his duty and on the right way.
- 4294. At that stage their wills will have been purified, and they could wish for nothing that they could not or should not have. And it will be as "in the presence of their Lord". If an earthly king gives a decoration, how much greater is the honour when the investiture takes place by the king himself personally?
- 4295. The conjunction (lām in Arabic, translated "so that") indicates here the results, not the purpose. God's Reward is so bounteous, that if we truly and sincerely put our will into His keeping. He will remove the consequences not only of our minor faults but of the worst of our sins, and judge us according to the very best of our deeds.

- 36. Is not God enough the For His servant? But They try to frighten thee With other (gods) besides Him! For such as God leaves To stray, there can be No guide.
- 37. And such as God doth ****
  Guide there can be
  None to lead astray.
  Is not God Exalted
  In Power, (Able to enforce
  His Will), Lord of Retribution? ***
- 38. If indeed thou ask them
  Who it is that created ""
  The heavens and the earth,
  They would be sure to say,
  ""God". Say: "See ye then?
  The things that ye invoke
  Besides God,—can they,
  If God wills some Penalty
  For me, remove His Penalty?—
  Or if He wills some Grace
  For me, can they keep back ""

أَلَيْسَ اللَّهُ مِكِ الْهِ عَدَّةً وَتَخَوِّفُونَكَ مِنْ لَكُونِ الْمَثَنِينَ اللَّهُ اللَّهِ مُنْ اللَّهِ اللَّهُ اللللْلِيْ اللَّهُ الللْلِهُ اللللْلُلِيْ الللْلِيْ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللْلِلْمُ اللللْلِيْ الللْلِهُ اللْمُؤْلِقُ اللللْمُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللْمُؤْلِقُلْمُ اللْمُؤْلِقُلُولُولُ اللللْمُؤْلِقُلْمُ الللِّهُ اللْمُؤْلِقُلْمُ اللْمُؤْلِقُلْمُ اللِّهُ اللْمُؤْلِقُلْمُ الللْمُؤْلِقُلْمُ اللْمُؤْلِقُلْمُ اللْمُولِي اللْمُؤْلِمُ اللْمُؤْلِمُ الللْمُؤْلِمُ اللْمُؤْلِمُ الللْمُؤْلِمُ الللْمُؤْلِمُ اللْمُؤْلِمُ اللَّهُ اللْمُؤْلِمُ اللللْمُل

4296. The righteous man will find God enough for all the protection he needs, all the rest and peace he craves for, and all the happeness he can imagine. If the evil ones wish to frighten him with false gods, he knows that that is mere superstition. In the case of idols to whom worship is paid, this is easily intelligible. But there are other false gods which men worship,—wealth, position, power, scence, selfish desire, and so on. The idea may occur to them: "this is the right course, but what will men say?" or "shall I lose my case if I tell the truth?" or "will it tuin my chances if I denounce sin in high places?" All such false gods will only mislead and leave their victims in the lurch. The worship of them will lose them the Grace of God, which wants to guide and comfort all who seek God.

- 4297. On the other hand if any one holds fast to God's Truth, nothing can mislead or betray him.
- 4298. God's Power can protect, and will defeat all plots against His Will, as well as punish Evil when it gets beyond bounds.
- 4299. Cf, xxix. 61; also n. 2927 to xxiii, 85. Most worshippers of false gods are not either atheists operations. They admit the existence of God as an abstract proposition, but it has not come into their hearts and souls: it has not been translated into their lives. They run after false worship on account of ancestral custom or on account of their thoughtlessness or false environment, or on account of their own selfish desires or limited outlook. To them is addressed the argument: Ultimately your false gods can do nothing for you: why not turn to the One True God, on Whom you depend, and Who can give you Grace and Mercy, Justice and Punishment?

His Grace?" Say: "Sufficient Is God for me! In Him trust those Who put their trust." ston

The souls (of men) at death; 400

4301. Cf. xii. 67 and xiv. 12. God alone is He Who will and can discharge any trust put in Him. All other things will fail. Therefore those who put their trust in anything should put their trust in God.

4302. Cf. xi, 121 and n. 1624-A.

4303. Cf, xi. 93. The two clauses, about those who suffer a Penalty of ignominy and those on whom descends a lasting Penalty, appearently refer to the same persons in two different aspects: (1) they suffer shame, and (2) their puis..ment endures.

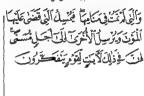

4304. Revelation is sent by God through His messenger, but it is for all. It is given in order that me and women may be taught Righteeusness. It is given in Truth: there is no pretence about it. It is for their own good. If they reject it and follow Evil, the loss is their own.

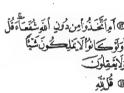

4305. God's apostles do all they can to teach mankind. But they cannot force men's wills. If men reject their teaching, the account of the rejecters is with God. Cf. vi. 107 and n. 935.

4306. The mystery of life and death, sleep and dreams, is a fascinating enigma, of which the follution is perhaps beyond the ken of man. A vast mass of superstition as well as imaginative and psychological literature has grown up about it. But the simplest and truest religious doctine is laid down here in a few words. In death we surrender dur physical life, but our soul does dot die: it goes back to a plane of existence in which it is more conscious of the realities of the apintual world: "God takes the soul".

And those that die not (He takes) during their sleep; 4007 Those on whom He Has passed the decree Of death, He keeps back 4009 (From returning to life), But the rest He sends (To their bodies)
For a term appointed.
Verily in this are Signs 4500 For those who reflect.

4307. Cf. vi. 60. What is sleep? As far as animal life is concerned, it is the cassation of the working of the nervous system, though other animal functions, such as digestion, growth, and the circulation of the blood, continue, possibly at a different pace. It is the repose of the nervous system, and in this respect it is common to man and animals, and perhaps even to plants, if, as is probable, plants have a nervous system. The mental processes (and certainly volition) are also suspended in sleep, except that in ordinary dreams there is a medley of recollections, which often present vividity to our consciousness things that do not or cannot happen in nature as we know it in our co-ordinated minds. But there is another kind of dream which is rare—one in which the dreamer sees things as they actually happen, backwards or forwards in time, or in which gifted individuals see spiritual truths otherwise imperceptible to them. How can we explain this? It is suggested that our soul or personality,—that something which is above our animal life—is then in a plane of spiritual existence akin to physical death (see last note), when we are nearer to God. In poetic imagery, Sleep is "twin-brother to Death".

4308. Sleep being twin-brother to Death, our souls are for the time being released from the bondage of the fiesh. God takes them for the time being. If, as some do, we are to die peacefully in steep, our soul does not come back to the physical body, and the latter decays and dies. If we have still some period of life to fulfi according to God's decree, our soul comes back to the body, and we resume our functions in this life.

4399. If we contemplate these things, we can see more clearly many spiritual truths: e.g.(1) that our bodily life and death are not the whole story of our existence; (2) that in our bodily life we may be dead to the spiritual world, and in our bodily death, may be our awakening to the spiritual world; (3) that our nightly Sleep, besides performing the function of rest. to our physical life, gives us a foretaste of what we call death, which does not end our personality; and (4) that the Resurrection is not more wonderful than our daily rising from Sleep, "twin-brother to Death"

4310. Let alone worship, men should not rely upon any power or person other than God to help them out or intercede for them. When it is idols, they are poor lifeless things which have obviously neither power nor intelligence. But even prophets or saints or heroes have no power to intercede except as God wills and permits. See next note.

- 4313. To evil ones, the mention of the exclusive service of Good is hateful: they only rejoice when other motives are added, e.g., personal indulgence, ancestral custom, and numerous things in life which compete with Gol's Law in this world.
- 4314. The mysteries of life and death, of worship and spiritual growth, are matters of high moment, which it may be difficult for us to apprehend in this present life. It is no use arguing about them and plunging in endiest controversies. The proper attitude is to appeal to God humbly to accept our purified hearts and Faith, in the firm hope that everything which is now vague to us will be cleared up in the Hersettic, and to pray to Him for His guidance and mercy.
- 431). C/. xiii. 18. Those who reject God's Message must realise that the time will come when they had sacrificed everything in the cause of Truth and Righteousness. It will be too late then. Why not examine the matter seriously now and accept God's Grace and Light?

4323, Cf. xviii. 82. God's gifts are given to all men—to some in a greater degree than to others. But it is all done according to His wise Plan, for His Will is just and looks to the good of all creatures. No one should therefore be puffed up in prosperity or cast down in adversity. Prosperity does not necessarily mean ment on man's part, nor adversity the reverse. Thinking men bear in mind the large Plan—which is visible in all God's Signs.

4326, Cf, xxxix. 18, and n. 4896. God's Command meets the weakness of His weakest servants, and only asks that His servants should surrender their selfsh will to God's Will. In divine compassion, therefore, we are allowed to do just what we can, even though our standard should fall short of the highest standard. But our aim should be to follow the highest standard, and God's Grace will come to our assistance. But we must do so in this life—and at once, as soon as the Word penetrates our mind or understanding. We must not delay a moment, for the Judgment may come at any time, suddenly, before we even perceive where we are.

4327. Many kinds of sighs and regrets will then assail us. In the first place, we shall see our shortcomings: we were negligent when we should have been serious: we mocked when we should have tred to learn and understand. But it will be too late then to retrieve our position.

4328. In the second place, we might be inclined to say, 'I wish I had received warning or guidance'. But this would not be true, because the warning and guidance are being conveyed in the clearest manner in God's Revelation. That is the force of 'lest it should say'. It could have said so, had it not seen that the objection is clearly anticipated in the call to repent and in the warning about the Hereafter.

4329. In the third place, when we stand face to face with the Penalty of our own deeds, we might say, 'I wish I had another chance'. But not one, but many, chances are being given, especially when we are told (verse 53 above): 'Despair not of the Mercy of God: for God forgives all sins: for He is Olf-Forgiving, Most Merciful'. The force of 'lest it should say' here is the same as explained in the last note.

4330. The reply explains how all such pleas have been anticipated and met It was deliberate rejection that will deserve and meet its consequences. It is further explained that the motive of sin, as as with Satan, was haughtiness and Self. There is no room for Self when the only Reality is God. My Signs, and thou didst Reject them: thou wast <sup>4st</sup> Haughty, and became one Of those who reject Faith!"

433. Majatat: place or state of safety or salvation, place or state of victory or achievement; accomplishment of wish or desire. This is contrasted against the frustration, failure, and perdition of the children of evil,—what may be called damnation in theological phrase.

4335, God has not only created all the Worlds, but He maintains them and cares for them. He does not sit apart from His world. Everything depends upon Him.

4336. God has nothing to lose by the rebellion or disobedience of His creatures. It is they who lose, because they go counter to their own nature, the beautiful mould in which God created them.

4337, "Order me": there is great irony here. The man of God turns to his critics and says; "Order me": there is great irony here. The man of God turns to his critics and says; "Order me in all ages, viz. (1) that the only Truth is in the Gospel of Unity; and (2) that if you worship other things and turn away from God, your life will be wasted and all your probation will have been of no account.

4338. The Message of Unity, renewed in Islam, has been the Message of God since the world began.

4339 C/, v. 6. False worship means that we run after fruitless things, and the main purpose of our spiritual lives is lost.

4340 To "give thanks" is to show by our conduct that we esteem the gifts of God and will use them in His service.

4341 Cf. vi. 91, and n. 909; and xxii 74. In running after false gods or the powers of nature they have forgotten that all creatures are as nothing before God.

4313, Sofiga implied the idea of a swoon, or loss of all consciousness of being; it implies a cessation of the normal functioning of the usual powers of life or feeling. The metaphor is that with the first Trumpet of the Resurrection, the whole world will cease to be in the form and the relations which we see now: there will be a new heaven and a new earth, see xiv. 66, n, 1925; human souls will for the time being be dazed and loss all memory or consciousness of time or place or personality. With the second one, they will stand in a new world ; they will see with clearer vision than ever before; and judgment will proceed.

4344. It will be a new Earth. All traces of injustice or inequality, darkness or evil, will have gone. There will be the one universal Light, the Glory of God, which will now illuminate all, Falsehood, pretence, and illusion will have disappeared. Everything will be seen in its true light.

4345. It is in such a scene of Reality that Judgment will be held. Before the Throne of God (if we may use metaphors again to form some idea out of the things we know) the book of each man's deeds and more will be placed wide open, which all may see; the Prophets and Preachers of Truth, and the martyrs who gave their lives or made their real sacrifices in the cause of Truth, will be in the Court, to give evidence; and the devision pronounced will be absolutely just, for the Judge will not only be just, but He will know every fact and circumstance, and His wisdom will give due weight to everthing, great or small.

The answer is perhaps given by other angels: 'yes; apostles were sent to them from among themselves, to warn them and to proclaim to them Mercy through repentance; but the decree of God, which warned them of punishment, has now come true against them, for they rebelled and were haughty; they rejected Truth, Faith, and Mercy to

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XL (Mü-min),

This Sura is called "The Believer" (Mū-min) from the story of the individual Believer among the people of Pharaoh, who declares his faith and looks to the Future (verses 28-45). It is also called Gāfir (He who forgives, see verse 3). In S. xxiii, called The Believers (Mū minūn), the argument was about the collective force of Faith and Virtue. Here it is about the Individual's witness to Faith and Virtue, and his triumph in the End.

We now begin a series of seven Sūras (xl-xlvi) to which are affixed the Abbreviated Letters  $H\bar{a}$ -Mtm. Chronologically they all belong to the same period, the later Meccan Period, and they immediately follow the last Sūra in time. About the Abbreviated Letters generally, see Appendix I at the end of S. II. As to the precise meaning of  $H\bar{a}$ -Mtm no authoritative explanation is available. If Mtm here has a signification similar to Mtm in A. L M, (see n. 25 to ii), it means the End of things, the Last Day, and all these Sūras direct our special attention to that.  $H\bar{a}$ , the emphatic guttural, in contrast with the softer breathing of Altf, may be meant to suggest that the Beginning (see n. 25 to ii. I, last paragraph) is only for the End, the Present for the Future, and to emphasize the eschatological element in Faith. But this is mere conjecture, and should be taken for no more than it is worth.

The general theme of the whole series is the relation of Faith to Unfaith, Revelation to Rejection, Goodness to Evil, Truth to Falsehood. It is shown that the first in each of these pairs is the real friend, helper, and protector of man, while the second is his enemy. The very word Hamim in that sense is used in Suras xl and xli (xl. 18 and xli. 34), while in the other Sūras we have words of equivalent import, s.g. vasil or navir (xlii. 8 and 31); qurin (xliii. 36, 381; maulii (xliv. 41); auliyāta or nāzirīn (xliv. 19, 34); and auliyāta (xliv. 32). Is it permissible to connect the Abbreviated Letters Hā-Bim with these ideas as expressed in the word Hamim?

Another suggestion worthy of consideration is that  $H\bar{a}$  stands for Haiy, and Mim for Qaiyūm. These are two attributes of God, meaning, (1) the Living, and (2) the Self-Subsisting, Eternal. The one points to Life and Revelation, and the other to the Hereafter and Eternity; and both these matters are specially dealt within the seven  $H\bar{a}$ -Nim Sūras. The first letter of Haiy ( $H\bar{a}$ ) is appropriate for life, and the last letter of  $Qaiy\bar{u}m$  is appropriate for the Last Days, the Ma'ad, the Hereafter. Again, this is mere conjecture, and should not be taken for more than it is worth.

Summary.—Faith is ever justified, for God forgives: but evil deeds must have evil fruits, for God knows and is just (xl. 1-20, and C. 206).

In all history Evil came to evil; the protest of Faith, in the midst of Evil, may be ignored; but Faith is protected by God, while Evil perishes (xl. 21-50, and C. 207).

No doubt is there of the Future Judgment; the Power, Goodness, and Justice of God are manifest; will man dispute, or will be accept the Signs before it is too late 1/ks. 51-85, and C. 208).

C. 206.—Believe in God, For He is Perfect
(xt. 1-20.) In Knowledge and Power, forgives Sin
And accepts Kepentance, and justly
Enforces His Law. Those who reject Him
Are but in deceit: His glory is sung
By the highest and purest. Give all devotion
To Him slone. The Day of Requital
Is ever drawing near, when Falschood
Will vanish, and God's Truth and Justice
Will be established for all Eternity.

۞ مَا يُجَلِّلُ فِ َ النِّيْ اللَّهِ ا كَمَّرُواْ فَلَا بَغُرُلَةَ تَعْلَيُهُمْ فِي الْمِيلَةِ

4356. See paragraphs 2-4 of the Introduction to this Sura.

4337. This verse is the same as xxxix: I, except for the last words describing the attribute of God. In S. xxxix. I, it was "Full of Wisdom", because stress was laid on the windom of God's Plan in ordering His World. In this Stra the stress is laid on God's Knowledge, before which the shallow knowledge of men is vain (x), 33).

4358. God's knowledge is supreme and all-reaching. But there are other attributes of His, which concern us even more intimately; i.g., He forgives sin and accepts our repentance when it is sincere and results in our change of heart and life; but He is also just, and strict in punishment; and so no loophole will be left for Evil except in repeniance. And further, all His attributes reach forward to everything; His Mercy, as well as His Knowledge and Justice; His Bounties as well as His Punishments.

4359. God's knowledge and attributes are perfect, and everything around us proclaims this. We are surrounded by His Signs. It is only want of Faith that will make people dispute about them, 4360, Cf. iii, 196. Their strutting about shows how little they can read the Signs.

5. But (there were people) before them, I Who denied (the Signs).—
The People of Noath,
And the Confederates
6. Thus was the Decree
Of thy Lord proved true
Against the Unbelievers; 4888
That truly they are
Companions of the Fire!

7. Those who sustain the Throne (of God)
And those around it
Sing Glory and Praise
To their Lord; believe
In Him; and implore Forgiveness

4361. Cf. xxxviii. 11-13, and n. 4158. All the hosts of wickedness collected together from history with have no power against God's Truth, or the Messenger of that Truth, or God's holy Plan for all His Creation.

4362. Whenever a great or vital Truth is proclaimed and renewed, there are always shallow minds that are ready to dispute about it! And what petty and wain arguments they advance! They think they can discredit or condemn the Truth in this way, or tender "of none effect." Godd's Plan, But they are mistaken. If they seem to succeed for a time, that is merely their tital. They may try to plan and plot against God's men. But their plots will fail in the long run. They will themselves be caught in their own snares. And then, how terrible will be their Punishment!

4363, Cf. xiii, 32,

4364. Cf. xxxix, 71. The Decree, or Word, of God, by which Evil was to be judged and condemned, was proved true against these men. They are "Companions of the Fire": in other words, they are fit to live only in the environment of Evil?

4485. Cf. xxxix. 25. As the Throne of God is figurative, so is the act of sustaining or carrying it. Nor must we suppose that this is restricted to such ideas as we form of angels. All good men and women who rise to the spiritual dignity of carrying the throne of God, or being in the company of such as carry it, sing the praises and glory of God. They are a part of that environment, just as the evil ones are a part of the environment of the Blazing Fire. Their Faith is perfect, for they have seen the Glory with their own spiritual eyes; and they beg for forgiveness for their weaker brothren, who struggle in Faith and Repentance in God's Path

4366. Cf. verse 3 above.

Is over all things,
In Mercy and Knowledge.
Forgive, then, those who
Turn in Repentance, and follow
Thy Path; and preserve them
From the Penalty
Of the Blazing Fire!

SECTION 2.

10. Mehe Unbelievers will be Addressed: "Greater was The aversion of God to you sent Than (is) your aversion

4367. There is nothing saifish in prayer. We pray for all who are true and sincere. But just as Evil is catching, so Goodness is catching in another sense. The associates of the Good and those near and dear to them also share in their goodness and happiness, if only they try to walk in the same Way. And the Grace of God is working for all, all the time.

4368. That is the final Judgment, and any who is saved from the evil consequence of their deeds in this life will truly have been saved by God's Mercy, and for them it is the highest achievement they could have, the attainment of all their wishes, the fulfilment of their destiny and the noblest purpose of their Life, the supreme Salvation and Felicity.

4369, Muslim Salvation, then, is more positive than mere safety from dangers or evils: it is the complete fulfilment of the noble destiny of man in the attainment of the fullest Grace.

4370. The Unbelievers having rejected God's Signs, they now see how they are shut out from Grace, and they feel disgusted with themselves. How much greater was God's displeasure with them, when He showered mercy upon mercy on them and they yet rebelled! How could they now hope for Grace!

To yourselves, seeing that ye Were called to the Faith And ye used to refuse."

- 11. They will say: "Our Lord!
  Twice hast Thou made us an Without life, and twice
  Hast Thou given us Life!
  Now have we recognised
  Our sins: is there
  Any way out (of this)?"
- 12. (The answer will be:)

  "This is because, when
  God was invoked as
  The Only (object of worship), 4972
  Ye did reject Faith,
  But when partrers were Joined to Him, ye believed!
  The Command is with God, 6782
  Most High, Most Great!"
- 13. The it is Who showeth
  You His Signs, and sendeth
  Down Sustenance for you <sup>676</sup>
  From the sky: but only
  Those receive admonition
  Who turn (to God).
- 14. Call ye, then, upon God With sincere devotion to Him.

4371. Cf. ii. 28: "How can'ye reject the faith in God?—seeing that ye were without life, and He gave you life; then will He cause you to die, and will again bring you to life; and again to Him will ye return." Non-existence, or existence as clay without life was equiva'ent to death. Then came true Life on this earth; then came physical death or the cessation of our physical life; and now at the Resurrection, is the second life.

4372. Cf. xxxix. 45, and n. 6313. When exclusive devotion is not rendered to God, there is no true understanding, in the mind of a creature, of his own true position, or of the working of the Divine Will and Purpose. How can he then hope to achieve the purpose of his life, or obtain God's Mercy, which is the only way to obtain release from the consequences of Sin?

4373. At the Judgment, the matter will have passed out of the stage at which further chances could have been hoped for. But in any case God is High above all things, Great above all that we can conceive of, both in Mercy and in Justice. The Decision will be with Him, and Him alone.

4374. Lest it should be thought that God's Grace did not meet the Sinner again and again and offer God's Mercy again and again, it is pointed out that God's Signs were freely vouchsafed everywhere and continuously, and that every kind of means was provided for man's "Sustenance" or growth and development, physical, meetal, and spiritual. But only those could take advantage of it who turned their attention to God, who submitted their will to Him.

Even though the Unbelievers and May detest it.

- 15. Raised high above ranks (Or degrees), 4376 (He is) the Lord Of the Throne (of authority): By His Command doth He Send the spirit (of inspiration) To any of His servants 4977 He pleases, that it may Warn (men) of the Day Of Mutual Meeting .-
- 16. The Day whereon They will (all) come forth: Not a single thing Concerning them is hidden From God. Whose will be The Dominion that Day? 4718 That of God, the One, The Irresistible!
- 17. That Day will every soul Be requited for what It earned: no injustice Will there be that Day. For God is Swift 4880 In taking account.

4375. Cf. ix. 33.

4376. He is raised far shove any rank or degree which we can imagine. It is possible also to treat Rais', as equivalent to Rais', meaning that He can raise His creatures to the highest ranks and degrees in His spiritual kingdom, for He is the fountain of all honour,

4377. The choosing of a man to be the recipient of inspiration-to be the standard-bearer of God's Truth-is the highest honour possible in the spiritual Kingdom. And God bestows that honour according to His own most perfect Will and Plan, which no one can ovestion, for He is the fountain of all honour, dignity, and authority, 4378, All men will meet together and meet their Lord at the Resurrection, no matter how far scattered they may have been in life or in death.

4379. The Kingdom of God-of Justice, Truth, and Righteousness-will then be fully established, Evil can then no more come into competition with Good, even in the subjective consciousness of man.

4380. Swift in several senses: (1) the time of the present life or of the interval before Judgment, i.e., before the restoration of true values, is so short as compared to Eternity, that it may be counted as negligible; in the next verse the Day is characterised as "(ever) drawing near"; (2) in spate of the great concourse of souls to be judged, the process of Judgment will be almost instantaneous, "in the twinkling of an eye!" (xvi. ??), because everything is already known to God; and yet not the least injustice will be done.

[ S. XL. 18-20.

- 20. And God will judge With (Justice and) Truth: But those whom (men) Invoke besides Him, will Not (be in a position) To judge at all. Verily it is God (alone) Who hears and sees 4386 (All things).

C. 207.-Travel in space and time, and you (xl. 21-50,) Will see that Evil came to nothing

- 4381. Hearts will come right up to the Throats to choke them: an idiom implying that the whole of their life-functions will be choked up with terror. But a more subtle meaning emerges from further analysis. The heart (or the breast) is the seat of affection, emotion, and every kind of feeling, such as terror, pain, despair, etc. These things will as it were overflow right up to the threat and choke it. The throat is the vehicle for the voice; their voice will be choked, and they will be able to say nothing. The throat is the channel for food, which goes to the stomach and maintains a healthy functioning of life; the choking means that the healthy functioning will stop, and there will be nothing but wee.
- 4382. In that enforcement of personal responsibility, what sympathy or intercession can the wrong-doers get ? Is Hamim in any way connected with the Abbreviated Letters Ha-Mim attached to this Stra? See Introduction.
- 4383, Men may be taken in by tricks that deceive with the eves, but God's perfect knowledge penetrates through all mysteries. "Deceive with the eyes" may mean several things: (1) a sleight of hand (literally or figuratively) may deceive in respect of the eyes of beholders, for the things that they see do not actually happen; (2) it may be the deceiver's own eyes that play false, because, for example, they show love when hatred is meant; or (3) it may be that the eyes of the beholder play him false, in that he sees things that he should not see, and thus sins with his eyes.
- 4384. Here we come into the region of evil motives and thoughts which may be concealed in the heart, breast, or mind, but which are all perfectly known to God.
- 4385. If men build their hopes or their faith in anything except the Divine Grace, they will find themselves deserted. Any pretences that They make will be known to God. On the other hand every single good act, or word, or motive, or aspiration of their will, will reach God's Throne of Mercy.

S. xt. 21-23.1

But evil. Mighty men of old In arrogance plotted against God's Truth. But were brought low. A humble Believer In Pharach's Court stood up for Truth, And counselled his People to obey the Right: In earnest humility did he address them. They heard him not. But he was saved. And they were engulfed in the Wrath of God.

SECTION 3.

C. 207

- 21. Do they not travel Through the earth and see What was the End Of those before them? 4886 They were even superior To them in strength, And in the traces (they san Have left) in the land: But God did call them To account for their sins. And none had they To defend them against God.
- 22. That was because there came To them their apostles 4888 With Clear (Signs). But they rejected them : So God called them To account: for He is Full of Strength. Strict in Punishment.
- 23. old We sent Moses, 40 With Our Signs And an Authority manifest.

4386. Cf. xxx. 9 and several other similar passages.

4388. But God in His Mercy always sends a Message of warning and good news through his apostles, and He gives His apostles Clear Signs and an authority that can be recognised. Among the Clear Signs are: (1) the pure and unselfish lives of the apostles; (2) the revelation of truth which they bring; (3) their influence on the course of events in their own and succeeding generations; etc. Some of these may be so remarkable that they merit the name of Miracles.

4389. This is not the story of Moses himself, so much as an introduction to the story of the one just man who believed, in the court of Pharach: see verse 28 below. This Sura ("The Believer") is called after him.

<sup>4387.</sup> See n. 3515 to xxx, 9. We can learn from the history of previous nations. Many of them were more powerful, or have left finer and more imposing monuments and made a deeper impression on the world around them than any particular generation addressed, "Traces" in the text may be taken in that extended sense. And yet all this did not save them from the consequences of their sins. They were called to account and punished. None of the power or pomp or skill of which they boasted could for a moment ward off the punishment when it came in God's good time.

٥ الدي المعرف و محمد و مرون المنظمة ا

4390. Here are three types of Unfaith, each showing a different phase, and yet all united in opposition to the Truth and Mission of Moses. (1) Pharaoh is the type of arrogance, cruefly, and reliance on brute force; Cf. xxviii. 38-93. (2) Hamān was Pharaoh's minister (n. 331) to xxviii. 58: he was the type of a sycophant who would pander to the vanity of any man in power. (3) Qārān excelled in his wealth, was selfash in its use, and overbearing to the poor (xxviii. 581, and n. 3404). They all came to an evil end eventually.

4301, Verse 24 described the opposition of three types of Unfaith, which opposed Faith, in different ways, as described in the last note QRun, in his overweening insolence, may well have called Moses and Aaron "sorcerars telling lies" in the Sinai desert, as he despised prests and men of God, and might cast the Egyptian reproach in their teeth as a reminiscence. Here, in verse 23, we have an apsiode about the time of the birth of Moses: "them" and "they" refer to Pharach and his Court; the "coming" of Moses here refers to the time of his birth. On that construction, "with him", lower down in their speech would be elliptical, referring to "slay the sons", as if they had said, "Kill all Israelite male children: the unknown Prophet to be born would be amongst them: so kill them all with him". In verse 25 we again skip some years and recall an episode when Moses, having got his mission, stood in Pharach's Court, and some of the Egyptian Commonalty were almost ready to believe in him.

4392. That is, the Israelites, for they were the custodians of God's Faith then. For the slaughter of Israelite children by Pharaoh, see axviii. 4-6, and notes.

4393. This is an episode that occurs when Moses, invested with his mission, confronts Pharaoh in his Court and preaches to him: see xx. 49 and following verses; also xx. 57, 63.

4394. Some of Pharaoh's people did afterwards give up the worship of Pharaoh and of the Egyptian gods and believed "in the Lord of Aaron and Moses" and in fact suffered martyrdom for the Faith of Unity: zxx, 70-21.

27. Moses said: "I have indeed Called upon my Lord And your, Lord *** (For protection) from every Arrogant one who believes not In the Day of Account!"

SECTION 4.

Believer, a man 4006 From among the people Of Pharaoh, who had concealed His faith, said: "Will ve Slav a man because he Says, 'My Lord is God'?-When he has indeed come To you with Clear (Signs) From your Lord? And if He be a liar, on him Is (the sin of) his lie: But, if he is telling town The Truth, then will Fall on you something Of the (calamity) of which He warns you : truly God guides not one was Who transgresses and lies!

29. "O my People! yours
Is the dominion this day:

وقال موسمة المن عندن به وتوسع من من المستحدة المستحد

®يَعَوْمِلَكُهُ ٱلْكُلْثَ ٱلْكِوْرَ

- 4395. The whole point of the Gospel of Unity which Moses preached was that the God of Moses and the God of Pharsoh, of Israel and of Egypt, the Lord of all the Worlds, was One,—the only True God. See xx. 49-50 and notes 2572 and 1573.
- 4396. There is nothing to justify the identification of this man with the man mentioned in xxviii. 20, who warned Mosel long before Moses had received his mission. On the contrary, in this passage, the man is evidently speaking after Moses had received his mission, preached to Pharaoh, and got a certain amount of success, for which Pharaoh and his people were trying to seek his life. Moses had evidently afterady brought his Clear Signs.
- 439. A commonsense view is put before them by an Egyptian who loves his own people and does not wish them to perish in sin. "Will you kill this man for calling on God? Have you not seen his character and behaviour? Do you not see the 'Clear Signs' about him that bespeak his credentials? Suppose for a moment that he is a liar and pretender: he will suffer for his falsehood, but why should you turn against God? But suppose that he is really inspired by God to tell you the truth and warn you against evil, what will be your fate when God's Wrath descends? For it must descend if he is a true Messenger sent by God."
- 4398. This is with reference to the "Clear signs". 'They are Signs of God's guidance, for God would never guide a man who exceeds the bounds of truth and tells you lies! Such a man is bound to be found out!'

<sup>4401.</sup> He appeals to past history. 'Have you not heard of people who lived before you?—like the generations of Noah, the 'Ad, the Thamüd, and many more—who held together in sin against God's Preachers, but were wiped out for their sins?'

<sup>4403. &#</sup>x27;All these disasters happened in history, and they will happen again to you if you do not give up evil. Do not for a moment think that God is unjust. It is you who are deliberately preparing the disasters by your conduct.'

<sup>4404.</sup> This Day may refer to the Day of Judgment, of which three features are here referred to.

(1) People may wail and call to each other, but no one can help another; each one will have bis own judgment to face; (2) the wicked will then be driven to Hell from the Judgment-Srat; and (3) there will be no one to help, guide, or intercede, because the grace and guidance of God lad alria dy been rejected. But the words are perfectly general, and are applicable to all stages at which the Wrath of God is manifest,

- 33, "A Day when ve Shall turn your backs And flée: no defender Shall ve have from God: Any whom God leaves To stray, there is none To guide ...
- 34. " And to you there came Joseph in times gone by. "" With Clear Signs, but Ye ceased not to doubt Of the (mission) for which He had come : at length. When he died, ye said: 'No apostle will God send 4006 After him.' Thus doth God Leave to stray such as Transgress and live in doubt .-
- 35, "(Such) as dispute about The Signs of God, Without any authority That bath reached them. Grievous and odious (Is such conduct) In the sight of God And of the Believers. Thus doth God seal up 4167 Every heart-of arrogant And obstinate transcressors."

4405 So far he has been speaking of general religious tradition. Now, as an Egyptian, addressing Egyptians he refers to the mission of loseph in Egypt, for which see the whole of Sura xii, and Appendix VI following it. Joseph was not born in Egypt, nor was he an Egyptian With what wonderful incidents he came into Egypt! What difficulties did he not surmount among his own brothers first, and in the Egyptian family which afterwards adopted him! How injustice, spale, and forgetfulness on the part of others, yet wove a spell round him and made him a ruler and saviour of Egypt in times of famine! How he preached to prisoners in prison, to Zulaikha in her household, to the Egyptian ladies in their banquet, and to the Court of Pharach generally ! The Egyptians profited by the material gains which came to them through him, but as a nation remained sceptical of his spiritual truths for many generations after him.

4406. See Appendix IV, p. 406, for a discussion of the interval between Joseph and Moses. Perhaps the interval was about one to three centuries, a very short period for the memory of a learned nation like the Egyptians. And yet they as a nation ignored his spiritual work, and afterwards even persecuted Israel in Egypt until Moses delivered them. They actually saw the benefits conferred by Joseph, but did not realise that God's Kingdom works continuously even though men ignore it. See Appendix V, pp. 408-13, for a sketch of Religion in Egypt. For such men how could the Grace and Guidance of God be effective in their hearts?

4407. See the last note. The arrogant transgressors having closed their hearts to the Message of God and to every appeal made to them, it followed by God's Law that their hearts were sealed up to any fresh influences for good. Cf. vii. 100; also ii 7, and n. 31.

- 36. Pharaoh said: "O Hāmān! Build me a lofty palace,"
  That I may attair The ways and means—
- 37. "The ways and means
  Of (reaching) the heavens,
  And that I may mount up
  To the God of Moses:
  But as far as I am concerned,
  I think (Moses) is a liar! "
  Thus was made alluring, 4000
  In Pharaoh's eyes,
  The evil of his deeds,
  And he was hindered
  From the Path; and the plot 4100
  Of Pharaoh led to nothing
  But perdition (for him).

- 4408, Cf. xxviii, 38, and n. 3371. There are two points to be noted here. (1) Pharaoh, in the arrogance of his materialism, thinks of the Kingdom of Heaven like a kingdom on earth; he thinks of spiritual hings in terms of palaces and ladders; notice that the word ababé (ways and means) is emphasised by repetition. (2) His sarcasm turns Moses and God to ridicule. Really he does not believe in anything spiritual, and he frankly states that "for his part he thinks Moses is a liar", though other men less lofty than he (Pharaoh) may be deceived by the Clear Signs of Moses.
- 4409. Pharaoh's speech shows how his own egotism and haughty arrogance brought him to this pass, that even the evil which he did seemed alluring in his own eyes! His heart was indeed sealed, and his arrogance prevented him from seeing the right path. (With the KOff Qiriat! read sudds in the passive voice).
- 4410. Pharaoh had plotted to slay Moses (x1, 26) and to kill the Children of Israel (x1, 25). The plotter traciled on his own head and on the head of his people who joined in the plot; for they were all drowned in the Red Sea.
- 4411. Note the contrast between the earnest beseeching tone of the Believer here and the bectoring tone of Pharaoh in using similar words in xl. 29 above.

That is the Home

- 40. "He that works evil Will not be requited But by the like thereof: And he that works A righteous deed—whether Man or woman—and is A Believer—such will enter The Garden (of Bliss): therein Will they have abundance ""

  Without measure.
- 41. "And O my People!

  Whether in this world,

- 4412. Faith makes him see the contrast between vanities, even though they may glitter temporarily, and the eternal Good that is destined for man.
- 4413. Cf. ii. 212. The spiritual Good will not only last. It will be a most liberal reward, far above any merits of the recipient.
- 4114. It may seem strange according to the laws of this world that he should be seeking their Good while they are seeking his damnation! But that is the merit of Faith. Its mission is to rescue its seemies and God's enemies, as far as their will will consent!
- 4415. The worship of Pharaoh was but typical of Egyptian blasphemy, but it had many sides, including the worship of heroes, animals, powers of good and evil in nature, and idols of all kinds, It is this comprehensive cult which required forgiveness again and again, but God is Exalted in Power, and gives such forgiveness on repentance.
- 4416. Faith is not content with its own inner vision and conviction. It can give ample arguments, Three are-mentioned here: (I) nothing but God is worthy of worship, either in this world of sense or in the spiritual world; (2) our Return will be to God, the only Reality; and (3) the worship of Falsehood must necessarily lead to the Penalty of Falsehood, unless God's Mercy intervenes and forgives on our sincere rependance.

Or in the Hereafter; Our Return will be To God; and the Transgressors Will be Companions Of the Fire!

- 44. "Soon will ye remember
  What I say to you (now). ""
  My (own) affair I commit

  Judgment will be established:

<sup>4417.</sup> The wording suggests as if there was a plot to kill him, but he was saved, as the next verse shows. His thought to the last is with his People. 'No matter what you do to me: you will have cause to remember my admonition, when perhaps it is too late for you to repent. For my part I commit myself to the care of God, and my Faith tells me that all will be right.'

<sup>4418.</sup> The Pharaoh of the time of Moses, and his people, suffered many calamities in this world: vii. 130-136. But those were nothing to the spiritual Penalties mentioned in the next verse.

<sup>4419.</sup> When the Judgment really comes, it is not like an ordinary physical disaster. The Fire of Punishment is ever present—morning and evening—i.s., at all times. The sentence becomes final and there is no mitigation.

<sup>4420.</sup> Just as Unity, Harmony, and Peace are symbols of Truth, Bliss, and Salvation, so Reproaches, Disputes, and Disorders are symbols of Hell.

4421. Note the evasion and cynicism of the answer, befitting the character of spiritual misleaders! 'What! are we not suffering with you in the same Fire! Pray to God if you like! He has pronounced His Judgment!' Cf. xiv. 21.22.

4422. Cf. xxxix, 71. The poor misguided ones will turn to the angels who are their Keepers, asking them to pray and intercede for them. But the angels are set there to watch over them, not to intercede for them. In their innocence they ask, 'Did you have no warnings from apostles, mea like yourselves, in your past life?'

4423. The answer being in the affirmative, they will have to tell the dreadful truth: 'This is need to tell the or the place for prayer, for mercy! And in any case, Prayer without Faith is Delusson, and must miss if mark.' Cf. kiii. 14.

SECTION 6.

- 51. We will, without doubt, Help Our apostles and those Who believe, (both) In this world's life And on the Day When the Witnesses test Will stand forth,— 4424. The Day of Judgment is described as "the Day when Witnesses will stand forth". This description implies two things: (i) that there man will be judged justly; his past actions and his faculties and opportunities with be witnesses as to the use he made of them; (axiv. 29); in fact he will himself (be a witness against himself (vi. 130); and the prophets and just men will bear witness to the fact that they preached and warmed men (xxix. 89; it. 133).

﴿ فَاضْمِهُمْ النَّ وَعَدَا لَدَيْتُ وَأَسْفَغْفِرْ لِذَنْ إِلَى وَسَمِيمِ

4425. After the testimony mentioned in the last note, there will be no room for excuses, and if any were made, they could serve no purpose, unlike the state of matters in this world, where there is much make-believe, and Falschood often masquerades as Truth and is accepted as such even by those who should know better.

425. Moses was given a Revelation, and it was given in heritage to the Children of Israel, to preserve it, guide their conduct by it, and hold aloft its Message: but they failed in all these particulars.

4427. The Israelites corrupted or lost their Book; they disobeyed God's Law; and failed to proclaim and exemplify God's Message. That is why the new Revelation came to the holy Apostle. If, in the beginning, it was rejected and persecuted, there was no cause for discouragement; on the contrary, there was all the greater need for patience and perseverance.

44.8. Every mortal according to his nature and degree of spiritual enlightenment falls short of the perfect standard of God (xwi. 61), and should therefore ask God for forgiveness. What is merit in an ordinary man may be a human shortcoming in one nearest to God: see xxxvii; 24.25, and notes 4175.76. Prophets have a further responsibility for their People or their Ummat, and they ask in a representative capacity.

The Praises of thy Lord In the evening And in the morning. 4691

<sup>4431.</sup> The heavens and the earth include mankind and all other creatures and millions of stars, Man is himself but a tiny part of creation. Why should he be so ego-centric? The whole is greater than a tiny part of it. And God Who created the whole of the Worlds is able to do much more wonderful things than can enter the imagination of man. Why should man be arrogant and doubt the Resurrection, and take upon himself to doubt the possibility of God's Revelation? It is only because he has made himself blind. See next verse.

<sup>4432.</sup> The man of Faith who backs his faith by righteous conduct is like the man of clear vision, who sees things in their true perspective and walks with firm steps in the Way of God, The man who does evil is like a blind man: the Light of God is all around him, but the man has made himself blind, and he can see nothing. He has rejected Faith and cannot even learn by other people's admonition,

4434. As this life is not the end of all things, and we are to have its fulfilment in the Hereafter: we have only to pray to the Lord of the Present and the Hereafter, and He will hear us, forgive us, guide us, and make our Path smooth. But Pride will have its fall,--and its humiliating Punishment: Cf. xxxviii. 18

4435. The succession of Day and Night in our physical life is frequently appealed to, as a symbol to draw our attention to the Mercy and Bounty of God. If we viewed these things arght, we should serve God and seek Light from Him and Rest from Him, and celebrate His praises with gratitude.

4436. If we worship false gods, i.e., go after vanifies, what is it that deludes us and leads us astray? What could it be but our rank ingratitude and failure to use the understanding which God has given us?

4437. See the last two notes. If men are deluded by Falsemoods, it is because they reject Revelation and refuse to learn from the Signs of God all around them.

4438. The argument in the last two verses was from man's personal experiences of his physical life. In this and the next verse a parallel argument is addressed to man on a much higher plane; look at the spacial position you way above other animals that you know, in shape and form, and moral and spiritual capacities; consider your the state of the property of the p

- 67. It is He Who has 4446 Created you from dust,

4439. A resting place: I understand this to imply a temporary place of rest or sojourn, a period of probation, to be followed by the eternal Home.

4440. Cf. vii. 11 and n. 996 The shape and form refer to the physical form as well as to the inborn moral and spiritual capacities of man. As regards physical form, Cf. Milton's description of Adam and Eve. "Two of far noble shape, erect and fall "(Paradiss Lost, iv. 288). As regards moral and spiritual capacities, they are typified by the breathing of God's spirit into man: xv. 29.

4441. "Sustanance": all that is necessary for growth and development, physical, moral, and spiritual. Cf. n. 2105 to xvi. 73.

4442. The real, self-subsisting Life is only in Him; Cf. ii. 255, and a. 296. All other forms of life are but shadows compared to His perfect Light.

443. If God, when we truly apprehend Him, is the only Reality, we must take our standard and inspiration from Him. All other objects of worship are mere delusions. To any one who sees this clearly, through God's Solf revelations, the only possible course is to give up everything else, which his own inner experience as well as outer Revelation tell him is false or of a temporary nature, and to bring his own will and actions into complete unison with the only Reality; for that is the meaning of Islâm, bowing to the Will of God, When we bow to the Real and Everlasting, we are automatically saved from falling victims to the False and Evanescent.

4444. Cf. this passage with xxii. 5 and notes 2773 and 2774. The various stages of man's physical life are: (1) first, simple matter (dust); (2) the sperm-drop in the father; (3) the fertilised ovum in the mother's womb; (4) out into the light, as a human child; (5) youth and full maturity; (6) deay; and (7) death. In some cases the later stages are curtailed or cut off; but in any case, a Term appointed is reached, so that the higher purpose of God's Will and Plan may be fulfilled in each given case, that man "may hearn wisdom".

مِنْدَ فِي ٱلنَّارِيْهِ

4452, Cf. xxxix. 72,

<sup>4448.</sup> The rejection of God's Message, however brought, carries its own penalty. The yoke of spiritual slavery to Sin and Evil is fastened more and more firmly round the rejecter's neck, because there is no one to safeguard his freedom, and the chains of superstitions and the ugly consequences of evil restrict his freedom and the limited faculty of choice which was given by God to man. This process receives its climax at the Hour of Judgment, <sup>4449.</sup> The sinner gets dragged further and further in the disgusting consequences of his evil actions, until the fire of destruction closes in upon him.

<sup>4450.</sup> All falsehoods will vanish: Cf. vii. 36 The only Reality will be fully manifest even to those-to whom Evil was made to seem alluring in the lower life. They will feel in their immost souls that they had been pursuing mere shadows, things of no real existence. This was the result of their rejecting 186 Light and the Grace of God: they got entangled in the mazes of error.

<sup>4451.</sup> God does not withdraw His grace from any unless (1) they artively and deliberately take a deliberately that are vain or false, and (2) they insolently reject the things that are true,—in other words, unless men are deliberately false to their own lights, as illuminated by the Light of God.

77. So persevere in patience; For the Promise of God Is true: and whether was We show thee (in this life) Some part of what We Promise them,—or We Take thy soul (to Our Mercy) (Before that),—(in any case) It is to Us that They shall (all) return.

78. We did aforetime send Apostles before thee : of them *104. There are some whose story We have related to thee, And some whose story We have not related To thee. It was not (Possible) for any apostle To bring a Sign except By the leave of God: But when the Command 1833 Of God issued. The matter was decided In truth and justice. And there perished, There and then, those Who stood on Falsehoods.

SECTION 9.

79. Æt is God who made 486 Cattle for you, that ye ۞ فَأَصْبِرْ إِلَّ وَعَدَا لِلْدَعِنَّ فَإِلَى نُوتِيَّاكَ بَعْضَ الْدَى فَعِلْهُمْ أَوْ نَتَوَقِّيَّنَكَ فَإِلَيْنَا يُرْجَعُونَ

الله الذي مَسَالِكُ مُالْأَلْمَامُ

4453. Cf. x. 46, and n. 1438. As the eventual justice and readjustment of values must take place, when every soul returns to the Judgment-seat of God, it makes no difference if good and evil meet their deserts in this very life or not. Cf. also xiii. 40.

4454. Cf. iv. 164. God sant Messengers of His Truth to every people. There are some whose names are known to us through the holy Qin-ān, but there are a large number whose names are not made known to us through that medium. We must recognise the Truth wherever we find it.

4455. The Signs of God are everywhere, and can be seen by the discerning eye at all times. But if we transitionary Signs are demanded by cynics or Unbeltevers, they will not be granted merely because they are demanded. It is God's Will that issues them, not merely the desire of human beings, even if he be a Messenger of God. But when an extraordinary Sign does issue by the Command of God, it means that the cup of the imquitious is full; that their case is decided, and their time of respite is past; and that lightice takes the place of Mercy, and evil is biotected out.

4455. Cf. avi. 5-8. The fact that beasts, which in their wild state are so noxious, are, when domesticated, so useful to man, is itself one of the great and standing Signs of God's care for man. The great usefulness of cattle is very instructive. They serve for riding, and many of them for food; further, they are used for the plough, and they produce milk, or wonk, or hair; and from their careases man derives bones and horns for many industrial uses; but passing on to higher aspects of ille, they further social, moral, and spiritual uses as draught-animals, in that transport serves one of the fundamental purposes of civilisation, being in this respect like ships for international commerce: XXX 64, and n. 3565. It is by means of human intercourse through transport that we can carry out the highest needs of our culture, "any need there may be in our bears", i.e., in our inner beling.

May use some for riding And some for food:

- 80. And there are (other) advantages In them for you (besides); That ye may through them Attain to any need (There may be) in your hearts; And on them and on ships Ye are curried.
- 81, And He shows you (always) ""
  His Signs: then which
  Of the Signs of God
  Will ye deny?
- 82. Do they not travel through

  Before them? They were More numerous than these
  And superior in strength 4498
  And in the traces
  (They have left) in the land:
  Yet all that they accomplished
  Was of no profit to them.
- 83. For when their apostles
  Came to them
  With Clear Signs, they exulted ***
  In such knowledge (and skill)

<sup>4457.</sup> The Signs of God's goodness and mercy are so numerous that it is impossible to enumerate them. Which of them can any mortal deny? This is the theme of that highly postical Sura, Rahmān (S. Iv.),

<sup>4459.</sup> Cf. ix. 69. For any generation to take inordinate pride in its own single achievements in science or skill becomes ridiculous if we consider the broad stream of history. In the first place, men will find that a great deal of what they attibute to their own merits only became possible owing to the earlier work of their predecessors. Secondly, many of their predecessors were more numerous and mightier in power than they, although the perspective of time may have reduced the apparent depth of their influence, and the monuments which they have left behind may have suffered from the destroying hand of Time. Thirdly, and most important of all, when they forgot God and His inexorable Law, nothing of their own handlwork profited them: they perished in the common ruin as all vanities must, perish. Cf. also x1, 21 above, and n. 4387. See how the recapilulation rounds of the argument.

<sup>4459.</sup> Arrogance and an exaggerated idea of Self were at the bottom of the Evil to which they succumbed.

As they had; but That very (Wrath) at which 4600 They were wont to scoff Hemmed them in.

- 84. But when they saw
  Our Punishment, they said:
  "We believe in God,—
  The One God and we
  Reject the partners we used
  To join with Him."
- 85. But their professing the Faith 4861
  When they (actually)-saw
  Our Punishment was not going
  To profit them.
  (Such has been) God's way
  Of dealing with His servants
  (From the most ancient times)
  And even thus did
  The rejecters of God
  Perish (utteriv)!

4460. Cf. xvi. 34. Nothing could stop the Justice of God punishing Evil. What they had ridiculed came as an inexorable fact. None of their grandeur or art or science or skill was of any use when they lost their souls!

4461. Again and again were they given chances, and again and again did they reject them, When it was too late, and in fact when it had no meaning, they offered to profess Faith. That was of no use. God does not accept unmeaning things of that kind. He wants to train and purify our will. For their disobedience and rebellion they perished utterly.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XLI (Ha-Mim).

This is the second of the series of seven Sūras bearing the Abbreviated Letters  $H\bar{a}$ -Mim, as explained in the Introduction to S. xi. To prevent confusion with other Sūras of the  $H\bar{a}$ -Mim series, the word Sirjda is sometimes added to the title, making it  $H\bar{a}$ -Mim as-Sajda, the double title being necessary as there is another Sūra called Sajda (S. xxxii). To avoid the double title, it is sometimes called Fajda (S. xxxii). To avoid the double title, it is sometimes called Fajda (from the occurrence of the word in verse 3.

The meaning of  $H\bar{a}.Mim$  has been explained in the Introduction to S. xl, where will also be found a note on the chronology and general theme of the seven  $H\bar{a}.Mim$  Sorres.

For this particular Sûra the theme is that the basis of Faith and Revelation is God's Power and Goodness, and the fruit of both is man's righteousness and healing.

Summary.—What is Revelation and Faith, and what is man's attitude to both, and what are its consequences? (xli. 1-32, and C. 209),

. The fruits of Faith and Unfaith, Truth and Falsehood (xli. 33-54, and C. 210).

C. 209.—Revelation explains, and makes things clear;

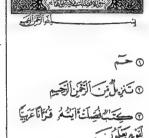

(xii. 1-32) It gives the message of hope and mercy,
And it warns men against the snares
Of Evil. Deny not God, the Lord
Of the Worlds, Whose glory and power
Are shown in Creation, and His Mercy
In Revelation. Learn from the fate
Of the Peoples of old! Learn from the warnings
Of your own nature: your very limbs
And faculties, if misused, bear witness
Against you. Repent ere it be too late,

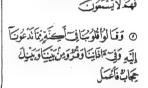

Stra XLI.

<sup>4462.</sup> Abbreviated Letters: see Introduction to S. xl. See also n. 4382 to xl. 18, and n. 4505 to xl. 34.

<sup>443.</sup> In the last Stra (x1, 23) the revelation was described with reference to some of the qualities of God, from Whom it came. Here it is described mainly with reference to its subject-matter. (1) it brings the Message of Grace and Mercy; (2) it is not merely a book of Dark.Sayings, but everything is explained clearly and from various points of view; (3) it is in Arabic, the language of the people among whom it was first promulgated, and therefore easily intelligible to them if they take the trouble to understand; and (4) it opens the way to Forgiveness-through Repentance and gives warning of all spiritual Dangers.

<sup>4464.</sup> With all the qualities mentioned in the last note, if men do not profit by its blessings, the fault lies in their will; they turn away, and thus fail to hear the voice that calls to them.

<sup>4465.</sup> The consequence of their wilful rejection is that a distance is created between Revelation and those for whom it is meant; their ears become deaf, so that the voice falls fainter and fainteron their ears: they feel a bar between themselves and the Messenger who comes to teach them, Cl. vii. 25.

<sup>• 4466.</sup> This is either a superiority complex adopting the sarcastic tone of an interiority complex, or it expresses calculated indifference to spiritual teaching. In effect it says: "Our hearts and minds are not intelligent enough to understand your noble ideas, nor our ears sufficiently acute to hear their exposition: you and we are quite different; there is a gulf between us. Why worry about us? You go your way, and we shall go ours!"

For us, we shall do 'What we will!)"

- 6. Say thou: "I am
  But a man like you: 4167
  It is revealed to me
  By inspiration, that your God
  Is One God: so stand
  True to Him, and ask
  For His forgiveness." 4408
  And woe to those who Join gods with God,—
- Those who practise not Regular Charity, and who Even deny the Hereafter.
- 8. For those who believe 4699
  And work deeds of righteousness
  Is a reward that will Never fail.

4467. The reply is in effect: that the bringer of the Message is not an angel not a god, and so there can and ought to be no barrier between him and his hearers; but he has been chosen to bring a Message of Truth and Hope to them; they should accept the Gospel of Unity, and by Repentance obtain God's Grace and Forgiveness.

4468. There is nothing but pity for those who reject Truth, run after false worship, have no sympathy or charity for their fellow-men, and even deny that there is any future Life.

4469. But blessed are those who have Faith. They will have a Future and a Bliss that will never fait.

4470. This is a difficult passage, describing the primal creation of our physical earth and the physical heavens around us. If we count the two Days mentioned in this verse, the four Days mentioned in verse 10, and the two Days mentioned in verse 110, we get a total of eight Days, while in many passages the creation is stated to have taken place in six Days; see vii. 54, in 1031; and xxxii. 4, in .3632. The Commentators understand the "four Days" in verse 10 to include the two Days in verse 9, so that the total for the universe comes to six Days. This is reasonable, because the processes described in verse 9 and 10 form really one series. In the one case it is the creation of the formies matter of, the earth; in the other case it is the gradual evolution of the oring its mountains and seas, and its animal and vegetable life, with the "nourishment in due proportion", proper to each, Cf also xv. 19-20.

(٤١) سورة قص

10. He set on the (earth). Mountains standing firm. 471 High above if. And bestowed blessings on The earth, and measured therein All things to give them Nourishment in due proportion, In four Days, 4172 in accordance With (the needs of) Those who seek (sustenance).4173

11. Moreover He comprehended 4474 In His design the sky, 4473 And it had been (as) smoke: He said to it And to the earth: "Come ye-together,4711 Willingly or unwillingly," They said: "We do come (Together), in willing obedience," 12. So he completed them As seven firmaments

4471. Cf. xiii. 3 and xvi. 15, n. 2038. High above it: the highest mountains are 29,000 feet above sea-level, and the lowest depths of the bottom of the ocean are 31,600 feet below sea-level, so that the vertical difference between the highest and lowest points on the solid crust of the earth is about 114 miles. The highland areas are the main sources of the water-supply in all the regions of the earth, and vegetable and animal life depends on water-supply,

4472, See n. 4470 above.

4473 Sa-ilin may mean either (1) those who seek, or (2) those who ask or enquire. If the former meaning is adopted, the clause means that everything is apportioned to the needs and appetites of God's creatures. If the latter, it means that the needs of enquirers are sufficiently met by what is stated here.

4474. For istawā see n. 1386 to x. 3. Ci. also ii. 29.

4475. From laxix, 30 it would appear as if the earth was spread out after the sky was made. In the present passage the creation of the earth and the evolution of life on our globe are mentioned first; and the making of the sky into the seven firmaments is mentioned last. The two statements are not inconsistent. It is stated here that when the sky was made into seven firmaments, it had existed previously as smoke, or vapour, or steam. The idea I derive from a collation of the relevant Quranic passages is that God first created primeval matter, which was as yet without order, shape, or symmetry. This state is called Chaos as opposed to Cosmos in Greek Cosmogony. The next stage would be the condensation of this primeval matter, into gases, liquids, or solids: on this subject no precise information is given us; it belongs to the realm of Physics. About the earth we are told of four stages or Days, and about the heavens, of two stages or Days. For Days seen n. 4477 below. If these stages proceeded or proceed together in time, it is obvious that each stage as we know it on earth is half as long as each stage in the heavens. But these are questions of Physics, Astronomy, or Geology, not questions of Religion.

4476. I take this to mean that God's design in creation was not to keep heaven and earth separate, but together, as we indeed are, being part of the solar system, and travellers through space. crossing the path of several comets. And all matter created by God willingly obeys the laws laid down for it.

4477. For " Days", which may include thousands of years, see vii 54, and n. 1031. They refer to stages in the evolution of physical nature. In the Biblical cosmogony, (Gen. i, and ii, 1-7), whichreflects old Babylonian cosmogony, the scheme is apparently to be taken literally as to days and is as follows. The first day God created light; the second, the firmament; the third, the earth and vegetation; the fourth, the stars and planets; the fifth, fish and fow) from the sea; and the sixth, cattle. creeping things, beasts on land, and man; on the seventh day He ended His work and rested, Our scheme is wholly different. (1) God did not rest, and never rests. "His Throne doth extend over the heavens and the earth, and He feeleth no fatigue in guarding and preserving them"; (2) God's work has not ended; His activity still goes on: xxxii. 5; vii. 54; (3) man in our scheme does not come in with land animals; his advent is much later; (4) our stages are not sharply divided from each other, as in the above scheme, where the stars and planets having been created on the fourth day, it is not intelligible how the first three days were counted, nor how vegetation grew on the third day, Our stages for earth and heaven are not in sequence of time for the heavens and the earth. Our six stages are broadly speaking, (1) the throwing off of our planet from cosmic matter; (2) its cooling and condensing; (3) and (4) the growth of vegetable and animal life; (5) and (6) the parallel growth of the starry realm and our solar system.

4478. Cf. xv. 17, and n. 1951; also xxxvii. 6-9. The transition from the third person ("He completed," etc.) may be noted. The act of creation is an impersonal act: the act of adormment and guarding is a personal favour to God's creatures, 4479. See verse 17 below.

4480, "From before them and bekind them": i.e., from every side. They were warned from every point of view.

Certainly have sent down angels (To preach): now we reject Your mission (altogether)."

  And said: "Who is superior
  To us in strength?" What!
  Did they not see that
  God, Who created them,
  Was superior to them
  In strength? But they
  Continued to reject Our Signs!
- 16. So We sent against them
  A furious Wind through days 485
  Of disaster, that We might Give them a taste
  Of a Penalty of humiliation
  In this Life; but the Penalty
  Of a Hereafter will be
  More humiliating still:

  We gave them guidance,
  But they preferred blindness

  So the stunning Punishment (4825)
  Of humiliation seized them,
  Because of what they had earned.

<sup>4481.</sup> Cf. xv. 7, n. 1941; vi. 8-9, n. 841-42. The 'Ad had more power and material civilisation than the Pagan Arabs contemporary with the holy Prophet. But the greater the material civilisation, the greater the arrogance as the besetting sin

<sup>4492.</sup> A gainst (all) truth and reason: Cf. vii. 33. Their estimate of their own strength was greater than was justified by facts, but if they had all the strength which they arrogated to themselves, yet how could they stand before God?

<sup>4483.</sup> The detailed story of the 'Ad and their besetting sin, and the preaching of their spostle HO to them will be found in xxvi. 123-140; also vii. 65-72, and n. 1040. For the furious Wind, Cf. liv. 19.

<sup>4484.</sup> The story of the Thambd usually goes with that of the 'Ad, Cf. xxvi. 140-59; also vii. 73-79, and n. 1043.

<sup>4485, &</sup>quot;The simming Punishment"; i.s. deafening noises like those of thunder and lightning; or the rumbling of a terrible earthquake. In vii, 78, an earthquake is suggested; see n. 1047 to that verse. Cf. also hove, xii, 13.

4486. "Marched in ranks": to show their further humiliation; for they will be like prisoners going to Punishment.

- 4487. All the members of their bodies and the faculties of their minds, which they misused, with bear witness against them. Similarly, in xxxvi. 65, their hands and their feet bear witness against them. The "skin" not only includes the sense of touch (which is so often misused in sext), but also the sense of taste and the sense of smell, which are specialised forms of the organ of touch, All their intellectual and emotional counterparts advance us by their use and pull us down by their misuse. They become tell-tale witnesses against us if abused.
- 4488 A new phase of their existence will now dawn on them. They used to think that if they concealed their evil deeds from the rest of the world, nothing would happen to them! But God can give "tongues to trees", and can make every fact in life, known and unknown to the world, contribute to the elucifation of truth and justice. "Speech" on behalf of their senses and faculties should of course be understood figuratively. When we succumb to evil, our limbs and faculties themselves betray us.
- 4489. The limbs and faculties will say: "You did not seek to hide your evil from us: in fact you used us for your evil, because we were in your power. That you not know that God know everything, and that our knowledge would be evidence against  $y = x^n$ ."

Your hearing, your sight, And your skins should bear Witness against you! But Ye did think that God Knew not many of the the things That we used to do!

4491. If they have patience: there is sarcasm in the meaning. "Let them not be impatient; they will soon find a home in the Fire of Hell! If they ask for grace and forgiveness then, it will be too late."

4492. Just as the idea of happiness in heaven is expressed, not only by individual satisfaction, but by congenial society, so the idea of Punishment in hell is deepened by the fact that Evil will be made to meet will those who made sin fair-seeming in this life will be there to state in the regrets and mutual recriminations which will make life a burden. In fact, in these #A-MFW verses, the idea of fit companionship for the Good and uncongenial company for the Evil, runs like a thread throughout. See Introduction to S. xll.

4493. They painted in glowing colours the pleasures of sin in the past and the pleasures of sin in the future, thus practising a double deception, which will now be found out.

4494. Jinus, see n. 929 to vi. 100. All apirits of wickedness and all men who submitted to them, in the past, were under one common sentence; and fulture generations who embrace evil will also join them. Cf. vi. 128.

  "Our Lord! Show us those, "down Among Jinns and men,
  Who misled us: we shall
  Grush them beneath our feet,
  So that they become
  The vilest (before all)."
- 30. In the case of those Who say, "Our Lord

4495. The echo here of verse 23 above completes the argument from another point of view.

4496. A favourite trick of those who wish to dishonour Revelation is, not only not to listen to it themselves, but to talk loudly and insolently when it is being read, so that even the true listeners may not be able to perform their devotions. They think that they are drowning the voice of God: in fact they are piling up misery for themselves in the future. For God's voice can never be silenced.

4497. Nothing that they can do, however outrageous, will escape its fit punishment. And to reject God's Signs is to shut the very door to His Grace and Mercy.

4498, It is one of the qualities of sin and all evil, that it wishes to drag down others in its own camp, and rejoices to see them bumiliated and disgraced, just as, in the opposite case, the good rejoice to help and honour others and make them happy wherever they can. Cf. vi. 12-113.

C. 210.—The best of men is the man of Faith, (xli. 33-54.) Who calls all men to share his Faith.

Whose life is pure, and whose law of life Is the Will of God. Eschew all evil, And adore God, and Him alone. His Signs are everywhere, and His Message Is the same through all the ages, a guide And a healing to those who believe. Dispute not, but live righteousness. Knowledge belongs to God, but Falsehood Deprives man of hope, humility, And clear sight, and drives him to Hypocrisy. So turn to Truth, and live.

<sup>4499.</sup> The people who succeed in eternal Life are those who recognise and understand the one and only Reality, that is God, and further shape their probationary Life firmly and steadfastly on the principles of that Truth and Reality. They will have their friends and protectors in the good angels, in contrast to the evil ones, who will have no friendship or protection, but only the recroaches of the Evil Ones.

4503. Better in speech: i.e., speaks better counsel; or is more worthy of being listened to. That his word reaches the highest mark of human speech is evidenced by three facis: (1) that he calls all to the Truth of God, showing that his thoughts are not centred on himself; (2) every deed of his is righteousness, showing that there is no divergence between his preaching and his conduct; and (3) he completely associates binnelf with the Will of God, showing that he is the full embodiment of Islam. What a fine description of the holy Prophet!

4504. You do not return good for evil, for there is no equality or comparison between the two. You repet or destroy evil with something which is far better, just as an antidote is better than poison. You foil harted with how. You repet ignorance with knowledge, folly and wickedness with the friendly message of Revelation. The man who was in the bondage of sin, you not only liberate from sin, but make him your greatest friend and helper in the cause of God! Such is the alchemy of the Word of God! Cy. xxiii 95; xxyiii. 54.

4505. Hamim: the key-word of the Ha-Mim Suras. See n. 4500 above, and Introduction to S. xi, 4506. The moral standard referred to in the last verse can only be reached by the exercise of the highest patience and self-rebraint. All sorts of human weaknesses and counsels of pseudo-wisdom and "self-respect" will keep breaking is, but resist them as suggestions of Evil (see next verse). If you can reach anywhere near that high standard, you will be indeed most fortunate in a sufritual sense, for God's Revelation will have made you great and free.

4507. Nazaga has in it the idea of discord, slander, disharmony, as well as incitements to such disturbances in the soul. They can only proceed from evil, and should be resisted with the help of God. See also last note.

4508. Night and Day are opposites, and yet, by the alchemy of God, they can both subserve the purpose of human good, because the Night can give rest while the Day can promote activity. The Sun and the Moon are similarly complementary. So, in moral and spiritual affairs, scenning opposites may by God's alchemy be made to subserve the purpose of Good. They are but instruments: God is the Cause. Adore God, and not the things which He has created. Use the things which He has created, but do not adore them.

4509. It does not in any way affect God if men rebel against Him. It is men's own loss. God's glory is being celebrated night and day by angels and men who receive the privilege of approaching His presence. To them it is a delight and an honour to be in the sunshine of Truth and Happiness.

4510. Evil makes of the souls of men what drought makes of land: it kills life, beauty, and fruitfulness. God's Word in the spiritual world has the same wonderful effect as rain has on barren land: it gives life, beauty, and fruitfulness. And the effect of God's Word is also seen through the lives of men who repel evil with what is better. They also convert dead souls (which harbour spite and hatred) into living souls, which come into the main current of spiritual life, and help in carrying out God's heneficent Purpose.

4511. Why should we wonder then at the potency of God's Word, whether in our probationary lives here, or in the sternal life of the Hereafter.

<sup>4512.</sup> Pervert the Truth in Our Signs: either by corrupting the scriptures or turning them to false and selfish uses; or by neglecting the Signs of God in nature around them, or silencing His voice in their own conscience. Everything is known to God. Why not work for true salvation at the final ludgment?

4516. Cf. xvi. 103-105; xii. 2; etc. It was most natural and reasonable that the Messenger being Arab, the Message should be in his own tongue, that he might explain it in every detail, with the greatest power and eloquence. Even though it was to be for the whole word, its nittial exposition was thus to be in Arabic. <sup>4517.</sup> Cf. xil. 5, and vi. 25. They pretended that it was too deep for them, when they meant that they were superor to it! The fact was that by puting themselves in an artificially false position, they rendered themselves impervious to the Message. The voice of Revelation or the voice of conscience sounded to them as if it came from a far-off place! They themselves made themselves strangers to it.

<sup>4518.</sup> Callousness and self-sufficiency in religion are often illustrated by sects like the Pharisees and Sadducees among the Jews. Where there are honest differences of opinion, they can, in God's Plan, lead to greater enquiry and enulation. Where the differences are fractious, there is often even then time left for repentance. In any case the Word or Decree of God is for the best good of all, and should not disturb Faith. Cf. x. 19. A good life, of faith and trath, is in our own interests, and the opposite against our own interests. God is never unjust.

47. ۞ وَلَهِزاً ذَنْكُ دُخَلَةً مَنْكُ

4519. There are profound mysteries which the knowledge of man cannot fathom but which are all open knowledge to God, because He plans, guides and controls all things. The precise time of the Hour of Judgment is one of these. We are not to dispute about matters like these, which are matters of speculation as far as human intelligence is concerned. Such speculations ruined the Ummat of Moses, and set them on the arid path of doubts and controversies. Our task is to do our duty and love God and man (see the last two verses). Cf. also xxi. 4.

4520. When the final restoration of true values comes, all falsehood will be exposed openly and publicly. The false gods will vanish, and their falsehood will be acknowledged by those who had lapsed from true worship. But it will be too late then for repentance.

452. Not only is man prone to doubts and speculations in matters beyond his ken, thus disturbing the even tenor of his spiritual life; he is apt to run into opposite extremes in his daily experiences in this life. He is always hankering after the good things of this life. They are not all good for him. If he receives a little check, even though it may be to bring him to his bearings and turn his thoughts to bigher things, he is apt to fall into despair,

4522. When men entertain false ideas of values in life, there are two or three possible attitudes they may adopt in reaction to their experiences. In the first place, their desire may be inordinate for the good things of this life, and any little check brings them into a mood of despair. See last note. In the second place, if their desire is granted, they are puffed up, and think that everything is due to their own clevenness or merit, and they forget God. Not only that, but they go a step further, and begin to doubt a Hereafter at all 1 f by chance they have a faint glimmering of the Hereafter, which they cannot help recognising, they think themselves "favoured of Heaven", because of some small favours given to them in this life by way of trial. Thus they turn all things, good or evil, away from their real purpose, because they are devoted to faisehood.

4523. The last verse and note dealt with men's distortion of the values of life. Here we come to men's ingratitude and hypocrisy. If they receive good, fifey-go farther away from God, instead of coming nearer to him. If they suffer ill, they call on God and offer prolonged prayers, but it is not sincere devotion and therefore worthless.

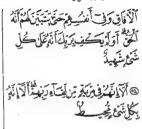

4524. Cf. xvii, 83.

4524-A. An argument is now addressed, of a most searching nature. Examine your own souls, See if you do not really find something unusual in God's Revelation! If you do, and yet you reject it, what a terrible responsibility fastens itself on you? Could anything be more foolish or more misguided than to reject a Message which is transforming the whole world?

4524-B. 'If you resist the convictions of the whole world, you are only forming a Cave or a narrow obscure sect or schism, which serves no purpose, and is unfit to live in the broad light of Universal Religion.' C. Ji. 176, n. 176.

<sup>4524-</sup>C. God's Truth always speeds, in its own good time, across to the uttermost ends of the earth, as it did in the case of Islam. But its intensive spread in the hearts and souls of people is even more remarkable than its extensive spread over large areas. Men like the four Companions of the Propheti—and many more—became leaders of men and arbiters of the world's late. Medina, from being a focus of jarring tribes and factions that hated each other, became the seat of heroic actions and plans and the nursery of great and noble heroic deeds that resounded throughout the world. It makes no difference what men may say or do. God's Truth must prevail, and He knows who obstruct and who help.

<sup>4525.</sup> Short-sighted people may like to think that there may be no Judgment. But Judgment is inevitable and cannot be escaped, for God "doth encompass all things"

INTRODUCTION TO STRA XLII (Shiira).

This is the third Sūra of the Hā-Mām series of seven Sūras, for which see the Introduction to S. xl.

The theme is how evil and blasphemy can be cured by the Mercy and Guidance of God, which come through His Revelation. Men are asked to settle their differences in patience by mutual Consultation (xlii. 38); which explains the title of the Sara.

Summary.—The Contrast of biasphemy and disputation against Revelation, Unity, and Faith, as relying on the Signs and the Mercy of God (xiii. 1-29, and C. 211).

Evil comes through men's own deeds, of which they cannot avoid the consequences, but Guidance comes through God's Mercy and Revelation (xiii. 30-53, and C. 212).

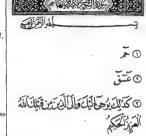

C. 211,—Inspiration is part of the Glory and Goodness (xiii. 1-29) Of God. His Unity is shown In His Creation; yet man will turn To false gods, and dispute about Religion. Faith has been one at all times, But sects and divisions rose through selfish Contumacy. Let all contention cease, And conduct weighed by the just balance Of God's Word. The just and the unjust Will all be brought before God, Whose Mercy And Bounty are writ large in the Signs In His marvellous Creation,—one, yet diverse!

Sūra XLII.

4526. See Introduction to S. xf. paragraphs 2-4.

4527. This Sūra has a double set of Abbreviated Letters, one in the first verse, and one in this second verse. No authoritative explanation of this second set is available, and I refrain from speculation. See Appendix I.

4528. Inspiration is full of Power and Wisdom, and both these qualities are derived from the Power and Wisdom of God. Unlike human power, this Power is nacessarily good and merciful; unlike human wisdom, this Wisdom is necessarily complete and indeputable.

4520. We cannot conceive the distance which separates the Most High from the highest of His creatures. God Most Great from the greatest of the beings that we can imagine. The highest heavens are mentioned in the next verse, as well as the noblest creatures that we can imagine, the angels.

4530. How can we conceive of sublimity and greatness in a higher degree than this, that the highest heavens are almost ready to burst asunder by His Glory, which is higher than all?

4531. The angels are the noblest and purest beings of whom we can conceive. They reflect on the one side God's Glory and Praise, and on the other, two other attributes of God, that look towards His arring creatures, war. Forgiveness and Mercy. The two sets of attributes are complementary. Believers and unbelievers alike are included in their solicitude and prayer. They thus proclaim in their own being and in their prayers the Greatness and unbounded Gnodness of God.

 <sup>4532.</sup> We now come to the contrast, the folly and ingratitude of man. But that cannot escape its final doom in the Universal Plan of God. Only Judgment rests with God. A Prophet is not responsible for the conduct of men, in a system which permits some limited free-will and personal responsibility.

<sup>4533.</sup> The point of the Qur-an being in Arabic is that it is plain and intelligible to the people through whom and among whom it was promulgated; see next clause.

<sup>4534.</sup> The City of Mecca. See n, 913 to vi. 92, This is undoubtedly a Meccan verse. Even apart from the Qibla, Mecca is the centre of Islam, and "all around her" is the whole world.

<sup>4536,</sup> Cf. v. 51, and n. 761. It is one of the Signs of God that He has made us different, that we may be tried in the exercise of our will, and that we may reach, through righteousness and Faith, our highest development, and enjoy flus gifts of Mercy and Grace. But we must not become contentious, and fall into evil; we must understand our own limitations. Otherwise we shall lose His grace and protection.

4537. There can be no greater ingratitude or blasphemy than to worship false gods, or to seek protection from things that have no power, when God—Who has power over all things—is always seeking to protect and cherish His creatures, and placing in their way all the means for attaining the best in them.

4338. In the highest issues of life men may see things differently. If their differences arise merely from selfsh motives, or narrowness of vision, they are sinning against their own souls. If their differences arise from sincere but mistaken notions, their proper course is not to form differences arise from sincere but mistaken notions, their proper course is not to form differences are to the content of th

4339. The mystery of sex has not only its physical aspects, but its moral and spiritual aspects, and therefore mankind is in this respect differentiated from the lower animals, and among mankind the grades and qualities are suggested by the phrase "from emerg yourselves". As regards cattle, they are specially mentioned among the animals, as having special relations with man and specially subserving his needs, not only in the physical sphere, but also in the matter of transport, which is the key to all civilization and culture: C/, xxxi. 71-73; also xxii. 21-22, where they are compared to ships, the symbol of international intercourse.

He enlarges and restricts. 45.00 The Sustenance to whom He will: for He knows Full well all things.

The same religion has He Established for you as that Which He enjoined on Noah-4811 The which We have sent By inspiration to thee-And that which We enjoined On Abraham, Moses, and Jesus: Namely, that ye should remain Steadfast in Religion, and make No divisions therein: 4548 To those who worship Other things than God, Hard is the (way) To which thou callest them. 4643 God chooses to Himself Those whom He pleases. And guides to Himself Those who turn (to Him).
- 14. And they became divided <sup>1944</sup> Only after knowledge Reached them,—through selfish Envy as between themselves. Had it not been For a Word that

- 4540. "Sustenance", here as elsewhere, stands for all things that support every phase of life, physical, social, intellectual, or spiritual, Cf. x. 59, n. 1447. The source of all gits is God; His bounty is mexhaustible, and He gives to all; but He does not give to all in the same measure, because, out of the fullness of His knowledge and wisdom, He can judge best what is best for any of His creatures.
- 4541. God's Religion is the same in essence, whether given, for example, to Noah, Abraham, Moses, or Jesus, or to our holy Prophet. The source of unity is the revelation from God. In Islam it is "established" as an institution, and does not remain merely a vague suggestion.
- 4542. Faith, Duty, or Religion, is not a matter to dispute about. The formation of sects is against the very principle of Religion and Unity. What we should strive for is steadfastness in duty and faith, and unity among mankind.
- 4543. Unity, unselfishness, love for God and man,—these things are inconsistent with selfish aggrandizement, unjust suppression of our fellow-creatures, false worship, and false conduct to our brethren. Hence the Gospel of Unity, though it is in complete accord with the pure pattern after which God made us, is wet hard to those who love self and falsehood. But Grace is free to all, and in his wise Plan, He will specially select Teachers to show the Way to humanity, and no me who turns to Him will lack guidance.
- 4544. Cf. is, 215. If you reject Truth after it has reached you, it can only be through selfish contumacy or envy,

Went forth before <sup>648</sup>

4545. Cf. x 19, and n. 1407. God's decree has allowed a certain Term during which a sinner has the chance of repentance and forgiveness. Were it not so, sin would be punished at once, and the matter would be decided straightway. So also, when people reject Truth from selfish or contumatious motives, they get rope: perchance they may repent.

4546. Cf. xi., 9 and n. 1894, "Those who have inherited the Book" are the People of the Book, of the ages since the Book or Revelation come to them. Referring to the Jews and Christians contemporary with our Prophet, how true it is that they were broken up into hostile sects which hated and persecuted each other! Islam came to unite them. and it did. For the present phases of Christianity and Judaism are of later growth.

4547. How beautifully the mission of Islam is commended in this verse! (1) The more sectarianism and division there is in the world, the more need is there for the Gospel of Unity. (2) It must steadfastly pursue its way. (3) It must not be deflected by 'worldly or political motives. (6) Its faith must be directly in God'and in God's Revelation. (5) It must judge justly between warring factions, as the Religion of Peace and Unity.

4548. The mission of Islam is further described. (6) The God whom it preaches is not an exclusive God; the is the Lord of the Worlds: to any given person, of whatever faith, 'He is your God, as well as mine.' (7) Our Faith is not a question of words; it is deeds which decide; each one of us has personal responsibility for his own conduct. (8) There is no cause of contention whatever, when we preach Unity, Truth, and the Hereafter, (9) If you have doubts, the final arbiter is God, and His Throne is our Goal.

- 16. But those who dispute

  And what will make thee
  Realise that perhaps the Hour
  Is close at hand?
- 18. Only those wish to ess Hasten it who believe not In it: those who believe Hold it in awe, And know that it is The Truth. Behold, verily Those that dispute concerning The Hour are far astray.
- 19. Gracious is God 4551 To His servants: 4553

4549. After He has been accepted. The disputants are the Unbelievers who pugnaciously assault the minds of Believers after the Believers have by conviction accepted Fauth in God as leading to spiritual Light. Such disputation is fuffile. An inner spiritual experience can never be shaken by dialectical assaults. On the contrary such disputations recoil on the heads of those who Indulge in them. God's Wrath is on them in this life, and the terrible Penalty of the Hereafter must inevitably follow their viril polici against Truth.

4550. Revelation is like a balance, an instrument placed by God in our hands, by which we can when all moral issues, all questions of right and wrong in conduct. We must do so constantly. For the judgment in any given case may come at any time: it may be quite near, and we must always be prepared. The Balance may also refer to the God-given faculty by which man can judge between right and worse.

4551. The Unbelievers do not believe in Judgment and laugh at it. They say defiantly, "If there is to be a punishment, let it come at once!" The threefold answer to this will be found in n. 1810 to ziii. 6. With those who believe, the case is different. They know that the Herrefter is an awful Reality, and prepare for it. They see clearly on what a wrong track the scoffers are!

4552. Lajīf: so kind, gracious, and understanding, as to bestow gifts finely suited to the needs of the recipients. For the various meanings of Lajīf, see n. 2844 to xxii. 63. Cf. also xii. 100

4553. "Servants" here seems to include all men, just and unjust, for God provides for them all.

<sup>4554,</sup> Sustenance, i.e., provision for all needs, physical, moral, spiritual, etc. "To tuhom He pleases" is not restrictive, but modal. 'God provides for all, but His provision is according to His wise Will and Plan, and not according to people's extravagant demands.' He can provide for all, because He has complete power and can carry out His Will. A further comment will be found in the next verse.

<sup>4555.</sup> The parable is from the efforts of the husbandman, who ploughs and prepares the soil. sows the sead, weeds in due season, and reaps the harvest. You reaps ay ous ow. But God will add manifold advantages for spriftual titlh. To those who are only engrossed in the vanities of this world, something may accure in this world, but the spiritual world is closed to them.

<sup>4556.</sup> Nothing can exist without the permission of God. Can people, who indulge in false worship say: "Why does God permit it?" The answer is: "a certain latitude is allowed with the grant of a limited form of free-will. When the time for Judgment comes, the Punishment is sure." See n. 180 to x 119.

See n. 180 to x 111 0. Derive for Wordy of Judgment: See n. 1407 to x 19.

<sup>457.</sup> The chief feature of the pusishment of wrong-doing is that the minds of the wrong-doers are haunted with terror on account of their own guilty conscience. They cannot possibly escape the weight of that terror.

They have earned, and (the burden Of) that must (necessarily) Fall on them. But those Who believe and work Righteous deeds will be In the luxuriant meads <sup>428</sup> Of the Gardens: they shall Have, before their Lord, All that they wish for. That will indeed be The magnificent Bounty (Of God).

4538. In contrast with the withering terror of the wrong-doers is the ease and rational happiness of those who do good "On them shall be no fear, nor shall they grieve" (it. 38). Their wills will have been purified, and they shall have all that they shall desire, 'before their l.ord'. That is, their highest Bliss will be the sight of their Lord. No higher Bounty can they wish for,

4559. Heaven may be pictured to our minds in various forms. This is one of the highest, and God announces it freely to the rightenus.

450. No sort of tangible reward does the man of God ask for, proclaiming the Glad Tidings of God. But at least he has the right to ask that his kith and kin should not persecute him and put all sorts of obstacles in his way, as did the Quraish against the holy Prophet. The love of kindred may be extended to mean the love of our common humanity, for all mankind are brothers descended from Adam. Everyone can understand the ordinary love of kindred. Can we not extend the idea to a mystical meaning of Love for all mankind, thus proving kinship with the divine Love, which in the story of Joseph is figured by the cartihy love between the sexes?

4561. Cf. xxxv. 29-30, and notes 3915 (for increase) and 3917 (for God's appreciation of service).

4562. If any one has a doubt about a prophet's mission, let him look at the prophet's life, at his work, at his character. God loves Truth, not Falsehood, God's aid goes with Truth, not with Falsehood. The beauty and power of God's Word cannot be found in Falsehood. The false man's heart would be sealed, not expanded to new heights, as is that of the Message-bearer of God.

4563. Whatever the sin, God's Mercy is open to sincere Repentance, at all times, until the degree of condemnation issues.

4564. To the prayers of the righteous He listens, and He gives them of His Bounty beyond their deserts. Every time they do a little good, they are noter used in their goodness. Every right impulse or aspiration is strengthened and lead to progressive spiritual advancement.

4565. It may be objected that all prayers, even of good people, are not answered. The reply is:

(I) that even everyone who is good does not necessarily know what is best for him, for the values in this life are curiously distorted; and (2) on account of their want of knowledge, if everyone got all he asked for, there would be chose and confusion, and "transgression beyond bounds through the earth", for the different interests are so intermigled and balanced that some measure must be observed in granting people's wishes. This measure is best supplied by the watchful care of God and His perfect knowledge of all our real needs.

C. 212.—What we call the ills of life is due
(xiii, 30-53.)
To our own ill-deeds, and many of them
Are forgiven by God. His Plan can never Be frustrated. This Life is but a stage
Of convenience: live true and resist
All wrong, but learn the best way to do so.
On God rely; else no protector

Comes as a Guide and Mercy: it shows
The Straight Way, the Way of God All-Wise.

SECTION 4.

30. Hatever misfortune Happens to you, is because @وَكَأَأَكُنْ حَكُمين مُصِيبَوْفِهَا

4567. That men should get such a blessing as rain when they expect it according to ordinary calculations of probabilities does not impress them, as it is a daily occurrence. But God's merey is more than this. It comes to our aid even when all hope is lost, and gives us new chances and new openings where we least expect them. His quality of cherishing and protecting His creatures is always active, and what higher praise can we give?

4568. Dibbatum: beasts, living, crawling creatures of all kinds: see n 166 to it 164. Similarly in a control of the property of the control of the property of all kinds, life generally, whose material basis is the mysterious thing which science calls protoplasm. The more our biological knowledge increases, the more do we marvel at the unity of Life on the one hand, and its diversity on the other.

459). Life is not confined to our one little Planet. It is a very old speculation to imagine some life like human life on the planet Mars. Though no scientific demonstration is possible, it is reasonable to suppose that Life in some form or other is exattered through some of the millions of heavenly bodies scattered through space. What a wonderful Sign of God! The Almighty Who created such countless beings has surely the power to bring them together.

Of the things your hands and Have wrought, and for many (Of them) He grants forgiveness.

4570. All evil, all sorrow, all pain and affliction, are things not normal, things twisted from the pure and holy nature as created by God's hands. As far as man is concerned, his misfortunes are but the consequences of the things he has done. He must be a personal responsibility for them and not throw the blame on others.

4571. Every evil deed or word or thought must have us evil consequences: but it God forgives anything.—and He forgives much.—let no one imagine that he has defeated—or can defeat—Ged's Will or Plan. The only help or protection that is possible is from God. Cf. xxix 2.

4572. The great and stately ships are appealed to again and again as being among the Signs of God, from many aspects. The aspect referred to here is how the great sailing ship runs prosperously as long as "the breath of heaven fills the sail", and what a miserable helpless creature she becomes when she once becomes becalmed. Students of English literature will remember the striking preture which Coleridge draws in his "Rime of the Ancient Mariner." The becamed ship is as it were in the grip of Death because of the crime which the sailor had committed, and his mind feels psychologically the full force of the Sign. By analogy we can apply this to other craft: the steamer is not free from other dangers of the sea, nor air-craft from numerous dangers of the air.

4573. If we study such Signs in the right spirit, we learn the highest lessons for our spiritual life: on the one hand, patient perseverance with reliance on God, and on the other, a feeling or attitude of grateful thanks to God, that he enables us to achieve so much in spite of our shortcomings, and forgives in us so much that deserves punishment and disaster.

- 35. But let those know, who 4574 Dispute about Our Signs. That there is for them No way of escape.
- TMZ hatever ve are given (here) Is (but) a convenience 4575 Of this Life : but that Which is with God Is better and more lasting: (It is) for those who believe 1574 And put their trust In their Lord:
- 37. Those who avoid the greater sort Crimes and shameful deeds. And, when they are angry Even then forgive:
- 38. Those who hearken 4078 To their Lord, and establish 4574. If we treat God's Signs in the wrong spirit, i.e., contumaciously reject them or constantly dispute about their instead of trying to understand them, we are told that such tactics will avail us nothing : we cannot escape the consequences of our sins. The only way to escape is by repentance on our part and the grant of mercy by God.

4575. Any good (or ill) which is our lot as only a temporary phase to scree the convenience of this life. But there is a higher good, which comes from God's own Presence. Such good is both superior in quality, and more permanent. In the same way, any ills that we may suffer in this life, have reference only to the conditions of this our life of probation. The ills that we "earn " in our spiritual Life-such as deprivation of God's Grace-are far more momentous and permanent.

4576. The higher and more permanent gifts which come from God's Presence are for those who truly worship and serve God. These are described by nine of their characteristics : org. (1) they have Faith; and it follows that (2) they trust in God, instead of running after false standards or values; (3) they eachew the more serious offences against God's Law, and of course keep clear of any offences against sex ("shameful deeds"); (4) while knowing that they are not themselves perfect, they are ready to forgive others, even though they are sorely tried with anger and provocation; for 4577. Here we are speaking of the ordinary man or woman who tries to follow God's Law: he or she is not perfect, but at least eschews the major breaches of conduct. For those higher in spiritual degree there is of course a stricter standard. But all are entitled to the blessing of Islam, whatever their degree.

4578. Continuing the enumeration of the characteristics described in n. 4576 above, we have the following further qualities in those who wish to serve God. (5) They are ready at all times to hearken to God's Signs, or to listen to the admonitions of men of God, and to follow the true Path. as they understand it; (6) they keep personal contact with God, by habits of Prayer and Praise; (7) their conduct in life is open and determined by mutual Consultation between those who are entitled to a voice, e.g., in private domestic affairs, as between husband and wife, or other responsible members of the household; in affairs of business, as between partners or parties interested; and in State affairs, as between rulers and ruled, or as between different departments of administration, to preserve the unity of administration: (8) they do not forget Charity, or the help due to their weaker brethren, out of the wealth or gifts or talents or opportunities, which God has provided for themselves; and (9) when other people use them despitefully, they are not cowed down or terrorised into submission and acceptance of evil, but stand up for their rights within the limits mentioned in verse 40.

4579. "Consultation." This is the key-word of the Sūra, and suggests the ideal way in which a good man should conduct his aŭaris, so that, on the one hand, he may not become too egotistical, and, on the other, he may not lightly abandon the responsibilities which devolve on him as a Personality whose development counts in the sight of God. See the points in head (7) under 4578 above. This principle was applied to its fullest extent by the hoty Prophet in his private and public life, and was fully acted upon by the early milers of Islam. Modern representative government is an attempt—by no means perfect—to apply this principle in State affairs. See mry Retispose Polity of Islam.

4,580. This follows from the high value attached to an individual soul's Personality in Islam. Use attainet. There are four possible situations that may arise: an individual may have to stand up against an oppressor [1] for his own trampled rights, or (2) for the rights of others within his ken; or (3) a community may have similarly to stand up for its own rights collectively; or (4) for her rights of others. Nos. 2, 3, and 4 are considered highly meritorious for all, though few have the courage or the spirit to rise to so high a standard. No. I is specially liable to abuse on account of man's selfahness; Nos. 2, 3, and 4 are also abused by map pretending to motives of public good when they are serving their own personal interests or idiosyncracies; hence the qualifications mentioned in the next four verses and the notes thereto.

438. See last note. When you stand up for rights, either on private or public grounds, it may be through processes of law, or by way of private defence in so far as the law permits private action. But in all cases you must not seek a compensation greater than the injury sufferd. The most you can do is to demand equal redress, i.e., a hair equivalent to the harm done to you. Even this may serve to cut by our unregenerate soul, or a community bent on revenge. But the ideal mode is not to stake your thirst for vengeance, but to follow better ways leading to the reform of the offender or his reconciliation. See xii, 34, and xxiii, 96. You can take steps to prevent repetition, by physical or moral means; the best moral means would be to turn hatred into frendship by forgiveness and love. In that case the compensation or reward (if we must use such terms) is infinitely greater, for it wins the good pleasure of God.

But this active righting of wrongs, whether by physical or by moral or spiritual means, which are commended as better, is an antithesis to the monkish doctrine, when you are smitten on one check, to turn the other also. This would not suppress, but encourage wrong-doing. It is practised by none but poltroons, and is preached only by hypocrites, or men who want to make slaves of others by depriving them of the power, of self-defence. It occurs in two of the four canonical Gospels (Matt. v. 39, and Luke vi. 29), but we need not therefore assume that it was preached by Jesus.

۞ وَلَمَنْ مَسَارَ وَعَسَعْرَ لِأَثَ ذَلِكَ لِنَ عَنْهِ الْأَمْمُولِ

4582. To love God is the highest motive of our conduct, for it leads to the love of God's creatures; to win the approbation and love of God, is the highest reward, far transcending any compensation or satisfaction we can obtain in this life.

4583. God does not love those who do wrong. If, therefore, we tolerate wrong, or encourage wrong by allowing 1 to run ramoant when we can prevent it, we fail in our duty to God.

4584. Such people are not to be blamed, though they are following the lower law. The blame is on those who arrogantly ride rough-shod over the land, oppressing people with grievous wrong. See next verse.

4385. The fact that men seek the lower rather than the higher Law is itself a result of arrogant wrong-doing, of which the type was the Pharaoh who claimed to be "your Lord Most High" and oppressed the Israelites, and kept his own people under slavery and subjection, and the false glamour of magic and deception.

4886. It is harder to be patient and forgive, and yet to get wrongs righted, as was done by the holy Prophet, than to bluster about and "punish the guilty" or "teach them lessons." It may look like futility or lack of purpose, but in reality it is the highest and noblest form of courage and resolution. And it may carry out the purpose of reform and the suppression of evil even better than stern punishment. The gentleness of innocence often "persuades where stronger measures fail." But of course circumstances alter cases, and there is some allowance also to be made for the personal equation of the men you have to deal with: it is some cases severity may be called for, but 't should be from a strict judicial motive, and not merely from nersonal anger or spite or any lower motive in disguise

SECTION 5.

- 44. Æor any whom God
  Leaves astray, there is
  No protector thereafter.
  And thou wilt see
  The wrong-doers, when
  In sight of the Penalty,
  Say: "Is there any way
  (To effect) a return?"
- 45. And thou wilt see them
  Brought forward to the (Penalty),
  In a humble frame of mind
  Because of (their) disgrace, 4005
  (And) looking with a stealthy

  And those belonging to them
  On the Day of Judgment.
  Behold! Truly the wrong-doers
  Are in a lasting Penalty!"
- 46. And no protectors have they deep them,
  Other than God.
  And for any whom God
  Leaves to stray, there is
  No way (to the Goal).

4587. When the actual consequences of avil are fn sight, the foolish sinner wishes that it were possible to get back to the life of probation. But he neglected or abused it and rejected Gods Grace all the time. How can he then be restored to a closed chapter of his life?

- 4588. They were very arrogant in their probatronary life. Now will they be humbled to the dust. And they will be in utter despair and misery. They will not be able to see the favours and good things of the other life (Cf. xx. 124-126). Even their misery, which will face them as a terrible Reality, they will only be able to look at atkance, so thoroughly cowed will be their spirit.
- 4589. This will be their thought, and their realised experience: 'after all, any troubles and sorrows, any persecutions and taunts which they suffered in the life of probation from the enemies of stuth, where of no sonsequence; the real loag was that revealed at the judgment at the restoration of true values; the wicked and the arrogant, have lost their own souls, and have brought to perdition all who attached themselves to them and followed their evil ways; and this Penalty is one that will endure! How much more real it is!'
- 4590. The argument begun in verse 44 above is here rounded off. "If once men finally cut thamselves off from God's guidance and care, they will bave no protection whatever. All their false objects of worship will only mislead them further and further. Flow they will wish the fact blotted out when they are in sight of Judgment, and vainly wish for time to be reversed! They will be in the Fire, while the men whom they despised and rejected will have reached the final Goal! For them there will be no such way!"

- 47. The earken ye to your Lord, Before there come a Day Which there will be No putting back, because 452 Of (the ordainment of) God 1 That Day there will be For you no place of refuge Nor will there be for you Any room for denial 4568 (Of your sins)!
- 48. If then they turn away,
  We have not sent thee

  When We give man
  A taste of a Mercy Grow
  From ourselves, he doth
  Exult thereat, but
  When some ill happens
  To him, on account
  Of the deeds which
  His hands have sent forth,
  Truly then is man ungrateful!
- 49. FRO God belongs the dominion Of the heavens and the earth. He creates what He wills ***** (And plans). He bestows 4592. At Judgment no one can escape the consequences of his crimes or deeds. And no one can disavow them or deny them, or by any chance pretend that they do not apply to him.

4593. The warning is now given, that men may repent and do good, and pray for God's Mercy and Grace. If the warning is not heeded or is rejected, the man of God is not responsible for bringing-about the Penalty or for forcing people to come to the right Path. He is not a guard set over them to free them from the need of exercising their limited free-will.

4594. Cf. xxx. 36. It is a sad reflection that men, when they receive some gift out of God's Mercy, exult in their good fortune and attribute it to some merit in themselves, instead of to the Grace and Mercy of God, thus missing the real lesson of Life. On the other hand, when they are in trouble, due to their own errors and shortcomings, they fall into despair and blame God, instead of blaming themselves. This is rank ingratitude. So they miss the true lesson of I if it in that case also.

4395. Verses 49-50 deal, in their ordinary menning, with God's creative power, replete with knowledge and continued purpose, contrasted with man's instincts and groppings after knowledge. The mystery of sex and parenthood is referred to in a new light. With reference to children, a parent is often spoken of as the "author" of their being. The growth of population and the proportion of males and females in it have various sociological and psychological implications; yet how little of parents really know about them? The knowledge of science as regards the determination of sex in the embryo is practically nothing. Even if advancing knowledge threw light on what may be called the mechanical aspects of the question, the profounder problems touched by it are beyond the reach of man. Yet they are not governed by chance. God has a meaning and purpose in all things, and His power is complete to carry out His purpose.

<sup>4591.</sup> The Day of Judgment is inevitable. God has ordained it, and it cannot in any way be put back.

(Children) male or female According to His Will (and Plan),

وَيَهُ لِنَ يَشَا أَغُلَا كُورَ ﴿ أَوْرَ وَجُهُ مَدْ حُرَانًا وَانْتَأْوَهَ مَلَ اَنْ الْمَعْلَىٰ اللهِ اللهُ ال

@ وَكَذَلِكَ أَوْحَيْنَا إِلَيْكَ

4596. To parents themselves it is a mystery why a male or female child is given at any birth, or how the batance of the two sexes is made up in a family or in large groups of mankind, or why in some cases the womb is barren and the would-be parents are denied the joys and responsibilities of parenthood. But each individual human soul is precious in the Plan of God, and all these variations, besides their reactions on parents and on society, have a purpose to fulfil in the large Plan of God.

4597. This leads up on to the higher sprittual meaning of verses 49-50, as leading up to verses 13-53, Man is but a speck in Gold's creation. His growth and family relationships are not by any means comparable to Gold's creative acts, whose various stages are referred to in n. 120 to ii, 117, n. 916 to vi. 94, and n. 923 to vi. 80. That being so in the mysteries of man's daily life, how much more profound is the contrast between man and Gord in the apprehension of the higher sprintual problems concerned with Revelation? How can man bett to speak to God? He is not 8t. But there are three ways in which God, in His infinite Mercy, communicates with man, as described in verses $1.53.

4598. God is Most High, Most Wise; man is, in spite of his high destiny, often the lowest of the low (xev. 5). Yet God, out of His unfaite Mercy and Grace, has bestowed His revelation on man. How does it come about? Three ways are mentioned: (1) If alyan, Inspiration; (2) from behind a veil; and (3) by the sending of a Messenger; see the notes following.

Wah, in, Inspiration, is interpreted to be of two kinds: (1) a suggestion thrown by God into the heart or mind of man, by which man understands the substance of the Message, whether it is a rommand or prohibition, or an explanation of a great truth; and (2) verbal or literal inspiration, by which the actual words of God are conveyed in human lauguage. Orthodox opinion admits the existence of both kinds, though the latter ("cented", maid is held to be of a superior degree, only vauchasfed to the greater Prophets, while the former ("other than recited", gair-mails) may be given not only to the greater Prophets but to other men of spiritual insight who have not attained the degree of Prophethood. If we accept the theory of verbal inspiration, it would also cover the Messages brought by the angel Gabriel; see a, 4600 below.

- 4600 Messenger: Rasil , the angel Gabriel, through whom the revelations were given to the holy Prophet. These spiritual visions, conveying the message of Revelation, are the basis of the Quran-

4601, Before the receipt of his mission in his fortieth year, the holy Prophet, though a man of steadfast virtue and purity and unfliching in his search for Truth (see C. 22-23), was yet unacquainted with Revelation in the highest sense of the term. and with the certainty that comes from perfected Faith, or realised nearness to God. RSB, which I have here translated Inspiration has also been understood by some Commentators to refer to the angel Gabriel, the vehicle of Revelation. The Light of the Qur-£n made all things clear to man, and to the world.

4602. The Qur-an and the inspired Prophet who proclaimed it, are here identified. They were a Guide to men, showing the Straight Way. This Way is described in various ways; for example, see i.d, and n. 21; xwiii. 1-2, and notes 235-27; and x. 11-18.

4603. The most comprehensive description of the Straight Way is that it is the Way of God, the Way of the Universal Law; for God is the source, centre, and goal of all things in heaven and earth. Everything goes back to Him. According to our own understanding we make our own laws, our own standards, and our own institutions. But the ultimate test of their validity or authority is God's Will, ar revealed to us by His Revelation,

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XLIII (Zukhruf)

This is the fourth Sara of the Hā-Mim series of seven Saras. For their chronology and general theme see the Introduction to S. xl.

This Sūra deals with the contrasts between the real glory of Truth and Revelation and the false glitter of what people like to believe and worship. It cites the examples of Abraham, Mosrs, and Jesus, as exposing the False and holding up the Truth. The key-word (Zukhruf, Gold Adornments) occurs in verse 38, but the idea occurs all through the Sūra.

Summary.—The Book of Revelation makes things clear, even though the ignorant and foolish mock at it and ignore God's Signs: it will last, while its rejecters will perish (sliif: 1-25, and C, 213).

Abraham exposed the falsehood of traditional worship: the glitter and adornments of this world will not last: what was the end of Pharson in his arrogant fight with Moses? (xilli): 26-56, and C. 214).

Jesus was a servant of God, but his sectarian followers raised false disputations about him: all is known to God, Whose Truth will shine, in spite of unfaith (xliii, 57-89, and C, 215).

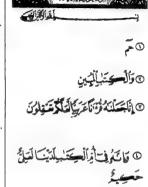

C. 213.—Revelation makes ever-lasting Truths
(xiiii. 1-25.) Clear: those who mock merely undo themselves.
Consider the Signs of God's gracious kindness
Around you, and glorify Him: attribute not Unworthy qualities nor any companions
To the One True God. Seek Truth in worship
More than mere ancestral ways,
And shut not out Revelation's Light.

- 4605. Ct. xiii. 7. n. 4533.

4606, Cf. iii 7, n. 347; and xiii. 39, n. 1864. The Mother of the Book, the Foundation of Revelation, the Preserved Tablet (Lash Mosfigs, IXXXV. 22), is the core or essence of revelation, the original principle of fountain-head of God's Eternal and Universal Law. From this fountain-head are derived all streams of knowledge and wisdom, that flow through Time and feed the intelligence of created minds. The Mother of the Book is in God's own Presence, and its dignity and wisdom are more than all we can think of in the spiritual world.

4607. In vouchsafing Revelation, what an inestimable Mercy has God conferred on mankind I Yet so many deluded souls are ungrateful, and ignore or oppose its teaching. If it were not for His attributes of Forgiveness and Forbearing He would be justified in withdrawing that Light, but He continues to shed it, that all who will may come and be blessed by it.

4608, in spite of, or because of, man's obstinate and rebellious nature, God sent prophet after prophet to the peoples of old, but there was among them always a party that ridiculed them and treated God's Signs as naught.

4609 The result of rebellion was destruction. And the pagan Meccan generation contemporary with the Prophet are reminded that the peoples of old who were destroyed were, many of them, more powerful than they, and that they, in disobeying God's Law, were inviting the same fate for themselves. The events of the past have become Parables for the present and the future.

4610, Cf. xxix. 61 and n. 3493; and xxxi. 25 and n. 3613. This class of men acknowledge God's Power' and God's Knowledge or Wisdom, but do not realise God's infinite Mercy and care for His creatures.

4611. Note the beautiful rhetorical figure of speech here. The reply of the inconsistent men who do not follow God's Law is turned against themselves. When they acknowledge God's Power and Knowledge, their speech is interrupted, and the concomitant qualities of God's Mercy and care of His creatures, with pointed reference to the inconsistent ones themselves, is set out in eloquent tegms, as completing what they themselves had said, and the right course of conduct is pointed out to them (verses 10-14).

4612. See last note.

4613, Cf. xx: '53 and n. 2576. Mikää, a carpet or bed spread out, implies not only freedom of movement but rest also. The 'roads and channe's' carry out the idea of communications and include land routes, and airways.

4614. In the measure: i.e., according to needs, as measured by local as well as universal considerations. This applies to normal rainfall: floods and droughts are abnormal conditions, and may be called unusual manifestations of His power, fulfilling some special purpose that we may or may not understand.

4615. The clause 'And We raise...(from the dead)' is parenthetical. Cf. xxxv. 9, n. 3881. Note the transition from the third to the first person, to mark the Resurrection as a special act of God as distinguished from the ordinary processes of nature ordinare by God.

4616. Cf. n. 2578 to xx. $3. Also see xxxvi. 36, n. 3981.

4617. By analogy all means of transport, including horses, camels, ships, steamers, railways, aeroplanes, airships, etc. The domestication of animals as well as the invention of mechanical means of transport require a skill and ingenuity in man, which are referred to God as His gifts or endowments to man.

4618. See last note. People of understanding attribute all good to its true and original source vis.: God.

4619. Men of understanding, every time they take a journey on earth, are reminded of that more momentous journey which they are taking on the back of Time to Eternity. Have they tamed Time to their lawful use, or do they allow Time to run away with them wildly to where they know not? Their goal is God, and their thoughts are ever with God,

® وَجَعَلُوا الْمُلَاحِكَةَ الَّذِينَ مُمْ عِبَدُا لَوْمَانِ

- 4620. As a contrast to the men of true understanding are the ungraveful blasphemous creatures, who offer a share in godhead to others besides God! They imagine sons and daughters to God, and forget the true lesson of the whole of Creation, which points to the Unity of God. This theme is further developed in the following Section.
- 4631. To imagine goddesses (female gods) or mothers or daughters to God was particularly blasphemous in the mouths of people who held the female sex in contempt. Such were the pagan Arabs, and such (it is to be feared) are some of the moderns. They wince when a daughter is born to them and hanker after sons. With that mentality, how can they attribute daughters to God?
- 4622, Cf, xvi. 57-59 and notes. With scathing irony it is pointed out that what they hate and are ashamed of for themselves they attribute to God!
- 4623. The softer sex is usually brought up among trinkets and ornaments, and, orn account of the retiring modesty which for the sex is a virtue, is unable to stand up boldly in a fight and give clear indications of the will to yin. Is that sort of quality to be associated with God?
- 4624. Angels for grace and purity may be compared to the most graceful and the purest forms we know. But it is wrong to attribute.sex to them. They are servants and messengers of God and so far from being rivals seeking worship, are always engaged in devotion and service. If any persons invent biasphemies about God, such blasphemies will form a hig blot in their Book of Deeds, and they will be called to account for them.

God. Did they witness Their creation? Their evidence Will be recorded, and they Will be called to account !

- 20. (" Ah!") they say, "If It had been the Will "623 Of (God) Most Gracious. We should not have Worshipped such (deities) ! " Of that they have No knowledge! They Do nothing but lie! 4686
- 21. What I have We given them A Book before this. To which they are Holding fast?
- 22. Nay I they say: "We found 4597 Our fathers following A certain religion. And we do guide ourselves By their footsteps."
- 23. Just in the same way, Whenever We sent a Warner Before thee to any people, The wealthy ones among them "" Said: "We found our fathers Following a certain religion, And we will certainly Follow in their footsteps."

انآه کمنتر آا عامآوزا عَلَىٰ عَالَيْهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهُ مُعْمَدُهُ وَالْ

4625. Worsted in argument they resort to a dishonest sarcasm. 'We worship these deities: if God does not wish us to do so, why does He not prevent us?" In throwing the responsibility on God, they ignore the limited free-will on which their whole life is based. They are really playing with truth. They are arguing against their own knowledge. They have no authority in any scripture, and indeed they are so slippery that they hold fast to no scripture at all.

4626, Cf. vi. 116,

4627. Then comes the argument about ancestral custom, which was repudiated by Abraham (see verses 26-28 below). Indeed a good reply to ancestral custom in the case of the Arabs was the example of Abraham, the True in Faith, for Abraham was the common ancestor of the Arabs and the Israelites.

4628. It is some privileged position, and not ancestral custom, which is really at the bottom of much falsehood and hypocrisy in the world. This has been seen again and again in religious history, { S. XLIII, 24-27.

SECTION 3.

- 26. Dehold! Abraham said **50 To his father and his people: "I do indeed clear myself Of what ye worship:
- 27. "(I worship) only Him Who made me, and He Will certainly guide me."

4629. The Warner or apostle pointed out the merits and the troth of his teaching, and how superior it was to what they called their ancestral customs. But they denied his mission itself or the validity of any such mission. In other words they did not believe in inspiration or revelation, and went on in their evil ways, with the inevitable result that they brought themselves to destruction.

4630. The plea of ancestral ways is refuted by the example of Abraham, in two ways: (i) he gave up the ancestral cults followed by his father and his people, and followed the true Way, even at some sacrifice to himself; and (2) he was an ancestor of the Arabs, and if the Arabs stood on ancestral ways, why should they not follow their good ancestor Abraham, rather than their bad ancestors who fell into evil? See n. 4627 above. The incident in Abraham's story referred to here will be found in xxi. 51.70.

<sup>4631.</sup> A Word: i.e., the Gospel of Unity, viz.: "I worship only Him Who made me", as in verse 27.

This was his teaching, and this was his legacy to those who followed him. He hoped that they would keep it sacred, and uphold the standard of Unity. Cf. C.? & Cf. also xxvii. 108-111.

<sup>4632.</sup> Note the first person singular, as showing God's personal solicitude and care for the descendants of Abraham in both branches. The context here refers to the prosperity enjoyed by Meccarand the Meccans until they rejected the truth of Islam when it was preached in their midst by an aposite whose Message was as clear as the light of the sun.

<sup>4634.</sup> The world judges by its own low standards. From a worldly point of view, the holy frophet was poor and an orphan. Why, they thought, should he be so richly endowed in spiritual knowledge and power? If such a gift had to come to a man among them, it was the right (they foolishly said) of one of the chiefs in either the sacred city of Mecca, or the fertile garden-city of Taif!

<sup>4635.</sup> That is, spiritual gifts, those connected with Revelation. What audacity or folly in them to claim to divide or distribute them among themselves? They may think they are distributing the good things of this world among themselves. In a sense that may be true, but even here, their own power and initiative are very limited. Even here it is God's Will on which all depends. In His wisdom God allows some to grow in power or riches, and command work from others, and various relative gradations are established. Men scramble for these good things of this world, but they are of no value compared to the spiritual gifts.

In the life of this world: And We raise some of them Above others in ranks, So that some may command Work from others. But the Mercy of thy Lord Is better than the (wealth) Which they amass.

- 33. And were it not that ***

  (All) men might become
  Of one (evil) way of life,
  We would provide,
  For everyone that blasphemes
  Against (God) Most Gracious,
  Silver roofs for their houses,
  And (silver) stair-ways
  On which to go up.
- 34. And (silver) doors To their houses, and thrones (Of silver) on which They could recline,
- 35. And also adornments 487
  Of gold. But all this
  Were nothing but conveniences
  Of the present life:
  The Hereafter, in the sight
  Of thy Lord, is
  For the Righteous.

SECTION 4.

If anyone withdraws himself 4638
 From remembrance

فِيَاكْمَوْ فِي النَّنْكَ وَرَفَعْنَا مُصَّمَّعُ فَقَ مَضِ دَرَجُونَ لِيَنْفِيدُ بَعْضُهُ وَبَعْضَا الْمُوْرِيُّ وَرَحْمَتُ رَبِكَ خَيْرِ مُنَا يَجَمْعُونَ هِ وَلَوْ لِاَ أَن يَحْدُو الْفَاصِّرُ الْمُنْفَالِهُ وَمِدَةً فَضَدْ فِرَمَعَالَ حَمَالِكُو الْمُؤْمِلُ الْمُؤْمِلُ الْمُنْفَالِهِ وَمَعَالَحَ مَلِيهِ الفَلْهِ وَوَنَ

> > @ وَمَن يَعْشُ عَن فِكِر

<sup>4636.</sup> So little value is attached in the spiritual world to silver or gold, or worldly ranks or adornments, that they would freely be at the disposal of everyone who denied or blasphemed God, were it not that in that case there would be too great temptation placed in the way of men, for they might all scramble to sell their spiritual life for wealth! They might have silver roofs and stair-ways, silver doors and thrones, and all kinds of adornments of gold. But God does not allow too great a temptation to be placed in the path of men. He distributes these things differently, some to unjust men, and some to just men, in various degrees, so that the possession of these is no test either of an unjust or a just life. His wisdom searches out motives far more subtle and delicate than any we are even aware of.

<sup>4637.</sup> Adoraments of gold: the keyword to this Süra. All false glitter and adoraments of this world are as naught. They more often hinder than help.

<sup>4538.</sup> If men deliberately put away the remembrance of God from their minds, the natural consequence, under God's decree, is that they join on with evil. Like consorts with like. We can generalise evil in the abstract, but it takes concrete shape in our life-companions.

(٣٤) سورة الزخرف

4639. The downward course in evil is rapid. But the most tragic consequence is that evil persuades its victims to be lieve that they are pursuing good. They think evil to be their good. They go deeper and deeper into the mire, and become more and more callous. "Them" and "they" represent the generic plural of anyone who "withdraws himself from...God "(see last verse).

4640. If ever the presence of God is felt, or at the time of Judgment, a glimmering of truth comes to the deceived soul, and it cries to its evil companion in its agony. "Would that I had never come across thee! Would that vie were separated poles aparts" But it cannot shake off evil. By deliberate choice it had out itself in its snare.

4641. Distance of East and West: literally, 'distance of the two Easts'. Most Commentators understand in this sense, but some construe the phrase as meaning the distance of the extreme points of the rising of the sum, between the summer solstice and the winter solstice, Cf. n. 4034 to xxxvii, 5, A good equivalent idlom in English would be 'poles apart', for they could never meet.

4642. All partners in evil will certainly share in the punishment, but that is no consolation to any individual soul. Evil desires the evil of others, but that does not diminish its own torment, or get rid of the personal responsibility of each individual soul.

4643. Cf. XXX. 52-53. The evil go headlong into sin, and sink deeper and deeper until their spiritual faculties are deadened, and no outside help can bring them back. God's grace they have rejected, 4644. There is hope for a person who wanders in quest of truth, and even for one who wanders through mistake or by weakness of will. But there is none for one who, by deliberate choice, plunges into "manifest error", i.e. error which any one can see.

4645. Cf. viii. 30: "how the Unbelievers plotted against thee, to keep thee in bonds, or slay thee, or get thee out (of thy home)." They were always plotting against the holy Prophet in his Meccan period. But even if their plots had succeeded against human beings, they could not defeat God's Plan. nor escape the just bounishment of their deeds. Cf. also x. 46, and n. 1438.

4646. Let the wicked rage, say what they like, or do their worst; the man of God is encouraged to go forward steadfastly in the Light given him, for he is on a Path that leads straight to God.

4614. Zhr.un: Message, Remembrance, Cause of remembrance, Memorial, Title for remembrance to posterny. Thus two meanings emerge, not necessarily mutually exclusive. (1) The Qur-lan brings a Message of Truth and Guidance to the Apostle, and his people; (2) the revelation of the Qur-lan raises the rank of the Apostle, and the people among whom, and in whose Insequence is was promulgated, making them worthy of remembrance in the world's unitory for all time. But the honour also carried its responsibilities. All who hear is aust give an account of how far they profit by it spiritually.

4648. That is, by examining their Alessage, and asking the learned among their real followers. It will be round that no Religion really teaches the worship of other than God.

  See ye not then?

<sup>4650.</sup> For the mockeyy of Moses and his Signs see xvii. 101; also below, xliii. 49, 52-53.

<sup>4651.</sup> Moses showed them nine Clear Signs: see n. 1091 to vii. 133; also xvii. 101. Each one of them in its own setting and circumstances was greater than any of its "sister" Signs. The object was if possible to reclaim as many Egyptians as possible from their defiance of God.

<sup>4652.</sup> This speech is half a mockery, and half a ruse. In spite of their unbelief, they had fear in their duled, and in order to stop the plagues, one after another, they promised to obey God, and when the particular plague was removed, they again became obdurate. See vii. 133-135.

<sup>4653.</sup> The costurbers in Arabic is the Watu hallya: the abundant streams from the Nile flowing beneath his palace being evidence of his power, prosperity, and sovereignty. The Nile made (and makes) Egypt, and the myth of the gold Ositis was a compound of the myths of the Nile atta wha sun. The Pharach, therefore, as commanding the Nile, commanded the gods who personified Egypt. He boasted of water, and he perished in water,—as fltring punishment!

52. "Am I not better

4654. Being a despised Israelite in any case, and having further an impediment in his speech. See xx. 27, and notes 2552-53.

4655. Gold bracelets and gold chains were possibly among the insignia of royalty. In any case they betokened wealth, and the materialits judge a man's worth by his wealth and his following and equipage. So Pharaoli wanted to see Moses, if he had any position in 'the sprittual kingdom, invested with gold bracelets, and followed by a great train of angels as his Kinght-companions! The same kind of proofs were demanded by the materialist Quraish of our holy Prophet. These were puerilities, but such puerilities go down with the crowd. Barring a few Egyptians who believed in God and in the Message of Moses, the rest of Pharaoh's entourage followed Pharaoh in his pursuit of revenge, and were drowned in the Red Sea.

4556. God is long-suffering, and gives many and many opportunities to the most hatdened sinners for repentance. But at length comes a time when His justice is provoked, and the inevitable punishment follows.

4657, Cf. vii, 136,

4658. Pharaoh and his hosts were blotted out, and became as a tale of the past. Their story is an instructive warning and example to future generations. The later course of Egyptian religion after the Exodus is referred to in Appendix V, pp. 408-413. C. 215.—If Christians go back to Jesus, he (xhiii.57-89.) Was but a man and a servant of God:

He came to still the jarring sects,

Not to create a new one: he preached

The One True God, his Lord. So give up

Disputing, and join in devotion to God.

That is the Way to the Garden of Bliss,

But the opposite leads to the Fire. Beware!

The Truth has come, and God knows how you Receive it. He is the Lord of power and mercy.

The Truth must prevail: rebist it not.

SECTION 6.

- 57. Then (Jesus) the son 400 Of Mary is held up As an example, behold, Thy people raise a clamour Thereat (in ridicule)!
- 58. And they say, "Are
  Our gods best, or he?"
  This they set forth
  To thee, only by way
  Of disputation: yea, they
  Are a contentious people.
- 59. He was no more than
  A servant: We granted
  Our favour to him,
  And We made him
  An example to the Children 6680
  Of Israel,

4659, Jesus was a man, and a prophet to the Children of Israel, "though his own received him not." Some of the churches that were founded after him worshipped him as "God" and as "the son of God", as do the Trinitarian churches to the present day. The orthodox churches did so in the time of the holy Prophet. When the doctrine of Unity was renewed, and the false worship of others besides God was strictly prohibited, all false gods were condemned, e.g., at xxi. 98. The pagan Arabs looked upon Jesus as being in the same category as their false gods, and could not see why a foreign cult, or a foreign god, as they viewed him, should be considered better than their own gods or idols. There was no substance in this, but mere mockery, and verbal quibbling. Jesus was one of the greater prophets: he was not a god, nor was he responsible for the quibbling subtletes of the Athanasian Creed.

4660. A reference to the limited mission of the prophet jesus, whose Gospel to the Jews only survives in uncertain fragmentary forms.

- 60. And if it were Our Will, 661 We could make angels From amongst you, succeeding Each other on the earth.
- 61. And (Jesus) shall be 4668
  A Sign (for the coming
  Of) the Hour (of Judgment):
  Therefore have no doubt
  About the (Hour), but Follow ye Me: this
  Is a Straight Way.
- 62. Let not the Evil One Hinder you: for he is To you an enemy avowed.
- 63. XXY hen Jesus came
  With Clear Signs, he said:
  "Now have I come
  To you with Wisdom,"
  And in order to make Clear to you some
  Of the (points) on which
  Ye dispute: therefore fear God
  And obey me.
- 64. "For God, He is my Lord "64 And your Lord: so worship Ye Him: this is A Straight Way."

ٱلأَرْضَ بَخَـٰلُفُو

4661. If it were said that the birth of Jesus without a father sets him above other prophets, the creation of angels without either father or mother would set them still higher, especially as angels do not eat and drink and are not subject to physical laws. But angels are not higher.

4662. This is understood to refer to the second coming of Jesus in the Last Days just before the Resurrection, when he will destroy the false doctines that pass under his name, and prepare the way for the universal acceptance of Islam, the Gospel of Unity and Peace, the Straight Way of the Our-ân.

4663. True wisdom consists in understanding the unity of the Divine purpose and the Unity of the Divine Personality. The man Jesus came to reconcile the jarring sects in Israel, and his true teaching was just the same as that which was expounded in a wider form by Islam. He did not claim to be God: why should not the Christians follow the doctrine of Unity rather than what has become their ancestral and traditional custom?

4664. In verses 26-28 an appeal is made to the pagan Arabs, that Islam is their own religion, the religion of Abraham their ancestor; in verses 46-54, an appeal is made to the jews'that Islam is the same religion as was taught by Moses; and that they should not allow their leaders to make fools of them; in verses 57-65 an appeal is made to the Christians that Islam is the same religion as was taught by Jesus, and that they should give up their sectarian attitude and follow the universal settington, which shows the Straight Way.

70. Enter ye the Garden, 4028

الحقواجعات واروجم عبرون

4665. Cf., xii. 107. What is there to wait for? The Hour of Judgment may come at any moment. It will come all of a sudden before they realise that it is on them. They should make up their minds to give up nisleading disputations and come to the Straight Path.

4666. The hatred and spite, which are associated with evil, will be felt with peculiar intensity in that period of agony. That itself would be a punishment, from which the righteous will be free. The righteous will have passed all periis of falling into wrong frames of mind.

4667. The devotion and service to God result in the soul being made free from all feer and sorrow, as regards the past, present, and future, if we may take an analogy from Time for a timeless state. Such devotion and service are shown by (1) believing in God's Signs, which means understanding and accepting His Will, and (2) by merging our will completely in His universal Will, which means being in tune with the Infanite, and acting in all things to further His Kingdom.

4668. The Garden is the type of all that is beautiful to eye, mind, and soul, all that is restful and in tune, a complete state of bliss, such as we can scarcely conceive of in this troubled world. Several metaphors indicate how we can try to picture that bliss to ourselves in "this muddy vesture of decay."

(٣٤) سورة الزخرف

71. To them will be passed eme Round, dishes and gobles of gold: there will be There all that the souls Could desire, all that The eyes could delight in: And ye shall abide Therein (for ave).

@ وَمَاطَلَكَ كَنْكُمُ

4669. We shall have all our near and dear ones ("wives") with us: perfected Love will not be content with Self, but like a note of music will find its melody in communion with the others. The richest and most beautiful vessels will minister to our purified desires, and give complete and eternal satisfaction to our souls in every way.

4670. We shall be there, not as strangers, or temporary guests, but as heirs,—made heirs in eternity because of the good lives we had led on earth.

4671. "Fruit" and "eating" are metaphorical Even as types or emblems, eating and drinking were suggested by "dishea and goblets of gold" in verse 71 above. The "fruit" here insks on with the last words in the last verse (72). "ye are made hers for your (good) deeds (in life)". It is not a doctrine of "rewards", 'strictly so called. A reward is measured by ment, but here the bilss is beyond all merits or deserts. It is a doctrine of works and their fruits: every deed must have its inevitable consequences. At first sight it may be compared to the doctrine of "Karma", but it differs from it in postulating God's unbounded Mercy, and the efficacy of Repentance.

4672. Literally, "shall eat" But the word akula is used in many places in the comprehensive sense of "enjoy", "have satisfaction". For example, see n. 776 to v. 69. Cf. also vii, i9 and n. 1004.

4673. The wrong-doers suffer not because God is unjust or cruel, nor as a deterrent to others, for the probationary period will then have passed, but because their evil deeds must bear those inevitable fruit. God's Grace was ever ready to ofter opportunities for Repentance and Forgiveness. But they rejected them. They were unjust to themselves. This is complementary to the doctrine of works and their fruits, as explained in a 4671 above.

(٢٣) سورة الزخرف

But it is they who Have been unjust themselves.

  Be the first to worship."
- 82. Glory to the Lord Of the heavens and the earth,

4674. Mälik: one who is lord or possessor; one who is in charge; applied to the Angel in charge of Hell.

4675. Cf. xx. 74. Annihilation is better than agony. But wrong-doers cannot destroy the "fruits" of their actions, by asking for annihilation

4676. We come back now to the Present,—primarily to the time when Islam was being preached in Mecca, but by analogy the present time or any time. Truth is often bitter to the laste of those who live on Falsehoods and Shams and profit by them They hate the Truth, and plot against it. But will they succeed? See next verse and note.

4677. Men cannot settle the high affairs of the universe. If they plot against the Truth, the Truth will destroy them, just as, if they accept the Truth, the Truth will make them free. It is God Who disposes of affairs.

4678. However secretly men may plot, everything is known to God. His Recording Angels are by, at all times and in all places, to prepare a Record of their Deeds for their own conviction when the time comes for Judgment.

4679. The man of God does not object to true worship in any form. But it must be true: it must not superstitiously attribute derogatory things to God, or foster false ideas.

4680. Cf. vii. 54 and a 1032. All Power, Authority, Knowledge, and Truth are with God. He neither begets nor is begotten. Glory to Him!

4681. That Day of theirs: they had their Day on earth; they will have a different sort of Day in the Hereafter, according to the promise of God about the Resurrection and Judgment, or perhaps about Retribution in this very life! So leave them to play about with their fancies and vanities. Truth must eventually prevail!

4682. We glorify God. and we call His name blessed, because He has not only supreme power and authority, but because we shall return to Him and see "the Light of His Countenance" (xxx, 38).

4883. The classical Commentators construe this clause differently. According to their construction, the clause would be translated, "except those who bear witness to the Truth. and with full knowledge." "Truth" they would construe to be the Gospel of Unity. According to them. while idols and false gods have no power of intercession, persons like Jesus, who is falsely worshupped by his misguided followers, but who himself preached the Gospel of Unity with full understanding, will have the power of intercession. This implies that we construe the singular men slockfda to refer to the same person or persons as the plural knn yo'lambin. This difficulty is removed if we construe as I have translated it. In that case, "he who bears wincess to the Truth" is the holy Prophet, who came to renew the Gospel of Unity, and "they know thirm" would refer to the Quraith, amongst whom he was brought up and among whom he earned the reputation of being a man of probity (Ams).

- 87. If thou ask them, Who seed Created them, they will Certainly say, God: how Then are they deluded Away (from the Truth)?
- 88. (God has knowledge) 6886 Of the (Prophet's) cry, "O my Lord! Truly These are a people Who will not believe!" 6886
- 89. But turn away from them, And say "Peace!" 4687 But soon shall they know!

<sup>4685,</sup> Commentators are divided in opinion as to the construction. The best opinion is that which I have adopted, referring back galifis as a genitive governed by 4m in verse 83. An alternative construction is to construct the wäw here-as the wäw qasamiya: in that case we should have to suppose some other clause as understood, in order to complete the sense.

<sup>4686.</sup> The Prophet was much troubled in mind by the Unfaith of the Quraish: xviii, 6. He is here told to leave them alone for a time, for the Truth must soon prevail.

INTRODUCTION TO SCRA XLIV (Dukhān).

For the chronology and the general theme of the Suras of the Ha-Mim series, of which this is the fifth, see the Introduction to S. xl.

The theme of this particular Sūra is how worldly pride and power are humbled in the dust if they resist spiritual forces, and how Evil and Good find their true setting in the Hereafter.

The title-word Dubban occurs in verse 10. It means smoke or mist, and may refer to a drought or famine, as explained in the notes to that verse.

Summary.—Revelation explains clearly how worldly pride and arrogance may come to naught, even at long odds, against spiritual truths (xliv. 1-29, and C. 216);

A people may be given all blessings and may fail in its trust, as did Israel: will the Quraish learn the lesson of Good and Evil? (xliv. 30-59, and C. 217).

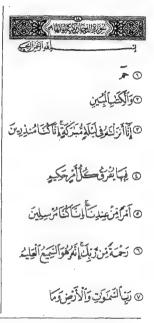

C. 216.—Blest is the night in which God's Message
(xliv. 1-29.) Comes down, as a Mercy to men, to warn them Against Evil. How fractions of men to ignore
Or suppress such warnings? Proud Pharaoh
And his Chiefs did resist God's authority,
But their sins rebounded on themselves:
They were swallowed up by the sea; and their tilth,
Their gardens, their noble fanes and buildings,
And all the advantages of which they boasted
Passed to other hands. Not a tear
Was shed over them in heaven or earth.
Thus ends the tale of power misused.

Sūra XLIV.

- 7. The Lord of the heavens And the earth and all

4688. These Abbreviated Letters are discussed in the Introduction to S. xi. paragraphs 2-4.

4689. The Qur-an is its own evidence. In the last.Sura (xliii, 3) stress was laid on the fact that evoyone could understand it. Here the stress is on the fact that it is a Message of Mercy Irom God in that it warms mankind against evil.

4690 Usually taken to be a night in the month of Ramadhan, say the 23rd, 25th, or 27th night of that month. It is referred to as the Night of Power in xovii. 1-2. See also ii. 185. But perhaps we need not fix it therally by the calendar. The night that a Message descends from God is indeed a blessed night, like a day of rain for a parched land.

4691. Such an occasion is one on which divine Wisdom places before us through Revelation the solution of spiritual problems of the highest import to mankind.

4692. It is because God is the friend of the friendless and the help of the helpless that He hears all sincere prayers, and as His knowledge embraces all things. He grants to us whatever is best for us, not as we see it, but as He knows it in His perfect knowledge.

4694. The story is mainly about the Quraish. But there is a wider meaning behind it, applicable to men generally, and at all times. As a body the Quraish, especially in the earlier stages of the preaching of Islam, before they started persecution, received the Message with more amusement than hatred. They played about with it, and expressed doubts about it, whereas the Preacher was most earnest about it, with all his heart and soul in it, as he loved his people and wished to save them from their wickedness and folly.

4695. What Day is this? It obviously refers to a great calamity, and from the wording it is to be a great calamity in the future, seen with the prophetic eye. The word yagshā in verse II may be compared to gafshīgis in Krazvini. I, which obviously refers to the final Day of Judgment. But verse I5 below ("We shall remove the Penalty for a white") shows that it is not the final Judgment referred to here, but some calamity that was to have a ferror on afterwards. Perhaps it was a famine, about which see the next note.

4696. The "smoke" or "mist" is it repreted on good authority to refer to a severe famine in Mecca, in which men were so pinched with hunger that they saw mist before their eyes when they looked at the sky. Ibn Kajibe in hi Tāribe menitors, two famines in Mecca, one in 'the 8th year of the Mission, say the fourth year before the Hijra, and another about the 8th year after the Hijra. But as either or both of these famines lasted as many as seven years, the dates are to be taken very roughly. It is even possible that the two famines were continuous, of varying severity from year to year. Bubthar mentions only the post-Hijra famine, which was apparently so severe that men began to eat bones and carrion. Abti Sufyān (about 8 A.H.) approached the holy Prophet to intercede and pray for the removal of the famine, as the Pagans attributed it to the curse of the Prophet. Stora xxiii, which is also Meccan, but of later date than "present Stora, also refers to a famine: see xxiii 73, and n. 321. As Stras were not all reveal etc. but max "ame piecemeal, it's possible that particular verses in a given Stra may be of iren. take from the Stras as whole.

- 12. (They will say:)
  "Our Lord! Remove
  The Penalty from us,
  For we do really believe!"
- 13. How shall the Message
  Be (effectual) for them, 6007
  Seeing that an Apostle
  Explaining things clearly
  Has (already) come to them,—
- 14. Yet they turn away
  From him and say: "Tutored
  (By others), a man possessed!" 4698
- We shall indeed remove the two the Penalty for a while, (But) truly ye will revert (To your ways).
- 16. One day We shall seize You with a mighty onslaught: We will indeed (then) Exact Retribution!
- 17. Two e did, before them,
  Try the people of Pharaoh:

4697. The Quraish had before them an Apostle whose purity of life was openly known to them; they themselves called him at-Amis (worthy of all trust); he preached in their own language in words of burning etoquence and transparent clearness; yet they turned away from him and called him a madman, or one whose Message was not inspired by God, but written by some hidden hand (see next note)! How will the teaching of spiritual Truth make way among such unreasonable people?

4698, Tutored : see xvi. 103, and n. 2143.

Possessed : see xv. 6, and n. 1940.

4699. God gives every chance to all His creatures, however rebellious. He gives them a little trial, perhaps personal, perhaps economic, to see if that would bring them to their bearings, and train their will in the right direction. Some are thus reclaimed, and some do not learn. Perhaps, for the latter, he gives them a chance by removing the trial; some are reclaimed, and some still remain obdurate. And so, in His wisdom. He allows His grace to work, again and again, until, at the last, Judgment must seize the last and irreclaimable remnant "with a mighty onslaught".

Such working of God's Providence is clearly visible in the story of the Quraish. It is a pity that the economic conditions of Mecca have not been studied in detail in any of the standard biographies of the Prophet. The so-called biographies by non-Muslims, e.g., Muir's Life, do not even mention any Meccan famine or its reactions on the Quraish mind!

4700 This reference is to the pride of Pharaoh and his Egyptians, and their fall, rather than to the story of Moses himself; just as in xliv, 30-33 the reference is to the blessings bestowed on Israel, contrasted with their pride, unbelief, and fall; and in xliv. 37, to the ancient Himyar kingdom in Yaman, which similarly fell for its sins.

4701. Most honourable: this epithet is specially applied to Moses here, as expressing the truth, in contrast to the Phataoh's false characterisation of him as "a contemptible wretch" (xlin, 52).

4702. The argument of Moses and his "nathority manifest" will be found at vin. 104-108, 120-126, 130-137. Notice how fully he assumes the authority of his office here. He claims all "servants of God", i.e., true worshippers, as under his protection, for his mesaner was both to the Egyptians and the Israelites; he asks that they should be restored to him; and he bololy denounces the Pharaoh's arrogance" as against God".

4703. "Worthy of all trust": A MER, a title applied to prophets in S. XXV.: e.g., see XXVI. 107. As the holy Prophet had historically earned that title among his swin people, the reminiscences of the story of Moses apply to him in his relations with the arrogant Quraish.

4704. It is no use their plotting his death or his vilification; for his safety is in God. As he truly says, "God is not only my Lord, but your Lord also, your responsibility arises apart from my preaching, but I preach in order to remind you of it."

4705. "Injuring me"; literally "stoning me". "Stoning "may be here symbolical of any injury or vilification.

4706. If you do not believe me, at least go your ways: do not add to your sins by trying to suppress me and the Message of Truth which I bring: keep out of my way.

4707. They would not even leave him alone to do his duty. So he cried to God, not indeed to destroy them, for a Prophet does not judge, but only God judges; he justified himself in prayer, that he had done his best, but they were obdurate in su, and they were trying to oppress and injure the believers. Then came the order to march. They were to march under the cover of night, because the enemy was sure to pursue. They were to march with all believers, presumably believing Egyptians fauth as were not martyred) as well as Israelites, for some Egyptians had believed; vii. [21].

4708. For the passage of Moses and his following, the sea had divided: they were to pass through the gap or furrow and leave it alone, to lure on the Egyptian host, on which the sea afterwards closed in, totally destroying them.

4709. There follows a word-picture of all the fine and enjoyable things which the ruling caste had monopolised. Now these proud monopolists were drowned in the sea, and the inheritance went to other hands, 4710. They died, "unwept, unhonoured, and unsung". They were too inordinate to be given another chance. Pharaoh had claimed to be their supreme god, and they had followed him!

C. 217,-So with the Children of Israel:

(xitv. 39.39.)
Granted gifts and favours, they became Arrogant and fell. Can the Quraish Escape the doom for sin? We created The world for just ends. The Day Will come when good and evil will be Sorted out: each will meet The fruits of its own deeds. Give good heed to the Message revealed, and wait and watch.

SECTION 2.

- 30. Whe did deliver aforetime The Children of Israel From humiliating Punishment, 4111

- And We chose them aforetime Above the nations, knowingly,<sup>4713</sup>

- 34. As to these (Quraish), "18
  They say for sooth:

4711. The Irracities were held in bondage prior to the Exodus. Their hard taskmaster placed experience in longing on them, and by Patrach's decree their male children were to be keilled, and their females were to be kept alive for the Egyptians.

4712. From degrading servitude, Israel was delivered, and taken, us spite of many rebellions and backstidings on the way, to "a land flowing with milk and linking", where later they established the glorious kingdom of David and Solomon. This was not inviewly fortuitous. In God's prescience it was to be a link in furthering the great inviernal Plain. But their being chosen did not mean that they could do what they liked. In that sense there is no "chosen rate" before God. But God gives every race and every individual a chance, and when the race or individual fails to live up to it, be or it must fall and give place to others.

4713. Among the "Signs" given to Israel were their own Revelation under Moses, their prosperous land of Canano, their flourishing Kingdom under David and Solomon, their prophets and eachers of Truth, and the advent of Jesus to reclaim the lost ones among them. All these were trials. When they failed in the trials, they were left to wander desolate and suffer, 4714. The cases of the Egyptians and the Israelites having been cited as great nations which fell through inordinate vanity and wrong-doing, the case is now pressed home against the Quraish leaders in their arrogance to the holy Prophet himself. They deny Revelation; they deny a fature life, as the Sadducees did among the Jews before them; they persecute the man of God, and those who believe in him: and they mockingly demand that their an ancestors should be brought back to life, if it is true that there is a future life. They are reminded that better men than they lived in their own country of Arabia, men who had knowledge of God's revelation under the earliest Dispensation. See next note. They perished because of their unbelief and wrong-doing. What chance have they unless they turn and repen!

- 4715. Tubba' is understood to be a title or family name of Binwar kings in Yaman, of the tribe of Hamdian. The Binwar were an ancient race. At one time they seem to have extended their hegemony over all Arabia and oerhaps bevond, to the East African Coast. Their earliest religion seems to have been Sabianism, or the worship of the heavenly bodies. They seem at different times, later on, to have professed the Jewish and the Christian etglion. Among the Embassies set by the holy Prophet in A.H. 9-10 was one to the Binyar of Yaman, which led to their coming into Islam. This was of course much later than the date of this SER.

- 4718 Day of Sorting Out, or the Day of Decision. Cf. xxxvii 21, and n. 4947. Ignorance, projudes, passion spite, and selfahnes, seem sometimes to flourish in this probationary life. In any case they are mixed up with knowledge, justice, commonsense, love and regard for others. But the good and the evil will be sorted out and separated at the Day of Judgment. There is a time amounted for it. In God's good time all will come right.

4719, When that Day comes, the strictest justice will prevail. No man, however prominently he may have walked on the world's stage, can help another. 4731 First Death, the ordinary natural death from this life, which brought them to the Garden of Felicity; there will be no further death after that. Cf. xxxvii 59, and n 4071.

1732. As in the Buddha's doctrine, the higher object of this our life is to obtain salvation from sorrow, pain, and the other incidents which make of it a constant struggle. In Islam we are taught that this is not possible by our unaided efforts. Certainly, struing on our part is an indispensable condition; but it is the Mercy of God which comes to our help and keeps us from the Fire of final Poinstiment. This is mentioned last as the foundation on which is built our external felicity and our positive spiritual jors.

4733. This is our idea of Salvation: the negative avoidance of all the consequences of evil, and the positive attainment of all—and more than all—that our hearts could possibly desire. Por God's Bounty outstrips anything that our eyes have seen, or our ears have heart of, or our imagination can conceive

4734. Easy: not only to understand, being in the Arabic tongue, but mellifluous, whose rhythm carries off our spirits to a higher spiritual plane. In another sense, it is difficult; for to get to its deepest meaning, we shall have to strive hard, as the contents of this Sūra alone will show.

INTRODUCTION TO SCRA XLV (Jathiya).

This is the sixth  $S\bar{u}ra$  of the  $H\bar{u}-M\bar{u}m$  series: for their general theme and chronology, see the Introduction to S, xl,

Summary.—The title, "Bowing the knee", taken from verse 28, expresses the leading idea in the Sūra. In this life, in spite of the Signs of God, and the evidences of His goodness all around, men go about in Unfaith, and mocking at Faith; but the End will bring them all to their knees.

C. 218.— The Signs of God are everywhere:

(xiv. 1-37.) His power, wisdom, and goodness are shown
Through all Creation and in Revelation.

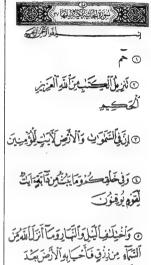

How can man be so ungrateful
As to reject true Guidance, reaping thus
The fruits of Evil? But men of Faith
Have patience and forgive their weaker
Brethren, and trust in the final justice
Of God. Form no sects, as was done
Aforetime, nor make your Justs your gods:
The Future is sure, and in the hands
Of God, to Whom all will bend the knee,
When Truth will shine in all its glory.
So praise and glory to God, the Lord
And Cherisher of all the worlds!

- 5. And in the alternation irst Of Night and Day, And the fact that God Sends down Sustenance irst from The sky, and revives therewith The earth after its death,

4735 See Introduction to S x1 paragraphs 2-4

4737. Verses 3.5 deal with some of the points in the noble argument in it 164, but again there are differences on account of the different context. Note that here the argument is divided into three parts, one in each verse. (I) In verse 3 we are dealing with big Signs external to ourselves, some of which are far beyond our personal experiences: for them we require Faith: they are Signs "for those who believe." For the other two set the next two notes.

4738. (2) These Signs are in our own nature and in the animals we meet with every day; here we have certainty within human limits; these are "for those of assured Faith.

4739 (3) These are our daily experiences from external things, but they affect us and our lives intimately; here are questions of deductions "for those that are wise"

4740. "Sustenance" is almost equivalent here to "rain". And "rain" liself, and its revival of a drad earth, refer symbolically to Revelation and its putting new life into a dead soul. Similarly the alternation of Night and Day, and the change of the winds besides being Signs as wonderful phenomena of Nature, refer to spiritual ignorance and knowledge, rest and activity, and the constant beneficent changes that are going on in the world, making for the spread of the blessing of God's Revelation.

And in the change Of the winds,—are Signs For those that are wise.

6. Such are the Signs cal
Of God, which We rehearse to thee
In truth: then in what
Exposition will they believe

  Heard them: then announce
  To him a Penalty Grievous!
- And when he learns
   Something of Our Signs,
   He takes them in jest:
   For such there will be
   A humiliating Penalty."
- 10. In front of them is
  Hell: and of no profit
  To them is anything
  They may have earned,
  Nor any protectors they
  May have taken to themselves
  Besides God: for them
  Is a tremendous Penalty. ""

4741. If there are any to whom the Signs from Nature, from within their own heart and conscience, and from the voice of Revelation, are not enough to convince them, what possible kind of exposition will they accept?

4742. A soul so dead, as described in the last note, is indeed wretched. It will resort to falsehoods, in worship, in conduct, and in its attitude towards God. It will be obtainate, and pretend to be 'above such things'. It will hear the most heautiful Message but not profit by ir. The loss or punishment is its own, and grievous it is!

4743. Note that in earh of the verses 8-11 the Penalty is characterised by a certain description, which accords with the crime. (1) In verse 8, the man is arrogant about the Signs of God's love and care all around him. and his Penalty is "rigiretous". 12 In verse 9, he ridicules God's Signs, and his Penalty is "humiliating": he makes himself a ridiculous fool. (3) and (4) are described in the two following notes.

4744. (3) In verse 10 the sinner has piled up the good things of this life, and thinks he has got plenty of helpers and protectors, but all these things are of no use. On the contrary, his Penalty will be "tremendous", to correspond with the great pains which he has taken to multiply the gods of his worship.

 Alehis is (true) Guidance : And for those who reject The Signs of their Lord. Is a grievous Penalty Of abomination 415

- 12. Tt is God Who has Subjected the sea to you. 4749 That ships may sail Through it by His command That we may seek Of His Bounty, and that Ye may be grateful.
- 13. And He has subjected To you, as from Him. All that is in the heavens "" And on earth : behold. In that are Signs indeed For those who reflect.
- 14. Tell those who believe. To forgive those who Do not look forward To the Days of God : ""

4745. (4) In verse 11, he has flouted and rejected the specific guidance that came to him from the Word of God, or from the admonition of a man of God. His Penalty is a penalty of abomination : he earns unspeakable horror and abomination from all the Righteous, and is an unclean object in the Kingdom of Heaven.

4746. Ct. xvi. 14 and notes thereun, especially a, 2037. The one encircling ocean of our globe is one of the most significant facts in our physical geography. Its salt water is an agent of global sanitation. The salubrious effects of sea-air, with its ozone, are well known to everyone who has recouped his health by its means. Thanks to ships, the sea unites rather than divides : communications are, and have always been, more active between sea-coast towns than further inland. They thus further human intercourse, and help us to seek the "Bounty of God", not only in a commercial but in an intellectual and spiritual sense. All this is through "God's command" ie by His heneficent ordering of the universe, and we should be grateful, 4747. Cf. xxxi. 20, and n. 3605. The sea was only one example of God's cherishing carein making all things in nature available for the use of man, through the genius and faculties which He has given to man. Man should never forget that it is all "as from Him", i.e. from God For is not man God's vicegerent on earth (ii. 30)?

4748. Cf. vol. 54, n. 1031. The "Days of God" I interpret to mean not periods of twenty-four nours, but the stages through which God's Purpose works in us, in bringing home to us a sense of sin and a sense of God's Mercy. We must be patient with those who have not yet acquired that sense "Days of God" may also mean the Days of the Kingdom of God, when evil will be destroyed and God's authority will reign unquestioned.

4749. It is not for private persons to take vengeance even for the cause of right and justice. God will give due recommense for good or evil according to His own full Knowledge and righteous Plan, and in His own good time. Nor is it permissible even to a group of persons to arrogate to themselves the champion-hip of the right. There are always apt to be private motives of hatred or emitty or mixed motives of that kind. These are, and must necessarily be absent in the case of a Jihad under a rightheous Imām; for, by the very definition of the term, a righteous Imām is swayed by no feelings of a private nature and is guided by nothing but divine Light. It is private vengeance that is forbidden, not help, or striving, wherever possible, against evil.

4750 "People" here may be taken to be a group of common characteristics, e.g. the righteous in contrast with the unrighteous, the oppressed in contrast with the oppressors, and so on.

4751. Ordinarily good and evil come to their own even in this world; but in any case there is the final Judgment before God.

4752. The argument here is similar to that in xliv, 32-33, but it is more particularised here. Israel has Revelation given through the Kingdom of David and Solomon, and numerous prophetic, warnings through such me as Islank and Jeremiah.

4753. "Sustenance", here as elsewhere, is to be understood both in a physical and metaphorical sense. The Mosaic Law laid down rules of diet, excluding things unclean, and it laid down rules for a pure and honourable life. In this way Israel became the standard-bearer of God's law, thus "favoured above the nations".

4754. Cf. x. 93. The Jews were the more to blame, that they Tell from Grace after all the divine favours which they had enjoyed. Their schiems and differences arose from mutual envy, which was rebellious insolence against God. As the next verse shows, some of them (not all) rejected the mission of the holy Prophet, also through envy that a Prophet had come among the Arabians, 4755. Cf. is 90, and that whole passage, with its notes.

479. Three meanings can be deduced. (1) The evil ones are not in God's sight like the righteous one; neither in life nor in death are the; equal; in life the righteous are guided by God and receive His Grace, and after death His Mercy, while the others reject His Grace, and after death receive condemation. (2) Neither are the two the same in this life and in the after-life; if the wicked flourish here, they will be condemend in the Hereafter; if the good are in suffering or sorrow bear, they have received spirtual life—is not like the nominal life of the wirked, which is really death; nor is the physical death of the righteous, which will bring them into eternal life. like the terrible death of the wirked, which is will bring them to eternal mesery.

476). If a man follows, not the laws of God, which are also the laws of his own pure nature as made by God, but the desires of his own distorted self, as shaped by the rebellion of his will, the inevitable consequence will be the withdrawal of God's grace and guidance. All his faculties will then be debased, and there will be nothing to guide him, unless he turns in repentance again to God.

4763. Cl. xxxii. 57, and n. 28%. The additional touch here, "And nothing but Tune can destroy us", suggests the materialist philosophy that Matter and Time are eternal buckwards and forwards; and possibly also that though each individual perishes, the race lasts till Time destroys it. This is not knowledge but conjecture. Why not accept light from Him Who knows all 4764. Cf. xliv. 36. It is no argument to say, "If there is a future life, bring back our forefathers and let us see them here and now!" It is not for a man to raise the dead when and where he pleases. It is for God to command. And His promise is about the general Resurrection for the Day of Judgment. In His hands are the keys of life and death.

4765 These vann wranglers about the future life and deniers of the Truth may have a run in this fleeting world; but the moment the world of Reality is established, they will see what they now deny. The facts will destroy their fancies, and they themselves will find themselves humilated and lost, for having deliberately ignored God's Sign's and acted in opposition to His holy. Will.

4769. There is arrogance as well as untruth in this gretence. The coming of Judgment has been proclaimed times out of number by every man of God. They cannot dismiss it as a mere idea or superstition. Their object is merely an ostentatious and foly rejection of Faith.

4770, Cf xi. 8. Their mockery will be turned against themselves, for they will be hemmed in by the very Realities, which they had ignored or doubted or laughed at.

4771. Cf. vii. 51 and n. 1029. "Forget" is of course metaphorical for "deliberately to ignore"

4772. It is implied that 'you deliberately allowed yourselves to be deceived by the vanities of this world, or 'that you put yourselves into a position where you were deceived, for you were expressly warned against Evil'.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XLVI (Ahgaf).

This is the seventh and last Sura of the Hā-Mim series. For the general theme and chronological place of these Suras see the Introduction to S. xl.

The Ahad (mentioned in verse 21) are the long and winding crooked tracts of sand-hills, characteristic of the country of the 'Ad people, adjoining Hadhramaut and Yaman : see vii. 65, n. 1040. There people had, at that time, probably a fertile irrigated country, but their sins brought on the calamity mentioned in xlvi. 24-25. The lesson of this Sūra is that if the Truth is challenged, the challenge will be duly answered, and Truth vindicated.

Summary.—All Crustion has a Purpose behind it: Truth and Revelation will be vindicated, and those who question it will be undone by the very means by which they set such store: the righteous should wait in patience and constancy (xlvi, 1-35, and C. 219).

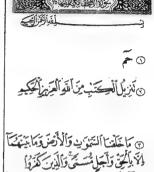

C. 219.—Creation is for just ends, and Falsehood
(xivi 1-35) Is but straying from the Path:
Say what people may
Truth carries its own vindication:
Follow it firmly. Let age think of youth,
And youth not turn rebellious. There are fine
Gradations in the kingdom of God: then strive
For the best. Let not pride and arrogance
Undo you: the humble are often the best
Recipients of Truth. All will come right
In good time: so persevere with patient firmness
Of purpose. Justice that seems to tarry
Comes really on swiftest foot but sube.

<sup>4782. &#</sup>x27;What is there to forge? All prophets have taught the Unity of God and our duty to mankind. I bring no new-langled doctrine, but eternal truths that have been known to good men through the ages, It is to reclaim you that I have come. I do not know what will be your fate for all this callousness, nor what you will do to me. But this I know, that I am preaching truth and righteousness as inspired by God. My duty is only to proclaim aloud and clearly the Message entrusted to me by God. The rest I leave to God.'

<sup>4783.</sup> Another side of the argument is now presented. 'You pagail Arabs!' You are puffed up with pride, though you are an ignorant nation. Among Israel there are men who understand the previous scriptures, and who find in the Qur-an and its Preacher a true confirmation of the previous scripture. They arrays Islam as a fulfilment of the revelation of Moses himself! (See Deut. xviii. 18-19). And yet you hold back, though the Qur-an has come in your own language, in order to help you to understand. How unjust and how shameful! In that case, with what face can you seek guidance from God?'

<sup>4784.</sup> There were learned Jews (and Christians) who saw in the holy Prophet the Messenger of God foreshadowed in previous Revelations, and iccepted Islam. As this is a Meccan Stra we need not construct this as a reference to 'Abdullah in brallam, whose conversion was in Medician only two years before the Prophet's death, unless we accept this particular verse to be so late in date. The sincers Jews were in a position to understand how this Revelation fitted in with all they had learnt about Revelation.

"If (this Message) were "all A good thing, (such men) Would not have gone To it first, before us!" And seeing that they Guide not themselves thereby, They will say. "This is An (old,) old falsehood!"

- 12. And before this, was "59 The Book of Moses

  And this Book confirms (it)
  In the Arabic tongue;
  To admonish the unjust,
  And as Glad Tidings

  Nor shall they grieve.

4783. A great many of the early Muslims were in humble positions, and were despised by the Qurash leaders. "If such men could see any good in Islam, they said, "there could be no good in it: if thee had been any good in it, we should have been the first to see it!" The spiritually blind have such a good connect of themselves! As they reject it, and as the Revelation is proved to have bustone foundations, they can only call it." and only did lift abshood: "I 4786 The last receded Book which was a Code of Life (Sharfal) was the Book of Moses: (or fall feath was not such a Code, but merely moral precepts to sweep away the corruptions that had crept in. The Quich has the same intitude to it as the teaching of Jesus had to the Law. Jesus said (Matt. v. 17): "Think not that I am come to destroy the Law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil." But the corruptions took new forms in Christian Churches: an entirely new Shari at became necessary, and this was provided in Islani."

4787. To say, "Our Lord is 'tiod' is to acknowledge that we owe no service to any creature, and shall render none: God shall have our exclusive deviation. "To temain from on that Path" is shown by our conduct; we prove that we love God and all His creatures, and will unflinchingly do our duty in all circumstances.

4789. Cf. ii. 38 The phrase occurs in numerous other places, with a new application on each occasion. Here, if our claim is true that 'our Lord is God', what fear can possibly come on us, or what calamity can there be to cause us grief? For our Lord is our Cherisher, Defender, and Helper, our Hope and our Comfort, which can never fail.

15. 4789. Cf. xxix. S and xxxi. 14.

4790. In xxxi 14 the time of weating was stated to be at the age of two years, £a,24 months. See also it 233. That leaves six months as the minimum period of human gestation after which the child is known to be viable. This is accordance with the latest ascertained scientific facts. The average period is 280 days, or ten times the inter-menstrual period, and of course the average period of weaning is much less than 24 months.

The maximum period of breast-feeding (2 years) is again in accordance with the time that the first dentition is ordinarily completed in a human child. The lower milk incisors in the centre come out between the 6th and 9th month; then come out the milk teeth at intervals, until the canines appear. The second molars come out at about 24 months, and with them the child has a complete apparatus of milk teeth. Mature now expects him to chew and masticate and be independent of his mother's milk completely. On the other hand it hurts the mother to feed from the breast after the child has a complete set of milk teeth. The permanent teeth begin at the sixth year, and the second molars come at 12 years. The third molars are the wisdom teeth, which may appear at 18 to 20 years, or not at all.

4791. The age of full strength (ashadd) is held to be between 18 and 30 or 32. Between 30 and 40 the man is in his best manhood. After that he begins to look to his growing issue, and rightly commends the new generation to God. Perhaps his spiritual faculties also gain the upper hand after 40.

And they two seek . God's aid, (and rebuke The son): " Woe to thee! Have Faith! For the promise Of God is true." But he says, "This is Nothing but tales Of the ancients!"

4793. A godly man often has an ungodly son, who flouts all that the father held sacred, and looks upon his father himself as old-dashioned and unworthy of respect or regard. The contrast in the passing and the rising generations of mankind. All this happens as a passing phase in the normal evolution of mankind, and there is nothing in this to be despondent about. What we have to do is for the miturer generations to bring up their successors in godly ways, and for the younger generations to realise that age and experience count for something, especially in the understanding of spiritual matters and other matters of the highest moment to man.

4794, Cf, xii, 25 and n. 4494. Each individual, each generation, and each people is responsible for its own good deeds or misdeeds. The law of actions and their fruits applies 1 you cannot blame one for another. The only remedy lies in seeking for God's Grace and Mercy, not only for ourselves but for others in brotherly or fatherly love.

This verse is in balanced contrast to verse 16 above.

4793. There is fine grading in the spiritual Kingdom. Every deed, good or bad, is judged and weighed to the minutest degree, with its motives, intentions, results, and relevant circumstances. It is not a more rough classification. The fruits of evil will be exactly according to the degree of evil. But, as stated in other passages  $(x_{e_i}, xxviii, 3\theta)$ , the reward of good deeds will be far beyond their merits, on account of the Merry and unbounded Bounty of God.

According to the deeds Which they (have done), And in order that (God) May recompense their deeds, And no injustice be done To them.

4799 "Received your good things" implies (in Arabic) grabbing at them, being greedy of them, seeking them as fleeting pleasures rather than the more serious things of life, sacrificing the spiritual for the material.

4797. They will be told: "You took your choice, and you must pay the price. You did wrong in a reb-linux spirit, and incide yourselves on your wrong-duing, not occasionally, but of set purpose and constantly. Now will you be humbled in the dux, as a ditting punishment."

4798, Cf. vii. 65, and note 1040. The point is that the Warner who was caused among the 'Adpenple—as among other peoples—was not a stranger, but one of their own betthren, even as the holy Poople beauth is preaching with a call to his own Direthers the Qurash.

4801. The coming of the Punishment for evil was (and is always) certain. At what particular time it would come he could not tell. It is not for the prophet, but for God, to bring on the Penally. But he saw that it was useless to appeal to them on account of the ignorance in which they were content to dwell.

4802. The Punishment came suddenly, and when they least expected it. They wanted rain, and they saw a cloud and rejuiced. Behold, it was coming towards their own tracts, winding through the fulls. Their irrigation channels would be full, their fields would be green, and their season would be fruitful. But no! What is this? It is a tremendous humane, carrying destruction on its wings! A volent blast, with dust and small. Its fury destroys verything in its wike! Lives lost! Fields covered with sand-hills! The morning dawns on a scene of desolation! Where were the men who boasted and defied their Lord! There are only the ruins of their houses to witness to the past!

4803. Here is the figure of speech known in rhetoric as aposiopesis, to heighten the effect of the solution and the completeness of the calamity. In the Arabic text, the verb aphabit, in the third person plural, leads, us to expect that we shall be told what they were doing in the morning. But no! They had been wheel out, and any small remnant had fied (see n. 1040 to vii. 65). Nothing was to be seen but the runs of their houses.

<sup>4804.</sup> The 'Ad and their successors the Thamüd were more richly endowed with the faculties of the arts, sciences, and culture than ever were the Quirash before Islam. "Flearing and seeing" refet to the experimental faculties, the word "hear" in Arabic includes intellect, or the rational faculties, as well as the instruments of feeling and emotion, the æsibetic faculties. The Second 'Ad, or the Thamüd, have left interesting traces of their architecture in the country round the Aijr: see in. 1043 to vii. 73, and notes 2002-2003 to vx. 80 82.

<sup>4805.</sup> The highest talents and faculties of this world are useless in the spiritual world if we reject the laws of the spiritual world and thus become outlaws there.

<sup>4806.</sup> See n. 4770 to xlv. 33 They used to mock at God's Signs but those were the very things which hemmed them in, and showed that they had more power and effectiveness than anything else.

<sup>4807.</sup> In Arabian history and tradition alone, to say nothing of God's Signs elsewhere, sin inevitably suffered its Punishment, and in various ways. Would not the later people take warning?

<sup>4808.</sup> The false things that they worshipped were figments of their imagination. If they had had any existence in fact, it was not of the kind they imagined.

I have usually translated "spirits, but here some unfamiliar class of men or beings seems to be meant. They listened to the reading of the Qu-fia with great respect. The next verse shows that they had heard of the Jewish religion, but they were impressed with the Message of Islam, and they seem to have gone back to their people to share the Good News with them.

  Day
  That they see the (Punishment) bats

Promised them, (it will be)
As if they had not
Tarried more than an hour
In a single day. (Thine,
But) to proclaim the Message; ""
But shall any be destroyed
Except those who transgress?

أُوَلَّمْ تَرَوْا أَنَّ اللهُ الْمَا عَلَيْهِ الْمَا لَهُ عَلَقَ السَّمَوْنِ

 كَالْاَضُ مَا لَهُ عِلْمَ عِلْمَ عِلْمَا لَهُ عَلَيْهُ وَلَهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ وَلَا اللهُ عَلَيْهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ وَلَا اللهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ وَاللهُ اللهُ اللهُ اللهُ عَلَيْهُ وَاللهُ اللهُ الله

<sup>4812,</sup> Cl. u. 255 [Verse of the Throne]; "His Throne doth extend over the heavens and the earth, and He feeleth no fatigue in guarding and preserving them." He Whose power is constant and unwearied in creating and preserving all things in heaven and earth can surely give life to the dead at the Resurrection.

<sup>4813.</sup> Cf. xivi. 20, where the argument was closed about the unduiful son of a good father. After that the example of the 'Ad and of the believing Jinns was cited, and now is closed that argument in similar terms.

<sup>4815.</sup> All spiritual work proceeds in its own good time. We should never be impatient either about its success or about the punishment which is bound to come for those who oppose it or wish to suppress it. The inevitable punishment is spoken of as the Punishment promised. It will come so soon and so suddenly that it will appear as it there was not the delay of a single hour ma single day! Time is a great factor in our affairs in this world, but it hardly counts in the spiritual Kinrdom.

<sup>4816.</sup> The Prencher's duty is to proclaim the Message in unmistakable terms. If any human beings come in the way, it will be to their own destruction; but none but rebellious transgressor will be punished. There is always hope and forgiveness for repentance and ameument.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XLVII (Muhammad).

We have examined and followed the current arrangement of the Sūras according to subject-matter and independently of chronology, and we have found that a logical thread runs through them. We have now finished more than five-sixths of the Qur-ān. The remaining sixth consists of short Sūras, but these are again grouped according to subject-matter.

We begin the first of such groups with a group of three Sdras (xlvii, to xlix.), which deal with the organisation of the Muslim Ummat or community both for external defence and in internal relations. The present Sdra deals with the necessity of defence sgainst external foes by courage and strenuous fighting, and dates from about the first year of the Hijra, when the Muslims were under threat of extinction by invasion from Mecca.

Summary. - Aggressive hostility to Faith and Truth should be fought firmly, and God will guide (xivii. 1-19, and C. 220).

Faint-heartedness condemned; those who strive and those who turn away will be sorted out (x|vii: 20-38, and C. 221).

C. 220.—No plots sgainst Truth or Faith will succeed:
(xivit. 1-19.) But those who follow both will be strengthened.

Be firm in the fight, and God will guide.

Rebellion against God is destruction: fidelity
Will cool the mind and feed the heart;

It will warm the affections and sweeten life.

Hypocrisy carries its own doom.

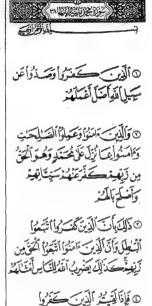

S. XLVII. 1-4.)

Stra XLVII.

Multammad (the Prophet).

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. Mhose who reject God And hinder (men) from The Path of God,— Their deeds will God Render astray <sup>estr</sup> (From their mark).
- 2. But those who believe
  And work deeds of Righteousness, and believe
  In the (Revelation) sent down
  To Muhammad for it is
  The Truth from their Lord,—
  He will remove from them
  Their ills and improve
  Their condition. **
- This because those who Reject God follow vanities, While those who believe follow The Truth from their Lord: Thus does God set forth <sup>6858</sup> For men their lessons By similitudes.
- 4. Therefore, when ye meet *** The Unbelievers (in fight).

4817. Whatever they do will miss its mark, because God is the source of all energy and life. If the wicked try to persecute men or seduce them from the Truth, the result will be the opposite of what they intend.

4818. Bil means state or condition, whether external, or of the heart and mind. Both meanings apply here. The more the wicked rage, the better will be the position of the righteous, and God will make it easier and easier for the righteous to love and follow the Truth.

4819. We learn the greatest spiritual lessons by parables and similitudes from things that happen in the outer world. If a man goes after a mirage or a thing that has no real existence, he can never reach his goal, while the man that follows the kindly Light from God that leads him on must be happier in mind, sounder in heart, and firmer in life, generally for every moment that he lives.

4820. When once the fight (Jihād) is entered upon, carry it out with the utmost vigour, and shome your blows at the most vital points (smite at their neths), both literally and figuratively. You cannot wage war with kid gloves.

(٧٤) سبورة محمل 1379

Smite at their necks: At length, when ye have Thoroughly subdued them, Bind a bond 4821 Firmly (on them): thereafter (Is the time for) either Generosity or ransom: 4822 Until the war lays down Its burdens. Thus (are ve Commanded): but if it Had been God's Will. He could certainly have exacted Retribution from them (Himself): But (He lets you fight) In order to test you. Some with others. But those who are slain 441 In the way of God,-He will never let Their deeds be lost.

 Soon will He guide them 650 And improve their condition,

 And admit them to The Garden which He was Has announced for them. فَضَرَيا لِوَقَابِ حَقَى إِنَّا أَغَنَنْ مُوُهُمْ مَشُدُوا الْوَاقَ فَإِمَا مَنَ الْعَدُواهُ فِلْهَ حَقَىٰ صَنَعَ الْعَرْدُ أَوْلَا هَا ذَٰلِكُ وَلَوْبَيْنَا اللهُ لاَسْفَى مِنْهُ وَلَاحِن لِيْبُوا بَعْضَ حَدْبِ مَنْ وَلَلْ مِنْ مُتَلَاقًا فِي سَيْدِلِ اللّهِ فَلَنْ يُعْنِدُ أَنْ مَسَلَمَهُمُ

۞ وَيُهْجِلُهُمُ الْجُنَّةُ عَرِّفِهِ الْهُمُ

<sup>4821</sup> In the first onset there must necessarily be great loss of life; but when the enemy is fairly beaten, which means, in a Jihlad, that he is not likely to seek again the persecution of Truth, firm arrangements should be made to bring him under control. I thus construct he words "bind a bond firmly (on them)", but others have construed the words to mean, "after the enemy's numbers are fairly thinned, down, prisoners may be taken". With this passage may be compared viii, 67, and n. 1234.

<sup>4822.</sup> When once the enemy is brought under control, generosity (i.e., the release of prisoners without ransom) or ransom is recommended.

<sup>4823.</sup> The Believers are tested in Faith by the extent to which they are willing to make sacrifices, even to the laying down of their lives; and the enemies are tested as to whether they would repent and let the instheous live in freedom and security.

<sup>4824.</sup> There are two alternative readings, (1) qātaiā, "those who fight", and (2) qutilā, "those who are slain". The meaning under the first reading is wider, and includes that under the second. I have translated on the basis of the second reading, which is in accordance with the text of the Royal Egyptian edition.

<sup>4825.</sup> If we read, "who are slain" in the last clause but one of verse 4, (see last note), "guide" would mean "guide them in their spiritual journey after death", Improve their condition: see n. 4818 above. If after death, their minds and hearts will be more and more settled and at rest, and their spiritual satisfaction greater.

<sup>4826. &</sup>quot;The Garden which He has announced for them"; the state of Bliss which is declared in . Revelstion to be destined for those who serve God.

- Ye who believe!
   If ye will aid
   (The cause of) God,
   He will aid you,
   And plant your feet firmly.
- But those who reject (God),—
   For them is destruction,
   And (God) will render
   Their deeds astray <sup>487</sup>
   (From their mark).
- 9. That is because they
  Hate the Revelation of God;
  So He has made
  Their deeds fruitless. 4849
- 10. Do they not travel "B" Through the earth, and see What was the End Of those before them (Who did evil)? God brought utter destruction On them, and similar (Fates await) those who Reject God.
- That is because God
   Is the Protector of those
   Who believe, but
   Those who reject God
   Have no protector.

SECTION 2.

 Merily God will admit Those who believe and do Righteous deeds, to Gardens Beneath which rivers flow;

<sup>4828.</sup> Their deeds are "fruitless" in the sense that they are vain; they do not produce the results intended by their doers. But they will not be exempt from producing the natural consequences of evil, ova., forther degradation and misery for the soul.

<sup>4829.</sup> The end of evil is evil. All past history and tradition shows that. Will not men of every generation lears that lesson? God helps His servants, but those who rebel against God have no one to help them.

While those who reject God Will enjoy (this world) 4810 And eat as cattle eat; And the Fire will Be their abode.

- 13. And how many cities,
  With more power than
  Thy city which has Driven thee out, ***
  Have We destroyed
  (For their sins)?
  And there was none
  To aid them.
- 14. Is then one who is
  On a clear the (Path)
  From his Lord,
  No better than one
  To whom the evil
  Of his conduct seems pleasing,
  And such as follow
  Their own lusts?
- 1.5. (Topere is) a Parable
  Of the Garden which
  The righteous are promised:
  In it are rivers
  Of water incorruptible; ***
  Rivers of milk
  Of which the taste
  Never changes; rivers

- 4830. An apt simile. Beasts of the field eat their fill, but have no higher interests. Men who those of the beasts of the field. They have no inking of spiritual happiness. On the contrary, as they were endowed with spiritual faculties which they misused, they will not escape the Fire of Punishment, the Pernalty of Sin.
- 4831. A reference to Pagan Mecca, which drove out the holy Prophet because of his righteousness and because he preached Repentance. The date of this Stra must therefore be after the Hijrat.
  - 4832. Clear, or enlightened; a Path on which shines the Light of God.
- 4833. In this symbolism there are four kinds of drinks and all kinds of fruits; and the summing up of all spiritual delights in the "Grace from their Lord". The four kinds of drinks are: (I) deliciosol, pure water, not like earthly water, for it never suffers corruption; (2) milk which never turns sour, whose taste is like that of fresh warm milk drawn from the udder; (3) wine, not like any wine on earth, for it leaves no headaches behind, and causes no intoxication, which is a kind of madness or poison, but is ever a joy to drink; and (4) honey, pure and clear, with no admixture of wax or any foreign substance. These drinks, again speaking metaphorically, will cool the spirit, feed the heart, warm the affections, and sweeten like.

Of wine, a joy
To those who drink;
And rivers of honey
Pure and clear. In it
There are for them
All kinds of fruits; the
And Grace from their Lord the (Can those in such Bliss)
Be compared to such as Shall dwell for ever
In the Fire, and be given,
To drink, boiling water,
So that it cuts up the such selections of the such selections.

16. And among them are men Who listen to thee, But in the end, when they Go out from thee, ser: They say to those who Have received Knowledge, "What is it he said Just then hi" Such are Men whose hearts God Has sealed, and who Follow their own Justs.

17. But to those who receive see Guidance, He increases The (light of) Guidance, And bestows on them Their Piety and Restraint (From evil).

مِنْ حَمْرِلَةَ فِلْنَسْرِيِنَ وَأَنْهُو الْمِنْعَسِلِ مُصَافًى وَكُنْ فِيهَا مِن حَيْلِ الْفَرِّرُ وَمَنْفِرَهُ مِن رَبِيهِمْ كَنْ مُوحَظِلَةٌ فِي الْنَارِ وَسُعْوَامَا مَّ حَبِيمًا فَفَظَعَ أَمْمًا مَهُمُ

۞ وَمُنِهُ مُن يُسْمَعِمُ إِلَيْكَ تَحْتُى وَالْحَارِيَّةِ الْحَرِيْحُولُ مِنْ عِيمِدِكَ قَالُوا لِلَّذِينَ أُونُواْ الْهِمْ مَا ذَا قَالَ مَا نِثَنَّا أُولَٰ لِإِنَّ الَّذِينَ طَنِّعَ اللَّهُ مُثَلِّ فُ مُؤْرِهِيهِ وَانْتِمَعُواْ أَخْوَاً مُهْرِ

> ۞ وَالْدَيْنِ أَهْمَدُ وَازَادَهُمْ هُدَى وَءَاتَهُمْ تَقُولَهُمْ

4834. The signification of Fruits in their metaphorical sense has been already explained: see n. In the setting of the present verse, note that it implies a second degree of totality of Bliss, the third or highest and final degree being the Grace or Mercy of God.

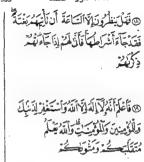

4835. Grace from their Lord: that is the covering up or blotting out of sin and all that wassad or unsatisfactory in the lower life; the pure Light from the Countenance of God Most Fligh: xcii. 20.

4836. Cf. xxxvii, 66-67, and n. 4074. Just as the Bliss of the Blessed will penetrate their being through and through, so the agony of the condemned ones will penetrate their being through and through. "Bowels" besides meaning their inmost being, also suggests the seat of their feelings and affections.

4837. Cf, x 42, and n. 1434; also vi. 25, 36, and n. 857. The case here referred to is that of the Hypocrities who came to the assembles of Islam in Medina and pretended to listen to the Prophet's teaching and preaching. But their heart and mind were not in learning righteousness, but in carping at things they saw and heard. When they got out, they knew nothing of the teaching, but on the contrary asked foolish and ignorant questions, such as might raise doubter.

4838. Spiritual advancement is progressive: each step makes the next ones easier and more complete.

- 18. Do they then only wait 400 For the Hour,—that it Should come on them Of a sudden? But already Have come some tokens 100 Thereof, and when it (Actually) is on them, How can they benefit Then by their admonition?
- 19. Know, therefore, that
  There is no god
  But God, and ask
  Forgiveness for thy fault, "sal
  And for the men
  And women who believe:
  For God knows how ye
  Move about and how
  Ye dwell in your homes.

C. 221.—Those eager for service want the call for service; (xlvii. 20-38.) But the hypocrites blench at such call.

If it were not obeyed, and evil should get
The upper hand, will it not stalk arrogant
Over the land, and trample under foot
All claims of right and kinabip? Fight it,
And fail not in the test of your mettle. Be bold
And establish the Flag of Righteousness
In the highest places. Thus comes Peace,
For which due sacrifice must be made.

4839. Ct. xliii. 66, and n. 4665.

4840. The sands of time are always running, and when a wrong is done, the time for its punishment is approaching every-moment. No one should therefore wait. The time for repentance is New at any given time. When the punishment comes, it is too late for repentance, and all admonition would be useless.

Looking to the particular time when this Stra was revealed. via, about a year after the Hijrat, already there were Stras that the plans of the Pagans to crush Islam were crumblings to pieces. The Hiljrat showed how much good-will there was in Medina for the holy man of God, and how many people from Mecca adhered to him. The battle of Badr showed that they could hold their own against odds of three to one.

4841. Cf. xl. 55, and n. 4428.

4842. The time and manner of our conducting ourselves at home and when we move about on our business are all material to the judgment of our conduct, and for every nuance in our moral and spiritual progress, we must seek God's help and guidance.

SECTION 3.

- 20. Mehose who believe say, 49.2
  "Why is not a Sura
  Sent down (for us)?"
  But when a Sura
  Of basic or categorical 4841
  Meaning is revealed,
  And fighting is mentioned
  Therein, thou wilt see those
  In whose hearts is a disease 4842
  Looking at thee with a look
  Of one in swoon at
  The approach of death.
  But more fitting for them—
- 21. Were it to obey
  And say what is just,
  And when a matter **
  Is resolved on, it were
  Best for them if they Were true to God.
- 22. Then, is it ***
  To be expected of you,
  If ye were put in authority,
  That ye will do mischief
  In the land, and break
  Your ties of kith and kin?

وَيَعْوَلُ الْذَبِّ الْمَنْوَا لَوْلَا لِزَلْتَ سُورَةً

 إِذَا أَرُكَ سُورَةً عُنَكَمَةٌ وَكُرَوَ الْمَالُولَةِ الْأَلْ

 رَأَيْنَ الْذَيْنِ فِي قُلْوَيْهِم مِّمُنْ الْمُلْوِينَ الْمَلْوَلِينَ الْمُلْكِلِينَ اللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهُ الْمُنْ الْمُنْ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الْمُنْ اللَّهُ الْمُنْ اللْمُنْ الْمُنْ الْمُل

- 4843. The men of faith and loyalty are eager and anxious to get a command to serve the Cause even if it be at the sacrise of their luxes. Not so the Hypocrites, "those in whose hearts is a disease". They are mortally afraid as mentioned below.
- 4814. Cf. iii. 7, and n. 347. The defence of truth and righteousness at all sacriâce, when a definite and categorical command issues from the righteous Imam under inspiration from God, is a fundamental condition of enlistment in the cause of God. It is true that Punishment and Judgment belong to God alone; but our mettle and fidelity have to be tested, see verse I above), and God uses human agency in human affairs
- 4845. Cf. ii, 10. The disease is hypocrisy, disloyalty to the Cause, want of courage and of the spirit of self-sacrifice, want of true understanding.
- 4846. The resolution is not taken except under guidance from God. Those, therefore, who fall to implement it by their own effort and sacrifice, are not true to God. And such disloyalty or cowardice is not even good for them from a worldly point of view. With what face can they meet their friends after their disgraceful conduct?
- 4817. It is no use to say, as the Quraish sand, that it is not seemly to fight against kith and kin. From one point of view the stand against sin brings "not peace, but a sword". It is a case of either subduing evil or being subdued by evil. If evil gets the upper hand, it is not likely to respect ties of kith and kin. It did not in the case of the holy Prophet and his adherents, and had to be suppressed, to bring about the conditions increasiny for peace.

- 23. Such are the men
  Whom God has cursed the
  For He has made them
  Deaf and blinded their sight.
- 24. Do they not then
  Earnestly seek to understand
  The Qur-an, or are
  Their hearts locked up
  By them?
- 25. Those who turn back ***

  As apostates after Guidance
  Was clearly shown to them,—
  The Evil One has instigated
  Them and buoyed them up
  With false hopes.
- 26. This, because they said ***o To those who hate what God has revealed, "We Will obey you in part Of (this) matter"; but God Knows their (inner) secrets.
- 27. But how (will it be) (851)
  When the angels take
  Their souls at death,
  And smite their faces (852)
  And their backs?

المُتَكِنَا الْإِنَّ لِتَنْكُمُ اللَّهُ فَأَصَهُمْ وَأَغَنَى الْمَصَرُهُمُ وَأَعْنَى الْمَصَرُهُمُ وَأَعْنَى الْمَصَرُهُمُ وَأَعْنَى الْمُصَرِّمُهُمُ اللَّهُ فَأَنَّ الْمُتَكِنَّةُ الْمُعَلِّمُ الْمُصَلِّمُ الْمُعَلِّمُ الْمُعَلِّمُ الْمُعَلِّمُ الْمُعْمَلِهُ اللَّهِمُ اللَّهُمُ اللْمُلِمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللْمُعُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ اللَّهُمُ الْ

4848. Curract: if e, deprived of His Grace: left them straying, because they deliberately rejected His guidance. The result is that what they hear is as if they had not heard, and what they see is as if they had not seen. They have no desire to understand God's Will or God's Revelation (--or is it that they have themselves locked and boiled their hearts and minds, so that nothing can penetrate them?

4849. Such men are entirely in the hands of Evil. They follow its suggestions, and their hopes are built on its deceptions.

4830. They have become so impervious to facts and truths, because, without the courage to oppose God's Cause openly, they secrelly intrigue with God's enemies, and ask that they will follow them part of the way, and by remaining parity in the other camp, they will be far more useful as piese and half-hearted doubters than be going over altogether. If they think that this game will be successful, they are mistaken. All the inner secrets and motives of their hearts are known to God. Cf lix. 11.

4851. It is all very well for them to practise hypocrisy in this life. How will they feel at death, when they find that the angels know all, and touch 'the very spots they had taken such care to conceal?

4652. Their faces and their backs: there is a subtle metaphor. The face is what looks to the front, the side you present to the outer world; the back is what is not shown, what is hidden from the world. The hypocrites will be hat at both points. Or, the face is what they boast of, what they are proud of; the back is the skeleton in the cupboard, the things they dare not utter, but which yet haunt them. The hypocrites are hit on every side. Cf. viii.

28. This because they followed
That which called forth
The Wrath of God, and
They hated God's good pleasure;
So He made their deeds
Of no effect.

SECTION 4

- 29. To do those in whose see Hearts is a disease, think That God will not bring To light all their rancour?
- 30. Had We so willed,
  We could have shown them
  Up to thee, and thou
  Shouldst have known them
  By their marks: but surely
  Thou wilk know them
  By the tone of their speech!
  And God knows
  All that ve do.
- 31. And We shall try you "**s
  Until We test those Among you who strive
  Their utmost and persevere
  In patience; and We shall Try your reported (mettle)."*
- 32. Those who reject God, Hinder (men) from The Path of God, and resist The Apostle, after Guidance

4853. Cf. verse 20 above, and n. 4845. Being diseased at the very core of their being, they do not understand the simplest facts of spiritual life.

4834. Evil is not always necessarily branded in this life with a distinguishing mark or brand. But the discerning ones know, Evil is betrayed by its speech and behaviour.

4855. Cf. xxxiv. 21, and n. 3821. The test and trial is for our own psychological development, to help in the exercise of such choice as has been given to us in our free-will. Cf. also iii. 134, and n. 467.

4856. AbbAr: the things reported of you; reputation for courage and constancy, which has to be tought to the test of facts and experience. In an epigram of Tactius we are fold of a Roman Emperor that he would have been considered in every way to have been worthy of being a ruller if only he had never ruled I. So in life people may think us courageous, true, noble, and self-sacrificing; and we may consider ourselves as possessing all such virtues; but it is actual experience that will bring them to the test.

Has been clearly shown to them, sent Will not injure God In the least, but He Will make their deeds Of no effect.

- 33. O ye who believe! Obey God, and obey The Apostle, and make Not vain your deeds!
- 34. Those who reject God, 1886
  And hinder (men) from the Path
  Of God, then die rejecting God,—
  God will not forgive them.
- 35. De not weary and
  Faint-hearted, crying for peace,
  When ye should be the Uppermost: for God is
  With you, and will never
  Put you in loss
  For your (good) deeds.
- 36. The life of this world
  Is but play and amusement: (*****
  And if ye believe
  And guard against evil,
  He will grant you
  Your recompense, and will not

4857. Cf. verse 25 above, and verse 34 below: in verse 25 was shown the source of the evil. viz., yielding to the deceptions of the Exil One; in this verse are shown the proximate consequences of such yielding to evil. viz., failure of all we do; and in verse 34 below are shown the eternal consequences, viz., our deprivation of God's Grace and Mercy.

4858. See last note.

4859. To those who are trying to root out evil, and have authority to do so, the question is not of peace or conflict, but of whether Good or Evil is to prevail. They must remember that Good must ultimately prevail, and Good's help is with those who, as far as men can, are trying to further the universal Plan. Cf. n. 4817 to yerse 22 above.

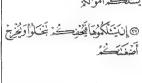

4600. Cf. vi. 32, and n. 855; and xxix 64, and n. 3497. Amusement and play are not bad things in themselves. As preparations for the more serious life, they have their value. But if we concentrate on them, and neglect the business of life, we cannot prosper. So we must use our life in this world as a preparation for our spiritual or inner life.

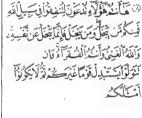

Ask you (to give up) Your possessions.

37. If He were to ask you
For all of them, and Press you, ye would Covetously withhold, and He would wo
Bring out all your ill-feeling, ***

38. Behold, ye are those (%)
Invited to spend
(Of your substance)
In the Way of God:
But among you are some
That are nigaardly. But any
Who are nigaardly are so
At the expense of
Their own souls,
But God is free
Of all wants,
And it is ye that are needy.
If ye turn back (*)
(From the Path), He will
Substitute in your stead

Another people; then they Would not be like you!

4861. Complete self-sacrifice, if voluntarily offered, has a meaning: it means that the person's decrois reclusively and completely for the Cause. But no law or rule can demand it, And a mere offer to kill yourself has no meaning. You should be ready to take tisks to your life in fighting for the Cause, but you should aim at life, not death. If you live, you should be ready to place your substance and your acquisitions at the disposal of the Cause. But it is not reasonable to pauperise yourself and become a hanger-on for the Cause. Moreover, the inborn tendency to self-preservation in an average man would lead to concealment and niggardliness if all were asked for the Cause, by Law, and there would further be a feeling of bitterness and rebellion.

4862, Ct. ini, 180,

4863, Cf. above, verse 29. Rancour or ill-feeling, or any desire-but that of devotion, should never be given a handle in a wise Law.

4864. Here the cases of the special devotee and of the average man with his human foibles are distinguished. Stinginess is not a virtue: it hurts more the finer-nature of the individual practising it than it hurst the Cause. God is free of all wants and independent of any need that we can meet. His Cause is similarly independent of human aid. But it uses human agency for our own human advancement. The need to be able to serve in the Kingdom of Heaven is ours. We are the needy beggars who should claim the privilege before the Lord of Bounties unbounded.

4865. If we desert the Cause, the Cause will not fail. Better men than we will uphoid the flag. Blue we should fail, and others will take our place, who are not so timid, hat-hearted, or stingy. In Wordsworth's words, "High Heaven rejects the lore of nicely calculated less or more."

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XLVIII (Fat-h).

- This is the second of the group of three Medina Sûras described in the Introduction to S. xivi. Its date is fixed by the mention of the Treaty of Hudaibiya, Zul-qv'd A.H. 6= Feb. 628 (see n. 1261 to ix 13).
- 2. Hudaibiya is a plain, a short day's march to the north of Mecca, a little to the west of the Medina-Mecca road, as used in the Prophet's time. Six years had passed since the Prophet had left his beloved City, and it had been in the hands of the Pagan autocracy. But Islam had grown during these six years. Its Qibla was towards the Ka'ba. The Pagans had tried to attack Islam at various times and had been foiled. By Arab custom every Arab was entitled to visit the Sacred Enclosure unarmed, and fighting of any kind was prohibited during the Sacred Months (see n. 209 to ii. 1941, which included the month of Zul-qa'd. In Zul-qa'd A H# 6, therefore, the Prophet desired to perform the 'Umra or lesser pilgrimage (n. 212 to ii. 1961, unarmed, but acccmf anied with his followers. A large following joined him, to the number of footteen to fifteen hundred.
- 3. This was not to the liking of the Pagan autocracy at Mecca, which took alarm, and in breach of all area tradition and usage, prepared to prevent the peaceful party from performing the rites of pligtimage. They marched out to fight the unarmed party. The Prophet turned a little to the west of the road, and encamped at Hudaibiya, where negotiations took place. On the one hand the Prophet was unwilling to give the Quraish any prete ded excuse for violence in the Sacred Territory; on the other, the Quraish and learnt, by six years' bitter experience, that their power was crumbling on all sides, and Islam was growing with its moral and appiritual forces, which were also reflected in its powers of organisation and resistance. The enthusiasm with which the Covenant of Fealty was entered into under a tree in Hudaibiya (xlviii. 18) by that great multitude united in devotion to their great leader, was evidence of the great power which he commanded even in a worldly sense if the Quraish had chosen to try conclusions with him.
- 4. A peaceful Treaty was therefore concluded, anown as the Treaty of Hudaibiya. It stipulated: (1) that there was to be peace between the parties for ten years; (2) that any tribe or person was free to join either party or make an alliance with it; (3) that if a Quraish person from Mecca, under guardianship, should join the Prophet without the guardian's permission. he (or she) should be sent back to the guardian, but in the contrary case, they should not be sent back; and (4) that the Prophet and his party were not to enter Mecca that year, but that they could enter unarmed the following year.
- 5. Item 3, not being reciprocal, was objected to in the Muslim camp, but it really was of little importance. Muslims under guardianship, sent back to Mecca, were not likely to renounce the blessings of Islam; on the other hand Muslims going to Mecca would be centres of influence for Islam, and it was more important that they should be allowed to remain there than that they should be sent back to Medina.

It was impossible to think that there would be apostates or renegades to Paganism! "Look on this picture, and on that!"

6. The Muslims faithfully observed the terms of the Treaty. The following year (A.H. 7) they performed the lesser Pilgrimage in great state for three days. It is true that the Meccans later on broke the Peace in the attack which one of their allied tribes (the Band Bakr) made on the Muslim Band Khuza'n (who were in alliance with the Prophet), but this led to the conquest of Mecca and the sweeping away of the autocracy. Meanwhile Hudaiblya was a great vistory, moral and social, as well as political, and its lessons are expounded in this Sūra, as the lessons of Badr were expounded in viii. 42-48, and of Ulud in iii. 121-129, 149-180.

Summary.—Victory comes from cool courage, devotion, faith, and patience, as shown at Hudaiblya; therefore remember God, and follow His Apostle (xiviii. 1-29, and C. 222).

C. 222.—Victory and Help go with calmness of mind, (xiviii. 1:29.)

Faith, fidelity, zeal, and earnestness, Not with greed, lukewarmness, or timidity. Discipline and obedience are essential For service. The rewards for service are not To be measured by immediate results, But accrue in countless hidden ways For Patience and Restraint: Be strong Against Evil, but kind and gentle amongst Yourselves: the seed will grow and become Strong, to your wonder and delight.

Stira XLVIII.

l'at-le or Victory.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful,

- 1. We erily We have granted
  Thee a manifest Victory:
- 2. That God may forgive thee **-1
  Thy faults of the past *
  And those to follow;
  Fulfil His favour to thee;
  And guide thee
  On the Straight Way;
- 3. And that God may help 18-8. Thee with powerful help.
- 4. It is He Who sent Down Tranquillity 45th
  Into the hearts of
  The Believers, that they may
  Add Faith to their Faith:—faith
  For to God belong

- 4866 This is best referred to the Treaty of Iludaibiya, for which see the Introduction to this Stra. By this Treaty the Meccain Quiravib, after many years of unrelenting conflict with Islam, at length recognized Islam as (what they thought) an equal power with themselves. In reality the door was then opened for the free spread of Islam throughout Arabia and thence through the world.
- 4867. See n. 4428 to x1. 55, and Cf., xlvin, 19. Any mistakes of the past were now rectified, and any titute ones prevented by the free scope now offered, by the act of the Quraish Paganis themselves, to the recognition and free promulgation of Islam.
- 4808. Three objects or results of the Treaty are mentioned: (1) forgiveness, which is aguivalent to Mercy, (2) fulfilment of the dignity of Prophethood with the dignity of an effective and recognised position in Arabia; 33) opening up a straight way leading to Islam, by access to Mecca from next year. Mecca being the symbolic centre of Islam. These three are summed up in the comprehensive obstace "love return" of the Comprehensive obstacles - 4869. The results were achieved by tranquillity, calmness, and cool courage among the 1400 to lunamed men who accompanied the Prophet to Hudaibiya and who were threatened with violence by the excited Quiranie leaders of Merca.
- 4870. It is, a casustical question to ask, Are there degrees in Faith? The plain meaning is that Bellevers will see one Sign of Cod after another, and with each their Faith is confirmed. During all the long years of percention and conflict they had Path, but when they see their old enemies actually coming out to negotiate with them, their Faith is justified, fulfilled, and confirmed; and they turn in graitfued 6 God.

(٨٤) سورة الفتح

The Forces of the heavens ****
And the earth; and God is Full of Knowledge and Wisdom; —

- 5. That He may admit <sup>1972</sup>
  The men and women
  Who believe, to Gardens
  Beneath which rivers flow,
  To dwell therein for aye,
  And remove their ills
  From them;—and that is,
  In the sight of God,
  The highest achievement
  (For man).—
- 6. And that He may punish The Hypocrites, men and Women, and the Polytheists, Men and women, who imagine An evil opinion of God. On them is a round <sup>An</sup> Of Evil: the Wrath of God Is on them: He has cursed <sup>Mea</sup> Them and got Hell ready For them: and evil Is it for a destination.
- 7. For to God belong 4878
  The Forces of the heavens
  And the earth; and God is Exalted in Power,
  Full of Wisdom.

4871. There are visible forces which you see in the physical world. Men fight with armed forces, and the Muslims had to defend themselves with arms also, and not without success. But social, moral, and spiritual forces were fighting for them under God's command, and they were the real forces that established the Message of Islam and the position of its Leader and Preacher.

4872. This clause is co-ordinated to the previous clause, "That they may add Faith to their Faith". The intervening words, "For to God...and Wisdom", are parenthetical. The third co-ordinate clause comes in the next verse, "And that He may ouisin,". The skeleton construction will be, "God sends down calm courage to Believers, in order that they may be confirmed in their Faith; that they may qualify for the Bliss of Heaven; and that the evil ones may receive the punishment they deserve."

4873. They will be encircled (or hemmed in) by Evil.

4874. That is, deprived them of His Grace, on account of their continued rejection of it.

4875. These words are repeated (with a slight change) from the parenthetical clause in verse 4, to emphasize the assertion as a substantive proposition, that fighting and visible forces in the physical world are not the only forces with which God works out His Plan. The invisible forces are more important as they were at §udaiblya. The slight difference is instructive; in the parenthetical clause, God's Knowledge was emphasized, and in the substantive clause it is God's Power, Knowledge plans, and Power executes.

We have truly sent thee 4876
 As a witness, as a
 Bringer of Glad Tidings,
 And as a Warner:

9. In order that ye
(O men) may believe
In God and His Apostle,
That ye may assist
And honour Him,
And celebrate His praises
Morning and evening.

10. Verily those who plight and Their fealty to thee Do no less than plight Their fealty to God: The Hand of God is Over their hands: Then any one who violates His oath, does so To the harm of his own Soul, and any one who Fulfis what he has Covenanted with God,—God will soon grant him A great Reward,

4876. The Apostle came in order to establish Faith in God and true worship. We can view him in three capacities: (1) as a witness to help the weak if they were oppressed and check the strong if they did wrong; (2) as a giver of the Glad Tidings of God's Grace and Mercy to those who repented and lived good lives; and (3) as one who warned sinners of the consequences of their sin.

4877. In the Budaiblya negotiations, when it was uncertain whether the Qurash would treat well or ill the Prophet's delegate to Mecca, there was a great wave of freling in the Muslim camp of 1400 to 1500 men. They came with great enthusiasm and swore their feality to the Prophet, by placing band on hand according to the Arab custom; see paragraph 3 of the Introduction to this Stra. This in thest was a wonderful demonstration of moral and material strength, a true Victory; it is called Barat wr Ridkusān (Fealty of God's Good Pleasure) in Islamic History. They placed their hands on the Prophet's hand, but the Hand of God was above them, and He accepted their Pealty.

'Alaika is an archaic form for 'Alaiki,

4878 When the Prophet started from Medina on the Mecca journey which ended in Rudaibtys, he asked all Muslims to join him in the pious word-traking, and he had a splendid response. But some of the desert tribes hung back and made excuses. Their faith was but lukewarm, and they did not want to share in any trouble which the Meccans might give to the unarmed Muslims on pligrimage. Their excuse that they were engaged in looking after their focks and herds and their families was an after-thought, and in any case made after the focks and berd and his party with enhanced pressive to Medina.

1394

Say to thee : "We were engaged in (Looking after) our flocks And herds, and our families: Do thou then ask Forgiveness for us." 4010 They say with their tongues What is not in their hearts. <sup>4879.</sup> They said this with their tongues, but no thought of piety was in their hearts.

<sup>4880</sup> Their false excuse was based on a calculation of worldly profit and loss. But what about the spiritual loss in detaching themselves from the holy Prophet or spiritual profit in joining in the splendidy loyal feelings of service and obedence which were demonstrated at Budaiblya? And in any case they need not think that all their real and secret motives were not known to God.

<sup>4891.</sup> Their faith was so shake that they thought the worst would happen, and that the Meccan Quraish would destroy the unarmed band. In their heart of hearts they would not have been sorry, because they were steeped in wirkedness and rejoiced in the sufferings of others. But such persons will burn in the fire of their own disappointment.

<sup>4832.</sup> Evil must inevitably have its punishment, but there is one way of escape, w.g., through reance and the Mercy of Go 'God's Justice will punish, but God's Mercy will forgive; and the Mercy is the predominant reature in God's universe; "He is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful."

<sup>483.</sup> Now comes out another motive behind the minds of the laggards. The journey for pilgrimage had no promise of war booty. If at any future time there should be a promise of booty they would come! But that is to reverse God's law and decree. Jihâd is not for personal gain or booty: see S. viii. and Introduction to S. viii., paragraph 2. On the contrary Jihâd is hard striving, in war and peace, in the Cause of God.

<sup>4896</sup> The desert Arabs loved fighting and plunder, and understood such motives for war. The higher motives send to be beyond them Like ignorant men they attributed petty motives or motives of leadousy if they were kept out of the vulgar cricic of fighting for plunder. But they had to be schooled, and they were schooled to higher ideas of discipline, self-sacrifice, and striving hard for a Cause.

<sup>4687.</sup> While they are reproached for their supineness in the march which led to Budaiblya, where there was danger but no prospect of booty, they are promised, if they learn discipline, to be allowed to follow the Banner of Islam where (as happened later in the Persian and Byzantine Wanj there was real fighting with formidable and well-organized armies.

<sup>4889.</sup> That is, you shall go forth to war if you learn discipline, not for booty, but for a great and noble Cause. For if your opponents submit to the Cause, there will be no fighting and no booty.

<sup>4896.</sup> The gains so far seen from the Barat and their calm and disciplined behaviour were certainly great; but greater still were to follow in the spinitual sense, in the rapid spread of Islam, in the clearance from the Sacred House of the idolatrous antecracy, and in the universal acceptance of the Message of God in Arabia.

<sup>4897.</sup> The first fruits of the Bal'al were the victory or treaty of Hudaibtya, the cessation for the time being of the hostitiy of the Meccan Qurash, and the opening out of the way to Mecca. These things are implied in the phrase, "He has restrained the hands of men from you."

<sup>4598.</sup> Hudaibiya (in both the Barat and the Treaty) was truly a sign-post for the Behevers; it showed the solidarity of Islam, and the position which the Muslims had won in the Arab world.

4902. Little incldents had taken place that might have plunged the Quraish and the Muslims from Medina into a fight. On the one hand, the Quraish were determined to keep out the Muslims, which they had no right to do; and on the other hand, the Muslims, though unarmed, had sworn to stand together, and if they had counter-attacked they could have forced their entrance to the Karba, the centre of Mecca. But God restrained both sides from anything that would have violated the Peace of the Sanctuary, and after the Teaty was signed, all danger was past.

4903. The Muslims from Medina had brought the animals for sacrifice with them, and had put on the Iprim or pilgrim's garb (see n. 217 to il. 197), but they were not only prevented from entering Mecca, but ware also prevented from sending the sacrificial animals to the place of sacrifice in Mecca, as they could have done under ii. 196. The sacrifice was therefore actually offered at Budablyta.

490). There were at the time in Mecca believing Muslims, men and women, and the faith of some of them was unknown to their breibnen from Medina. Had a fight taken place in Mecca, even though the Muslims had been successful, they would unwittingly have killed some of these unknown Muslims, and thus would unwittingly have been guilty of shedding Muslim blood. This was prevented by the Treaty.

490.5. God works according to His wise and holy Will and Plan, and not according to what seems to us, in the excitement of human life, to be the obvious course of things. By preventing a fight He saved many valuable lives, not only of Muslims but also of some who became Muslims afterwards and served Islam. He grants His Mercy on far higher standards than man in his limited horzon can see 4906. If the party from Medina could have distinguished Muslims from non-Muslims among the Meccans, they might have been allowed to enter and punish the pagan Quraiso for their inordinate vanity and gross breach of the unwritten law of the land. But in the actual circumstances the best solution was the Treaty of Budaiblya.

Certainly have punished The Unbelievers among them With a grievous punishment.

4907. While the Unbelievers were blustering and excited, and meticulously objected to introductory words such as "la the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Marchild (they did not like the titles), the Muslims were calm and collected, and got the substance of their demands embodied in the Treaty without worrying about words. This was due to their unity and trust in their Leader.

4908. Cf. above xlviu. 18, and n. 4894.

4909. It=Tranquillity. Their calmness amid much provocation was a gift of God; they had earned a right to it by their obedience and discipline, and showed themselves well worthy of it.

4010 The Prophet had had a dream that he had entered the Sacred Mosque at Mecca, just before he decided on the journey which resulted in the Treaty of Budaiblya. By it he and his people tould enter next year without the least molestation and in the full customary garb, with bead shaved or harr cut short, and all the customary minor rites of pligrimage.

4911. See above, xlviii. 18, and n. 4895.

29. Muhammad is the Apostle Of God: and those who are With him are strong Against Unbelievers, (but)

Compassionate amongst each other 1913 Thou wilt see them bow

And prostrate themselves (In prayer), seeking Grace From God and (His) Good Pleasure. 1914

On their faces are their Marks, (being) the traces #915 Of their prostration. This is their similitude In the Taurat : 4916 And their similitude In the Gospel is: #17 Like a seed which sends Forth its blade, then Makes it strong; it then Becomes thick, and it stands 4912. The divine disposition of events in the coming of Islam and its promulgation by the holy Prophet are themselves evidence of the truth of Islam and its all-reaching character; for there is nothing which it has not influenced. See also lat. 9, n. 5442.

4913 Cl ix 128. The devotees of God wage unceasing war against evil, for themselves, and for others; but to their own brethren in faith-especially the weaker ones-they are mild and compassionate; they seek out every opportunity to sympathise with them and help them.

4914. Their humility is before God and His Apostle and all who have authority from God, but they yield no power or pomp, nor do they worship worldly show or glitter. Nor is their humility before God a mere show for men.

4916. In the Book of Moses, which is now found in a corrupt form in the Fentaleuch, the posture of humility in prayer is indicated by prostration: e.g., Moses and Aaron "fell upon their faces", Num. xvi, 22.

4917 The similitude in the Gospel is about how the good seed is sown and grows gradually, even beyond the expectation of the sower; "the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how: for the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; flist the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear 1; Mark, iv. 27-28. Thus Islam was preached by the holy Prophet; the seed seemed to human eyes lost in the ground; but it put forth its shoot, and grew, and became strong, until it was able to stand on its own legs, and its worst enemies recognised its existence and its right to live. Note how much more complete the parable is in the Qur-an. The mentality of the sowers of the seed is expressed in beautiful terms; its growth and strength filled them " with wonder and delight."

On its own stem, (filling)
The sowers with wonder
And delight. As a result, 6918
It fills the Unbelievers
With rage at them.
God has promised those
Among them who believe
And do righteous deeds
Forgiveness,
And a great Reward.

<sup>4918.</sup> I construs the particle "it" as expressing not the object, but the result. The result of the wonderful growth of Islam in numbers and strength was that its enemies were confounded, and raged furiously within their own minds, a contrast to the satisfaction, wonder, and delight of the Prophet and his Companions. The pronoun in "rage, at them" of cour a_releg to the Prophet and his Companions, and goes back to the eatlier words, "on their faces" etc.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA XLIX (Hujurāt).

This is the third of the group of three Medina Saras, which began with S. xlvii. See the Introduction to that Sara.

Its subject-matter is the manners to be observed by the members of the rapidly-growing Muslim community, among themselves and towards its Leader. The key-word "Hujurāt" (Inner Apartments) occurs in verse 4.

Its date is referred to the Year of Deputations, A.H. 9, when a large number of deputations of all kinds visited Medina to offer their allegiance to Islam.

Summary.—A community must show its respect to its Leader in all forms of behaviour; quarrels are unseemly and should be composed; manners spring from morals; and mutual respect and confidence are a duty and a privilege in Islam (zlix, 1-18, and C. 223).

C. 223.-Respectful behaviour to the Leader, in manner, (xlix. 1-18.) Voice, and demeanour, are the bonds and cement Of an organised community. The whispers Of rumour should be tested, and selfish impatience Should be curbed to discipline. All quarrels Should be composed, if pecessary by the force Of the community, but with perfect Fairness and justice. Ridicule, taunts, And biting words, should be avoided. In presence or in absence. Suspicion And spying are unworthy of men who believe. All men are descended from one pair: Their honour depends, not on race, but On righteousness. Faith is not a matter Of words, but of accepting God's Will And striving in His Cause. The coming Into Islam confers no favour on others. But is itself a favour and a privilege, A guidance for those who are true and sincere.

Hujurat, or the Inner Apartments.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful.

  To thee from without

4919. Three shades of meaning are implied: (1) do not make youselves conspicuous in word or deed when in the presence of God ( $\epsilon_{R}$ , in a Mosque, or at Prayers or religious assembles); (2) do not anticipate in word or deed what your Leader (God's Apostle) may say or do; (3) do not be impatient, trying to hasten things before the time is ripe, of which the best Judgets God. Who speaks through His Apostle. Be reverent in all things, as in the presence of God; for the hears and sees all things.

4920. It is bad manners to talk loudly before your Leader. Some ill-mannered people so raise their voices as to drown the voice of their Leader, in conversation or in Council.

4921. Such rudeness may even destroy the value of such services as they may otherwise have been able to render, and all this without their even realising the harm they were doing to the Cause.

4923. To shout aloud to your Leader from outside his Apartments shows disrespect both for his person, his time, and his engagements. Only ignorant fools would be guilty of such unseemly behaviour. It is more seemly for them to wait and bide their time until he is free to come out and attend to them. But, in the Court of a spiritual King, much is forgiven that is due to lack of knowledge and understanding. In an earthly Court, ignorance of the Law excuselt no man. If a man behaved in that way to the General of an army or the Governor of a Province, not to speak of an earthly King, he would be laid hands on by the Guard, and could never gain the access he desires. The Inner ApartmentsMost of them lack understanding.

4924. All little-tattle or reports—especially if emanating from persons you do not know—are to be tested, and the truth ascertained. If they were believed and passed on, much harm may be done, of which you may have cause afterwards to report heartily. Scandal or slander of all kinds is here condemned. That about women is specially denounced: xxiv, 11-20; 23-26.

4925. The man of God, if he consults his friends and associates, should not be expected to follow their advice in all matters. The judgment and responsibility are his; he sees farther than the rest, and he is less swaved by personal feeling than any one else.

4916. Fortunate indeed was the generation among whom the Prophet of God walked in his faily hie. His example was inspiring. Their inner, Faith was dear to them; it was a thing to be proud of in their innermost hearis; and they loved discipline, obedience, and righteousness. No wonder all other other disadvantages were neutralised, and they went from strength to strength. Nothing but the Grace of God gould have brought about such a result.

4927. Individual quarrels are easier to compose than group quarrels, or, in the modern world, not an advantels. But the rollective community of Islam should be supreme over groups or nations. It would be expected to act justly and rry to compose the quarrel, for peace is better than fighting. But if one party is determined to be the aggressor, the whole force of the community is brought to bear on it. The essential condition of course is that there should be perfect farners and justice and respect for the highest principles; for Islam takes account of every just and legitimate interest without separating spiritual from temporal matters. The League of Nations fails because these essentials are absent.

4928. The enforcement of the Muslim Brotherhood is the greatest social ideal of Islam. On it was based the Prophet's Sermon at his last pilgrimage, and Islam cannot be completely realised until this ideal is achieved.

4979. Mutual ridicule ceases to be fun when there is arrogance or selfishness or malice behind it. We may laugh with people, to share in the happiness of life: we must never laugh al people in contempt or ridicule. In many things they may be better than ourselves!

It may be that 'The (latter) are better Than the (former): Nor defame nor be """ Sarcastic to each other, Nor call each other By (offensive) nicknames: Ill-seeming is a name Connoting wickedness, (To be used of one) After he has believed: And those who Do not desist are (Indeed) doing wrong.

Abhor it . . . But lear God;
For God is Oft-Returning,

4930 Defamation may consist in speaking ill of others by the spoken or written word, or in acting in such a way as to suggest a charge against some person whom we are not in a position to judge. A cutting, biting remark or faunt or sarcasm is included in the word famata. An offensive nickname may amount to defamation, but in any case there is no point in using offensive nicknames, or names that suggest some real or faqued defect. They ill accord with the serious purpose which Muslims should have in life. For example, even if a man is lume, it is wrong to address him as "O lame one!" It causes him pain, and it is bad manners. So in the case of the rude remark, "the black man"

4931. Most kinds of suspiction are baseless and to be avoided, and some are crimes in themselves: for they do cruel injustice to innocent men and women. Spying, or enquiring too curiously into other people's afters, means either idle curiosity, and is therefore futile, or suspicion carried a stage further, which almost amounts to sin. Back-biting also is a broad of the same genus. It may be either futile but all the same mischievous, or it may be poisoned with malice, in which case it is a sin added to sin.

4932. No one would like even to think of such an abomination as eating the flesh of his brother. But when the brother is dead, and the flesh is carrion, abomination is added to abomination. In the same way we are asked to refrain from hurting people's feelings when they are present; how much worse is it when we say things, true or fails, when they are absent!

<sup>4933.</sup> This is addressed to all mankind and not only to the Muslim brotherhood, though it is understood that in a perfected world the two would be synonymous. As it is, mankind is descended from one pair of parents. Their tribes, races, and nations are convenient labels by which we may know certain differing characteristics. Before God they are all one, and he gets most honour who is most rightness.

<sup>4934.</sup> The desert Araba were somewhat shaky in their faith. Their hearts and minds were petty, and they thought of petty things, while Islam requires the complete submission of one's begin to God. See next verse. Some of the failings of the desert Araba are described in xiviti, 11-15. But the reference here is said to be to the Banti Asad, who came to profess Islam in order to get chantit during a familie.

4936, 'You say (or perhaps even think) that you are Muslims, but where are the fruits of your Faith? God knows the innermost motives and secrets of your heart, and you cannot deceive Him by attaching a certain label to yourselves.' Alas! that this answer to the desert Arabs is true of so many others in our own times!

4937. Islam in itself is a precious privilege. By accepting it we confer no favour on its preacher or on any community. If the acceptance is from the heart, it is a great favour done to those who accept that, the Light of God has entered their hearts and they have received guidance.

C)38. This does not mean that we should seek petty motives in newcomers into the House of Islam. That would indeed be harbouring suspicions or allowing curiosity to spy out motives, which would be a crime under xlix. 12. We should be true, sincere, and devoted ourselves, and leave the case of others to God, from Whose eyes nothing is hidden.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA L. (Oan).

We now come to a group of seven Meccan Sûras (t-lvi), dealing with God's revelation through nature, through history, and through the mouths of the Prophets, and pointing to the Herester. We saw that the last group of three (xivii—xil.x) dealt with the external and internal relations of the Ummat when formed. In the present group our attention is more particularly directed to aspects eschatological,—the Future before us when this life is done.

This particular Sura belongs to the early Meccan period. After an appeal to nature and to the fate of wicked peoples in history, it removes as it were the veil (verse 22) from the Future after death.

Summary.—Sceptics can look up to the heavens above and to Nature around them, as well as to the fate of sin in the history of the past: will they doubt God's Revelation when the veil is lifted? (J. 1-29, and C. 224.)

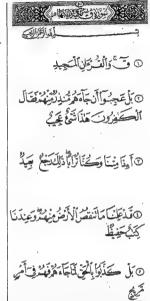

A vision of the Day of Recompense and the Day of Reality (1. 30-45, and C. 225),

C. 224.—The Apostle's credentials are the Revelation
(4.159.) He brings. Let them not wonder at the Message
Or at the News of the Hereafter. They have but
To look at the starry heavens and at Nature
Around them to see God's goodness and His power
To bring life out of the dead, and to punish
All wrong. Every deed, word, and thought are in
The eternal Record. Death will open
Your eyes and make you see Realities.
Then will every action bear
Its due fruit, and no soul can shift
Its responsibility on to another.

20). This particular Abbreviated Letter Off occurs only here as a single letter, and in combination at the beginning of S. xili., where I was unable to explain the full combination. Here the Qsf is taken by several Commentators to represent "Outhyo-I-am.rs", "the matter has been decreed," with reference to the eschatological trend of the Sizn. God knows best.

4940. Majid (translated "Glorious") is one of the beautiful appellations of the Qur-ān. Its glory is that of the rising sun: the more it rises on your mental and spiritual horizon, the more you are tost in admiration of its glory. Its meanings are manifest and inexhaustible. The greater your experience, the more light is your spiritual eye able to bear. And in that glory is a beauty that none can tell who has not experienced it in his soul. It is in itself the proof of the mission of the holy Prophet.

4941. In a sense their wonder is natural: do we not wonder at the glorious sun? In another sense it is unnatural: what should we say of a man who fails to see in broad daylight?

4942, Cf. xxxvii. I6

4943. The earth only corrupts and takes away the body when they are dead; it has no power over the soul. The full account of the soul's doings is in God's Record.

4944. If they deny what has been made clear to them, their minds must necessarily get into confusion. All nature declares the glory and goodness of God. Revelation explains the inequalities of this life and how they will be redressed in the Hereafter. If they do not accept this, they are not in a logical position. They cannot reconcile the known with the unknown.

4951. Cf. xlvi, 33, and n. 4912.

4932. God created man, and gave him his limited free-will. God knows the inmost desires and motives of man even better than man does himself. He is nearer to a man than the man's own jugular vein. The jugular vein is the bug trunk vein one on each side of the neck, which brings the blood back from the head to the heart. The two jugular veins correspond to the two carotid arteries which carry the blood from the heart to the heart. As the blond-stream is the vehicle of life and ronsciousness, the phrase "nearer (han the jugular vein" implies that God knows more truly the innermost state of our ferling and consciousness, than does our own ego.

4953. This must of course be taken figuratively. Two angels are constantly by him to note his thoughts, words, and actions. The allegory is further elaborated. One sits on the right side and notes his good deeds and the other on the left, to note his bad deeds; corresponding to the Companions of the Right and the Companions of the Left mentioned in Ivi. 27 and 41.

<sup>4950.</sup> Just the names of the peoples of Arabian tradition who were punished for their sins are mentioned; their stories will be found elsewhere. For the Pople of Nooh, see xi. 23-48 and other passages. For the Companions of the Ross, see xiv. 38 and n. 3094; for the 'id and the 'Hamid, see xiv., 123-158, and other passages; for Pharson and his People, see ii. 49-50 and other passages; for the Britishren of Laf, see vii. 80-84, and other passages; for the Companions of the Wood, see xiv. 78-79, and n. 2003; and for the Pople of Tubba, see xiliv. 33 and n. 4155.

- 18. Not a word does he 48 Utter but there is A sentinel by him. Ready (to note it).
- And the stupor of death **35 Will bring truth (before His eyes): "This was The thing which thou Wast trying to escape!"
- 20. And the Trumpet es Shall be blown: That will be the Day Whereof Warning (had been given).
- 21. And there will come forth Every soul: with each Will be an (angel) to drive. "" And an (angel) to Bear witness.
- 22. (It will be said:) "Thou wast heedless Of this: now have We Removed thy veil, 4954. Then each "word" spoken is taken down by a "sentinel" (raqib). This has been construed to mean that the sentine only records words, not thoughts which are not uttered, Thoughts may be forgiven if not uttered, and still more if they do not issue in action. At the *tage at which we clothe a thought in words, we have already done an action. The Recorders mentioned in the last verse make a complete Record, in order to supply motives and springs of action, which will affect the degrees or status in the spiritual Hereafter. The three together, individuals or kinds, make the honourable Recorders, Kirāman Kātibīn, (plural, not dual number) mentioned in luxuii 11.

4955. What'is stupor or unconsciousness to this probationary life will be the opening of the eyes to the spiritual world: for Death is the Gateway between the two. Once through that Gateway man will realise how the things which he pegicted or looked upon as remote are the intimate Realities, and the things which seemed to loom large in his eyes in this world were shadows that have fled. The things he wanted to avoid are the things that have really come to pass. Both Good and Evil will realise the Truth now in its intensity.

4956. The next stage will be the Judgment, heralded with the blowing of the Trampet. Every soul will then come forth.

4957. Several interpretations are possible, leading to the same allegatical truth, that the Judgment will be set up; the Record will be produced; the good and bad deeds will speak for and against; and complete justice will be done, each act leading to its own due fruit. (1) The (angel) to drive and the (angel) to bear witness may be the Recording Angels of the left and the right (verse 17); or (2) it may not be angels, but the evil deeds will drive like task-masters, and the good deeds will bear witness for the soul on trial; or (3) his misused limbs and faculties will drive him to his doom, while his well-used limbs and faculties will witness for him,

And sharp is thy sight ""
This Day!"

- 23, And his Companion 6990 will say:
  "Here is (his Record) ready
  With me!"
- 24. (The sentence will be:)
  "Throw, throw "" into Hell
  Every contumacious Rejecter
  (Of God)!---
- 25. "Who forbade what was good, Transgressed all bounds, Cast doubts and suspicions;
- 26. "Who set up another god Beside God: throw him Into a severe Penalty."
  - 27. His Companion (1981 will say:
    "Our (1982 Lord | I, did not
    Make him transgress, (1985)
    But he was (himself)
    Far astray."

فَصَرُكَ الْجُوَّةِ كَدِيدٌ ﴿ وَقَالَ فِي يُنْوَهَنَا مَا لَدَى عَنِيدٌ ﴿ اَلَفِيَا فِي مُنْدَةِ كُلِّ كَفَّا لِي عَنَا ﴿ مَنَاعِ لِلْغَرِيْمُ مُعْمَنَةً مُنْ إِيبِ

الذي يجمل مع الله إله المحمدة الذي اله في المحمدة الله المسلم المحمدة ال

4958. The clearness of vision will now be even greater; see n. 4955 above.

4959, QerFin: Companion. If we take No. I of the constructions suggested in n. 4957, the Companion will be one of the Recording Angels mentioned above, in vere 21, perhaps the one that J drives; or perhaps the third one mentioned in verse 18, for he has the Record ready with him. If we take any of the other constructions mentioned in n. 4957, it will be the evil deeds or the misused faculties. In any case it will be the factors on whose testiment who conviction will be based.

4960. The original for "throw", here and in verse 26 below, is in the dual number, which some Commentators explain by saying that the dual form is used for emphasis, as if the verb ("throw, throw") were twice repeated. Examples of this are found in Arabic. But is it possible that the dual refers to the two angels mentioned in verses 17 and 21? In that case the Companion in verse 27 will be the third one mentioned in verses 18 and 23. In any case the third one will be the one on whose Record the sentence will be plassed.

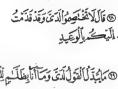

4961, See last note. But some people understand by "Companion" here an evil associate in the world, an evil one who misled.

4962. Our Lord. One man speaks: "I did not", etc. Yet he uses the plural pronoun in saying,
"Our Lord". This is beautifully appropriate, as he is speaking so as to include the person to be judged: as if he were to say, "Thou art my Lord, or the Lord of us angels or of all Creation, but Thou art his Lord also, for Thou didst cherish him and warn him, and he owed duties to Thee."

4965. Neither the Recording Angels nor the misused limbs and faculties, nor anything else whetever was responsible for the Evil: it was the personal responsibility of the Doer himself, with his free-will.

28. He will say: "Dispute not 664
With each other
In My Presence:
I had already in advance
Sent you 664
Warning.

29. "The Word changes not Before Me, and I do not The least injustice To My Servants." """

C. 225.—As Goodness has possibilities unlimited,
(1. 30 45) So has Evil in the opposite direction.
To those who bring a heart unsulited
And to God devoted, will be Peace,
Security, and Eternal Life—the Rays
From God's own Presence. Adore ye God
And pay no heed to whispers of Doubt
And Evil: these must vanish at Judgment,
When Truth and Justice reien supreme.

SECTION 3.

30. One Day We will Ask Hell, "Art thou
Filled to the full?" ""
It will say, "Are there
Any more (to come)?"

31. And the Garden we Will be brought nigh

@وَأَزْلِفِكِأَ لِجُنَّةُ

4964. It is suggested that sinners whose Record is black, driven into a corner, accuse others of misleading them: the others may be the Recorders, or their faculties or opportunities or surroundings or their associates in the world, or anything but themselves Such recriminations are not allowed in the Court of Judgment.

4965. Besides, personal responsibility had already been clearly preached to them in God's Message, and they had been warned of the consequences. "You" is in the plural number: 'all of you who are before the Judgment. Seat had clear warning of the consequences of your conduct.

4966. "4864" has two plurals: (1) '4864, as here, means all Servants of God, i.e. all his creatures; (2) '1864 has the further connotation of Servants of God, devoted to his service; I have translated t in many cases by the word "devotees". The Sentence before the Judgment-Seatis pronounced with perfect justice; 14 does not change, and requires no change; the intervitable consequences of sin must follow; the time for Mercy is past.

4967 As the capacity of Good is unlimited, so is the capacity of Evil—unlimited. Hell is personfised and asked, "Art thou sated to the full?" It replies, "If there are more to come, let them come." It is not satisfied, 4968. In this life, the ideals of the spirit, the accomplishment of the things in our hearts and our hopes, seem to be ever so far, seem even to recode as we think we come nearer. Not so in the Hereafter. The fruits of righteousness will no longer be in the distance. They will be realised. They will seem themselves to approach the Righteous.

To the Righteous, -no more A thing distant.

4969. The description of the Righteous is given in four masterly clauses: (1) those who turned away from Evil in sincerte repentance; (2) those whose new life was good and righteous; (3) those who in their innermost hearts and in their most secret doings were actuated by God-fearing love, the fear that is akin to love in remembering God under His title of "Most Gracious"; and (4) who gave up their whole heart and being to Him.

4973. While virtue and rightenusness will accomplish their final goal, what will be the End of Sin? Let the pust tell its story. Many powerful and arrogant generatious were swept away, to stray in the paths of misery, without any way of escape from the consequences of their sin. This was aiready seen in the life of this world. In the world to come, it will be worse, as already stated in verses 42-52 above.

4980. The Day of Resurrection, when the Call to the souls to arise and come to the Judgment-Seat will be immediately answered, and they will all arise and come forth. Cf. xxxvi. 49-33, and notes 3997 and 5999.

4981. In the life of this world it seemed all so remote. In the new life at the Resurrection it will all be so near; for there will be neither time nor space as we know them here.

4982. The word "saisaius" (mighty Blast) is used for the Resurrection (as here) or for the sudden punishment of the guilty on this earth, as in xi 67, where see further references.

4983. Men will hurry out from all corners of the earth to answer the call, and the earth itself will be rent asunder. In xxv. 25 the imagery used was the heaven being rent asunder, and angel, coming out in ranks: see n. 3092. Cf. also Ixxxiv. 1.4.

4984 It may seem to our material imaginations a difficult task to collect together the souls of all sorts of men, who died in all sorts of conditions at different times, but it will be a different kind of world and creation altogether, and to Go all things are not only possible but east.

4985. People may throw all sorts of doubts about the Judgment and the Hereafter. The Prophet's task is not to force them to accept anything. His task is to deliver the Message of the Qur-an, and admonish those who are spiritually fit and ready to receive admonition and to prepare themselves for the new and higher life destined for man.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LI. (Zāriyā!).

This is an early Meccan Sūra, with a highly mystic meaning. It is the second of the seven Sūras forming a group dealing with Revelation and the Hereafter. See Introduction to S.1. This Sūra deals with the varying ways in which Truth prevails irresistibly even against all human probabilities.

Summary.—The winds may blow and scatter, lift and rush, or divide in all directions; but the Truth and Promise of God are sure and stable, whereof you may see Signs both around and within you (ii. 1-23, and C. 226).

Past events and what you see before you point to the unfailing consequences of all you do: God, of His Grace, sends you a Reminder: the loss is your own if you reject and deny (li. 24-60, and C. 227).

C. 226.—Various are the ways of working we see
(II. 123.) In God's world,—strong and gentle, scattering
And uniting: through it all runs a Purpose
True and stable, which we shall see fulfilled
On the Day of Judgment and Justice, which Must inevitably come to pass: give up
False doctrines, which agree not among themselves
Or with facts: For evil must end in evil,
And good in joy and felicity. The good
Worship God and serve God's creatures:
Those needing help are ever in their thoughts.
They see Signs of God in all things in heaven
And earth, and in their own hearts and minds.

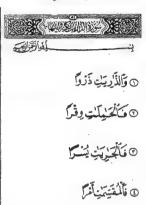

Sora L.L.

Zarivat, or the Winds That Scatter.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. By the (Winds) Pro-That scatter broadcast: PAT
- And those that <sup>PM</sup>
   Lift and bear away Heavy weights;
- 3. And those that ""
  Flow with case
  And gentleness;
- 4. And those that ***

  Distribute and apportion
  By Command;---

4986. The almosphere of mysticism starts from the beginning of the Süra. Four agencies are mentioned in verses 1 to 4 as evidences or types or symbols of the certainty and unity of a Truth described in verses 56. What these agencies are is described by certain adjectival participles, the noin understood being usually taken to be "Winds": the word for Wind (Rish being feminine in Arabic. Some Gommentators however understand other noins as being minded, e.g., angels in all four verses, or different things in each of the four verses. I do not think that it is necessary to be precise about material things in spiritual parables. Whatever the agencies are, their different modes of working are evidence of the power and goodness of God, the Unity of His Plant, and the certainty of Gond and Rivil reaching their own destined ends, when Judgment and Justice will have given each one his due.

493. Winds may blow strong, and scatter particles of dust far and wide; but they do not diminish by one jut the substance of God's material creation; on the contrary they help to readjust things. They reshape the configuration of the earth; in the vegetable kingdom they carry seeds about and plant new seeds in old soils; in the region of air they produce mighty changes in temperature and pressure that affect animal and vegetable life; they carry the moisture of equational Africa to the parched plains of, India; and so on. Yet they are just one little agency showing God's working in the material world. So in the spiritual world. Revealation works mighty changes; it may be resisted, but the resistance will be swept away; it ever points to the one Great Final Event, "to which the whole Creation moves."

4988. The things that lift and bear away heavy weights may be the Winds that carry the heavy rain-clouds or that sweep off every resistance from their path, or it may be the heavy moisture-laden clouds themselves. So works Revelation: it lifts and sweeps away the burdens of custom, superstition, or man's inertia, and ever leads onwards to the destined End.

4989. These may be Winds that fill the sails of ships with gentle and favourable breezes, that carry men and merchandise to their destinations. Or they may be the ships themselves, whose smooth motion through the waters is described in many places by the verb jara. "to flow", e.g. cf. ii. 164.

4990. These may be Winds (or other agencies) that distribute and apportion moisture or rain or atmospheric pressure or other blessings of God.—not haphacard but bu fixed laws, is. according to the Command of their Lord. So with Revelation. Its blessings are distributed all round, and it produces its marvellous effects sometimes in the most unlikely places and ways.

4991. That thick ye are promised: the Promise of God about Marcy and Forgiveness to the Penitent, and justice and Penalty to the Rebellious; the promise of the Hereafter; the promise that all does not end here, but that there is a truer and more lasting world to come, for which this is but a preparation.

4992. Din=the giving to each person his precise and just due; this is implied in Judgment and Justice. All the inequalities of this Life are to be redressed.

4993. The study of the numerous regular orbits of the planets and irregularly regular orbits of comets, and the various motions, visible or invisible, of the fixed stars or revolving stars, form in themselves a network of knowledge or science, of a highly technical nature; the highest astronomy or mathematics can only barely reach list fringe. But these have all a fixed Plan and Purpose under God's Dispensation. In them variety leads to Unity. In contrast look at the confused medley of doctrines, views, and dicta plut forward by the Sceotics, as described in the next verse.

4995. Some Commentators draw from this a rigid doctrine of Calvinstic Predestination or beterminism, which I do not think is fairly deducible from the words. "Uffihe" should I think be translated "will be or result he deluded", meaning "have the wish or desire to be", and not "mux necessarily be deluded by eternal predestination". The word occurs in many places in the Quran; 82, CJ. v. 78, or its 30.

4996. They are in great spiritual danger: yet they care not.

4997. They used to say scoffingly, "if there is to be punishment for our sins, let it come at once!"

When it comes, they will know what a terrible thing it is! Cf xxvi, 204, n. 3230.

4998. Gardens and Springs are the two most frequent symbols for the highest satisfaction and bliss, 4999. They were engaged most of the night in worship and in the planning of good deeds. They preferred activity to idleness, the service of God and His creatures to the indulgence of Self,

3000 They were up early before dawn, ready for their devotions. The praying for Forgiveness, and Mercy does not necessarily imply that they had committed fresh sins. Indeed they began the day with such devotions, showing their great humility before God and their anxious care for others, for whom they prayed as much as for themselves. See the last sentence of n. 21 to 1.5.

5001. True charity remembers not only those in need who ask, but also those who are prevented by some reason from asking. The man of true charity seeks out the latter. There may be various reasons which prevent a man from asking for help: (1) he may be ashamed to ask, or his sense of honour may prevent him from asking; (2) he may be so engrossed in some great ideal that he may not think of asking; (3) he may even not know that he is in need, especially when we think of wealth and possessions in a spiritual sense, as including spiritual gifts and talents; (4) he may not know that the young to be seen the single of the sense in the sense include all help from one better endowed to one less well endowed. Charity in the higher sense includes all help, from one better endowed to one less well endowed. Cf. n. [79 to it, 177; also it. 23-244, and notes 322 and 323.

C. 227.—Even Abraham the True had need to be told
(II. 2460.) Before he could realise the purpose of God.
Clear Signs were sent for warning, as, of old,
To Pharsoh, the 'Åd, the Thamād, and the people
Of Nosh, and the warning inevitably came
To pass. Our Signs are for your instruction.
Heed them and learn by them: Those who believe
Find profit in their lives: those who reject
Or deny,—alas I they learn not from the past.
Woe unto them I The loss is their own!

SECTION 2.

24. Trans the story one Reached thee, of the honoured Guests of Abraham?

5002. The Signs and Evidences of God are in all nature and within the body and soul of man, if man has but the spiritual eyes to see. Cf. xii. 53.

5003. "Sustenance," here as elsewhere, includes physical sustenance, as well as spiritual sustenance. Similarly heaven or sky has both the physical and the spiritual meaning. The physical sustenance grows from rain from the sky; the spiritual sustenance comes from divine aid, grace, and mercy, and includes the Good News and the Warning which come from Revelation about the Hereafter.

5004. Attention having been called to the Signs or Evidences of God's working on the earth, within ourselves, and in the heavens, in verses 20-22, an appeal is made to our own inner conscience, in the name of the Lord of heaven and earth, to acknowledge and act up to the truth of Revelation, and turn to the spiritual Realities. For they are as real as our own conscious and self-intelligent existence, on which is based all our knowledge. As a philosopher (Descartes) has said: "I think: therefore I am."

5005. Cf. xi. 69-73 and notes, where further details of the story will be found. Cf. also xv. 51-56.

25. Behold, they entered 600s His presence, and said: "Peace!" He said, "Peace!" (And thought, "These seem) Unusual people." 5007

- 26. Then he turned quickly some To his household, brought , Out a fatted calf.
- 27. And placed it before them ... He said, "Will ve not Eat?"
- 28. (When they did not eat). He conceived a fear of them. They said, "Fear not," And they gave him Glad tidings of a son Endowed with knowledge.
- 29 But his wife came forward 5009 (Laughing) aloud: she smote Her forehead and said: " A barren old woman l"
- 30, They said, "Even so soul Has thy Lord spoken:
- 26 And He is full
- 30 Of Wisdom and Knowledge,"

5006. They were angels, who appeared suddenly before him at his tent-door in the guise of men. and saluted him with the salutation of peace. He returned the salutation, but felt from their appearance and their manner, that they were unusual, not ordinary, strangers.

5007, Munkar; unknown, uncommon, unusual, not customaty, (hence by derived meaning, not applicable here, not fair or just); opposite in both primary and secondary meanings to ma'raf.

well-known, usual, customary, just. C1, xv. 62.

5008. They seemed unusual strangers, but he said nothing and quietly proceeded to perform the rites of hospitality. He brought a roast fatted caif and placed it before them to eat. But the strangers did not eat ixi. 70. This disconcerted him. According to the laws of hospitality, a stranger under your roof is under your protection, but if he refuses to eat, he refuses your hospitality and keeps himself free from any ties of guest and host. "What were their designs?" thought Abraham, and he felt some distrust. But they were angels and could not eat. They declared themselves, and announced the birth to Abraham of a son endowed with wisdom,-in other words that Abraham was to be the head of a long line of Prophets! (xv. 53).

5009. Abraham's wife Sarah was old and barren. This news seemed to her too good to be true. She came forward, laughed aloud (xi. 71), struck her forehead with her hands, indicative of her amusement and meredulity as "a barren old woman"; xi, 72.

5010. The angels said: "What may sound improbable to human beings will yet come to pass if God commands. And God thy Lord has spoken. So shall it be. For all His promises are full of wisdom and knowledge" So the angels on that occasion. But the application is for all time and to all human affairs. Never despair. However much Truth may be in the shade, it will shine with full splendour. And the Judgment will come, when good will come to its own !

31. (Abraham) said: "And what, O ye Messengers, ls your errand (now)?"

- 32. They said, 'We have Been sent to a people (Deep) in sin;—
- 33. "To bring on, on them, (A shower of) stones Of clay (brimstone),"
- 34. "Marked as from thy Lord 3-45 For those who trespass Beyond bounds."
- 35. Then We evacuated will a Those of the Believers Who were there,
- 35. But We found not there '
  Any just (Muslim) persons
  Except in one house: ''''
- And We left there
   A Sign for such as Fear the Grievous Penalty. 5013

501. G/ xi. 82, and n 1032 to vii 81. The angeld errand of mercy to Abraham (to announce the succession of gold) men in his lines was coupled with their errand of justice and punishment to the people of Lip, the people of Sodom and Gomorrah, who were deep in the most abountable and unnatural sims. So God's Mercy and Justice go, hand in hand in all liumna affairs. Faith has nothing to fear, and wickedness has only to furn and repeate, to obtain God's Mercy.

5012. Cf. xi. 83, and n 1380. Every crime has its due puhishment, as marked out in the decrees of God.

5013. The only just or righteous persons found in Sodom and Gomorrah (Cities of the Plain by the Dead Sea) were in the house of LDI, who was the apostle sent to call them to repentance. He and his believing family and adherents were told to leave in due time, and the wicked were destroyed in a shower of brimstone.

5014. That was the house of  $L\bar{u}_1$ ; and even there, his wife had no faith: she disobeyed the Command and perished:  $x_i$ , 81, n. 1577.

5015. The Griewus Penalty: that is, the Final Judgment. The destruction of Sodom and Comorrah in this life is taken as the type of the Final Judgment. The vestiges can be seen—as a Sign and a Waraing—in the sulphury plain round the Dead Sea: Cf. xx. 79.

- 38. And in Moses ***

  (Was another Sign):

  Behold, We sent him

  To Pharaoh, with authority

  Manifest.
- 39. But (Pharaoh) turned back With his Chiefs, and said, "A sorcerer, or One possessed!"
- 40. So We took him
  And his forces, and
  Threw them into the sea;
  And his was the blame. MIT
- 41. And in the 'Ad (people) White (Was another Sign):
  Behold, We sent against them
  The devastating Wind:
- It left nothing whatever That it came up against. But reduced it to ruin And rottenness.

5016. Cf. xiiv 17-31. The story of Moses and Pharanti is here just referred to. The points emphasized here are: (1) that Moses had manifest authority, yet Pharach's reliance was on his Chiefs and his forces, but they could not help when his doom came; and (3) that in the inost extraordinary and incredible ways judged by ordinary human standards), his arrogance and his reliance on his Chiefs and forces was his undoing.

5017. The ungodly Egyptians were all destroyed, but the chief blanie lay on Pharaoh for inisteading them Pharaoh's punishment was just. He could not blante any one else. And certainly no one can blane the course of God's Justice, for God was long-suffering, and gave him many chances to repent.

5018. Cf. x1vi. 21-26. The point here is that the 'Ad were a gifted people. God had given them talenis and material wealth; but when they defied God, they and all their belongings were distroyed in a night, by a hurricane which they thought was bringing them the rain to which they were looking forward. How marvellously God's Providence works, to help the good and destroy the wicked!

5019. See the story of the Thamud and their prophet Salih in vis. 73-79. Here the point is the suddenness of their punishment and its unexpected nature.

5020. Sainh their prophet gave them three days' clear warning for repentance (xi. 65). But they heeded him not. On the contrary they flouted him and continued in their evil courses.

(٥١) سورة الذاريات

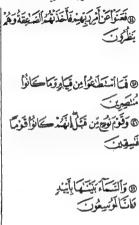

44. But they insolently defied wat
The Command of their Lord:
So the stunning noise wat
(Of an earthquake) seized
Them, even while they Were looking on.

45. Then they could not Even stand (on their feet), will Nor could they help themselves,

46. So were the People ***
Of Noah before them:
For they wickedly transgressed.

SECTION 3.

47. AN ith power and skill on Did We construct
The Firmament:
For it is We Who create
The vastness of Space.

5021. They had already defied the order to preserve the She-camel, which was symbolical of the grazing rights of the common people: see xt. 64-65 and n. 1360. They continued to flout the warnings of the prophet until the earthquake came on them with a stunning noise and buried them where they were: vii. 78; and xt 67.

5022. Şā'iqat : a stunning sound like that of thunder and lightning (ii. 55); such a sound often accompanies an earthquake (see xli. 17, n. 4485, and vii, 78, and n. 1047).

5023. They were swept off in the earthquake.

5024. The generation of Noah was swept away in the Flood for their sins: vii. 39 64. The point is that such a Flood seemed so unlikely to them that they thought Noah was "wandering in his mind" when he delivered God's Message: vii. 60.

5013. If you do not wish to go back to the wonderful things in the past, which show the power and goodness of God, and Hu justice supreme over all wrong-doing, look at the wonderful things unfolding themselves before your very eyes! (1) The space in the heavens above! Who can comprehend it but He Who made it and sustains it? (2) The globe of the earth under your feet! How great its expanse seems over sea and land, and spread out for you like a wonderful carpet or bed of rest! (3) All things are in twos: sex in plants and animals, by which one individual is complementary to another; in the subtle forces of nature, Day and Night, positive and negative electricity, forces of attraction and repulsion: and numerous other opposites, each fulfilling its purpose, and contributing to the working of God's Universe; and in the moral and spiritual world, Love and Aversion, Mercy and Justice, Striving and Rest, and so on;—alt fulfilling their functions according to the Artistry and wonderful Purpose of God. Everything has its counterpart, or pair, or complement. God alone is one, with nonthe like Him, or needed to comolement Him. These are noble things to contemplate. And they lead us to a true understanding of God's Purpose and Message.

- 48. And We have spread out The (spacious) earth: How excellently We do spread out!
- 49. And of every thing
  We have created pairs: ***
  That ye may receive Instruction.
- 50. Hasten ye then (at once) 20.5 To God: I am from Him A Warner to you, Clear and open!
- 51. And make not another "bath An object of worship With God:

  I am from Him
  A Warner to you,
  Clear and open!
  - 52. Similarly, no apostle came
    To the l'eoples before them,
    But they said (of him)
    In like manner,
    "A sorcerer, or
    One possessed" 15005
  - 53. Is this the legacy the They have transmitted,

كَالْأَيْسُ فَرَشْنَهُ الْعَمْ الْسَهِدُونَ

 وَمِنْ كُلِّ مُنْمُ الْمَسْدُونِ الْمُعَالِّ الْمُعَالِيْنِ الْمُعَالِيْنِ الْمُعَالِيْنِ الْمُعَالِيْنِ الْمُعَالِيْنِ الْمُعَالِيْنِ اللّهِ اللّهُ اللّهِ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ الللللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللللللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ الللللللللللّهُ الللللّهُ اللللللّهُ الللللللللللللللللّهُ الللللللل

5026. See (3) in the last note. Cf. xxxvi. 36, n. 3981.

5027. If you understand Nature and yourselves aright, you will know that Gud is all in all, and you will fly at once to Him. This is the teaching which the Prophet of God has come to give you, in clear terms and openly to all.

5038. Veises 50 and 51, ending with the same clause to emphasize the connection between the two, should be read together. The Prophet's mission was (and b): (1) to show us the urgent need for repentance: and (3) to wean us from the precipice of false worship. The one convinces us of sin and opens the door to the Mercy of God; the other cures us of the madness of paying court to false or worthless objects of desire; for in the worship of the One True God is included the best services to oreally and our fellow-creatures. If fully understood, this sums up the whole duty of man: for it leads us by the right Path to the love of God and the love of man and of all creatures.

5029 They said this of Moses : li 39 And they said this of the holy Prophet : xxxvi : 4; xliv 14

5030 There is a tradition of Evil as there is a tradition of Good. The ways of Evil in dealing with the teachers of Truth are smiller in all ages. But such evil traditions would have no effect, without that the generation following them is itself ungody, "transgressing beyond bounds".

(١٥) سورة الذاريات

مِّ - بَالْهُ فَوْرُهُ طَاعُونَ

One to another? Nay, they are themselves A people transgressing Beyond bounds!

- 54. So turn away (1).

  From them; not thine Is the blame.
- But teach (thy Message)
   For teaching benefits
   The Believers.
- I have only created on Junes and men, that They may serve Me.
- No Sustenance do I require <sup>voi</sup>
   Of them, nor do I
   Require that they should Feed Me;
- 58. For God is He Who Gives (all) Sustemmer,— Lord of Power,—<sup>24-1</sup> Steadfast (for ever).
- For the wrong-doers, Their portion is like

® فَدَرَلَ عَنْهُمْ فَيَا أَنْ يَكُوُمُو ۞ وَذَكِّرُوا إِنَّ الذِّكِرِيَّ تَنْفَعُ الْوُّمِيدِينَ @ وَمَا خَلَفْنُ الْإِنْسُ إِلَا إِنْسُوا إِنَّا لِيَعْبُدُو

﴿ إِنَّ اللَّهُ هُوَ أَلْزَاقُ ذُو ٱلْقُوَّةُ اللَّهِ إِنَّ اللَّهُ وَاللَّهِ إِنَّ اللَّهُ وَاللَّهِ اللَّهُ

@ فَإِنَّ لِلَّذِينَ ظَلَوْا ذَ نُوْيَا

50M. When the Prophet freely proclaims his Message, it is not his fault if obstonate wickedness refuses to issue. He can leave them alone, but he should continue to teach for the benefit of those who have Earth

5032 Creation is not for idle sport or play; xxi, 16. God has a serious Purpose behind it, which, in our imperfect state, we can only express by saying that each creature is given the chance of development and progress towards the God, which is God, God is the source and centre of all power and all goodness, and our progress depends upon our putting ourselves into accord with His Will. This is His service. It is not of any benefit to Him; see the next two verses; it is for our own benefit.

5033. Swittmance: in both the literal and the figurative sense; so also "Feed Me" at the end of the verse. God is independent of all needs. It is therefore absurd to suppose that He should require quy Sustenance, and still more absurd to suppose that we can fred Him." The gifts, the Sustenance, the goodnest, all come from His side.

5034. God commands all power; therefore any power we seek must be from Him. And His power is steadfast, the same to-day as yesterday, and for ever. Therefore His help is diways sure, Unto the portion of their <sup>5m3</sup> Fellows (of earlier generations): Then let them not ask Me To haste, (that portion)!

60. Woe, then, to the Unbelievers, On account of that Day 'ess Of theirs which they Have been promised!

$035. Each generation, that acts like any of its predecessors, must meet a similar fate. If the wicked came to an evil end in the past, the same results will follow in the present and the future, The punishment will come suddenly enough: let them not in mockery ask that it should be hastened.

5036. That is, their eternal Punishment in the Hereafter, as well as any punishment that may come to them in this life.

INTRODUCTION TO SÜRA LII (Tar).

This is the third of the group of seven Meccan Sūras described in the Introduction to  $S,\,l_{\star}$

It is, like its predecessor, an early Meccan Süra. The points here emphasized are: that Revelation is in accord with all God's Signs, including previous Revelations, and that the Hereafter is inevitable, and we must prepare for it.

Summary.—All Signs of God, including previous Revelations, point to the inevitable consequences of ill-deeds and good deeds: how can people deny or ignore the Message of Revelation? (Iii. 1-49, and C. 228).

C. 228.—By the sacred Symbols-of the Mount (lii. 1-49.) Sublime, the Eternal Record on an open Scroll, the House of Worship thronged With men, the Canopy blue of unfathomed Heights, and the boundless Ocean with Its resistless tidal Swell,-all acts Of men must have their inevitable fruits. New worlds will be born with the Day of Doom : New values established by God's Decree. Consumed will be Evil in the fire of Reality :-And Good will come to its own-in personal And social Bliss, but most in the full Realisation that God is good, the Beneficent. The Merciful . . . Proclaim, then, the praises Of the Lord, nor heed the slanders of Ignorance Or Spite: for the Lord Who created will cherish: His Plan will overthrow the puny plots Of men. Hold firm with patience in Faith In the Hereafter, and sing His praises Even in the busy marts of this world, But chiefly in the stillness of the Night And the holy hour of Dawn as the Stars Retreat, singing glory to the Maker Of their own most glorious Sun.

Stra 1.11.

Tar, or the Mount.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. By the Mount (of Revelation): 50.37
- 2. By a Decree Inscribed 1038
- 3. In a Scroll unfolded:
- 4. By the much-frequented Fane: 5000
  - 5. By the Canopy Raised High: 5010

5037. The adjuration is by five things which we shall presently explain. An appeal is made to these are Signs in verses I to 6, and the certainty of future events is asserted in the most emphatic terms in verses 7 to 28, in three parts, via the coming of judgment and the passing away of this phenomenal world (verses 7-10); the future ill consequences of ill-deeds done (verses 11-16); and future attainment of bliss and complete realisation of God's love and mercy (verses 17-28).

5038. See last note. The five Signs to which appeal is made are: (1) the Mount (of Revelation), verse 1: (2) the Decree inscribed, verses 2-3: (3) The Much-frequented Fane, verse 4: (4) the Canopy Raised High, verse 5; and (5) the Ocean filled with Swell, verse 6.

Let us examine these in detail. Each of them has a figurative and a mystic meaning. (1) The Mount is the sublime world of Revelation. In the case of Moses it is typified by Mount Sinal; Cf. xcv. 2, where it is mentioned in juxtaposition to the sacred territory of Mecca, xcv. 3. In the case of fesus it is the Mount of Olives: Cf. xcv. 1, and also Matt. xxiv. 3-51, where fesus made his striking pronouncement about the Judgment to come. In the case of Muhammad it is the Mountain of Light, where the divine inspiration made him one with the spiritual world: Cf C, 31 and n. 11 (2). The Decree Inscribed is God's Eternal Decree. When it becomes Revelation to man, it is figured forth as something "inscribed", reduced to writing; and as it is made clear to the intelligence of man, it is further described as "in a scroll unfolded", that is, spread out so that everyone who has the will can seek its guidance.

5039. See the last two notes. (3) "The much-frequented Pane" (or House) is usually understood to mean the Kaba, but in view of the parallelism noted in the last note, it may be taken generally to mean any Temple or House of Worship dedicated to the true God. It would then include the Tabernacle of the Israelites in the wilderness, the Temple of Solomon, the Temple in which Jesus worshipped, and the Ka'ba which the holy Prophet purified and re-dedicated to true worship, These would be only illustrations. Other concrete places of worship would be included, and in a more abstract meaning, the heart of man, which craves, with burning desire, to find and worship God. The Fane is "much-frequented" as there is a universal desire in the heart of man to worship God, and his sacred Temples draw large crowds of devotees, 5040. (4) "The Canopy Raised High" is the canopy of heaven, to whose height or sublimity no limit can be assigned by the mind of man. It is Nature's Temple, in which all Creation worships God,-the Symbol in which the material and the visible merges into the spiritual and the intuitional.

٥٢١) سورة الطور

6. And by the Ocean soil Filled with Swell;—1019

7. Verily, the Doom of thy Lord Will indeed come to pass;-

8. There is none Can avert it ;---

9. On the Day when The firmament will be In dreadful commotion.

 And the mountains will fly Hither and thither.

11. Mehen woe that Day
To those that treat
(Truth) as Falsehood;—204

۞ وَالْبَخِي النَّبِحُورِ ۞إَنَ عَذَاتِ رَبِكَ لَوَافِعٌ ۞ مَالَهُ مِن دَافِع ۞ يَوْمَ تَمُورُ السَّسَكَ أَهُ مَوْرًا

> ۞ۏٙؿ۫ڷؙؾؘۄؾؠۮٳڵڮڬۮڽڹ ۞ۏٙؿ۫ڷؙؾؘۄؾؠۮٳڵڮڬۮڽڹ

5041. (5) The Ocean—the vast, limitless, all on riching Orean—is the material symbol of the universal, unlimited, comprehensive nature of the prosible spinitual world. It is expressed to be massion, full of a mighty swell, boiling over, poured is rish all over the earth, as if overwhelming all landmarks; Cf. 15xxi. 6—a fitting description is no shall disappearance of our temporal world in the surferme exhibition of the Reahity behind it.

2012. This completes the five Signs or Symbio's ny which man may know for certain of the judgment to come. Note that they are in a disceiling order;—the highest, or most remote from man's consciousness, being mentioned first, and that nearest to man's consciousness bring mentioned last. The truth of Revelation; is embodiment in a Prophet's Message given in human language; the universal appeal of drivine worship; the sarry world above; and the entricting Ocean, full of life and motion below,—all are evidences that the Day of God will finally come, and nothing can swett it.

In 9001 interpretation each of these Symbols further typifies an aspect of the final Preacher of Unity: the Mount signifying his tremadous Personality; the Decree instuded in a Stroll Unfolded, the perspicious Surfair; the much-frequented Fane, his heart open to every living creature; the Canopy Raised on High, his spartual eminence; and the Swelling Ocean, the vast sea of his living knowledge.

5043. The Day of Judgment is typified by two figures. (1) "The firmament will be in dreadful commonition." The heavess as we see them suggest to us peace and transmullity, and the power of fixed laws which all the heavenly bodies, see, T dis will all be shaken in the rise of the new spiritual world. Cf. Mart xxv 29: "Immediate'y ter the tribulation of those days...the powersof the breavens shall be shaken. For t21's see next note.

3044. (2) The mountains are a type of firmness and stability. But things that we think of as firm and stable in "its material life will be "hinken to pieces, and will be no more substantial than a mirace in a desert. C. I. xx. iii. 30.

5015. That Day will be a Day of Woe to the ground-doers described in two aspects, the rebels against God and God's Truth, just as it will be a Day of Joy and Thanksgruing to the Righteous, who are described in three spectrs in wrises 17 to 28. The robels are here described as being those who onestly deflect Truth and plungsed first are 12 doing, or who trufied with truth, who jested with serious matters, who had not the courage to 11 to 12 doing, or who trufied with truth, who jested with profit out of it, who wasted their life is dorbts and petty quibbles. It is difficult to say which attitude did more harm to themselves and to others. Both are aspects of deep-seated via and rebellion. But the mercy of Sod was open, soly "If they had repented and amended their lives."

- That play (and paddle)
   In shallow trifles.
- That Day shall they be Thrust down to the Fire Of Hell, irresistibly.
- 14." This", it will be said, "" Is the Fire,—which ye Were wont to deny!

- 16. "Burn ye therein:
  The same is it to you
  Whether ye bear it
  With patience, or not:
  Ye but receive the recompense
  Of your (own) deeds."
- 17. As to the Righteous, some They will be in Gardens, And in Happiness,—
- 18. Enjoying the (Bliss) which Their Lord hath bestowed On them, and their Lord Shall deliver them from The Penalty of the Fire.

٤ فَكِونِ بِمَا اللَّهُ وَيَقَالُونَ وَوَقَالُهُ وُ رَبُّهُمْ عَلَابَ الْجِيدِ

5046. In face of the Realities, it will be borne in on them how wrong it was for them in this life to deny or forget that every wicked thought or deed had its own retributive chain of consequences.

5047. Perhaps they had said that the Hereafter was a fake, mere old wives' tales! If they had given serious thought to the Signs of God, they would have been saved from that serious spiritual blindness: then they will see that the fault was their own, and that the warnings of the apostles of Truth were nothing but pure Truth.

50%. At that stage they will have no justification for anger or impatience; for their whole position will have been due to their own conduct and their rejection of God's Grace. Nor will there be time then for patience or repentiance, for their period of probation will then have been over 5049. The Righteous will be in Bliss far beyond their merits: their sins and faults will be forgiven by the grace of God, which will save them from the penalties which they may have incurred from human frailty. It will be their own effort or striving which will win them God's grace: see verse 19 below. But the fruits will be greater than they could strictly have earned.

19. (To them will be said:) 5006
"Eat and drink ye,
With profit and health, 5005
Because of your (good) deeds."

- 20. They will recline (with ease)

٥ كافرا وَاشْرَهُما هَيْنَا مِمَا كُنْدُ مَنْسَالُونَ

۞ مُتَّكِينَ عَلَى سُرُرِهِّ صَنُوْفَةٍ وَذَقَجَنَكُمُ بِحُرِعِينِ

5000. The bits of the Rightcous is described in three aspects: (1) their individual bits, verses 17-20; (2) their social bits, verses 21-24; and (3) their satisfaction in the dissipation of past shadows, and their full understanding of the goodness of Gr-G, verses 23-28

3031. Individual satisfaction is expressed in three types or figures of speech, (I) eating and drinking. (2) thropnes of dignitic, and (3) the joy of individual companionship. But the eating and drinking will not be like the physical acts, which are subject to drawbacks, such as excess, after-effects and sattery: here there will be pure health, profit, and enjoyment. So about the other two: see the noise following.

Cf. with this the symbolical description of heaven in xxxvii 40-49; while the general account is the same, special phases are brought out in the two passages to correspond with the context, $052 Every one will have a Throne of dignity, but it does not follow that the dignity will be tasses. Every one's Personality will be purified but it will not be merged into one general supports.

3034, Farriyat: literally, progeny, offspring, family; applied by extension to mean all near and dear ones whether related or not, ancestors and descendants, friends, a circle, a group, whether contemporaneous in time or not. Love is uspelish, and works not merely, or chiefly, for Self. but for others; provided the others have Faith and respond according to their capacities or degrees, they will be joined on to the Head of the Group, even though on individual ments their rank might be less. This applies specially to a Prophet and his Umward for following).

5055. As already explained in the last note, though the love poured out by Prophets, ancestors, descendants, friends, or good men and women, will secure for their loved ones the enjoyment of their society, it is an indispensable condition that the loved ones should also, according to their lights, have shown their faith and their goodness in deeds. Each individual is responsible for his conduct. In the kingdom of heaven there is no boasting of ancestors or friends. But it is part of the satisfaction of the good ones who poured out their love that those who were in any way worthy to receive their love should also be admitted to their society, and this satisfaction-shall in no wise be diminished to them.

- And We shall bestow On them, of fruit and meat, **** Anything they shall desire.
- 23. They shall there exchange,
  One with another,
  A (loving) cup
  Free of frivolity, we
  Free of all taint
  Of ill.
- Round about them will serve, (Devoted) to them, Youths (handsome) as Pearls we Well-guarded.
- Manage of the state of the stat
- 26. They will say: "Aforetime, We were not without fear For the sake of our people."

5056. To be interpreted allegorisally as the "feast of feasion and the few of soul." Note that this verse is embedded in the midst of the description of social blass; the individual blass figured by meat and drink has already been mentioned in creat P shows. The social ideasures will be of any kind or quantity they shall desire, but their desires will then be purified, just as their pleasures will be on a different plane.

303. Drinking or loving cups, in our life is this earth, are ant to be insused in two ways: (I) they may be occasions for mere frivolity or the washing of tone; (I) they may lead to evil thoughts, evil suggestions, evil falls, or evil deed. To a frequent the afterers, it is added that the Cap in the final Bliss will be free from any taint of this kind. It will be pure love without any grossness whatever.

503. The allegary is further continued. There is no question of sex to braven. But the type of the grace and gentleness of womanhood baying been implied in the word Har (verse 20 above), the type of the handsome and well-formed strength and spit-action of manhood is mentioned here in the allegary of Pearls—off the purest water, well-guarded from weathering and unsultied by rough usage. Their service will be the service of youth, whose glory is enthusian without self-interface.

Maknām: well-guarded, kept close, concealed from exposure: the beautiful nacrenus lustre of Peases is disfigured by exposure to gases, vapiours, or acids; when not artually in use they are best kept in closed caskets, guarded from deteriorating agencies.

5039. The third—and the highest—stage of Bliss, after individual Bliss and social Bliss, is the satisfaction of looking to the Past without its shadows and realising to the full in the Present the goodness of God. See n. 5030. This, again, is shared in mutual converse and confidence.

5060. A man may be good, and may within limits have found goodness in his own spiritual life, but may have anxieties about his family or friends whom he loves. All such shadows are removed in heaven by the Grace of God, and he is free to dwell on it in his confidential converse with other men similarly circumstanced.

27. "But God has been good To us, and has delivered us From the Penalty Of the Scoreling Wind." (2011)

28. "Truly, we did call
Unto Him from of old:
Truly it is He,
The Beneficent, the Merciful!" 300

Section 2

29. Mehretore proclaim thou sal The praises (a) thy Lord): For by the Grace Of thy Lord, thou art No (vulgar) soothsayer, nor Art thou one possessed.

30. Or do they say:
"A Poet! we await
For him some calamity ""
(Hatched) by Time!"

31. Say thou: "Await ye! I too will wait "" Along with you!"

2061. "Us" includes the good man or woman and all whom he or she cared for. This would be an ever-expanding crucic curful triculules all manking through Teachers like the Chosen One. The "Scorching Wood" is the type of haste, arrogance, and fire, such as entered into the composition of Jinns: xx 27. The destiny of man is to attain to calm, peace, security, the Garden of Bliss.

5053. The nature of the spiritual kingdom, with its apex in God, having been explained in the last section, the main of God is now exhorted to go on proclaiming the Message of God, despite all that the God-bot, ignorant, or wiked men may say. The greatest of the Prophets was called a soothsayer, i.e. one who tells fortunes by divunation, or a madman possessed of some evil spirit, or a poet singing spiteful stitles. Much more may lesser men be called by such names because they preclaim the Truth. They should go on in spite of it all.

5004. If a spiteful poet fortells evil calamities for men, men can afford to laugh at him, hoping that Time will bring about its revenge, and spite will come to an evil end. For the various meanings of Raib, seen, 1884 to xiv 9. Some Commentators suggest Death as the Calamity hatched by Time.

"305, C/, xx, 32. If the wicked wait or took for some calaimity to betall the preacher of Fruth, the preacher of Truth can with far more justice await the decision of the issue between him and his persecutors. For he stands for right, and God will support the right.

- 32. Is it that their faculties Of understanding urge them along To this, or are they But a people transgressing along Beyond bounds?
- 33. Or do they say, "He fabricated the (Message)"? Sould Nay, they have no faith!
- 34. Let them then produce A recital like unto it,— If (it be) they speak The Truth!
- 35. MY ere they created of nothing, soon Or were they themselves
  The creators?
- 36. Or did they create The heavens and the earth? Nay, they have No firm belief. MOTO

$066. It may be that the persecutors of Truth are ignorant, and their deficient faculties of understanding mislead them, but it is more often the case that they are perverse rebels against the law of God, defending their own selfish interests, and preventing those whom they oppress, from getting justice.

5067. Cf. lt. 53.

5008. As an alternative to the charges of being a soothsayer or a madman or a disgravited poet, there is the charge of a forger or fabricator applied to the man of God when he produces his Message. This implies that there can be no Revelation or inspiration from God. Such an attitude negatives Faith altogether. But if this is so, can they produce a work of man that can compare with the inspired Word of God? They cannot. Cf. x 3.739, and x wit. 88.

3069 "Were they created of nothing?" Three possible alternative meanings are suggested by the Commentators, according to the meaning we give to the Arabic preposition m(in—of, by, with, for. (1) "Were they created by nothing? Did they come into existence of themselves? Was it a mere chance that they came into being? (2) Were they created as men out of nothing? Was there not a wonderful seed, from which their material growth can be traced, as the handlework of a wise and wonderful Creator? Must they not then seek His Will? (3) Were they created for nothing, to no purpose? If they ware created for a purpose, must they not try to learn that purpose by understanding God's Revelation?

5070. They obviously did not create the wonders of the starry heavens and the fruitful globe of the earth. But they can assign no definite cause to explain it, as they have no firm belief on the subject themselves.

- (٥٢) سبورة الطور 1439
- 37. Or are the Treasures. Of thy Lord with them. "" Or are they the managers (Of affairs)?
- 38. Or have they a ladder, 5013 By which they can (climb Up to heaven and) listen (To its secrets)? Then let (Such a) listener of theirs Produce a manifest proof.
- 39. Or has He only daughters 371 And ve have sons?
- 40. Or is it that thou Dost ask for a reward. sure So that they are burdened With a load of debt?-
- 41. Or that the Unseen 5077 Is in their hands. And they write it down?
- 42. Or do they intend A plot (against thee)? 50% But those who defy God Are themselves involved In a Plot!

5071, Cf. vi. 50, and n. 867. The Treasures of God's Knowledge are infinite. But the doubters and unbelievers have no access to them, much less can the doubters and unbelievers manage the wonders of this world. Must they not therefore seek grace and revelation from God?

5072. Cf. vi. 35: a reference to the Pagan belief that by means of a material ladder a man might climb up to heaven and learn its secrets!

5073. Cf. xvi. 57-59, and n. 2082. To the gospel of Unity it is repugnant to assign begotten sons or daughters to God. But the Arab superstition about angels being the daughters of God was particularly blasphemous as the Pagan Arahs hated to have daughters themselves and considered it a mark of humiliation!

5074. The men of God ask for no reward to preach the Message of God and direct men to the right Path. Why then do men shun them and persecute those who seek to bring blessings to them?

5075. The Unseen in the spiritual world is a subject of Revelation, though it works through the common everyday life of man. The men who reject Revelation simply because it is outside their own experience ought on the contrary to try to learn about it and seek to understand it.

5076. Shallow men who plot against Good are themselves the willing victims of insidious plots laid by Evil.

43. Or have they a god som Other than God? Exalted is God Far above the things They associate with Him!

44. Mere they to see
A piece of the sky ****
Falling (on them), they Would (only) say: "Clouds Gathered in heaps!"

45. So leave them alone
Until they encounter
That Day of theirs,
Wherein they shall (perforce)
Swoon (with terror),—serv

46. The Day when their plotting Will avail them nothing And no help shall be Given them.

Understand not.

48. Now await in patience
The command of thy Lord:

لَمُ اعْلَامُ وَكُنَّ ذَلَكَ وَلَكُونَ لَا لَكُوا الْكُورَ الْكُورُ الْكُورَ الْكُورَ الْكُورَ الْكُورَ الْكُورَ الْكُورَ الْكُورُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْكُورُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقِ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقِ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقِ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُولِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ لِلْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِقُ الْمُؤْلِق

5077. This is the final and decisive question: If there really any god other than the One True God? Every argument points to the negative. A series of questions has been still above, poloiting to the negative of the superstitions of the godless. The gospel of Unity, Revelation, and the Hereafter has thus been preached by a searching examination of the position of the Unbel evers. And the Star ends with an exhortation to leave alone those who will not believe and to let Time work out the web and pattern, of God's Plan.

5078. In xxvi. 187. Shu'aib, the man of God, is challenged by the Companions of the Wood "to cause a piece of the sky to fall on us, if thou art truthful," Such a challenge, mome form or other, is addressed to all men of God. It is mere defiance. It has no meaning. If a rice of the sky were to fall on them, it would not convince them, for they would only say: "These are only clouds gathered in heaps." They do not wish to believ. Otherwise there are ample Signs and Evidences of God's Plan in Creation and in man's own heart.

5079 That is, the Day of Judgment. Cf. xxxix. 66. and n. 4343.

5080. The final Judgment is for all. But in add tich wrong-doe's have to first a retubution or puts the first tibs very life, an open punishment through external events, or and the bitter cange of conscience within.

(S. L11, 48-49,

For verily thou art In Our eyes: 5081 And celebrate the praises Of thy Lord the while Thou standest forth, 5081

49. And for part of the night also Also praise thou Him,—
And at the retreat also Of the stars!

(٥٢) سورة الطور 1441

فَإِنْكَ بِأَعْيُنِيًّا وَسَبِغَ بِحَمْدِرَةِكَ حِينَ مَوْمُر

@ وَمِنَ الْيَالِمَسَيِّقَهُ وَاذْبَ رَالْفُورُمِ

50%1. The man of God must strive his utmost to proclaim the Message of God: as for results, it is not for him to commind them. He must wait patiently, in the knowledge that he is not forgation by God, but is constantly under God's eyes.—under this loving care and protection. And he must glorify God's name, as he is a standard-bearer of God's Truth.

$982. The translators and Commentators nearly all understand laquimu in the sense of rising up from sleep. But the rendering I have given is consistent with Quranic usage. In xxv. 218, we have the same two words $\tilde{\text{tan}}$ tagame, meaning "standing forth (in prayeri". In Iviti. 25, we have "B-yaqiim an-nüsu bul-tsti" which obvoodly means "that men may stand forth in juttice," i.e. do all their business in justice. In lxxviii 38, we have yaquima used for the angels standing forth in ranks.

On my rendering the meaning will be; 'celebrate God's praises when you stand forth in prayer, or at all times when you go about your business; but also for part of the night and at early dawn when worldly life is at a standault.'

5033. It is not necessary to understand this for any particular canonical prayers. It is good to spend a part of the night to prayer and praise: (7) lexiii, i. And the Dawn is a daily recurring miracle of nature, full of spiritual influences and "testingon": (f), x(1), (8-9).

5084. Idhar-un-nujam; the retreat of the stars; the glorious hour of early dawn. In caiii, 1, we seek God's protection as "Lord of the Dawn".

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LIII (Najm).

This is an early Meccan Sūra, and is the fourth of the series of seven which were described in the Introduction to  $S.\ l.$

The particular theme of this Sara is that Revelation is not an illusion: the illusion is in the minds of those who doubt and have false ideas of God: God is the source and goal of all things.

In some Sûras the consecutive arrangement is shown or suggested by a cue-word. Here the cue-word is "star", corresponding to "stars" in the last verse of the last Sûra. So in xlvi. 1, the words: "Exalted in Power, Full of Wisdom": are carried forward from the last verse of S. xlv. and indeed the same words occur in the first verse of S. xlv. So, again the words: "Most Merciful, Oft-Forgiving": in xxxiv. 2, refer back to the words: "Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful": in the last line of S. xxxiii. In S. liv. 1, the nearness of Judgment recalls the same idea at the end of the previous Sûra (liii. 57). Other examples will also be found.

Summary.—The impression received by the Prophet in revelation is neither error on his part nor deception by others, nor does he speak from selfish motives: it comes clearly from God, Who is not what the vain imaginations of men conceive: He is all-in-all, First and Last, Lord of all, Ample in forgiveness (liii. 1-32, and C. 229).

Those who turn away are petty and ignorant, not knowing that God is the source and goal of all things—in men, in nature, and in the events of history: therefore serve ye Him (Iiii, 33-62, and C. 230).

C. 229.—True revelation is not a process

(Ini. 1-32) Either of error or deception, nor does

The Prophet speak from k.mself as he desires.

It is God's inspiration, frue, without doubt.

It is reality,—the inner reality

Of heaven as far as knowledge can reach,

Not the false ideas and idols that men

Construct for themselves, names without truth

Behind them. The goal of all 'things is God,

As He is the One from Whom starts Reality.

No other can e'er intercede except

As He wills. He made us, and knows all

That we are. It is not for us to' justify Ourselves, but to offer ourselves as we are.

Sūra LIII.

Nann, or the Star.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful.

- 1. By the Star 3085
  When it goes down,---
- Your Companion is neither 5006 Astray nor being misled.
- Nor does he say (aught) Of (his own) Desire.
- 4. It is no less than Inspiration sent down to him:
- He was taught by one sur! Mighty in Power,
- Endued with Wisdom: For he appeared (In stately form)

5083. Najm is interpreted in various ways. As most commonly actepted, it means either a Star generically, of the close cluster of seven stars known as the Plendess in the Constellation Taurus, which the sun enters about the 21st of April every year. In mid-April, or a hittle later, the beautiful cluster would set just after the sun, after having gradually as ended the sky in the winter months. In late laby, or a little later, it would rase just before the sun, in its western aspects, it might be considered a spring constellation. To open uir malions uncluding the Arabisy whose climate usually presents starty askes, this is no object of great interst, and many folkione tales gather round it. When so glorious a cluster is content to how down in the horizon and merge its light in the greater light created by God (see the last three lines of C.21s), it becomes a symbol of humility in beauty and power before the Most High. Whose revelation discloses the summit of beauty, power, and wisdom.

Hawa in the text may mean either "goes down (or sets)" or "rises". Whichever meaning we take, it mak s no difference to the symbolic interpretation given above.

5086 "Yo r Companion" is the holy Prophet Muhammad, who had lived among the Quraish all his life. He i defended from three kinds of charges that the Unbelievers brought against lini: (I) that he was going astray, either through defect of incligence or through carelessness; (2) that he was being misted or deceived by evil spirits; and (3) that he spoke out of a whint or impulse, or from a selfish desire to impress his own personality. None of these charges was true. On the contrary he had direct inspiration from God.

5087. This is referred by the Commentators to the angel Gabriel, through whom the inspiration came. Cf. laxxi, 20.

5089. Gabriel appeared in stately form, perhaps towering above the Mountain of Light (see C. 31). Island in verse 6, translated "appeared", means literally "mounted" or "ascended", or "set himself to execute a design" is see, 1,380 to x 3.

5089. Two bow-shots (counting 100 to 150 yards to a bow-shot) would be a clearly visible distance. But $01 injsticism would interpret: "two drawn bows, with their chords touching' making a complete circle of union. In this case the "one Mighty in Power "in verse 5 above would be not Gabriel, but the Supreme Being, Who Himself taught the Prophet.

5090, Gabriel would be just a messenger, to do no more than convey God's Message to God's Apostle.

5091. "Heart" in Arabic includes the faculty of intelligence as well as the faculty of feeling. The impression conveyed was pure truth; there was no illusion in it.

5002. The first occasion when Gabriel appeared in a visible form was at the Mountain of Light, when he brought his first revelation beginning with Igraa; see C. 20.35. The second was at the Prophet's Air raj or Ascension: see Introduction to S. xvii paras 2-4. These were the only two occasions when Gabriel appeared in visible form. The Mi'raj appearance was near the Lote-tree in the highest heaven, above which (figuratively) is the Throne of God.

5093. For the Lote-tree in its literal meaning, see n. 3814 to xxxiv. 16. The wild Lote is thorny; under cultivation it yields good fruit and shade, and is symbolic of heavenly bliss, as here and in lyi, 28. The symbolism here is that the farthest Lote-tree marked the bounds of heavenly knowledge as revealed to men, beyond which neither angels nor men could pass.

5094. The Mansion or Throne (figuratively) or Special Plesence,—if the Throne or Presence could ever be localised in our thoughts; for God's "Throne doth extend over the heavens and the scalin" (ii. 255). The point was teached when the spinitual floowledge of non could reach no higher. The Spilis interpret the Lote-tree in Islam to be what the Binning Bush in the valley of Towa was to Moses:  $Q \propto 10.13$ , and  $n \sim 251$ ; and Exod iii. 1-6. Only, in this case of Moses it was but prebigurement of the davine effulgence on this earth; in the case of Musammad it was the davine Glory in heaven itself, and it was "shoulded in invisery unspeakable". This was indeed "the Greatest of the Signs of the Lord" (fill; 18.)

5093. From the heights of divine Glory, we come back again to this sorry earth, with its base indiatries. We are asked to "look at this picture, and at that!" The three principal idols of Pagan Arab Idolatry were the godderses Lat, Uzza, and Man t. Opinions differ as to their exact forms: one version is that Lat was in human shape. Uzza had its origin in a sacred tree, and Mankt in a white stone. They all represented God in femals form.

3096 To show God in human shape, or imagine sons or daughters of God, as if God were flesh, was it any case a derogation from the supreme glory of God, high above all creatures, even if the human shapes were invested with great beauty and majesty as in the Greek Pautheon. But when we consider in what low opinion Pagan Arabia held the female size, it was particularly degrading to show God, or so-called daughters of God, in female shapes. Cf. xvi. 37-59, and in 2082; also its, 39, and in 2033.

23. These are nothing but names Which ye have devised,—1009 Ye and your fathers,—For which God, has sent Down no authority (whatever). They follow nothing but 1000 Conjecture and what Their own souls desire!—Even though there has already Come to them Guidance From their Lord!

5097. Cf. vii. 71; xii. 40, n. 1693. The divine names which they give to stocks and stones, or to here so living or dead, or even to prophets and men of God, are but the creations of their own fancy. Whatever they ware, they ware not god.

5098, Cf. vi. 116. Conjecture is a dangerous thing in speaking of divine things. It follows lines with reflect the lusts of men's own hearts. Why not follow the divine guidance which comes through men of God?

5099. The unpurified desires of men's hearts often lead to destruction, for they are dictated by Evil. The true source of guidance and light is God, just as He is also the goal to which all persons and things—all existence—returns

5100. We are apt to imagine the angelic host of heaven as beings of immense power. But their power is all derived from God. Men, when they attain to the highest spiritual dignities, may have even more power and position than angels in the sight of God, as is typified by angels being bidden to how down to Adam: ii, 34. The Quraish superstition about angels being intermediaries' and intercessors for man with God is condemned.

5101, CI, xx. 109 and xxi. 28. No one can intercede except with the permission of God, and that permission will only be given for one who is acceptable to God. For a possible different shade of meaning, see 1.054 to xx. 109.

  And He rewards those who Do good, with what is best.
- Those who avoid Great sins and shameful deeds,

5102, Cf. hii. 21 above, and n. 3096. The Pagan Quraish had no firm belief in the Hereafter, Their prayers for intercession to angels and deities was on account of their worldly affairs.

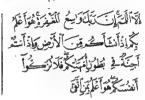

5103, Cf. liit 23 above, and n 3098

3104. Men with a materialist turn of mind, whose desires are bounded by sex and material things, will not go beyond those things. Their knowledge will be limited to the narrow circle in which their thoughts move. The spiritual world is beyond their ken. While persons with a spiritual outlook, even though they may fail again and again in attaining their full ideals, are on the right Path. They are willing to receive guidance, and God's Green will find them out and their them.

5105. All deeds have their consequences, good or ill. But this is not an iron law, as the Determinist in philosophy, or the pracches of bare Karma, would have us believe. God does not sit apart. He governs the world. And Mercy as well as Justice are this attributes. In His Justice every deed or word or thought of evil has its consequence for the doer or speaker or thinker. But here is always in this life room for repentance and amendment. As soon as this is forthcoming, God's Mercy, comes into action. It can blot out our evil, and the "reward" which it gives is nearly always greater than our ment;

Only (falling into) small faults,—Verily thy Lord is ample he for giveness. He knows You well when He brings You out of the earth, And when ye are hidden In your mothers' wombs.

Therefore justify not yourselves: he knows best who it is That guards against evil.

C. 230 .- When once in God's Way, turn not away. dur. 33-62 Nor check your generous impulse to give Your all to God. The spiritual world Unseen is above all worldly bargains. Each soul must bear its own responsibility. It must strive its utmost and attain its end. The final Goal of all is God . In His hands are Laughter and Tears, Life And Death, the mystery of Birth and Creation. And the Hereafter. He controls our Bliss And inner satisfaction. He is Lord Of the highest and noblest in Nature. His hand Traces the course of History. Learn, Oh learn from His Revelation, and Adore the Lord of your inmost Soul!

$106. God's attributes of Mercy and Forgiveness are unlimited. They come into action without our asking, but on our bringing our wills as offerings to Him. Our asking or prayer helps us to bring our minds and wills as offerings to Him. That is necessary to frame our own psychological preparedness. It informs God of nothing, for He knows in $107. As God knows our immost being, it is absurd for us to justify ourselves, either by pretending that we are better than we are, or by finding excuses for our conduct. We must offer ourselves unreservedly, such as we are; it is His Mercy and Grare that will cleanse us. If we try, out of love for Him, to guard against evil, our strong is all that He asks for.

$108. The particular reference in this passage, according to Baighāwi, is to Waltd the Mußstra, who bargained with a Quian-th Pagan for a certain sum if the latter would take upon himself the sum of Waltd. He and a not of the sum but withheld the rest. The general application that concess us is threefold: If, if we at cent 1-lam, we must accept it whole heartedly and not lock bod. 5114. The second and third aphorisms are that man must strive, or he will gain nothing; and that if he strives, the result must soon appear in sight and he will find his reward in full measure.

5115. The fourth, fifth, and sixth aphorisms are that all things return to God; that all our, hope should be in Him, and we should lear none but Him; and that He alone can give Life, and Death

5116. The seventh aphorism relates to the mystery of sex: all things are created in pairs: each sex performs its proper function, and yet its wonderful working is part of the creative process of God in the living seed fructifies, but contains within itself all the factors disclosed in its later development and life.

5117. No tess wonderful is the promise He has made about the raising of the dead, and a new life in the Hereafter, and this is the subject of the eighth approxim.

5118. Wealth and material gain are sought by most men, in the hope that they will be a source of enjoyment and satisfaction. But this hope is not always fulfilled. There is a psychical and spiritual side to it. But both the material and the spiritual side depend upon the working of God's Plan. This is referred to in the unith aphorism.

S119. The tenth aphorism refers to a mighty phenomenon of nature, the magnificent star Sirius, which is such a prominent object in the skies, in the early part of the solaryear, say, from January to April It is the brightest star in the firmament, and its bluish light causes wonder and terror in Pagan minds. The Pagan Arabs worshipped it as a divinity. But God is the Lord, Creator and Chersher, of the most magnificent part of Creation, and worship is due to Him alone.

5120. The eleventh and last aphorism refers to the punishment of the most powerful ancient ovin 13. They were strong; and they were 18016 to vii 65, and for the Thamüd, see n. 1013 to vii 73. They were strong; and they were latened; but their strength and their talents did not save them from being destroyed for their sins. The same may be said about the earlier generation of Noah, who were destroyed in the Flood - they "rejected Our Signs: they were indeed a blind people" (vii, 64); see also n. 1039 to vii 39; and xi 25-49.

5124. Mere wondering will not do, even if it is the wonder of admiration. Each soul must strive and act, and God's Mercy will take it under its wings.

<sup>5121,</sup> Verses 53 60 may be construed as a commentary on the aphonsms. The story of the Overthrown Cities, to which Lot was sent for a warning, will be found in x1. 74-83 and the notes thereon. This story may well be freated as separate from the aphonisms as it refers to events that nappened in the later life of Abraham.

<sup>$112.</sup> With a slight modification this forms the refrain of the next S0ra but one, the highly poetical S0ra of Rahmān. In S. It is no laughing time. If we only realised our own shortcomings, we should weep, with our good angels who weep for us. But weeping by itself will not help. We must try and understand God and adore Him. Thus shall we be able to understand ourselves and our fellow-men.

INTRODUCTION TO SCRA LIV (Qamar).

This is an early Meccan Sara, the fifth in the series dealing with Judgment, and the truth of Revelation, as explained in the Introduction to S. I.

The theme of the Sūra is explained by the refrain: "Is there any that will receive admonition?" which occurs six times, at the end of each reference to a past story of sin and rejection of warnings and in the appeal to the simplicity of the Qur-an (verses 15; 17, 22, 32, 40, and 51). There is an invitation to listen to the Message and turn to Truth and Righteousness.

Summary.—The Hour of Judgment is nigh, but men forget or reject the Message, as did the people of Noah, of 'Ād, of Thamūd, of Lot, and of Pharaoh. Is there any that will receive admonition? (liv. 1-55, and C. 231.)

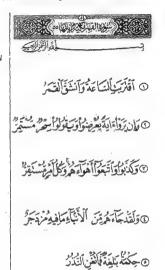

C. 231 .- With every breath of our life, comes nearer (liv. 1-55.) And nearer the Hour of Judgment: the proud Will be brought low: the lovers of case Will find themselves in hardship. Come ! Is there any that will truly receive admonition? So said Noah, but his people rejected The warning and perished. We have made Our Revelation easy to understand and follow. Is there any that will truly receive admonition ? So said the prophets of 'Ad and Thamad: So said the prophets deputed to the People Of Lut and of Pharaoh: but the wicked continued In sin and defiance and perished. Will the present Generation learn wisdom by warning? Alas! Is there any that will truly receive admonition? The Righteous will dwell in their Gardens of Bliss .-In the joyful Assembly of realised Truth. In the Presence of their Sovereign Most High!

Sura LIV.

Qamar, or the Moon.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful

- Mehe Hour (of Judgment) her Is nigh, and the moon Is cleft asunder. 5126
- 2. But if they see
  A Sign, they turn away,
  And say, "This is
  (But) transient magic." 6120
- 3. They reject (the warning)
  And follow their (own) lusts
  But every matter has 6120
  Its appointed time.
- 4. There have already come
  To them Recitals wherein 5181
  There is (enough) to check (them),
- Mature wisdom;—but (The preaching of) Warners Profits them not.

5127. See para, 2 of the Introduction to S. kii. The idea of the Judgment being nigh at the beginning of this Süra connects it with the same idea at the end of the last Süra (verse 57), though the actual words used in the two cases are different.

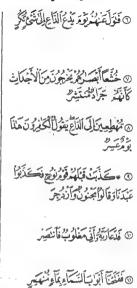

5128 Three explanations are given in the Muspadāt, and perhaps all three apply there: (1) that the moon once appeared cleft asunder in the valley of Mecca within sight of the Prophet, his Companions, and some Unbelievers; (2) that the prophetic past tense indicates the future, the cleaving asunder of the moon being a Sign of the Judgment approaching; and (3) that the phrase is metaphorical, meaning that the matter has become clear as the moon. That the first was noticed by contemporaries, including Unbelievers, is clear from verse 2. The second is an incident of the disruption of the solar system at the New Creation: Cf. lxxv. 8-9. And the third might well be implied as in eastern allegory, based on the other two.

5129. Muslamirr: transient, or powerful; either meaning will apply. The Unbelievers acknowledge the unusual appearance, but call it magic. They do not therefore profit by the spiritual lesson.

5130. The prevalence of sin and the persecution of truth may have its day, but it must end at last.  $^{\prime\prime}$ 5131. The stories of the slus of past generations having been visited with exemplary punishments were already in their possession, and should, if they had been wise, have opened their eyes and checked them in their mad career of sin. Five of these stories are again referred to later in this Sura by way of illustration.

- 6. Therefore, (O Prophet.) Turn away from them.
  The Day that the Caller State Will call (them)
  To a terrible affair.
- 7. They will come forth,—
  Their eyes humbled—
  From (their) graves, (torpid) 518
  Like locusts scattered abroad,
- Hastening, with eyes translixed, Towards the Caller!—
   "Hard is this Day!",
   The Unbelievers will say.
- Before them the People
  Of Noah rejected (their apostle):
  They rejected Our servant, Suasian And said, "Here is One possessed!", and he Was driven out.
- 10. Then he called on his Lord: "I am one overcome: Do Thou then help (me)!" $138
- So We opened the gates Of heaven, with water Pouring forth.

- 5132. For a time godlessness seems to triumph, but the promph is short-lived. And in any case there is the great Reckoning of the Day of Judgment.
  - 5133. The angel whose voice will call at the Resurrection and direct all souls. (7 xx, 108-11).
- 5134. At one stage in the invasion of locust swarms, the locusts are torpid and are scattered abload all over the ground. I have seen them on-trailway tracks in 'Irido, crushed to death in hundreds by passing trans. The similers and for the stunned beings who will ruse up in swarms from their graves and say, "Ah1 woe unto us! who has raised us up?" (xxxvi.33).
- $133 The story of Noah and the Flood is frequently referred to in the Qur-an. The passage which best illustrates this passage will be found in xi. 25-48. Note in that passage how they first insult and abuse him arrogantly; how he humbly argues with them; how they laugh him to scorn, as much as to say that he was a madman possessed of some evil spirit; and how the Flood comes and he is gaved in the Ark, and the wicked are doomed to destruction.
- 5136 He did not call down punishment. He merely asked for help in his mission, as he felt himself overpowered by brute force and cast out, which prevented the fulfilment of his mission. But the wicked generation were past all repentance, and they were wiped out.

- 13. But We bore him
  On an (Atk) made of Broad planks and caulked SIRO
  With palm-fibre:
- 14. She floats under our eyes
  (And care): a recompense size
  To one who had been Rejected (with scorn)!
- 15. And We have left
  This as a Sign 5140
  (For all time): then
  Is there any that will Receive admonition? 5141
- 16. But how (terrible) was and My Penalty and My Warning?
- 17. And We have indeed Made the Qur-an easy 5148

$137. The torrents of rain from above combined with the gush of waters from underground springs, and caused a huge Flood which inundated the country.

5138 Dusur, plural of disar, which means the palm-fibre with which boats are caulked: from dasara, to ram in, to spear A derived meaning is "nails", (which are driven into planks): this latter meaning also applies, and is preferred by translators not familiar with the construction of simple boats.

5139. As usual, God's Mercy in saving His faithful servants takes precedence of His Wrath and Penalty. And He helps and rewards those whom the world rejects and despises t 5140. Cf. xxix 15. where the Ark (with the salvation it brought to the righteous) is mentioned as a Sign for all Peoples So also in xxv. 37 and xxvi. 121, it is a Sign for men. Similarly the saving of Lot; with the destruction of the wicked Cities of the Plain, is mentioned as a Sign left for those who would understand: xxix. 33, and it. 37.

5141 A refrain that occurs six times in this Stra: see Introduction.

5142 While the Mercy of God is always prominently mentioned, we must not forget or minimise the systeme of Evil, and the terrible Penalty it incurs if the Grace of God and His Warning are deliberately rejected.

5143 While the Qur-an sums up the highest philosophy of the inner life, its simple directions for conduct are plana and easy to understand and act upon. Is this not in itself a part of the Grace of God? And what excuse is there for any one to fall in receiving admonition?

5144. Cf. xii. 16. How graphic is the description of the toroado that uprooted them! It must indeed be a dreadful tornado that plucks up the palm-trees by their deep tap-roots. The "Day" is an indefinite period of time. The wind that destroyed the 'Ad people lasted seven nights and eight days; Ixix. 7.

5145. Repeated from verse 18 to heighten the description of the sin, the penalty, and the criminal negligence of the sinares in refusing the warmings on account of their self-complacent confidence in their own strength and stability! It is repeated again as a secondary refrain in liv. 30 and (with slight modification) in liv. 32 and 39.

5146. The psychology of the Thamild is more searchingly analysed here than in xli. 17, to show up the contrast between shallow men's ideas about Revelation, and the real sanity, humanism, social value, and truth of Revelation. To them the Revelation was brought by $81ib.

5163. God's Creation is not haphazard. Everything goes by law, proportion, and -measure. Everything it is its appointed time, place, and occasion, as also its definite limitation. Nothing happens but according to His Plan, and every deed, word, and thought of man has its fullest consequences, except in so far as the Grace or Mercy of God intervenes, and that is according to law and plan.

5164. While in the life of created things there is "proportion and measure", and a lag of time or distance or circumstance, in God's Command, the Design, the Word, the Execution, and the Consequences are but a single Act. The simile given is that of the twinkling of an eye, which is the shortest time that a simple man can think of: the cause which occasions the twinkling, the movement of the muscles connected with it, the closing of the eyelids, and their reopening, are all almost like a simultaneous act. By way of contrast take an illustration like that of a man writing a book. He must form the design in his mind; he must prepare himself by research, collection of knowledge, or of personal experience; he must use or acquire the art of writing; he must collect the materials for writing, vis., paper, ink, pen, etc., and this will connect with a chain of manufacturing processes in which he is dependent upon other people's work and experience; then his book may have to be printed or lithographed or bound, and sold, or raken to a library, or presented to a friend, which will bring into play numerous other chains of processes, and dependence upon other neople's work or skill; and the lag of Time, Space, and Circumstance will occur at numerous stages. In God's Command, the word "Be" (kus) includes everything, without the intervention of or dependence upon any other being or thing whatever. And this is also another phase of the philosophy of Unity.

$165, Ashya akum: 'gangs or parties or collections of men like you.'—addressed to wicked men who arrogantly rely upon their own strength or combination, neither of which can stand for a moment against the Will of God.

5166. The cases of Pharaoh's men of old and the Pagan Quraish are considered as parallel, and appeal is addressed to the latter from the experience of the former; 'will ye not learn and repeat?

$167. The Book of Deeds is of course metaphorical. The point is that nothing which men do is .lost—good or evil. Everything gives rise to an inevitable chain of consequences, from which a release is only obtained by the intervention of God's Grace acting on an act, a striving, of the human will to repent and turn to God.

55. In an Assembly of Truth, 5100 In the Presence of 3170 A Sovereign Omnipotent. 5171

$168. The record, in the case of those who dishonoured and violated Truth, will lead to their undoing; but in the case of those who honoured the Truth and adopted "so as to shine in their righteous lives, the result is expressed by four metaphors, in an ascending, egree of sublimity; (I) they will be in the midst of Gardens where rivers flow; (2) they will be in an Assembly of Truth; (3) in the Presence of God; (4) Whose sovereignty is orimpotent. See notes following, and Appendix XII, at the end of this Sora.

(1) "Gardens" with Rivers (Rowing beneath): this has been explained more than once already; Cf. n. 4608 to xhiii 70. The Garden suggests all the Blies we can imagine through our senses. How the Garden ministers to the noblest functions of our senses is further explained in Appendix N.

$109 (2) While we possess our badily senses, the best conceptions we can form are through our sense-perceptions, and the Garden is a good synthol from that point of view. The next higher understanding of sprittual truth is through our intellect and our social satisfaction. This is best symbolised by the Assembly of Truth—the gathering in which we sit with our fellows and enjoy the realisation of Truth and the dissipation of falsehoods and half-truths.

5170. (3) But there is a higher conception still, something so intensely spiritual that it can only be expressed by reference to the Presence of God. God is present everywhere and at all times, but when His Presence becomes an actual realised experience to its fuller extent, then we have reached Heaven.

$171. (4) Such realisation of God, as is spoken of in the last note, can only be perfected when we know—it comes into our inmost being—that God is Sovereign, All-in-all, First and Last, not only for ourselves but for all persons and things and events. **Alreadair*, which I have translated Omnipotent, implies something more: the eighth-declension form denotes not only complete mastery, but further idea that the mastery arties from God's own nature, and depends on nothing else whatever.

App. XII.) 1464

APPENDIX XII

The Muslim Heaven (see liv. 54-55, and notes 5168-71)

To write about the Muslim Heaven adequately is to describe the spiritual ideals of Islam and its conception of the Hereafter for those who follow the true laws of their being as created by God and as explained in Revelation. Such a task would be beyond the scope of an Appendix. But I propose to collect here a few matters which have been referred to in scattered notes to the Quranic text, but which could not be fully explained in the space at the disposal of the notes. This is all the more necessary, as some ignorant critics of Islam imagine that Islam postulates a sensual heaven, and they press into service some garbled versions of what some of our own more material-minded brethren have said on the subject.

- 2. It is true that Islam uses the most varied imagery for describing spiritual matters which are really beyond description in words except by such imagery. But it carefully avoids using such imagery for God Himself, lest it should be misunderstood by shallow minds, and confines the use of such imagery to the description of human beings, who have, in their present life, some material forms of pleasure, satisfaction, and happiness, and some mental and social relations which conduce to such feelings, and which may therefore be used legitimately to typify the more spiritual joys and relationships of a spiritual Heaven. It knows nothing of the amours of gods and goddesses and the jealousie, and bickerings that disfigure the Court of the Olympian Jove; and yet Greek Mythology was the most refined of all Pagan Mythologies. In spite of all Wagner's efforts to glorify the Valkyrian heaven, we have yet in that heaven high actions and high passions in an atmosphere of frustration and strife. The Christian imagery of the vision of God and God's Throne is that of "a jasper and a sardine stone," emeralds and crowns of gold. a sea of glass like unto crystal, and four and-twenty elders casting their crowns before the Throne, and glorifying God, but adding, "Thou hast created all things, and for thy bleasure they are and were created." (The concluding Book of the New Testament: The Revelation of St. John the Divine, Chapter iv). Our imagery never carries these metaphors to the Person of God, and we are not taught that the object of creation is God's pleasure; our teaching is that man was created for man's self-development and his attainment of his high destiny, which can be done by his understanding, obeying, and knowing God.
- 3. Our doctrine of the Hereafter is not strictly a doctrine of Rewards and Punishments. A promise of Rewards implies two things: (1) an inducement to a certain course of action by the motive of winning the reward; and (2) the apportionment of the reward to the merits and deserts of the receiver.

As to the motives, see iii. 31:—
Say: "If ye do love God,
Follow me: God will love you

And forgive you your sins: For God is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful,

Or again, in ii. 165 we have:-

But those of Faith Are overflowing In their love for God.

Certainly whatever good we do benefits our own souls, but the motive with which we should do it should be only as "seeking the glory (literally, Face, Countenance) of God "(ii. 272). The righteous persevere patiently in righteousness, seeking "the Countenance of their Lord" (xiii. 22).

- 4. Is the "Reward" apportioned to the merits or deserts of the receiver? Not at all. At best, our merits or deserts can amount to very little. But Gold Mercy and Grace are vast and all-embracing (vi. 147). He has said "My Mercy extendeth to all things" (vii. 156): His Grace is universal and all-pervasive; and "He is the Lord of Bounties unbounded" (iii. 74). If any man does good, "the reward to him is better than his deed: but if any does evil, the doers of evil are only punished to the extent of their deeds" (xxviii. 84). Thus His justice is strict but in favour of man; but his Grace is beyond calculation. "That which ye lay out for charity, seeking the Countenance of God, will increase: it is these who will get a recompense multiplied" (xxx. 39). See also n. 5909 to [xxviii. 36).
- 5. To be righteous merely for the hope of reward for one's self or tor fear of punishment may be good at a certain elementary stage of spiritual progress when higher motives are yet unintelligible. But as the light of Islam illumines the soul. more and more, it is seen that virtue is its own reward and evil is its own punishment : for the one accords with the Will of God, and the other is contrary to it - and therefore also contrary to the oure nature of man as made by God. " God's handiwork according to the pattern on which He has made mankind; no change let there be in the work wrought by Gol: that is the standard Religion" (xxx, 30). "Is there any Reward for Good-other than Good ? " (Iv. 60). We are asked to " repent " when we have fallen into evil. But "repentance" does not mean sackcloth and ashes, or putting on a gloomy pessimism. It means giving up disease for health, crookedness (which is abnormal) for the Straight Way, the restoration of our nature as God created it from the falsity introduced by the entirements of Evil (n. 3543 to xxx. 31). The "fear of God" is the beginning of wisdom; but it is not fear in the ordinary sense of the term, for on the righteous ' there shall be no fear, nor shall they grieve" (ii. 38). The fear of God is not a passive oppression by an outside feeling, but an active assertion of our own will not to offend our Lord and Cherisher. The fear is lest we lose His Good Pleasure. It is akin to love, and is a purification of our will. It is on our will that our future depends under the Grace and Mercy of God, We must strive to reach His Grace. Our strength is small, but He will accept the submission of our will (Islam), and His Grace will search us out; and our progress will proceed according to the Law which God in His wisdom has established.

- 6. Thus it becomes a doctrine of Law, or of "fruits of actions". Every deed must have its inevitable consequences (n. 4671 to xliii. 73). There is no vicarious atonement; for there is individual responsibility. And yet it is not a doctrine of "justification by deeds"; for the hest of our actions fall short of the "heaven" which we hope for (see paragraph 4 above. Nor is it the same as the doctrine of *Karma*, which plays so prominent a part in Buddhist and Hindu philosophy. For we have a lively faith in God's Grace and Mercy: it can and does intervene for us and accepts our repentance and amendment, and gives us fresh chances at every stage of our probationary life. But our will is an important factor: we cannot accept a mechanical form of Determinism which eliminates the human will in the government of the microcosin within us, and even eliminates such a thing as the Divine Will in the government of the Macrocosm, or the great world without us.
- 7. Such being the fundamental aspects of our life and destiny, how can we best clothe our ideas of heaven in human language? Our Heaven is independent of Time, or Place, or fleeting Circumstance. No one can know precisely now the spiritual delights hidden in reserve for him (xxxii, 17). But we must necessarily use terms that imply all these three conditions. Therefore they can only be expressed by allegory or imagery. If we understand what the essence of the allegory or imagery is, we shall profit by it. If we branch out into fantastic applications that leave us in the material world, we shall never be able to get a glimpse of the spiritual world into which such allegory or imagery is intended to open a window for our spiritual eyes. Such allegory or imagery is supplied in abundance in the Our-śn.
- 8. The simplest and yet the most far-reaching allegory that we can employ is that of the Garden—the Garden of Bliss (Janual or Janual un Na'im, v. 58). In all Muslim languages, that word Janual (Garden) is now appecialised for Heaven. Let us analyse a few of the ideas which we can legitimately associate in this connection with the concrete word "Garden" and the abstract term "Bliss"
- 9. In this our life most of our sensations depend upon sense-perceptions, and we can reduce the highest and noblest of them to terms connected with the Garden. To each of our five senses, in their most refined form, does the Garden minister. For the eye there is the general green, with all the most delicate tints of green in the foliage, and the wonderful colours and shapes in flowers; the arrangement of paths and patterres; the various gradations of light and shade; the soft and melting beauty of clouds and mists; and the landscape views with cool rivers flowing underneath, or perhaps murmuring brooks. For the ear is the music of birds, the music of waterfalls, and the appropriate moonlight music of the human voice with or without the accompaniment of an instrument like a guitar. For the smell there is not only the perfume of flowers but the more subtle scents of foliage, moisture or morning dew, or even garden soil. For taste and touch the exquisite fruits, and for touch the soft rose petals and the carpet-like lawns, besides the gentle kiss of breezes, all minister to the highest bliss and fulfilment that we can imagine through our senses.

- 10. We picture not only a Garden, but a Garden with rivers or springs flowing beneath. This further enlarges our horizon. We can picture a landscape with banks, terraces, and sloping lawns, high ground, and valleys. What is the spiritual analogy for this? We must not imagine a dull place where all are engaged in perpetual psalm-singing. There will be differences in ranks, dignities. and tastes, according to each individual's growth and individuality: for that is the meaning of the persistence of Personality. And yet they will form one equal Brotherhood of Peace, one Society of Concord. There will be the four-fold classification according to the varying spiritual experiences gained in this life: (1) the Prophets who taught and led mankind; (2) the sincere Devotees of Truth. who supported the Cause in their person and with all their resources; (3) the Martyrs and Witnesses, who suffered and served; and (4) the righteous people generally, those who led ordinary lives, but always with righteous aims. All these are united in one beautiful Fellowship (see jv. 69, and n. 586). Or take that other classification indicated in Ivi. 27 and 11: the righteous generally, the Companions of the Right Hand (as distinguished from the Companions of the Left Hand, who will not have reacned Heaven), and those nearest to God in rank and dignity. The latter will have no interposing Veils of Light to obscure the pure Light of God from them (Appendix VIII, and xxiv. 35); for, in Sufi language, they will have had the ineffable Bliss of seeing the "Divine Eyes". Possibly the Companions of the Garden and Those on the Heights (vii. 46) refer to the same two categories of souls. Whatever the precise interpretation of these mystic passages may be, there is no doubt that the retention of individual Personality in the Hereafter will mean Bliss of different kinds for each category.
- 11. How can we understand a psychological term like Bliss in general symbolical terms? If it is to convey the idea of satisfaction in any but abstract terms, we must have the symbolism of ordinary life, yet lifted up to ideas of refinement, delicacy, and satisfaction. The acts of eating and drinking are spiritualised and socialised. The choicest of meats, fruits, and drinks, which minister to the most sensitive taste, will be provided. Press of mest artistic taste will add dignity to social intercourse, and there will be thrones and symbols of honour. There will be companionship, individual companionship, companionship of equal age, as well as general companionship. And those whom we loved in this lifemothers, wives, sisters, relatives, children, friends will all add to our joy by their company in a transformed Love as superior to earthly Love as in the, Garden of Heaven to an earthly Garden. The condition of Faith and good Life is of course attached: for no disharmony can enter to mar the dignity of Heaven. (See siii. 23 and n. 1837; xiiii. 70-72, and n. 46'8-70). Perfected Love will not be content with Self, but like a note of music will find its melody in communion with others.
- 12. Carnal sex has of course no place in Heaven, but sex in our constitution here has a mental and psychological value, which we can picture in our transformed and perfected Love above. The word Hür, in such passages as xiiv. 54, and lii. 20, has been much misunderstood and misrepresented. Grammatically it is not feminine in form, and the companionship of Hürs will be for all in Heaven—men and women (as they were in this life), who will retain their personality but not their carnal attributes. As in the word "angel" in English, (unlike its original Angelos in Greek or Angelus in Latin), there is with it an association of the specially feminine virtues of purity, grace, heauty, innocence, truth, and good-will (see n. 4729 to xiiv. 54). In lxxviii. 33 are mentioned Maidens or Virgins of Equal Age, in a highly symbolical passage, where the notes may be consulted. But the masculine virtues of handsome and manly strength and the youthful enthusiasm for service are also mentioned in association with heaven (see Iii. 24, and n. 5058). In other words the symbolism leads up from our ideas of beauty, grace, harmony, strength, youth, and service as we know these things in their most refined forms here, to somethine even noblet and purer which no language can adequately describe.

- 13. The symbolism of Springs or Fountains and Cups of Drink or Wine is also worked out in a beautiful way in S. Ixxvi. (Dahr). Note that the Arabic word Sharab means either Drink or Wine, and in Sufi language, Wine or the Cup is the means of attaining spiritual Ecstasy. The Quranic language tempers Ecstasy with coolness, and associates a refreshing tonic, rather than an unbounded ecstasy, with spiritual fervour, especially in the earlier stages of spiritual Bliss. when the soul is yet new to its new world. Just after the Great Event of Judgment is passed, the righteous soul enters the regions of Bliss, and is given to drink of a Cun from the mystic fountain of Kaffir (lxxvi, 5, n, 5835) Kaffir literally means camphor; in symbolic language it stands for all that is wholesome, cooling and refreshing, soothing and agreeable. This is provided in unstinted measure. Then the yearning humility which filled the souls in the lower life gives place to a sense of possession : dignity and honour, typified by light silk garments, thrones, and the humility now shown to them by those around them (Ixxvi.12-14). Then comes the setting of a Magnificent Realm, typifying Divine Glory. A drink of a Cuo of Zaniabil, typifying warmth and zest to the taste, from a fountain called Sal-sabil (" Seek the Way "), feetive clothes of ceremony, and rich setting of a Royal Banquet of beauty and splendour, stand as symbols to show the approach to the very Presence Ineffable. Further, there is a Spring or Fountain Tasnim, which is only drunk neat by those Nearest to God: they alone can bear its fullest flavour, as they alone can bear the full effulgence of the Glory of God : but every righteous man will have a taste of this Fountain mixed with his heavenly Wine, to the extent that his spiritual advancement is capable of enjoying it (lxxxiii, 27-28).
- 14. For the highest Felicity in heaven is described to be in the nearness to God, in the Good Fleasure of God. See iii. 14-15:—

"Fair in the eyes of men
Is the love of things they covet:
Women and sons,
Heaped-up heards of gold and silver;
Horses branded (for blood and excellence);
And wealth of cattle
And well-tilled land.

Such are the possessions

Of this world's life; But nearness to God Is the best of the goals.

"Say: Shall I give you
Glad tidings of things
Far better than those?
For the righteous are Gardens
In nearness to their Lord,
With rivers flowing beneath;
Therein is their eternal home;
With Companions pure and holy;
And the Good Pleasure of God."

But the Good Pleasure of God has its counterpart in the Good Pleasure of man, raised to such eminence in Heaven.

"O thou soul! In (complete) rest and satisfaction! Come back thou To thy Lord!— Well pleased (thyself), And well pleasing Unto Him!

"Enter, thou, then, Among My Devotees,— Yea, enter thou My Heaven!"

(lxxxix, 27-30.)

- 15. This, then, is the Muslim idea of Salvation. It consists, not in being saved from the consequences of our sins by the sufferings or the merits of others, nor in Nirvana, or annihilation or absorption,—but in the achievement of a perfected Personality, a Bliss that grows up within us, and does not depend on external circumstances. It may require the utmost effort or striving (Jihād) of a lifetime or more. But it is the Supreme Achievement, the attainment of all desires, the Felicity in excelsis (xliv. 57, and n. 4733).
- 16. The several aspects of it are summed up in two passages of singular beauty, xxxvi. 55-58, and lii. 17-28, which should be studied along with the notes thereon. The first passage describes symbolically the mise en scene and the nature of the Bliss. It goes on to say that the happiness will not be solitary, but will be shared in association, on thrones of dignity and peace. It further figures the spaychological inner satisfaction, unconnected with outer circumstances, but reflecting the inner tastes of Personalities: "they shall have whatever they call for": the musician's heaven will be full of music; the mathematician's will be full of mathematical symmetry and perfection; the artist's will be full of beauty of form: the Light will be one, but its rays will be many. And it winds up with the salutation of "Peace!" Irom God, Whose supreme glory is Mercy, Peace, and Harmony. In the second passage these points are again emphasised but from other points of view. Not only will there be individual satisfaction and social bliss, but it will be shared by families or friends whom we held dear in this life, provided their life made them worthy of that association. While the memory of love and all good in this life will endure, it will be purged of all old fears and anxieties in the supreme realisation—the crown and climax of the whole—that God is the One Reality—the Good, the Beneficent and the Merciful. The souls in Heaven will realise in the highest spiritual sense the Presence of God.

INTRODUCTION TO SERA LV (Rahmān).

The majority of Commentators consider this an early Meccan Sûra, though some consider at least a part of it as dating from Medina. The greater part of it is undoubtedly early Meccan.

It is highly poetical and mystical, and the refrain "Then which of the favours of your Lord will ye deny?" is interspersed 31 times among its 78 verses.

It is the sixth of the series of seven dealing with Revelation, the favours of God, and the Herealter: see Introduction to S. l.

Here the special theme is indicated by the refrain. The rhyme in most cases is in the Dual grammatical form, and the Argument implies that though things are created in pairs, there is an underlying Unity, through the Creator, in the favours which He bestows, and in the goal to which they are marching.

Summary. - God Most Gracious has sent Revelation, one of His greatest favours to man; His creation is in pairs, well-balanced; all created things receive His favours, but they will all pass away, and only God will endure through the ages (lv. 1-34, and C. 232).

Ultimately all evil shall return to its destination, as well as all Good, but ever blessed is the name of God, Lord of Glory, Honour and Bounty (Iv. 35-78, and C. 233).

C. 232.—God's creatures! Which favours of God will ye deny?

(iv 1-34) Most Gracious is God, Who reveals Himself
In the Qur-fin, in man's Intelligence,
And in the nature around man.
Balance and Justice, Goodness and Care,
Are the Laws of His Worlds. Created
From clay, man can yet comprehend
The Lord of the Easts and the Wests, Him
Who sustains all His creatures, Him
Who bestows the Jewels of Life and Faith,
Him Whos bites when all else perisheth;
Him Whose Eternity is the Hope
Of man's Future, the Lord Everlasting
Of Justice and Glory and Bounty and Honour!
Whit's, them. if the favours of your Lord will redeny?

Sitra L.V

- Rahman, or (God) Most Gracious,

In the name of God, Most Gracious,

Most Merciful.

- 1. (God) Most Gracious!
- 2. It is He Who has are Taught the Our-an.
- 3. In e has created man:
- He has taught him speech 6173 (And Intelligence).
- The sun and the moon Follow courses (exactly) computed; 6176
- 6. And the herbs 5178 and the trees— Both (alike) bow in adoration. 5176
- And the Firmament has He Raised high, and He has set up The Balance (of Justice),<sup>817</sup>

3172. The Revelation comes from God Most Gracious, and it is one of the greatest Signs of His grace and favour. He is the source of all Light, and His light is diffused throughout the universe.

5173. Bayan: intelligent speech; power of expression: capacity to understand clearly the relations of things and to explain them. God has given this to man, and besides this revelation in man's own heart, has aided him with revelation in nature and revelation through prophets and apostles.

5174. In the great astronomical universe there are exact mathematical laws, which bear witness to God's Wisdom and also to His favours to His creatures; for we all profit by the heat and light, the seasons, and the numerous changes in the tides and the atmosphere, on which the constitution of our globe and the maintenance of life depend.

5175, Najm: may mean stars collectively, or herbs collectively; perhaps both meanings are implied.

5176. All nature adores God. C/, xxii, 18, and n. 2790; xiii, 15; and xvi, 48-49.

5177. The "balance of justice" in this verse is connected with "the Balance" in the next two verses, that men may act justly to each other and observe due balance in all their actions, following the golden mean and not transgressing due bounds in anything. But the Balance is also connected figuratively with the heavens above in three symbols: (1) Justice is a heavenly virtue; (2) the heavens themselves are sustained by mathematical balance; and (3) the constellation Libra (the Balance) is entered by the sun at the middle of the zodical year.

(٥٥) سورة الرحمن 1479

IS. Lv. 8-13.

8. In order that je may Not transgress (due) balance.

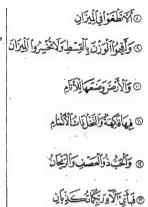

So establish weight with justice and fall not short.
 In the balance:

10. It is He Who has Spread out the earth size For (His) creatures:

 Therein is fruit And date-palms, producing Spathes (enclosing dates):

12. Also corn, with (its)
Leaves and stalk for fodder,
And sweet-smelling plants.

13. Then which of the favours 5160 Of your Lord will ve deny?

$178. To be taken both literally and figuratively. A man should be honest and straight in every daily matter, such as weighing out things which he is selling: and he should be straight, just and honest, in all the highest dealings, not only with other people, but with himself and in his obedience to God's Law. Not many do either the one or the other when they have an opportunity of deceit, justice is the central virtue, and the avoidance of hoth excess and defect in conduct keeps the human world balanced just as the heaven't world is kept balanced by mathematical order.

$179. How can God's favours be counted? Look at the earth alone. Life and the conditions here are mutually balanced for God's creatures. The vegetable world produces fruit of various kinds and corn or grain of various kinds for human food. The grain barvest yields with it fodder for animals in the shape of leaves and straw, as well as food for men in the shape of grain. The plants not only supply food but sweet smelling herbs and flowers. Raijās is the sweet basili but is here used in the generic sense, for agreeable produce in the vegetable world, to match the useful produce already mentioned.

$180. Both the prononun" your" and the verb" will ye deny" are in the Arabic in the Dual Number. The whole SUra is a symphony of Duality, which leads up to Unity, as explained in the Introduction. All creation is in pairs: in, 49, and notes 502-26; xxxvi. 36, a, 3981. Justre is the conclination of two opposites to unity; the settlement of the unending feuch between Right and Wrong. The things and concepts mentioned in this Sura are in pairs: man and outer nature; sun and moon; herbs and trees; heaven and earth; fruit and corn; human food and fodder for cattle; things nourishing and things sweet-smelling; and so on throughout the Sura. Then there is man and Jinn, for which see n. 5182 below.

"Will vs dany?" that is, fail to acknowledge either in word or thought or in your conduct. If you misuse God's gifts or ignore them, that is equivalent to ingratitude or denial or relusal to profit by God's Infinite Grace.

- In e created man From sounding clay 5181 Like unto pottery,
- 15. And He created Jinns has From fire-free of smoke:
- 16. Then which of the favours Of your Lord will ye deny? sign
- 17. (Twice is) Lord
  Of the two Easts 6191
  And Lord
  Of the two Wests:
- 18. Then which of the favours Of your Lord will ye deny?
- 19. The e has let free 81-8
  The two bodies
  Of Howing water,
  Meeting together:
- 20. Between them is a Barrier Which they do not transgress:

تَخَفَّوْاَلُمْآكَ مِنْ كَالِحِ مِنْ كَالِهِ

 مُنِّ أَيْنَا الْآوَرَيُكُا مُكَلِّدُ بَانِ

 مَنِ الْمَشْرِقَ بَنِ وَرَبُّ الْمَشْرِيَةِ بِنِ

 مَنِ الْمَشْرِقَ بَنِ وَرَبُ الْمُشْرِقِيَنِ

فِياً قَوْاللاو تَرْجُمُا مُحْكِيْبانِ
 مَرَجَ الْمُعَيَّنِ يُلْفِينانِ

٥ يَيْنَهُ كَالرِّنَةُ لَا يَيْفِيانِ

$181, See n. 1966 to xv. 26. The creation of men and Jinns is contrasted. Man was made of sounding clay, dry and brittle like pottery. The Jinn (see next note) was made from a clear flame of fire. Yet each has capacities and possibilities which only God's Grace bestows on them. How can they deny God's favours?

3182. For the meaning of Jinn, see n. 929 to vi. 100. They are suints, and therefore subtle like a flame of fire. Their being fire from smoke implies that they are free from grossness, for smoke is the grossner accompaniment of fire. If we take them to typify-the indden forces and capacities in man, created by God, both their potency and their value would be acknowledged. Then how can we deny the favours of God? Both the natural man with all his grossness and brittleness and the splittual forces with all their fineness and clearness must join in the service of God.

5183. Part of the idea of this refrain will be found in xvi. 71, 72; xl. 81; and fiii. 55 (where see n. 5122).

5184 The Itus Easts are the two extreme points where the sun rises during the year, and includes all the points between. Similarly the two Wests include the two extreme points of the sun's setting and all the points between. The Dual Number fits in with the general atmosphere of Duality in this Stra. God is Lord of every region of the earth and sky, and He scatters His bounties everywhere. See also in 4641 to Xilli 38, and in 4034 to xxxvii. 5.

5185. See xxv. 53, and n. 3111, where it is explained how the two bodies of water, salt and sweet, meet together, yet keep separate, as if there was a barrier or partition between them. This is also one of the favours of God. Sea-water is a sanitating agent, while fresh water is sweet and palatable to drink. For the allegorical interpretation, see notes 2404-5 to xviii. 60; also n. 5186 (end) below.

26. All that is on earth Will perish:

27. But will abide (for ever)
The Face of thy Lord,—5180

S186. Pearls are produced by the oyster and coral by the polyo, a minute marine creature which, working in millions, has by its secretions produced the reefs, islands, and banks in and on both sides of the Red Sea and in other parts of the world. The pearl has a translucent lustre usually white, but sometimes pink or black. Coral is usually opaque, red or pink, but often white, and is seen in beautiful branching or cup-like shapes, as systors to Port Sudan will recall Both are used as gens, and stand here for gems generally. Alineral gems, such as agate and cornelian, are found in river-beds. Pearl oystes are also found in some rivers.

Taken allegorically, the two kinds of gems would denote the jewels of this life and the jewels of the spiritual world. The jewels of this 'world-like coral-are hard, widely spread over the world, comparatively cheep and less absorptive of the light from above. The spiritual jewels-like pearls—are soft, care, costly, and translucent, absorbeat of light and showing the more lustre the more they are in light. The analogy can be carried further to the two seas—the two bodies of flowing water—mentioned in verse! 19.20 above. They are the two kinds of knowledge—human and divine—referred to in the story of Moses and Khight: see notes 2404 5 to xviii 60.

5187 The Ships-sailing ships and ateam-rs. and by extension of analogy, aeroplanes and airships majestically navigating the air-are made by man, but the intelligence and science which made them possible are given by man's Creator; and therefore the Ships also are the gifts of God.

S189. The most magnificent works of man—such as they are—are but fleeting. Ships, Empires, the Wonders of Science and Art, the solendours of human glory or intellect, will all pass away. The most magnificent objects in outer. Nature—the mountains and valleys, the sun and moon, the Constellation Orion and the star Stirius—will also pass away in their appointed time. But the only one that will endure for ever is the "Face" of God. "Face" expresses Personality, Glory, and Majesty, inner being, essence, self, all the noble qualities which we associate with the Beautiful Names of God. See a. 114 to il. 112 s jalson 1154 to vil. 180, and a. 2322 to xvii, 110, $190. Ihrām: two ideas are prominent in the word, (1) the idea of generosity, as proceeding from the person whose attribute it is, and (2) the idea of honour, as given by others to the person whose attribute its. Both these ideas are summed up in "nobitive." To make the meaning quite clear, I have employed in the translation the two words "Bounty and Honour" for the single word Ihrām. The same attributes recur in the last verse of this Sūra. In the Fact of God's Eternity is the Hope of our Future.

• 5191. Every single creature depends on God for its needs: of all of them the Cherisher and Sustainer is God. Seek (its needs): does not necessarily mean's seek them in words; what is meant is the dependence: the allusion is to the Source of Supply.

They are both before God, and the affairs of both are conducted under His Command. If there are inequalities or appearent disturbances of balance, that is only for a season. God gives to both good and evil men a chance in this period of probation; but this period will soon be over, and judgment will be established. Judgment will soon come. You cannot possibly escape out of the zones in which your lives have been cast, without authority from God. Be grateful to God for the chances He has given you'. 5195. Note how gradually we have been led up in the Argument. 'The Signs of God are all about you, in revelation, in your intelligence, and in nature around you. Your creation; the mystic light and heat typined by the sun in all directions; the cycle of waters in the physical earth and of Knowledge in the world of Intelligence; the help and cherishing care of God Himself;—all these Jhings should teach you the Truth and warn you about the Future, which is more particularly referred to in the remainder of the SOsta.

5208. The toil and fatigue of this life will be over: Cf. xxxv. 35.

$209. The symbolic meaning of female Companionship, in terms of grace, purity, innocence and beauty, is explained in para, 12 of Appendix XII. See also notes 4728 29 to xliv, 54.

5210. Cf. xxxvii. 48 and n 4064. Their purity is the feature hereby chiefly symbolised.

5211. Delicate pink, with reference to their complexions and their beauty of form. The gems also indicate their worth and dignity.

5212. This is the summing up of all the symbolism used to express the Fruit of Goodness or Good. The symbolism must necessarily resort to comparative terms, to subjective ideas of Bliss. But the fullest expression can only be given in abstract terms: "Is there any reward for Good-other than Good?" Can anything express it better?

5213. See n, 5205 above.

5214. "Darh green in colour": these Gardens will also be Truitful and flourishing, and watered plentfully; but their aspect and characteristics will be different, corresponding to the subjective differences in the ideas of Bits among those who would respectively enjoy the two sets of Gardens.

$215. In comparison with the Springs in the other two Gardens, described in Iv. 90 above, these Springs would seem to irrigate crops of vegetables and fruits requiring a constant supply of abundant water.

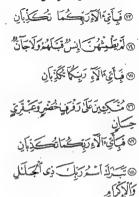

5216. See last note. Cf. also with Iv. 52 above, where "fruits of every kind" are mentioned.

5117. See n 5209 above. Goodness and Beauty are specially feminine attributes.

5213 Maqquad here is the passive participle of the same verb as the active participle Quartet in by 50, xxvvv. 43 and xxxvvv 52. As I have translated Qdquad by the phrase "restraining (their glances)". I think I am right in translating the passive Maqquad by "restrained (as to their glances)". This is the only place in the Quad where the passive form occurs.

5219. The Pavilions seem to add dignity to their status. In the other Gardens (Iv. 58), the description "like rubies and corals" is perhaps an indication of higher dignity.

- 73. Then which of the favours
  Of your Lord will ve deny?-
- 74. Whom no man or Jinn

  - 5. Then which of the favours Of your Lord will ye deny?-
- 76. Reclining on green Cushions **** And rich Carpets of beauty.
- 77. Then which of the favours Of your Lord will ye deny?
- 78. Blessed be the name Of thy Lord, Full of Majesty, Bounty and Honour.

<sup>5220.</sup> Cf. the parallel words for the other two Gardens, in Iv. 54 above, which suggest perhaps a higher dignity.

Rafraf is usually translated by Cushions or Pillows, and I have followed this meaning in view of the word "teclining". But another interpretation is "Meadows", in view of the adjective "green"—'abpars': carpets richly figured and dyed, and skillfully worked.

<sup>5221.</sup> Cf. Iv. 27 and n. 5190. This minor echo completes the symmetry of the two leading ideas of this Stra,—the Bounty and Majesty of God, and the Duty of man to make himself worthy of nearness to God.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LVI (Wāqi'a).

This is the seventh and last Sûra of the series devoted to Revelation and the Hereafter, as explained in the Introduction to S. I.

It belongs to the early Meccan period, with the possible exception of one or two verses.

The theme is the certainty of the Day of Judgment and its adjustment of true Values (Ivi. 1-56); God's Power, Goodness and Glory (Ivi. 37-74); and the truth of Revelation (Ivi. 75-96).

Summary.—When the Day of Judgment comes, the world as we know it will be shaken to its foundations, and men shall be sorted out into three sorts: Those nearest to God, in exalted Bliss; the Companions of the Right Hand, in Bliss; and the Companions of the Left itand, in Misery thy; 1.56, and C. 234).

Surely the Power and Goodness of Gcd, of which Revelation is a Sign, should sead man to accept the Message and glorify Him (Ivi. 57-96, and C. 235).

C. 234.-The Event Inevitable is the Day (Ivi. 1-56.) Of Judgment: the world as we know it Will be shaken to its depths, and its place Will be taken by a world made new, Where Good will be sorted out from Evil. In Dignity and Bliss will the Good find Fulfilment : Both those Nearest to the Throne of God. And those who earned, by faith and good life, The title, Companions of the Right Hand, Who can tell of the Misery in which The Companions of the Left Hand will live? They will be as it were in a fierce blast Of Fire; their drink but boiling water; Their shade that of Black Smoke that chokes Their lungs :--ever burning with hunger and thirst. And never satisfied: fit emblems Of the Life in Death to which Evil leads.

Stra LVI.

Waqi'a, or The Inevitable Event.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- When the Event Inevitable was Cometh to pass.
- 2. Then will no (soul) Entertain falschood Concerning its coming.
- (Many) will it bring low; 529 (Many) will it exalt;
- When the earth shall be Shaken to its depths,
- 5. And the mountains shall Be crumbled to atoms, 522
- 6. Becoming dust scattered abroad,
- And ye shall be sorted out Into three classes. 5715
- 8. Then (there will be)

  The Right Hand;
  What will be
  The Companions of
  The Right Hand?

5222. The Event Inevitable is the Hour of Judgment. People may doubt now whether it will come. But when it comes, as it will come, suddenly upon them, it will come with such tremendous reality that it will be burnt deep into the experience of every soul. No one can then be decreived or entertain false notions about it.

$223. There will be a sorting out of Good and Evil. Or rather, (verse 7 below), there will be three main classes. Among the Good there will be the specially exalted class, those nearest to God (magai rabba), by 11.26°, and the righteons people generally, called the Companions of the Right Hand (4 tabb b) "manama", by 27-40°. And there will be those in agony, the Companions of the Left Hand (4 tabb b) "manama" by 34-456°. Many who were ingli and mighty in this life will be brought low for their Sint, and many who were lowly but virtuous will be exalted to various ranks and degrees. The old landmarks will be 10st in the inner world, as they will be in the outer world.

5274. The old physical world will disappear in the New Creation,

$225. See. n. 5223 above,

9. And the Companions of The Left Hand,— 'What will be The Companions of The Left Hand?

 And those Foremost (In Faith) will be Foremost (in the Hereafter).

 If hese will be Those Nearest to God; sam

12. In Gardens of Bliss:

13. A number of people From those of old, "**

 And a few from those Of later times.

(They will be) on Thrones (Marchael Street)
 Encrusted (with gold And precious stones)

Reclining on them;
 Facing each other, 8000

رَأْ رَا اللّهُ اللهُ ا

5216. "Foremest (in Faith)": there are two meanings, and both are implied. (I) Those who have reached the highest degree in spiritual understanding, such as the great prophets and teachers of mankind, will also take precedence in the Hereafter, (2) Those who are the first in time—the quickest and readiest—to accept God's Message—will have the first olice in the Kingdom of Hraven. Verses 8, 9 and 10 m-ation the three main categories or classifications after Judgment. In the subsequent verses their happiness or misery are symbolised. This category, Foremost in Pailin, is nearest to God.

5227. See n. 5223 above. Nearness to God is the test of the highest Bliss. The symbols that follow are more remniscences from our physical life.

5228 Of great Prophets and Teachers there were many before the time of the holv Prophet Muhammad. As he was the last of the Prophets, he and the great Teachers under his Dispensation will be comparatively fewer in number, but their teaching is the sum and flower of all mankind's spiritual experience.

5229. The costly Thrones will typify the high degree of their spiritual eminence.

5230. But they will not be separate each in his own corner. They will face each other. For they are all one, and their mutual society will be part of their Biss.

5231. Cf. lii 24, and n 5038. The youth and freshness with which the attendants will serve is expected and true service such as we may expect in the spiritual world. That freshness will be perpetual and not subject to any moods, or chances, or changes.

3212 The Foats of Keason and the Flow of Soul are typfind by all that is best in the feats in this imperfect world, but there will be none of the disadvantages incident to such feats in this world, such as satiety, aches, excess, a sense of exhaustion, or loss of senses, etc. (7, xxxvii, 47, and n, 403). A goblet is a bowl without handles; a beaker has a "lip" and a stem; 'cup" is a general term.

5233, Cf. xliv. 54, and n. 4239. The companionship of Beauty and Grace is one of the highest pleasures of life. In this bottly life it takes bodily form. In the higher life it takes a higher form suitable to the spiritual world, 5234. Cf. lii. 24, where this description is applied to the youths who serve. See also n. 5058 there. In lvi, 78 below the adjective maknin is applied to the Qur-an, "the well guarded Book".

'5235, Cf. lii. 23. Apart from physical ills worldly feasts of delights are apt to suffer from vain or frivolous discourse, idle boasting, foolish flattery, or phrases pointed with secret venom or moral mischiel. The negation of these from spiritual Bliss follows as a matter of course, but it is specially insisted on to guard against the perversities of human nature, which likes to read ill into the best that can be out in words.

® وَفُرْيُونِ مِنْ فُوعَادِ

5236 QII is best translated "saying", rather than "word". For the saying is an act, a thought, a fact, which may be embodied in a word, but which goes far beyond the word. The "Peace of God" is an atmosphere which swins up Heaven even better than "Bitss".

5237. Lots tress: see xxxiv 16 n. 3814. The thornless lote-tree is a symbol of bliss and of high heaven: liii 14.

5238 Talla: some understand by this the plantain or banana trée, of which the fruit is borne in bunches, one tier above another; but the banana tree does not grow in Arabia and its ordinary Arabic name is Mauc; perhaps it is better to understand a special kind of Acacia tree, which flowers profusely, the dowers appearing in tiers oneabove another.

5239 As it is not like earthly fruit, its season is not limited, nor is there any prohibition by law or custom or circumstance as to when or how it is to be consumed. The spiritual Pruit is free, unlimited, and inexhaustible.

3240. The pronoun in Arabic is in the feminine gender, but lest grosser ideas of sex should intrude, it is made clear that these Companions for heavenly society will be of special creation—of virginal purity, grace, and beauty, inspiring and inspired by love, with the question of time and age eliminated. Thus every person among the Righteous will have the Biss of Heaven and the Peace (of God.

- 5242. Notice the parallelism in the contrast between those in Bliss and those in Misery. The allegory in each case pursues the idea of contrast, and the allegories about Misery lose nothing by their terse brevity. The fierce Blast of Fire and the Boiling Water are in contrast to the happy Lote-tree and the flowers and fruits in verses 28-29 above.

5745. Their want of belief and ridicule of God's Message contrasts with the stern reality which they see around them now.

3246. In xxvi. 38 (see n. 3159) the phrase "s day well-known" is used for a solemn day of festival, when the multitude of people gather together. The Day of Judgment is such a day in the supreme sense of the word.

5248. A terrible picture of Misery in contrast to the Companionship of the Good, the True, and the Beautiful, on Thrones of Dignity, for the Companions of the Right Hand, in verses 34-38 above.

5249. Man is apt to forget his Creator, and even the fact that he, man, is a created being. The seed of his body, out of which his physical life starts, is not created by man, but by God in the process of the unfoldment of the world. Why will not man recognise and bear witness to this fact by a life of obedience to God's Law?

$250. Literally, to be in the midst of you. Just as God has created this life that we see, so He has decreed that Death should be the common lot of all of us. Surely, if He can thus give life and death, as we seet, it why should we refuse to believe that He can give us other Forms (in the Platonic sonse) when this life is over? The Future Life, though indicated by what we know now, is to be on a wholly different plane.

525). Having appealed to our own nature within us, He appeals now to the external nature around us, which should be evidence to us (1) of His loving care for us, and (2) of its being due to accuses other than those which we produce and control. Three examples are given: (1) the seed which we sow in the soil; it is God's processes in nature, which make it grow; (2) the water which we drink; it is God's processes in nature, that send it down from the clouds as rain, and distribute it through aprings and rivers; (3) the fire which we strike; it is again a proof of God's Plan and Wissom in nature.

$253. The mystery of the two streams of water, one sweet and the other sair, constantly mingling, and yet always separate, is referred to more than once. The never-ending circuit is established by streams and rivers mingling with the ocean, the ocean sending forth mists and steam through a process of evaporation which forms clouds, and the clouds by condensation pouring forth rain to feed the streams and rivers again: see notes 3111-2 to xzv, 53, and n, 5185 to iv. 19, and the further references given there.

5254. The relation of Fire to Trees is intimate. In nearly all the fire that we burn, the fuel is derived from the wood of trees. Even mineral coal is nothing but the wood of prehistoric forests petrified under the earth through geological ages. Fire produced out of green trees is referred to in xxxvi. 80; and n. 4026 there gives instances.

$255. Fire is a fit memorial of God's handiwork in nature. It is also an emplem of man's sadiest civilisation. It can stand as a symbol of physical comfort and convenience to man, of the source of spiritual light, and also of the warning to Evil about its destruction. In the same way the sower's seed has a symbolical meaning in the preaching of the Message: see xivii. 29, and n. 4917: and the Rain and the Streams of Water have a symbolical meaning: see notex 400-5 to xviii. 6

5256. Cf. xx. 10, and n. 2541, where the mystic meaning of the Fire which Moses saw in the Gesett is explained. Even ordinarily, a fire in a desert is a sign of human habitation; by following it you may get human society and human comfort. A fire, or light, or beacon in many places directs a traveller on the way. Lighthouses at sea and beacons in modern aerodromes serve the same purpose for manners and airmen.

Another parable about fire will be found in il. 17-18, and n. 38.

5257. Seeing all these Signs in nature and their symbolical meaning in the spiritual world, man must turn to God and do His Will.

5238. The setting of the Stars: a number of mystic meanings are attached. Here are three. (1) Cl. xlini, land, n. 5085: the setting of a glorious star is a symbol of humility before the nower, beauty, and goodness of God (2) It may refer to the extinction of the stars at the Day of Judgment, betokening the establishment of God's Justice and the Truth of His Revelat on (3) What is bright or beautiful to our senses may disappear from our ken within a few hours, even though its own existence may continue. All light is relative excépt the Light of God.

319. The glory of the firmament as it exists, and the wonder of its passing away, are both, evidence, to the discreting mind, of the Púture which God has prepared, but this evidence can only be effective if men 'but knew 'i, is furned their earnest gettention to it.

$250. Your attention is drawn to the momentous issues of the Future by the Quran. It is a Revelation described by four characteristics. (1) It is most honourable, herim, which implies besides the fact that it is worthy of receiving honour, that it confers great favours on those who receive it. (2) It is well-guarded, makhin; precious in itself, and well-preserved in its purity; see n. $234 to 10: 23: see also xv. 9, and n. 1944. (3) None but the clean shall touch it,—clean in body, mund, thought, intention, apd soul; only such can achieve real contact with its full meaning. (4) It is a Revelation from the Lord of the Worlds, and therefore universal for all.

5261. The Message being such as is described in the last note, how can any one ignore it or freat it with contempt or refuse to allow it to improve his life?

$262. The worst indictment of an enemy of Revelation would be that he should make Falsehood a source of filthy lucre for himself, or that he should let his precious life be corrupted by such unholy occupation.

5263. There is a hiatus after "soby the ye not?"—and two parenthetical clauses,—after which the clause "soby do ye not?" is resumed again in verse 66 below, with its complement in verse 67. It is permissible to the translator to add some such word as "interowe" here, to make the translation run smoothly.

5264. The dying man's friends, relatives, and companions may be sitting round him and quite cloth in his last, moments, but God is nearer still at all times, for He is nearer than the man's own jugular vein (I. 16), and one of God's own titles is "Ever Near" (xxxiv. 30).

5265. These words resume the sentence begun at verse 83 above and interrupted by the two parenthetical clauses in verses 84 and 85. See n. 5263 above.

3266. The sentence may now be briefly paraphrased, 'If you diabelieve in Revelation and a future judgment, and claim to do what you like and be independent of God, how is it you cannot call back a dying man's soul to his body when all of you congregate round him at his death-bed? But you are not independent of judgment. There is a Day of Account, when you will have to be judged by your deeds in this life.'

<sup>$270.</sup> In Ivi. 26 above the salutation of "Peace, Peace!" is addressed to those Nearest to God. Here we learn that it is also addressed to the Companions of the Right Hand. Both are in Gardens of Bliss: only the former have a higher Dignity than the latter.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LVII (Hadid).

We have now studied the contents of nearly nine-tenths of the Qur-an. We have found that the arrangement of the Sûras in the present Text is not haphagard, but that they follow a distinct logical order more helpful for study than the chronological order. The comprehensive scheme of building up the new Ununat or Brotherhood and its spiritual implications is now complete. The remaining tenth of the Qur-an may be roughly considered in two parts. The first contains ten Sûras (S. lvii. to S. lxvi.), all revealed in Medina, and each dealing with some special point which needs emphasis in the social life of the Ummat. The second (S. lxvii. to exiv.) contains short Meccan lyrics, each dealing with some aspect of spiritual life, expressed in language of great mystic beauty.

The present Medina Sûra is chiefly concerned with spiritual humility and the avoidance of arrogance, and a warning that retirement from the world may not be the best way of seeking the good pleasure of God. Its probable date is after the Conquest of Mecca, A.H. 8.

Summary.—God's. Power and Knowledge extend to all things follow His Light direct, without doubt or fear or half-heartedness, but with humility, generous charity, and faith, and not in a life of isolation from the world. (Ivii 1-29, and C. 236.)

C. 236.—God is all-in-all: follow His Law

And His Light, and obey His Apostle, who invites
You to deeds of goodness and charity.

Strive and spend your resources and 'yourselves
In the Cause of God: He will grant you a Light
To go before you and guide you to your Eternal
Goal, where no Evil can enter. When success
Crowns your efforts, even then is the time
To humble yourselves before God, in sincere
Witness to His Love. The pleasures here below
Are deceptive: be foremost in seeking God
And His Good Pleasure: trust Him: be not Like those who mistook mere renunciation
Of the world for God's service. God's Grace
Is for all: be your love and your service for all.

5274. Iron is the type and emblem of strength and reliability, on which depend the real virtues expounded in this Sura, such as real humility, whole-heartedness, and charity, as exposed to Monasticism, Loadiceanism, and Niggardiness. See Ivil 32 below.

5273. A connecting thought between this and the last Stira, of which see verse 96. See also paragraph 3 of the Introduction to S. liii.

$276 Bajta: that which is within, as opposed to that which is evident in things outside God has both these qualities. His Signs are everywhere evident in the whole universe. But He is also immanent within us and in the soul of all good things. The pair of seemingly opposite qualities, First and Last, Evident and Immanent, Power and Wisdom. Giving of Life and Death, etc., are referred to here, to point the contrast with our human frailty, in which monasticism may not be the same as humbly, spending may not be the same as charity, and so on.

5277. "In six Days": see xli. 9-12, and notes; also more briefly, n. 1031 to vii. 54.

5178. Cf. x. 3, and n. 1386. It is not that God completed His Creation in six days and rested on the seventh day, or rests now. Certain external forms of the universe were by God's Command completed in six periods of evolution. But His creative process still goes on, and He is still, and will always be, on His Throne of authority, knowing all and guiding all affairs.

(٧٥) سورة الحديد

And what comes forth out Of it, what comes down From heaven and what mounts Up to it. And He is With you wheresoever ye was May be. And God sees Well all that ye do.

وَلَهُ مِنْ اللّهُ النّهُ النّهُ وَالْمَا اللّهِ

هَ يُومُ اللّهُ النّهُ النّهُ اللّهُ
5279. He is everywhere. No Space or Time is without Him : yet He is independent of Space or Time. With reference to our own psychology, He is wherever we are, and He sees all that we do.

$230. See Ivii. 2 above, where this phrase referred to God's complete authority over the whole of the external universe: the same phrase now refers to His complete authority over the abstract world—of thoughts and affairs. Every affair must finally go back to Him, whether it comes out here from Darkness into Light, or hides itself from Light into Darkness. God's knowledge penetrates into the immost recesses of all Hearts.

5281. Whenever power or wealth or influence or any good thing is transferred from one person or group of persons to another, it involves added responsibilities to the persons receiving these advantages. They must be the more zealous in real charity and all good works, for that is a part of the evidence which they give of their faith and gratitude. And, besides, their good deeds, under the general law in the spiritud world, carry their own reward.

3232. "What casse have ye only ye skeald not...?" A figure of speech implying a far wider meaning than the words express. It is equivalent to saying: "There is every reason why ye should believe in God", etc. The same construction applies to yethe 10 below. -

In your Lord, and has Indeed taken your Covenant, see If we are men of faith.

- 9. He is the One Who Sends to His Servant STRIA
  Manifest Signs, that He May lead you from
  The depths of Darkness
  Into the Light And verily,

  Most kind and Merciful.
- 10. And what cause have ve Why ye should not spend In the cause of God?-For to God belongs 6.15 The heritage of the heavens And the earth. Not equal among you Are those who spent (freely) And fought, before the Victory, 100 (With those who did so later). Those are higher in rank Than those who spent (freely) And fought afterwards. But to all has God promised A goodly (reward), And God Is well acquainted With all that ye do.

$283. There are two shades of meaning. (1) There is the implied Covenant in a man who accept the Gospel of Unit' what he will bring forth all the fruits of that Gospel, if a believe in God, and serve God and humanity. See n. 682 to 0.1. (2) There were at various times express Covenants entered into by the Muslims to serve God and be true to the Prophet, comparable to the Covenants of the Jewish nation about the Message of Moses; e.g. the two Covenants of Aqaba (v. 8, and n. 703), and the Pledge of Budaibtys (xiviii 10, n. 4877). For the Covenant with Israel at Mount Sinal, see ii, 63, n. 78.

5284. The holy Prophet Muhammad. The Signs sent to him were: (1) the Ayats of the Qur an, and (2) his life and work, in which God's Plan and Purpose were unfolded.

5285, "To God belongs the heritage of..."; see n. 485 to lii, 180; also n. 988 to vi. 165; and n 1964 to xv. 23.

3286. This is usually understood to refer to the Conquest of Mecca, after which the Muslims succeeded to the power and position which the Pagan Quraish had so misused at Mecca. These after the Muslims had the hagemon of Arabis, and in a few centuries, for a time, the begemony of the world. But the words are perfectly general, and we must understand the general meaning also: that the people who fight and struggle in God's Cause and give of their best to it at any time are worthy of praise: but those are worthy of special distinction who do it when the Cause is being persecuted and in most need of assistance, before victory comes.

5287 Cf. ii. 245, n. 276,

5288. In the Darkness of the Day of Judgment there will be a Light to guide the righteous to their Destination. This will be the Light of their Faith and their Good Works. Perhaps the Light of the Right Hand mentioned here is the Light of their Good Works: for the Blessed will receive their Record in their right hand (Izix. 19-24).

5289. The highest Achievement, the highest felicity, the attainment of Saivation, the fulfilment of all desires. See n 4733 to xliv. 57.

3500. Watchful preparation in Life, and the light of Faith, which reflects the divine Light, are matters of personal Life, and cannot be borrowed from another. So, in Christ's parable of the Ten Virgins (Matt. xxv. 1-13), when the foolish ones had let their lamps go out for want of oil, they asked to borrow oil from the wise ones, but the wise ones answered and said, "Not so; ...but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves"

5291. The wall of Personality, or Record of Deeds, will divide the Good from the Evil. But the Gateway in it will show that communication will not be cut off. Evil must realise that Good—i.e. Mercy and Pelicity—had been within its reach, and that the Wrath which envelops it is due to its own rejection of Mercy.

With a gate therein. Within it will be Mercy Throughout, and without it, All alongside; will be (Wrath and) Punishment!

- 14. (Those without) will call out,

5392. The evil will now claim some right of kinship or association or proximity with the good in earthly, life; but in fact they had been arrogant and had selfishly despixed them before. The reply will be: (I) you yourselves chose temptation and evil; (2) when you had power in your earthly life, you hoped for ruin to the good, and perhaps plotted for it; (3) you were warned by men of God, but you doubted God's very existence, and certainly His Mercy and Justice, and the Hereafter; (4) you followed your own Justs and neglected Reason and Truth; (3) you were given plenty of rope, but you followed your mad career, until Judgment came upon you, and now it is oo late for repentance.

$293. The Arch-Deceiver (Satan) deceived you in respect of God in many ways: for example, he made you oblivious of God's Mercy and loving-kindness; he made you reject His Grace; he made you think that God's Justice may not overtake you; etc.

$294. In personal responsibility there is no room for vicarious ransom or for ransom by payments of gold or silver or by sacrifice of possessions. Nor can the crime be expiated for after Judgment You' and 'those who rejected God' are two ways of looking at the same persons. You are rejected because you rejected God',

5295. Humility and the remembrance of God and His Message are never more necessary than in the hour of victory and prosperity. Of God and of the Truth

5296. The men immediately referred to are the contemporary Jews and Christians. To each of these Ummats was given God's Revelation, but as time passed, they corrupted it, become arrogard and hard-hearted, and subverted justice, truth, and the purity of Life. But the general lesson is far wider. No one is favoured of God except on the score of righteousness. Except on that score, there is no blond good fortune or ill fortune. All happens according to the just laws and will of God. But at no time is humility or righteousness more necessary than in the hour of victory or triumph.

5297. As the dead earth is revived after the refreshing showers of rain, so is it with the spirit of man, whether as an individual or a race or Ummat. There is no cause for despair. God's Truth will-revive the spiritual faculties if it is accepted with humility and zeal.

3298. Cf. Ivii. 11; also see ii. 245, n. 276.

5399. Cf. iv. 69, and n. 386. The four categories there mentioned as constituting the beautiful Fellowship of Faith are: the Prophets who teach, the Sincere Lovers of Truth, the Witnesses who testify, and the Righteous who do good. Of these, the prophets or aposites have already been mentioned in this verse. The Righteous who do good are mentioned as the men and women given over to deeds of charity in verse 18.

The Witnesses (who testify), ***
In the eyes of their Lord:
They shall have their Reward
And their Light. **
But those who reject God
And deny Our Signs,—
They are the Companions
Of Hell-Fire.

SECTION 3.

20. Ex now ye (all), that The life of this world Is but play and amusement Pomp and mutual boasting And multiplying, (in rivalry) Among yourselves, riches And children. Here is a similitude: 5303 How rain and the growth Which it brings forth, delight (The hearts of) the tillers; Soon it withers: thou Wilt see it grow yellow; Then it becomes dry And crumbles away. But in the Hereafter Is a Penalty severe (For the devotees of wrong) And Forgiveness from God And (His) Good Pleasure

عِندَدَيِّهِ مُفَكَّمُ أَجْرُهُ وَهُوُكُمُ كَالَّذِينَ كَمُنْزُوا وَكَذَبُواُ عِلَيْنِكَا أَوْلَئِكَ أَصْحَبُ الْجَيِّدِ

5300. The Witnesses are not only Martyrs, but all those who carry the Banner of Truth against all odds and in all positions of danger, whether by pen or speech, or deed or counsel.

3301. Note that these two are specially high degrees in the spiritual kingdom, just short of Application. For they have not only their reward in the spiritual Kingdom of God, like those who practise charity (verse Is above), but they themselves become sources of light and leading.

5302. Cf. vl. 32, and n. 855. In the present passage the idea is further amplified. In this life period into only play and amuse themselves and each other, but they show off, and boast, and pile up riches and man-power and influence, in rivalry with each other.

$103. Cf. xxxix, 21, and n. 4273. Here the Parable is meant to teach a slightly different lesson, God's mercies are free and open to all, like His rain. But how do men make use of them? The good men take the real spiritual harvest and store the spiritual grain. The men who are in love with the ephemeral are delighted with the green of the tares and the grass; but such things give no real nourishment; they soon wither, become dry, and crumble to pieces, like the worldly pleasures and pomps, boastings and tumults, possessions and friends.

5304. Kuffär is here used in the unusual sense of 'tillers or husbandmen', because they sow the send and cover it up with soil. But the ordinary meaning, 'Rejecters of Truth', is not absent. The allegory refers to such men. 1504

$307. "Bestows on whom He pleases." That is, such grace and favour is beyond any one's own mists. It is bestowed by God according to His hoty Will and Plan, which is just, merciful, and righteous.

5308 External disasters or misfortunes may strike people's eye or imagination, but there are worse crises and misfortunes in the spiritual world, which are of equal or greater importance to man's future. All this happens according to the William Plan of God. Even where we are allowed the exercise of our own wills, the consequences that follow are in accordance with the laws and Plan decreed by God beforehand.

5310. In the external world, what people may consider misfortune or good fortune may both turn out to be illusory.—in Kipling's world, "both impostors just the same". The man of God does not grumble if some one cles has possessions, nor exult if he has them. He does not covet and he does not boast. If he has any advantages, he shares them with other people, as he considers them not due to his own merits, but as gifts of God.

5311. Neither the Covetous nor the Boasters have any place in the Good Pleasure of God. The Covetous are particularly insidious, as their avarice and niggardliness not only keep back the gifts of God from men, but their pernicious example dries up the streams of Charity in others.

5312. It is Charity in God's Way that is specially in view here. If people are selfish and withhold their hand, they only injurie themselves. They do not burt God's Cause, for He is independent of all needs, and He will find other means of assisting His more meagrely-endowed servants; He is worthy of all orasis in His care for His creatures.

3313. Three things are mentioned as gifts of God. In concrete terms they are the Book, the Balance, and Iron, which stand as emblems of three things which hold society together, our Revelation, which commands Good and forbids Evil; , satice, which gives to each person his due; and the strong arm of the Law, which maintains sanctions for evil-doers. For Balance, see also xiii. 17, and n. 4550.

$314. "Sent decu": angala: in the sense of revealed to man the use of certain things, created in him the capacity of understanding and using them: cf. xxxix, 6: "sent down for you eight head of cattle in pairs".

5315, Iran; the most useful metal known to man. 'Out of it is made steel, and from steel and from a reade implements of war, such as swords, spears, guns, etc., as well as instruments of peace. such as ploughshares, bricklayers' (rowels, architects' and engineers' instruments, etc. Iron stands as the emblem of Strength, Power, Discipline, Law's sanctions, etc. Iron and steel indus; ie: have also been the foundation of the prosperity and power of modern manufacturing rations like. $316. In xxi 49, I have translated "in their most secret thoughts" for the more literal "unseen" (bit-gaint). Perhaps the more literal "unseen" may do if understood in the adverbial sense as explained in xxxv. 18, n. 3902. The sincere man will help the Cause, whether he is seen or brought under notice or not.

5317. To help God and His apostles is to help their Cause. It is to give men an opportunity of striving and fighting for His Cause and proving their true metile, for thus is their spirit tested. As explained in the next line. God in Himself is Full of Strength. Exalted in Power, and Able to enforce His Will, and He has no need of other assistance.

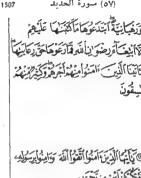

5318. C/. xxii. 40 and n 2818. "Strength" is specific. Power or Might is more abstract, the ability to enforce what is willed.

5319. Some of them: i.e. of their line, or posterity, or Ummat. When the Book that was given to them became corrupted, many of them followed their own fancies and became transgressors.

5320. The chief characteristic of the teaching in the Gospels is humility and other-worldlines. The first blessings in the Sermon on the Mount are on "the poor in spirit," "they that mourn", and they that are "meek" (Matt. v. 3-5). Chris's disciples were enjoined to "take no thought for the morrow", and told: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof" (Matt. vi. 34). They were also commanded "that ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right check, turn to him the other also "(Matt. vi. 39). There are fragmentary presentments of an imperfect philosophy as seen through monastic eyes. In so far as they represent period, support the support of christ.

28. ve that believe! 5045 Fear God, and believe In His Apostle, and He will Bestow on you a double sais Portion of His Mercy: He will provide for you

Rebellious transgressors. 8534

5321 But God's Kingdom requires also courage, resistance to evil, the firmness, law, and discipline which will enforce justice among men. It requires men to mingle with men, so that they can uphold the standard of Truth, against odds if necessary. These were lost sight of in Monasticism, which was not prescribed by God.

5322. God certainly requires that men shall renounce the idle pleasures of this world, and turn to the Path which leads to God's Good Pleasure. But that does not mean gloomy lives, ("they that mourn"), nor perpetual and formal prayers in isolation. God's service is done through our lives in the turmoil of this world. This spirit was lost, or at least not fostered by monastic institutions. On the contrary a great part of the "struggle and striving" for noble lives was suppressed.

5323 Many of them lost true Faith, or had their Faith corrupted by superstitions. But those who continued firm in Faith saw the natural development of Religion in Islam. Their previous belief was not a disadvaptage to them, but belped them, because they kept it free from false and selfish prejudices. These are the ones who are further addressed at the beginning of verse 28 below

$324. The corruptions in the Christian Church, the hair-splitting disputes, and mutual strife and hatred of sects had become a scandal by the time that the light of Islam came into the world. The pages of Gibbon's great History bear witness. Not only had the religion become youd of grace, but the lives of the people, priests and laity, had fallen into great depths of degradation. See remarks in my Appendix V, pages 411-413, and the general picture in Kingsley's "Hypatia".

5325. From the context before (see n. 5323 above) and after (see next note), this is held to refer to the Christians and People of the Book who kept their Faith true and undefiled.

· 5326. The double portion refers to the past and the future. As noted in the last note, this passage is addressed to the Christians and the People of the Book, who, when honestly facing the question of the new Revelation in Islam, find in it the fulfilment of previous revelations, and therefore believe in God's Apostle Muhammad, and walk by the new Light. Their previous merits will be duly recognised, and they will be treated on fully equal terms in the new Ummat. This is their double share, not necessarily more in quantity than that of their brethren in Islam who passed through no other gate, but having a twofold aspect.

5327. As this refers to the Christians and the People of the Book, the following saying of Christ in his last days may interest them: "'Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye, have the light, lest darkness come upon you... While ye have the light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hids himself from them' (John, xii. 35.96). The light of Christ's Gospel soon departed; his Church was enveloped in darkness; then came the light again in the fuller light of Islam. And they are asked to believe in the Light, and to walk in it. Cf. also 19th 12, and n. 2588 above.

5328. Any wrongs they may have committed through ignorance or misconceptions in their previous religion will be forgiven them, as they have seen the new Light and walk by it.

5329. Let not any race, or people, or community, or group, believe that they have exclusive possession of God's Grace; or that they can influence its grant'or its withholding. God's Grace is free, and entirely controlled by Him, independently of any priests and privileged people. He dispenses it according to His own wise and holy Will and Plan; and to His Grace there is no limit,

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LVIII (Muiddila).

This is the second of the ten Medina Sūras referred to in the Introduction to the last Sūra. Its subject-matter is the acceptance of a woman's Plea on behalf of herself and her children (see n. 5330 to lviii. 1 below), and a condemnation of all secret counsels and intrigues in the Muslim Brotherhood.

The date is somewhat close to that of S. xxxiii, say between A.H. 5 and A.H. 7

Summary.—All false pretences, especially those that degrade a woman's position, are condemned,—as well as secret consultations between men and intrigues with falsehood, mischief, and sedition, (Iviii. 1-22, and C. 237).

C. 237.— Let not false pretences or superstitions
(lviii.1-72.) Degrade the position of woman. Eschew
Secret plottings and secret counsels.
Observe order and decorum in public assemblies,
And seek not in selfish pride to engage
Your Leader's private attention. It is wrong
To turn to the enemies of God for friendship:
They make their oaths a cloak for wrong-doing,
And keep back men from the Right. But none
Can resist the Power or the Judgment of God.
The righteous seek only His Good Pleasure,
And rejoice therein as their highest Achievement.

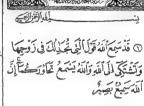

Stra LVIII.

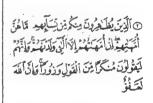

Mujādila, or The Woman who

Pleads.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful,

- 1. Sod has indeed
  Heard (and accepted) the statement
  Of the woman who pleads were
  With thee concerning her husband
  And carries her complaint
  (In prayer) to God:
  And God (always) hears
  The arguments between both sol
  Sides among you: for God
  Hears and sees (all things).
- 2. If any men among you Divorce their wives by Zihar sass (Calling them mothers), They cannot be their mothers: None can be their mothers Except those who gave them Birth. And in fact They use words (both) iniquitous sat And false: but truly God is One that blots out sass.

5330. The immediate occasion was what happened to Khaula biit Thatlaba, wife of Aus son of §amit. Though in Islam, he divorced her by an old Pagan custom: the formula was known as ½hār, and consisted of the words "Thou art to me as the back of my mother". This was held by Pagan custom to imply a divorce and freed the husband from any responsibility for conjugal duties, but did not leave the wife free to leave the husband's home, or to contract a second marriage. Such a custom was in any case degrading to a woman. It was particularly hard on Khaula, for she loved her husband and pleaded that she had little children whom she had no resources herself to support and whom under ½hār her husband was not bound to support. She urged her plea to the Prophet and in prayer to God. Her just plea was accepted, and this iniquitous custom, based on false words, was abolished. See also n. 3670 to xxxiii. 4

5331. For He is a just God, and will not allow human customs or pretences to trample on the just rights of the weakest of His creatures.

5333. Such words are false in fact and iniquitous, inasmuch as they are unfair to the wife and unseemly in decent society.

5334. Cf. iv. 99 and xxii. 60. Were it not that God in His Mercy makes allowances for our weaknesses and the various grades of motives that actuate us, such conduct would be inexpiable. But He prescribes expiation as in the next verse, because He wishes to blot out what is wrong and give us a chance to reform by His forgiveness.

(Sins), and forgives (Again and again).

- 3. But those who divorce
  Their wives by Zihār,
  Then wish to go back **ss*
  On the words they uttered,—
  (It is ordained that Such a one)
  Should free a slave
  Before they touch each other:
  This are ye admonished
  To perform: and God is
  Well-acquainted with (all)
  That ye do.
- 4. And if any has not (The wherewithal), half the should fast for Two months consecutively Before they touch each other. But if any is unable To do so, he should feed Sixty indigent ones. half they want this, that ye may show Your faith in God Mass

۞ كَالْاَيۡنَ عُطَّلَهِمُ فَنَ مِن لِسَآلِهِمِهُ أَنْ تَعُودُونَ لِمَا عَالُواْ فَفَرْيُرُ كَتَكُورَ مِن فَئِلاً الْمَثَّمَا مَنَّ كَالُّرُ يُعْطَونَ إِمِدُّ وَلَلْهُ لِمَا تَعْسَلُونَ خِيرٌ

۞ فَمَنَ لَمْ يَجِدْ فَصِيَا أُمِنْهُنَ يُن مُنَتَا يِصَيْنِ مِن فَتَالِأَنْ يَتَمَانِتُ أَفِّنَ لَا يَسْتَعِلْعُ فَإِطْعَامُ سِيْنِينَ مِسْكِينًا ذَٰلِكَ لِوُمِينُوا بِإِنَّهِ

5335. If $ihār were to be ignored as if the words were never uttered, it would mean that men may foolishly resort to it without penalty. It is therefore recognised in respect of the penalty which the man incurs, but safeguards the woman's rights. She can sue for maintenance for herself and her children, but her husband could not claim his conjugal rights. If it was a hasty act and he repented of it, he could not claim his conjugal rights until after the performance of his penalty as provided below. If she loved him, as in Khaula's case, she could also herself sue for conjugal rights in the legal sense of the term and compel her husband to perform the penalty and resume maintal relations.

5336. Cf. iv. 92 The penalty is: to get a slave his freedom, whether it is your own slave or you purshase his freedom from another; if that is not possible, to fast for two months consecutively (in the manner of the Ramsdhán fast); if that is not possible, to feed sixty poor. See next note, 5317. There is a great deal of learned argument among the jurists as to the precise requirements of Canon Law under the term 'feeting' is he indigent. For example, it is laid down that half a $\beta^2$ of wheat or a full $\beta$ of dates or their equivalent in money would fulfil the requirements, a $\beta^2$ being a measure corresponding rpughly to about 9 lbs. of wheat in weight Others hold that a Mudd measure equivalent to about $2$ lbs. would be sufficient. This would certainly be nearer the daily ration of a man. It is better to take the spirit of the test in its plain simplicity, and say that an indigent man should be given enough to eat for two meals a day. The sixty indigent ones fed for a day would be equivalent to a single individual fed for sixty days, or two for thirty days, and so on. But there is no need to go into mixtuff in such matters.

5338. These penalties in the alternative are prescribed, that we may show our repentance and Faith and our renunciation of "iniquity and falsehood" (verse 2 above), whatever our circumstances may be.

And His Apostle.

SECTION 2.

7. Seest thou not that
God doth know (all) that is
In the heavens and
On earth? There is not
A secret consultation
Between three, but He Makes the fourth among them,— 8511
Nor between five but

5339. It would seem that this refers to the spiritual Penalty in the Hereafter for not complying with the small penalty here prescribed. The next verse would then refer to the bigger "humiliating Penalty" for "resistance" to God's Law generally.

$340. This phrase, "God will tell them the truth of their deeds for their doings or their conduct)" occurs frequently. See, v. Si., n. 762; v. 108, n. 81; vi. 60; ix, 94; etc. In this life there is a certain mist or illusion in our spiritual sight. We see things from different angles and dispute about them; we hide real motives, and pretend to virtues which we do not possess; others may attribute such virtues to us, and we may come to believe it ourselves; we conceive likes and hatreds on insufficient grounds; we forget what we should remember, and remember what we should forget. Our vision is narrow, and our values are false. On the Day of Account all this will be remedied. Not only will true values be restored, but we shall ourselves see the inwardness of things in our own lives, which we never saw before.

8341. Secrecy is a relative and limited term among ourselves. There is nothing hidden or unknown to God. Usually secrecy implies fear or distrust, plotting or wrong-doing. But all is open before God's sight.

He makes the sixth,—
Nor between fewer nor more
But He is in their midst,
Wheresoever they be:
In the end will He
Tell them the truth
Of their conduct, on the Day
Of Judgment. For God
Has full knowledge
Of all things.

- 8. Turnest thou not thy sight Towards those who were Forbidden secret counsels 313 Yet revett to that which They were forbidden (to do)? And they hold secret counsels Among themselves for iniquity And hostility, and disobedience To the Apostle. And when They come to thee, They salute thee, sale Not as God salutes thee. (But in crooked ways): And they say to themselves. "Why does not God Punish us for our words?" said Enough for them is Hell: In it will they burn. And evil is that destination !

<sup>5342.</sup> When the Muslim Brotherhood was acquiring strength in Medina, and the forces of disruption were being discomfitted in open fight against the Messenger of Righteousness, the wicked resorted to duplicity and secret intrigues, in which the ringideaders were the disaffected fews and the Hypocrites, whose machinations have been frequently referred to in the Qur-ân. Est see ii. 8-16; and iv. 142-145.

<sup>5343.</sup> The salutation of God was (and is) "Peace!" But the enemies, who had not the courage to fight openly, often twisted the words, and by using a word like "52m", which meant "Death!" or "Deatruction!" instead of "Salm" ("Peace!), they thought they were secretly venting their spite and yet apparently using a polite form of salutation. Cf. II. 105, and n. 107, where another similar trick is exposed.

<sup>534.</sup> The enemies derisively enjoyed their trick (see last note) according to their own perverted mentality. They asked blasphemously, "Why does not God punish us?" The answer is given: there is a Punishment, far greater than they imagine: it will come in good time: it will be the final Punishment after Judgment: it is delayed in order to give them a chance of repentance and reformation.

10. Secret counsels are only (Inspired) by the Evil One, In order that he may Cause grief to the Believers; But he cannot harm them In the least, except as *** God permits; and on God Let the Believers Put their trust.

الرَسُولِ وَ مَنَّ الْمِوْرِ الْلَهِ وَالْفَدُوكَى وَالْفَدُوكَى وَالْفَدُوكَى وَالْفَدُولَى الْمَدِينَ الْمَدِينَ الْمَدْمِنَ الْمَدْمِنَ الْمَدْمِنَ الْمَدْمِنَ الْمَدْمِنَ الْمَدْمِنَ اللّهِ الْمَدْمِنَ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهِ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَا اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَا اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمَا اللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَمَنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَاللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ الللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ وَمِنْ اللّهُ ا

5313. Ordinarily secrecy implied deeds of darkness, something which men have to hide; see the next verse. But there are good deeds which may be concerted and done in secret; e.g. charity, or the prevention of mischief, or the defeat of the dark plots of evil. The determining factor is the motive. Is the man doing some wrong, or venting his spite, or trying to disobey a lawful command? Or is he doing some good, which out of modesty or self-remunciation he does not want known, or is he in a righteous cause defeating the machinations of Evil. which may involve great sacrifice of himself?

3346. Evil can harm no one who is good, except in so far as (1) there is some question of trial in God's Universal Plan, or (2) what appears to be harm may be real good. Nothing happens without God's will and permission. And we must always trust Him, and not our cleverness or any adventitious circumstances that draw us the least bit from the path of rectifude.

5347. Even when a great man or a Leader comes into an Assembly, we are not to press forward without discipline, as it causes inconvenience to him and detriment to public business. Nor are we to shut out other people who have equal rights to be in the Assembly. We must spread out, for God's earth is spacious, and so are our opportunities.

5348. Rising up is a mark of respect. Just as those who obey soon become worthy of command, so those who honour where honour is due, become themselves worthy of honour, in various degrees according to their capacities. "Rise up" may also here imply: 'when the Assembly is dismissed, do not loiter about."

3349 Faith makes all people equal in the Kingdom of God, as regards the essentials of citizenship in the Kingdom. Bit there is leadership, and rank and degree, joined with greater or less responsibility, and that depends on Knowledge,—the true knowledge and insight which Mystics seek everywhere for advancing their service and responsibility in the Kingdom of God. Honour their comes with merit, and is not to be grabbod at.

5330. In the Kingdom of God all instruction or consultation who pen and free. But human nature is weak. And people want special mitrotion or private consultation with the Teacher from one of several motives: (1)-they may have, or think they have, a special case, which they are not willing to disclose to their brethren in general; (2) they may have some sense of delicacy or dignity, which can only be satisfied by a private interview; (3) they may even be selfsh enough to want to monopolise the Teacher's time. These motives are, in an ascending order, worth discouraging; and eyt, considering the weakness of human nature, they cannot be reprobated to the extent of shutting out their victims from chances of improvement. It is therefore recommended that they spend something in charity for the good of their poport brethren before they include in such weaknesses.

5331 The charity is a sort of expiation for their pardonable weakness. Having made some monetary sacrifice for their poorer brethren they could face them with less shame, and the charity would direct their attention to the need for purifying their motives and conduct. At the same time, this special charity is not made obligatory, lest such persons should be shut out altogether from chances of the higher teaching on account of their pardonable folibles.

5352. Note the plural here, Sadaqāt, instead of the singular, Sadaqat in verse 12 above. While people with the folibles described in n. $330 may be willing to spend "something" (small) in chardly for a special consultation occasionally, they may be frightened of spending large sums when their needs for consultation may be numerous. What is to be done then? Are they to be shut out altogether? No. They are asked to be punctitions in the discharge of their normal duties of at least normal regular prayers and regular charity, "if God forgives you", i.e. if God's Messenger relieves them of further special contributions such as those noted in verse 12. This condition, "if God forgives you", provides the safeguard against the abuse of the privilege. The apostle would know in each case what is best for the individual and for the community.

If, then, ye do not so, And God forgives you, Then (at least) establish Regular prayer; practise SOS Regular charity; and obey God and His Apostle. And God is well-acquainted With all that ye do.

5359. When Judgment is established, and before they realise the Truth, they may think (as now) that some oaths or excuses will save them. But they have not now-much less will they have then —any footing to stand upon. Palsehood is falsehood, and must perish. They must learn the worthlessness of their falsehood.

5360. Man s original nature as created by God is good (xxx, 30, and n. 3541). It is because man, in spite of the warnings he has received, allows Evil to get the mastery over him, a that man forgets God and the civine qualities which God gave him. The result of the perversion is that man becomes a partisan of Evil, and as such dooms himself to perdition.

5361. There are various degrees of humiliation in the final state in the spiritual world. But the world is the humiliation of being numbered among those who ignominiously attempted to resist the Irresistible.

5362. For the meaning of 'Asiz, see n, 2818 to unii, 40.

22. Thou wilt not find Any people who believe In God and the Last Day, Loving those who resist God and His Apostle. Even though they were Their fathers or their sons. 538 Or their brothers, or Their kindred. For such He has written Faith 5164 In their hearts, and strengthened Them with a spirit 5368 From Himself. And He Will admit them to Gardens Beneath which Rivers flow To dwell therein (for ever). God will be well pleased With them, and they with Him som They are the Party 4857 Of God. Truly it is The Party of God that Will achieve Felicity.

3363. If any one believes in God and His goodness and justice, and in the Hereafter, in which all true values will be estigred be will never love evil or wrong-doing or rebellion against God, even if these things are found in his nearest kith and kin.

5364. Faith in God is indelibly written on the tablets of their hearts, and they can never be false to God.

$305, Cf. it 87 and 253, where it is said that God strengthened the Prophet Jesus with the holy spirit. Here we learn that all good and righteous men are strengthened by God with the holy spirit. If anything, the phrase used here is stronger, "a spirit from Himself!" Whenever any one offers his heart in faith and putity to God, God accepts it, engraves that Faith on the secker's heart, and further fortifies him with the divine spirit, which we can no more define adequately than we can define in human language the nature and attributes of God.

336. Again we have the mystic doctrine of God's Good Pleasure as the highest goal of man, the splittual heaven which he achieves by a life of purity and faith. He not only attains God's Good Pleasure as the crown of his felicity, but his own nature us so far transformed to the pattern of God's original creation that his own good pleasure is in nothing but in God's Good Pleasure. The mutual good pleasure shows the heights to which man can attain.

5307. This is in antithesis to the Party of the Evil One, mentioned in verse 19 above. That Party of Evil will perists, but while it has its run in the scheme of the present world, the Party of Truth and Reality may be nguratively called the Party of God, even though all Creation is God's in another sense.

INTRODUCTION TO STRA LIX (Hashr).

This is the third of the series of ten short Medina Sūras, dealing each with a special point in the life of the Ummat: see Introduction to S. Ivili. The special theme here is how treachery to the Ummat on the part of its enemies recoils on the enemies themselves, while it strengthens the bond between the different sections of the Ummat itself, and this is illustrated by the story of the expulsion of the lewish tribe of the Band Nadhri in Rabi' I, A H. 2.

This fixes the date of the Sura.

Summary.—The expulsion of the treacherous Jews from the neighbourhood of Medina was smoothly accomplished: their reliance on their fortified positions and on the faith of their allies in treachery proved futile. But the internal bonds in the Ummat were strengthened. Such is the wisdom of God, Lord of the Most Beautiful Names, (lix. 1-24, and C. 238).

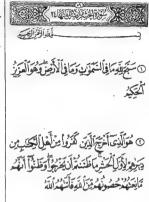

C. 238 .- God's wisdom foils the treachery of men. (hx. 1-24) And makes the path smooth for Believers who strive Even against odds. Against God's decrees All resistance is vain. In property taken From the enemy, let those in need have a share, And those who sacrifice their all for the Cause. But those who lend a helping hand In the hour of need do it for love And crave no reward, nor feel the least Envy or jealousy. They all rejoice That the Brotherhood should thrive. Not so The Hypocrites: they are false even among Themselves. Perdition is the end Of all evil. But the Good and Faithful Will achieve felicity. Such is the power Of Truth and God's Revelation. God! There is no god but He !-- the Good, The Glorious, the Irresistible ! All Creation sings His praise,-The Exalted in Might, the Wise !

5368. This verse, introducing the S0ra, is Identical with 1vii. 1, introducing S. Ivii. The theme of both is the wonderful working of God's Plan and Providence. In the one case it referred to the conquest of Mecca and taught the lesson of humility. In this case it refers to the dislodgment of the treacherous Band Naghir from their nest of intrigue in the neighbourhood of Medina, practically without a blow. See next note.

. 339 This refers to the Jewish tribe of the Bant Naghir whose intrigues and treachery nearly undid the Muslim cause during the peritous days of the battle of Ubud in Shawwali, A.H. 3. Four months after, in Rabi I, A.H. 3. the swere taken against thm. They were asked to leave the strategic position which they occupied, about three miles south of Medina, endangering the very ensistence of the Ummat in Medina. At first they demurred, relying on their fortresses and on their secret alliances with the Pagans of Mecca and the Hypocrities of Medina. But when the Muslim army was gathered to punish them and actually besieged them for some days, ther allies stirred not a finger in their aid, and they were wise enough to leave. Most of them joined their brethren in Kyria, which they were permitted to do, after being disarned. Some of them joined their brethren in Khaibar: see n. 3705 to xxxiii. 27. The Bant Naghir richly deserved punishment, but their lives were spared, and they were allowed to carry away their goods and chattels.

$371. They had played a double game. Originally they were sworn allies of the Medina Muslims under the holy Prophet, but they secretly intrigued with the Mecca Pagans under Abb Sufyan and the Medina Hypocrites. They even tried treacherously to take the life of the Prophet while he was on a visit to them, breaking both the laws of hospitality and their own sworn alliance. They thought the Pagan Quraish of Mecca and the Hypocrites of Medina would help them, but they did not help them. On the contrary the eleven days siege showed them their own helplesaness. Their supplies were cut off; the exigencies of the siege necessitated the destruction of their outlying paint frees; and the unexpected turn in their fortunes sheartened them. Their hearts were struck with terror, and they _apitulated. But they laid waste their homes before they-left: see next note.

$372. Their lives were spared, and they were allowed ten days in which to remove themselves, their families, and such goods as they could carry. In order to leave no habitations for the Muslims they demoished their own houses and laid waste their property, to complete the destruction which the operations of war had already caused at the hands of the besigning force of the Muslims.

5373. Banishment was a comparatively mild punishment for them, but the Providence of God had decreed that a chance should be given to them even though they were a treacherous foe. Within two years, their brethren the Banti Quraiga showed that they had not profited by their example, and had to be dealt with in another way: see xxxiii. 26 and notes.

5374. The punishment of the Band Naghtr was because in breakin their plighted word with the Apostle and in actively resisting God's Message and supporting tleeness of that Message, they rebelled against His holy Will. For such treason and rebellion the unit. ment is severe, and yet in this case it was seasoned with Mercv.

- $375. The unnecessary cutting down of fruit trees or destruction of crops, or any wanton destruction whatever in war, is forbidden by the law and practice of Islam. But some desfruction may be necessary for putting pressure on the enemy, and to that extent it is allowed. But as far as possible, consistently with that objective of military operations, such trees should not be cut down. Both these principles are in accordance with the Divine Will, and were followed by the Muslims in their expedition.
- 5376. The arrogance of the Banti Nadhir had to be humbled, and their power for mischief destroyed.
- 5377. Neither cavalry nor troops mounted on camels were employed in the siege. In fact the enemy surrendered at the first onset. See lix. 2, and n. 5369 above.
- 5378. God accomplishes His purpose in various ways, according to His wise and holy Will and Plan. In some cases a fight is necessary. In some cases the godly attain their objective and overawe the forces of evil without actual fighting.
- 5379. The Jews had originally come from outside Arabia, and seized on the land near Medina. The refused to adapt themselves to the people of Arabia, and were in fact a thorn in the side of the genuine Arabis of Medina. Their disponsession is therefore a restoration of the land to its original people. But the word "Fai" is here understood in a technical sense, as meaning property abandonad by the enemy or taken from him without a formal war. In that sense it is distinguished from "Anjal", or spoils, taken after actual fighting, about which see will I and 41.
- 5380. "The people of the townships": the townships were the Jewish settlements round Medina, of the month Naghri, and possibly of other tribes. G!, the "townships" mentioned in lik. Is below. The reference cannot be to the Wad-ul-Quaf (Valley of Towns), now Maddin falh, which was subjugated after Kh libar and Padak in A.H. 7, unless this verse is later than the rest of the Stra.

"Bilongs to God": i.g., to God's Cause; and the beneficiaries are further detailed. No shares are fixed; they depend upon circumstances, and are left to the judgment of the Leader. Compare a similar list of those entitled ω Charity, in ii. 177, but the two lists refer to different circumstances and have different beneficiaries in addition to the portion common to both.

5382. The hluhājirs are those who forsook their homes and property in bleeca in order to assist the holy Prophet in his migration to Medina (Hijrat). Their devotion and sincerity were proved beyond doubt by their self-denial, and they were now to be rewarded.

533. This refers to the Asgār (the Helpers), the people of Medina, who accepted Islam when it was persecuted in Mecca, and who invited the holy Prophet to join them and become their Leader in Medina. The Hijrat was possible because of their goodwill and their generous hospitality. They entertained the Prophet and all the refugees (Muhajirs) who came with him. The most remarkable ties of full brotherhood were established between individual members of the one group and the other. Until the Ummis got its own resources, the Helpers regularly gave and the Refugees regularly received The Helpers counted it a privilege to entertain the kefugees, and were the overview that the rich in their spirit of self-sacrifice. When the confiscated land and property of the Band Naghri was divided, and the major portion was assigned to the Refugees, there was not the least jealousy on the part of the Helpers. They rejoiced in the good fortune of their brether. And incidentally they were themselves relieved of analty and responsibility on their behalf, $384. These that came after them: the immediate meaning would refer to later arrivals in Medina or later accessions to Islam, compared with the early Muhajirs. But the general meaning would include all future comers into the House of Islam. They pray, not only for themselves, but for all, their brethren, and above all, they pray that their hearts may be purified of any desire or tendency to disparage the work or virtues of other Muslims or to feel any jealousy on account of their successes or good fortune.

5385, Cf. vii. 43, and n. 1021.

$336. The Jews of the Banß Naghir had been astured by the Hypocrites of Medina of their support to their cause. They had thought that their defection from the Prophet's Cause would so weaken that cause that they would save their friends. But they never intended to undertake any act involving self-actrifice on their part; if they had helped their Jewish friends, it was not likely that they would have succeeded; and if they had actually gone to the fight, they had neither valour nor fervour to support them, and they would have field ignominiously before the discipline, earnest-uses, and Faith of the men of Islam.

But God is witness see That they are indeed liars.

5387. For this actually happened. They never stirred a finger for the Jews, and they never intended to do so. And God knows all their motives and secrets; cf. xivii. 26, n. 4850.

5388. All hopes founded on iniquity and treachery are vain and illusory. There may be honour as not there is no honour as between dishonest intriguers, and they are not likely to get any real help from any ouarier.

5389. As construed here, the meaning is: "Ye Muslims, even if ye are weak numerically, or they may have other seeming advantages, ye are really stronger than they are, because they have a wholestome lear in their minds, and God sends such tear into the hearts of wrong-doers! An alternative construction would yield the meaning: "Being Unbelievers they fear you more than they fear God, because your valour they see, but in God they do not believe.

5390. They have not sufficient self-confidence or ilam to sustain them in a fight except under mirrail advantages or defences. Even if they join forces, they have not sufficient trust in each other to expose themselves to open fighting.

5191. It may be that they have a strong fighting spirit among themselves, but they have no Cause to fight for and no common objective to achieve. The Meccan Pagana want to keep their own unjust autocracy; the Median Hypocrates wish for their own domination in Medina; and the Jews want their racial superiority established over the Arabs, of whose growing union and power they are jealous. Their pretended ailliance could not stand the strain of either a defeat or a victory. If they have been wise, they would have accepted the Cause of Unity, Patith, and Truth.

﴿ يَأْنَهُ الَّذِينَ المَنُوا إِفَقُوا اللَّهُ

5392. The immediate reference was probably to the Jewish goldsmith tribe of the Qainuqal', who were also settled in a fortified township near Medina. They were also punished and banished for their treachery, about a month after the battle of Badr, in which the Meccan Pagans had suffered a signal defeat, in Shawwal, A.H. 2. The Naghir evidently did not take that lesson to heart. The general meaning is that we must learn to be on our guard against the consequences of treachery and sin. No fortulous alliances with other men of iniquity will save us.

3333. An apt simile. Evil tempts man in all sorts of ways, and presents seductive promises and alliances to delude him into the belief that he will be saved from the consequences. The Evil One says, "Deny God": which means not merely denial in words, but denial in acts,—disobedience of God's Law, deviation from the path of rectitude. When the sinner jets well into the mire, the Evil One says cyncially: "How can I help you against God? Don't you see I am afraid of Him? All our alliances and understandings were moonshine. You must bear the consequences of your own follow."

5394, The "tear of God" is akin to love; for it means the fear of offending Him or doing anything with the flow of the third for the third good Pleasure. This is Taques, which implies self restraint, guarding ourselves from all sin, wrong, and injustice, and the positive doing of good. See ii. 2, and n. 26.

21. Jad We sent down

3395. The positive side of Taqwill or "fear of God" (see last note) is here emphasised. It is not merely a feeling or an emotion: it is an act, a doing of things which become a preparation and provision for the Hereafter,—the next life, which may be described as "the morrow" in relation to the present Life, which is "to-day"

$395.A. The repetition emphasises both sides of Taques: "let your soul fear to do wrong, and let it do every act of righteousness: for God observes both your inner motives and your acts, and in His scheme of things everything will have it sue consequences."

5396. To forget God is to forget the only Reality. As we are only reflected realities, how can we understand or do justice to or remember ourselves, when we forget the very source of our being?

5397. The others, the Companions of the Fire, will find their lives wasted and nullified. Their capacities will be rendered inert and their wishes will end in futility.

5398. There are two ideas associated in men's minds with a mountain: one is its height, and the other that it is rocky, stony, hard. Now comes the metaphor. The Revelation of God is so sublime that even the highest mountains humble themselves before it. The Revelation is so powerful and convincing that even the hard rock splits asunder under it. Will man then be so arrogant as to consider himself superior to it, or so hard-hearted as not to be affected by its powerful Message? The answer is "No" for unapplit man; "Yes" for man when degraded by sin to be the vitest of creatures.

5399. Cf. vii. 143, and n. 1103, where, in the story of bloses, the Mount became as dust "when the Lord manifested His Glory". Also cf. xxxiii. 72, and n. 3778, where the mountains are mentioned altegorically as an emblem of stability, but as refusing to accept the Trust (Awānai) because they felt themselves to be too humble to be equal to such a tremendous Trust.

Asunder for fear of God. Such are the similitudes Which We propound to men, That they may reflect.

$400. Here follows a passage of great sublimity, summing up the attributes of God. First, in this verse, we have the general attributes, which give us the fundamental basis on which we can form some idea of God. (1) We start with the proposition that no words are adequate to describe Him, and we can only call Him." He"; for there is nothing else like Him. (2) We think of His Unity; all the varying and conflicting forces in Greation are controlled by Him and look to Him, and we can never get a true idea of Him unless we winderstand the myatic meaning of Unity. (3) His knowledge extends to everything seen and unseen, present and future, near and far, in being and not in being; in fact these contrasts, which apply to our knowledge, do not apply to Him. (4) His Grace and (5) His Mercy are unbounded: see 1.1, and n.19; and unless we realise these, we can have no true conception of our position in the working of His Will and Plan.

5401. This phrase is repeated from the last verse in order to lead us to the contemplation of some other attributes of God, after we have realised those which form our fundamental conceptions of God. See the preceding and the following note:

$402. How can a translator reproduce the sublimity and the comprehensiveness of the magnificent Arabic words, which mean so much in a single symbol? (1)11 "The Sovereign" in our human language implies the one undisputed authority which is entitled to give commands and to receive obedience, and which in fact receives obedience; the power which enforces law and justice. (2) Human authority may be misused, but in the title "the Holy One," we postulate a Being free from all stain or evil, and replete with the highest Punty. (3) "Salām" has not only the idea of Peace as opposed to Conflict, but wholeness as opposed to defects: hence our paraphrase "Source of Peace and Perfection". (4) Mā-mis, one who entertains Fatth, who gives faith to others, who is never false to the Faith that others place in him; hence our paraphrase "Guardian of Faith". (5) "Preserver of Safety"; guadring all from danger, corruption, loss, etc. : the word is used for the Qurann in v. St. These are the attributes of kindness and benevolence; in the next note are described the attributes of kindness and benevolence; in the next note are described the attributes

5403. See last note. (6) God is not only good, but He can carry out His Will, (7) And if anything resists or opposes Him, His Will prevails. (8) For He is Supreme, above all things and creatures. Thus we come back to the Unity with which we began in verte 22.

5401 Such being God's attributes of Goodness and Power, how foolish is it of men to worship anything else but Him? Who can approach His glory and goodness?

3103 God's attributes of Goodness and Power having hear-felerred to, we are now told of His creative energy, of which three aspects are here mentioned, as explained in the following note. The point is emphasised that He does not merely create and leave alone; He goes on fashioning evolving new forms and colours, and sustaining alt the energies and capacities which He has put into His Creation, according to various laws which He has established.

3406. The act or acts of creation have various aspects, and the various words used in this connection are summarised in in 130 to it 117, as supplemented by n, 916 to 19 4 and n, 923 to 19 8 Kgalaga is the general term for creation, and the Author of all Creation is Knäll. Baraa implies a process of evolving from previously created matter or state: the Author of this process is Bārna. the Evolver. Seaverare implies giving definite form or colour, so as to make a thing exactly suited to a given end or object: hence the title Missauwer, Bestower of Forms or Colours: for this shows the completion of the visible stage of creation.

5407. Cf. vii 180, n. 1154; and gvii. 110, n. 2322.

5408. Thus the argument of the S0ra is rounded off on the same note as was struck at the beginning, lix 1. The first verse and the last verse of the S0ra are the same, except as regards the tense of the verb sabbana. In the first verse it is the optative form of the pretente sabbaha: 'let everything declare the Glory of God!' After the illustrations given, the declaratory form of the acrist is appropriate, yssabsby is: 'everything doth declare the Glory of God!

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LX (Mumtahana).

This is the fourth of the ten Medina Sūras, each dealing with a special point in the life of the Ummat.

Here the point is: what social relations are possible with the Unbelievers? A distinction is made between those who persecute you for your Faith and want to destroy you and your Faith, and those who have shown no such rancour. For the latter there is hope of mercy and forgiveness. The question of women and cross-marriages is equitably dealt with.

The date is after the Pagans had broken the treaty of Hudaibīya, for which see Introduction to S. xiviii,—say about A.H. 8, not long before the conquest of Mecca.

Summary.—The enemies of your Faith, who would exterminate you and your Faith, are not fit objects of your love: follow Abraham's example: but with those Unbelievers who show no rancour, you should deal with kindness and justice: marriages between Believers and Unbelievers. (Kr. 1-13, and C. 239).

C. 239.-What social relations should you hold (lx. 1-13.) With men whose hearts are filled with rancour,-Who hate both God and men of God? Surely you cannot offer love and friendship To such as seek to destroy your Faith And you. Seek protection for you and yours From God and not from God's sworn enemies. But deal kindly and justly with all: it may be That those who hate you now may love you: For God can order all things. But look not For protection to those who are bent on driving You out. Let not believing women Be handed over to Unbelievers: No marriage tie is lawful between them. When women wish to join your society, Take their assurance that they yield not To sin or unbeseeming conduct. Take every care to keep your society Free and pure, and self-contained,

Mumtahana, or the Woman to be Examined. (ix. 10)

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- Pye who believe! Take not My enemies And yours as friends (Or protectors), -offering them see (Your) love, even though They have rejected the Truth That has come to you. And have (on the contrary) Driven out the Prophet And yourselves (from your homes), (Simply) because ve believe In God your Lord! NI If ve have come out To strive in My Way And to seek My Good Pleasure. (Take them not as friends), Holding secret converse Of love (and friendship) With them : for I know Full well all that ve Conceal and all that ve Reveal. And any of you That does this has straved From the Straight Path.
- If they were to get 5411
   The better of you.

5609. The immediate occasion for this was a secret letter sent by one Báitb. a Muhājir, from Medina, to the Pagana at Mecca, in most friendly terms, seeking for their protection on behalf of his children and relatives left behind in Mecca. The letter was intercepted, and he confessed the fruth, He was forgiven as he told the fruth and his motive did not appear to be heinous, but this instruction was given for future guidance. This was shortly before the conquest of Mecca, but the principle is of universal application. You cannot be on terms of secret intimacy with the enemies of your Faith and people, who are persecuting your Faith and seeking to destroy your Faith and you. You may not do so even for the sake of your relatives, as it compromises the life and existence of your whole community.

3410. Such was the position of the Muslim community in Medina after the Hijrat and before the conquest of Mecca.

Sill. Besides the question of your fidelity to your own people, even your own selfish interests require you to beware of secret intrigues with enemies. They will welcome you as car's-peaw. But what will happen when they have used you and got the better of you and your people? Then they will show you their hand. And a heavy hand it will be! Not only will they injure you with their hands but with their tongues! The only words they will use for you will be "Trattors to their own"! If they intrigue with you now, it is to pervert you from the Path of Truth and righteousness and win you over to their evil ways.

They would behave to you As enemies, and stretch forth Their hands and their tongues Against you for evil; And they desire that ye Should reject the Truth.

- 3. Of no profit to you had.
  Will be your relatives
  And your children
  On the Day of Judgment:
  He will judge between you:
  For God sees well
  All that ye do.
- 4. There is for you An excellent example (to follow) In Abraham and those with him. 6113 When they said To their people: "We are clear of you And of whatever ye worship Besides God: we have rejected You, and there has arisen, Between us and you, enmity 5414 And hatred for ever .- unless Ve believe in God And Him alone": But not when Abraham Said to his father: I will pray for forgiveness 5115

- 5412. The plea of children and relatives (see n. 5409 above) will be no excuse for treachery when the Day of Judgment comes. Your children and family will not save you. The Judgment will be in the hands of God, and He has full knowledge of all your overt and hidden acts and motives.
- 5413. See ix. 114. Abraham was tender-hearted, and joyal to his father and his people. He warned them against idolatry and sin and prayed for his father, but when his father and his people became open enemies of God, Abraham entirely dissociated himself from them, and left his home, his father, his people, and his country. Those with him, were his believing wife and nephew LBH and any other Believers that went into exile with him.
- 5414. The enemies of God are enemies of the righteous, and they hate the righteous. Therefore the righteous must cut themselves off eternally from them, unless they repent and come back to God. In that case they receive God's mercy and are entitled to all the rights of love and brotherhood. This shows that our detestation is for evil, not for men as such, so long as there is a chance for repentance. See also verse 7 below. But we must give no chance to Evil for working evil on our Brotherhood at any time.
- 5415. Refer again to ix. 114, n. 136$: and n. 5413 above. Abraham's conduct is not condemned: it was a special case, and is not to be imitated by weaker men, who may fall into sin by thinking too much of sinners.

For thee, though I have
No power (to get) aught
On thy behalf from God."
(They prayed): "Our Lord! **
In Thee do we trust,
And to Thee do we turn
In repentance: to Thee
Is (our) final Goal.

- 5. "Our Lord! Make us not A (test and) trial ****
  For the Unbehevers,
  But forgive us, our Lord!
  For Thou art the Exalted
  In Might, the Wise."
- 6. There was indeed in them sus An excellent example for you To follow,—for those Whose hope is in God And in the Last Day, But if any turn away, Truly God is Free of all sus Wants, Worthy of all Praise.

5416. This prayer indicates what our attitude should be. We must trust to God, and not to God's enemies to protect and befriend ourselves, our families, or those near and dear to us.

5417. In n. 1198 to vii., 25, I have explained the shades of meaning in the word Fifnat. In ii., 102 Hantl and Marth were a trial to test the righteous who trusted in God from the unrighteous who resorted to evil and superstituon. Here the prayer to God is that we should be saved from becoming so weak as to tempt the Unbellevers to try to attack and destroy us.

5418. In them: i.e., in their attitude of prayer and reliance on God, and of dissociation from evil.

5419. If any one rejects God's Message or Law, the loss is his own. It is not God Who needs him or his worship or his sacrifice or his prause. God is independent of all wants, and His attributes are inherently deserving of all praise, whether the wicked give such praise or not, in word or deed,

5420. Apparent religious hatted or enmity or persecution may be due to ignorance or over-zeal in a soul, which God will forgive and use eventually in His service, as happened in the case of Eaghrat Umar, who was a different man before and after his conversion. As stated in n, 3414 above, we should hate evil, but not men as such,

- 8. God forbids you not,

- God only forbids you, With regard to those who Fight you for (your) Faith, And drive you out Of your homes, and support (Others) in driving you out, From turning to them (For friendship and protection). It is such as turn to them (In these circumstances), That do wrong.
- 10. Ye who believe! When there come to you Believing women refugees, sees Examine (and test) them: God knows best as to Their Faith: if ye ascertain size That they are Believers, Then send them not back To the Unbelievers.

  They are not lawful (wives)

542. Even with Unbelievers, unless they are rampant and out to destroy us and our Faith, we should deal kindly and equitably, as is shown by our holy Prophet's own example.

S422 Under the treaty of Budshibya [see Introduction to S. xivin. paragraph 4, condition [3]), women under guardianship (including macried women), who fied from the Quiralsh in Mecca to the Prophet's protection at Medina were to be sent back. But before this Ayat was issued, the Quraish had already broken the treaty, and some instruction was necessary as to what the Medina Nuslims should do in those circumstances. Muslim women married to Pagan husbands in Mecca were oppressed for their Faith, and some of them came to Medina as refugers. After this, they were not to be returned to the custody of their Pagan husbands at Mecca, as the marriage of believing women with non-Muslims was held to be dissolved if the husbands did not accept Islam. But in order to give no suspicion to the Pagans that they were badly treated as they lost the dower they had given on marriage, that dower was to be repaid to the husbands. Thus helpless women refugees were to be protected at the cost of the Muslims.

5423. The condition was that they should be Muslim women. How were the Muslims to know? A non-Muslim woman, in order to escape from her lawful guardians in Mecca, might pretend that she was a Muslim. The true state of her mind and heart would be known to God alone. But if the Muslims, on an examination of the woman, found that she professed Islam, she was to have protection. The examination would be directed (among other things) to the points mentioned in verse 12 below.

For the Unbelievers, nor are The (Unbelievers) lawful

For them. But pay The Unbelievers what they Have spent (on their dower). And there will be no blame On you if ye marry them see Oir payment of theh doner To them. But hold not To the guardianship of 5HB Unbelieving women: ask For what we have spent On their dowers, and let The (Unbelievers) ask for What they have spent (On the dowers of women Who come over to you). Such is the command Of God: He judges (With justice) between you, And God is Full of Knowledge and Wisdom.

11. And if any
Of your wives deserts you
To the Unbelievers, oth
And ye have an accession
(By the coming over of
A woman from the other side),
Then pay to those Whose wives have deserted

۞ ڡَان فَا تَكْرُشَوْءٌ ثِنْ أَنْوَلِيكُمْ لِلْٱلْكُفَارِ مَمَّا مَبْتُرُفَا ثُولُالَاِينَ ذَهَبَثُ أَنْوَجُهُم

5424. As the marriage was held to be dissolved (see n. 5422 above), there was no bag to the remarriage of the refugee Muslim woman with a Muslim man on the payment of the usual dower to her.

5425. Unbelieving women in a Muslim society would only be a clog and a handicap. There would be neither happiness for them, nor could they conduce in any way to a healthy life of the society in which they lived as liens. They were to be sent away, as their marriage was held to be dissolved; and the dowers paid to them were to be demanded from the guardians to whom they were sent back, just as in the contrary case the dowers of believing women were to be paid back to their Pagane es hubbands (n. 5422 shove).

S126. A very unlikely contingency, considering how much better position the women occupied in Islam than under Pagan custom. But all contingencies have to be provided for equitably in legislation, If a woman went over to the Pagans, her dower would be recoverable from the Pagans and payable to the deserted husband. If a woman came over from the Pagans, her dower would be payable to the deserted husband. If a woman came over from the Pagans, her dower would be payable to the Pagans. Assuming that the two dowers were equal, the one would be set off against the other as between the fwo communities; but within the communities the deserted individual would be compensated by the individual who gains a wile. If the dowers were unequal, the balance would be recoverable as between the communities, and the adjustment would then be made as between the individuals. In practice the common Fund compensated the deserted husband in anticipation of any necessary adjustments.

The equivalent of what they Had spent (on their dower). And fear God, In Whom we believe.

12. (Prophet ! 6427 When believing women come To thee to take the oath Of fealty to thee, that they Will not associate in worship Any other thing whatever With God, that they Will not steal, that they Will not commit adultery (Or fornication), that they Will not kill their children. That they will not utter Slander, intentionally forging Falsehood, and that they Will not disobey thee In any just matter,-Then do thou receive Their fealty, and pray to God 5128 For the forgiveness (of Their sins): for God is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful.

$127. Now come directions as to the points on which women entering Islam should pledge themselves. Similar points apply to men, but here the question is about women, and especially such as were likely, in those early days of Islam, to come from Pagan society in the conditions discussed in notes $122 and $423 above. A pledge on these points would search out their real motives: (1) to worship none but the One True God; (2) not to streat; (3) not to indulge sex outside the marriage tie; (4) not to commit infanticide; (the Pagan Arabs were prone to female infanticide; (5) not to indulge in slander or scandal; and (6) generally, to obey loyally the law and principles of Islam. The last was a comprehensive and sufficient phrase, but it was good to indicate also the special points to which attention was to be directed in those special circumstances. Obedience was of course to be in all things just and reasonable; Islam requires strict discipline but not stavishness.

5428 If pledges are sincerely given for future conduct, admission to Islam is open. If there is a finding in the past, for which there is evidence of sincere repentance, forgiveness is to be prayed for. God forgives in such cases: how can man refuse to give such cases a real chance?

5429. So we come back to the theme with which we started in this SUra: that we should not turn for friendship and intimacy to those who break God's Law and are outlaws in God's Kingdom. The various phases of this question, and the legitimate qualifications, have already been mentioned, and the argument is here rounded off. Cf. also Ivili; 14.

Of the Hercafter they are Already in despair, just as The Unbelievers are In despair about those (Buried) in graves.<sup>5100</sup> قَدْ يَسِمُوا مِنَ ٱلْأَخِرَوْكَمَا يَسِى ٱلْكَفَارُ مِنْ أَصِّبِ ٱلْقُبُورِ

$430. The Unbelievers, who do not believe in a Future Life, can therefore have no hope beyond this life. Miserable indeed it this life to their; for the ills of this life are real to them, and they can have no hope of refrees. But such is also the state of others-People of the Book or note-who wallow in sin and incur the drivine Wrath. Even if they believe in a Future Life, it can only be to them a life of horror, punishment, and despair. For those of Faith the prospect is different them as life of horror, businement, and despair. For those of Faith the prospect is different way suffer in this life, but this life to them is only a flexing shadow that will soon pass away. The Reality to beyond; there will be foll redress in the Beyond, and Achievement and Felicity such as they can scarcely conceive of in the terms of this life.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LXI (Saff).

This is the fifth Sūra of the series of short Medina Sūras beginning with S, lvii. Its subject-matter is the need for discipline, practical work, and self-sacrifice in the cause of the Ummat. Its date is uncertain, but it was probably shortly after the battle of Uhud, which was fought in Shawwall, A.H. 3.

Summary. - God's Glory shines through all Creation: but what discipline can show to back your words with action? What lessons can you learn from the stories of Moses and Jesus? Help the Cause, and God's help will come with glorious results (ix. 1-14, and C. 240).

C. 240.—God's glory shines through all the universe. (Ixi. 1-14.) What deeds of unity and discipline.

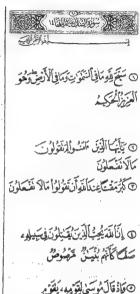

Of love and righteousness, have you To show in conduct? Or do you Only mock and insult the apostles As they did of old? Nay; trust in God And strive your utmost in His Cause. Little have you to give, but hiorious Is the reward that God will give you,—Now and in the Eternal Life to come!

Sūra LXI.

Saff. or Battle Array.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. We hatever is smi
  In the heavens and
  On earth, let it declare
  The Praises and Glory
  Of God: for He is
  The Exalted in Might,
  The Wise
- ye who believe? Why say ye that Which ye do not? <sup>8488</sup>
- Grievously odious is it In the sight of God That ye say that Which ye do not.
- Truly God loves those Who fight in His Cause In battle array, as if the They were a solid Cemented structure.
- 5. And remember, Moses said 5184
  To his people: "O my people!

5331. This verse is identical with lix, I. The latter illustrated the theme of the wonderful working of God's providence in defeating the wiles of His enemies. Here the same theme is illustrated by showing the need for unshaken discipline if we are to receive the help of God.

5432 At Uhud there was some disobedience and therefore breach of discipline. People had talked much, but had failed to back up their resolution in words with firmness in action. See n. 442 to ili, 121. But on all occasions when men's deeds are not commensurate with their words, their conduct is odious in the sight of God, and it is only due to God's Mercy; they are asyed from disaster.

$433. A battle array, in which a large number of men stand, march, or hold together against assault as if they were a solid wall, is a striking example of order, discipline, cohesion, and courage. "A solid emailed structure" is even a better simile than the usual "solid wall" as the "structure" or building implies a more diversified organisation held together in unity and strength, each part contributing strength in its own way, and the whole held together not tike a mass but like a living organism. C. Jaio xxxvii; I and a, 4031.

5134. The people of Moses often rebelled against him, vexed his spirit, and insulted him. See xxiii. 69, n. 3774, and this the Old Testament) Num xii. 1-13. They did it, not through ignorance, but from a selfish, perverse, and rebellious spirit, for which they recrived punishment. The Ummat of Islam should remember and take note of it, and should avoid any deviation from the Law and Will of God.

  The son of Mary, said:
  "O Children of Israe!!

7. Who doth greater wrong Than one who invents

﴿ وَمَنْ أَخْلَمْ مَنِ إِفْتَرَيْ

5435. The sinner's own will deviates, i.e. goes off from the right way, and he does wrong. That means that he shuts off God's grace. God then, after his repeated rebellion, withdraws the protecting Grace from him, and the sinner's heart is tainted: there is "a disease in his heart", which is the centre of his being; his spiritual state is ruined. God's guidance is withdrawn from him.

5430. The mission of Jesus was to his own people, the Jews. C/. Matt. x, 5-6. See also Matt. xv, 24: "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of Israel;" also Matt. xv, 26: "It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs."

5437. Cf. Matt. v. 17.

5439. "Aḥmad", or "Maḥammad", the Praised One, is almost a translation of the Greek word Pariciptat. In the present Gospel of John, xiv. 16, xv. 26, and xvi. 2, the word "Comforter" in the English version is for the Greek word "Paracetes", "whice halled to the help of another, a kind frend", rather than "Comforter". Our doctors contend that Paraceletos is a corrupt reading for Periciptos, and that in their original saying of Jesus there was a prophecy of our holy Prophet Aḥmad by name. Even if we read Paracelete, it would apply to the holy Prophet, who is "a Mercy for all creatures" (xxi. 107) and "most kind and merciful to the Believers" (ix 128). See also n. 416 to iii. 81.

5439. Our holy Prophet was foretold in many ways; and when he came, he showed forth many Clear Signs, for his whole life from beginning to end was one vast miracle. He fought and won against odds. Without learning from men he taught the highest wisdom. He melted hearts that were hard, and he strengthened hearts that were hard, and he strengthened hearts that were tender and required support. In all his sayings and doings men of discernment could see the working of God's hand; yet the ignorant Unbelievers called it all Sorcery!—called that unreal which became the most solid fact of human history!

Falsehood against God, Even as he is being invited $40 To Islam? And God Guides not those Who do wrong.

- 8. Their intention is
  To extinguish God's Light
  (By blowing) with their mouths: 5441
  But God will complete
  (The revelation of) His Light,
  Even though the Unbelievers
  May detest (it).
- It is He Who has sent His Apostle with Guidance And the Religion of Truth, That he may proclaim it Over all religion into Even though the Pagans May detest (it).

SECTION 2.

5440, It is wrong in any case to uphold falsehoods and debasing superstitious, but it is doubly wrong when these are put forward in rivalry or opposition to the light of eternal Unity and Harmony which is falam. See C 7-11. God sends His guidance freely, but withdraws His Grace from those who willfully do wrong

544! God's Light is unquenchable. A foolish, ignorant person who thinks of extinguishing it is like a rusire who wants to blow out effective light as he might blow out a rush candle! "ITHE their mouths "a so implies the babble and cackle of Ignorance against God's Truth. The more the foolish ones try to quench God's Light, the clearer It shines, to shame them!

442 ** Oter all religion**: in the singular; not over all other religions in the plural. There is really in the other true Religion, the Message of God, submission to the Will of God; this is called liber. It was the religion perached by Moses and Jesus; it was the religion perached by Moses and Jesus; it was the religion of Abraham. Noah, and so the positives, by whatever usual it may be called. If people corrupt that pure light, and call the it could be inferred sames, we must be at with them, and we may allow the names for not could be inferred sames; we must be say that them, and we may allow the names for not could be inferred sames; we must be say that with them, and we may allow the names for not could be compared to the could be supported by the could be

- 11. That ye believe in God And His Apostle, and that Ye strive (your utmost) In the Cause of God, With your property And your persons: That will be best for you, If ye but knew!<sup>204</sup>
- 12. He will forgive you
  Your sins, and admit you

  The supreme Achievement.
- 13. And another (favour
  Will He bestow), which ye 8118
  Do love, help from God
  And a speedy victory.
  So give the Glad Tidings
  To the Believers.

5444. It would indeed be a great and wonderful bargain to give so little and get so much, if we only knew and understood the comparative value of things,—the sacrifice of our fleeting advantages for forgiveness, the love of God, and eternal bliss.

344. The supreme Achievement has already been mentioned, viz: the Gardens of Etenity in the Presence of God. But lest that seem too remote or abstract for the understanding of men not spiritually advanced, another type or symbol or metaphor is mentioned which the men who first heard this Message could at once understand and appreciate — which ye do love "; viz; thelp and Victory. For all striving in a righteous Cause we get God's help: and however much the odds against us may be, we are sure of victory with God's help. But all life is a striving or struggle,—the spiritual life even more than any other; and the final victory there is the same as the Garden of Etenity.

346. If we seek God's help, we must first help God's Cause, i.e. dedicate ourselves to Him entirely and without reserve. This was also the teaching of Jesus, as mentioned in this verse. As found in the New Testament, the metaphor used is that of the Cross. "Then said Jesus to his disciples, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. xvi. 24).

5447. See jii 52, and n. 392; and for the Biblical reference, see the last note. The names of the twelve Disciplus will be found in Matt. z. 2-4.

5448. A portion of the Children of Israel - the one that really cared for Truth-believed in Jesus and followed his guidance. But the greater portion of them were hard hearted, and remained in their beatert track of formalism and false racial pride. The majority seemed at first to have the upper hand when they thought they had crucified Jesus and killed his Message. But they were soon brought to their senses | Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus in A D 70, and the Jews have been scattered ever since. "The Wandering Jew" has become a bye-word in many literatures. On the other hand, those who followed Jesus permeated the Roman Empire, brought many new races within their circle, and through the Roman Empire, Christianity became the predominant religion of the world until the advent of Islam. So is it promised to the people of Islam: they must prevail if they adhere to the Truth Badr (A H 2) was a landmark against Pagan Arabia, Qadisiya (A H 14) and Madain (A H 16, against the might of Persia: Yarmilk (A ff 15) against the might of the Byzantine Empire in Christian Syria; and Heliopolis (A.H. 19) against the same Empire in Christian Egypt and Africa. These were symbols to external events. The moral and spiritual landmarks are less tangible, and more gradual, but none the less real. Mark how the arregance and power of Priesthood have been queiled; how superstition and a helief in blind Fate have been checked; how the freedom of human individuals has been reconciled with the sanctity of the mage in the law of Divorce; how the civil position of women has been caused; how temperature and sobriety have been identified with religion; what impetus has been given to knowledge and experimental science; and how economic reconstruction is a been pioneered by sectional actiones for the expenditure and distribution of wealth.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LXII (Jumu'a).

This is the sixth Sūra in the Medina series of short Sūras which began with . S. lvii.

The special theme here is the need for mutual contact in the Community for worship and understanding: for the spirit of the Message is for all, ignorant and learned, in order that they may be putified and may learn wisdom

The date has no special significance: it may be placed in the early Medina neriod, say between A.H. 2 and 5.

Summary.—The Revelation has come among unlearned men, to teach purity and wisdom not only to them but to others, including those who may have an older Message but do not understand it: meet solemnly for the Assembly (Friday) Prayer, and let not worldly interests deflect you therefrom (Ixii, 1-11, and C. 241).

C. 241.—God's care for His creatures is universal.

([xu. 1-11.] His Revelation is for all—ignorant

And lowly as well as learned and high-placed,—Now and for ever. None can arrogantly Claim exclusive possession of God's gifts: If they do, search their hearts within, and you Will find them afraid of Death and Judgment. Men of Faith! On the Day of Assembly, When you hear the call, hasten earnestly To answer it: leave off business, and join In common worship and devotion. Then You may disperse about your ordinary business, But remember the Praises of God always: Si is He stone that can provide.

5449 See n. 5408 to lix. 24, where I have explained the difference in signification between subbaha and jusabbiji. The latter form is used here, to express an actual fact. "Everything declares the Praises and Glory of God, because Giod's mercies extend to all His creatures. He sends His Revelation for the benefit of the ignorant and unlettered as well as for those who have learning in their midst, especially as the latter are apt, by the very weight of their ponderous learning, to miss the real point and spirit of God's Message."

550. See his 23, and in 5402. Here we have two of the divine attributes repeated from hix 23 and two from the end of hix 24, implying a reminiscence of all the beautiful divine attributes mentioned in that passage.

$451. The Unlettered: as applied to a people it refers to the Arabs, in comparison with the People of the Book, who had a longer tradition of learning, but whose failure is referred to in verse 5 below. As applied to individually it means that God's Revelation is for the bonefit of all men, whether they have worldly learning or not.

$452, His Signs: God's wonderful Signs in the Constinution and in His ordering of the world. It may include the Vertes of the Quran, but they are more specifically referred to as "Scripture" in the next line but one.

543 Cf. ii 129, and n 129. Read again the at router in the last verse. God is full Sovereign, and therefore cares for all His subjects, including the re-entral and most ignorant, and so his His apostles or messengers to them. He is the rioh. $454. Previous ignorance of error is no bar to a person or hathor feetiving the bin-sings or und's revelation, provided such person or nation has the will be come to God and the capacity to bear High Message. For an instance of incapacity through arrogance, see verto a below. For some officiaries on the Arabs as vehicles of the new Light, see C. 12-15.

<sup>5455</sup> Others of them: refers to other persons or peoples who may be ignorant, i.e., others than those among whom the holy Prophet came as an apostle. In other words his Message is for his Arab people and his non Arab contemporates as well as those who live in other ages, and have no personal contact with him or his Companions.

<sup>5158</sup> Standing on Judaism is a very different thing from following the Law and Will of God. An arrogant claim to be a chosen people, to be the exclusive posserrors of divine teaching, to be exempt from any punishment for breaches of the divine law, (cf. if 80), is presumptious blaspheny. It may be Judaism, but it is not in the spirit of Moses.

But of all people they are the most tenacious of this life and the good things of this life. And they know that their grasping selfish lives have run up a score of sin against them, which will meet its recompense.

$361, Finday," the Muslim Sabbath", is primarily the Day of Assembly, the weekly-meeting of the Congregation, when we show our unity by sharing in common public worship, preceded by a Khuiba, in which the Imâm (or Leader) reviews the week's spiritual life of the Community and offers advice and exhoration on holy living. Notice the gradations of social contact for hissims if they followed the wise ordinaces of their Path. (1) Each individual remembers God for himself or herself five or more times every day in the home or place of business, or local mosque, or open air, as the case may be. (2) On Finday in every week, there is a local meeting in the central mosque of each local centre,—it may be a village, or town, or ward of a big city. (3) At the two 'Ids every year, there is a larget local area meeting in one centre, the Id-gash, (4) Once at least in a lifetime, where possible, a Muslim shares in the vast international assemblage of the world, in the centre of Islam, at the Mercan Pilgrimage. A happy combination of decentralisation and centralisation, of individual liberty and collective meeting, and contact at various stages or grades. The mechanical part of this ordinance is easy to carry out. Are we carrying out the more difficult part?—the spirit of unity, brotherhood, mutual consultation, and collective understranding and action?

5162. The idea hebind the Muslim weekly "Day of Assembly" is different from that behind the Jewish Sabbath Struidsyl or the Christian Sunday. The Jewish Sabbath is primarily a commemoration of God sending His work and resting on the seventh day Gen, in. 2; Exod xx. [1]: we are taught that God needs no rest, nor does He feel fatigue (in 153). The Jewish command forbids work on that day but asys nothing about worship or prayer (Exod xx. [0]) our ordinance lays chief stress on the remembrance of God. Jewish formalism went so far as to kill the spirit of the sabbath, and cal forth the protest of Jesus: "The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath, and cal forth the protest of Jesus: "The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath, and cal forth the protest of Jesus: "The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath was ninerited the Jewish spirit: witness the Scottish Sabbath, except in so far as it has ben servilatived. ## INTRODUCTION TO SCRA LXIII (Munafigun).

This is the seventh of the ten short Medina Sûras dealing with a special feature in the social life of the Brotherhood.

The special feature here dealt with is the wiles and mischief of the Hypocrite element in any community, and the need of guarding against it and against the temptation it throws in the way of the Believers.

The battle of Ulud (Shawwal A.H. 3) unmasked the Hypocrites in Medina: see iii, 167, and n. 476. This Sira may be referred to some time after that event, say about 4 A H. or possibly 5 A.H. if the words reported in verse 8 were uttered in the expedition against the Isani Mustaliq, A.H. 5. (See n. 5475 below).

Summary.—False are the oaths of the Hypocrites: they only seek selfish ends: Believers should beware of their wiles and strive devotedly always for the Cause (tkiii, 1-11, and C, 24).

C. 242.-The oaths of Hypocrites are a screen dxm. (-11) For their misdeeds. They think they deceive With their fair exteriors and plausible talk. But their minds are impervious to the real Truth. They may plot to withhold from men of God Such things of this world as they may command: They may plot to expel and persecute the righteous; They may call them ill names and slight them, But to God belong the treasures of the heavens And the earth, and He will bestow according To His wise and universal Plan. Let not The world's foolish craze divert the Believers From the service of God-from good deeds and Charity. Now is the time: all vain will be Your pleas and your regrets when the shadow Of Death cuts off your last chance of Repentance!

Stra LXIII.

Munafique, or the Hypocrites.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,

Most Merciful.

- 1. When the Hypocrites HER Come to thee, they say, "We bear witness that thou Art indeed the Apostle Of God." Yea, God Knoweth that thou art Indeed His Apostle, And God beareth witness That the Hypocrites are Indeed liars.
- 2. They have made their oaths bust A screen (for their misdeeds): Thus they obstruct (men) From the Path of God: Truly evil are their deeds.
- 3. That is because they believed, Then they rejected Faith: So a seal was set file On their hearts: therefore They understand not.
- 4. At them, their exteriors

546. The hypocrite element, if one exists in any society, is a source of weakness and a danger to its health and its very existence. When the holy Prophet came to Medina in Hrifat, his arrival was welcome to all the patriotic citizents it not only united them in common life and healed their old differences, but it brought honour and light to them in the person of the greatest living Teacher of Truth. But there were some baser elements filled wither envy. Such hopes as they had entertained of attaining power and leadership by playing on the animosties of the factions were now dashed to the ground. They now began to work underground. For fear of the majority they dared not oppose the new growing Brotherhood of Righteousness. They tried to underfinue it by intraguing secretly with its enemies and swearing openly its loyally to the holy Prophet. They were thoroughly unmasked and discredited at the battle of Uplus. See iii. 167, and n. 476.

$467, Cf. Iviii. 16, and n. 5358. When they say that Muhammad is the Apostle of God, it is God's own truth: but what is in their hearts? Nothing but falsehood.

5468. Cf. ii. 7. Their double-dealing has fogged their understanding. In Arabic the heart is taken to be the seat of understanding as well as of affection.

5469. The Hypocrites at all times are plausible people, and so were the Hypocrites of Medina. They present a fine exterior; they dress well; they can usually afford fine equipages; they try to win the confidence of every one, as they have no scruples in telling lies, and apparently expressing agreement with every one. Their words are fair-spoken, and as truth does not check their tongues, their flattery and deception know no bounds. But all this is on the outside. As they have no slacerity, nothing that they say or do is worth anything. Please thee; and when They speak, thou listenest
To their words. They are
As (worthless as hollow)
Pieces of timber propped up, 1100
Unable to stand on their own).
They think that every
Cry is against them. 110
They are the enemies;
So beware of them.
The curse of God be
On them! How are they
Deluded (away from the Truth)!

- 5. And when it is said To them, "Come, the Apostle Of God will pray for your sinal Forgiveness", they turn aside Their heads, and thou wouldst See them turning away Their faces in arrogance.
- It is equal to them Whether thou pray for Their forgiveness or not. **rs God will not forgive them. Truly God guides not Rebellious transgressors.
- They are the ones who say, "Spend nothing on those Who are with God's Apostle, sine To the end that they 5470. Good timber is strong in itself and can support roofs and buildings. Hollow timber is uselass, and has to be propped up against other things. The Hypocrates are like rotten (imber, They have no firm character themselves, and for others they are unsafe props to rely upon.

5471. Their conscience always troubles them. If any cry is raised, they immediately get alarmed and think it is against themselves. Such men are worse than open enemies.

5472. Even hypocrisy like other and can be forgiven by repentance and amendment, provided there is a will and earnest desire to turn from evil and seek the Grace of God In this case there was none.

5473. The stiff-necked rejecters of God's Truth have made a wide gulf between themselves and God's Grace. No prayer for them will help them. In the attitude of rebellion and transgression they cannot obtain God's foreiveness.

6974. The Mukājirām, who had come to be with the holy Prophet in Meduna in exile, were received, helped, entertained by the Angār (Helpers). The Hypocrites in Medina did not like this, and tired in underhand ways to dissuade the good folk of Medina from doing all they could for the series. But their tricks did not succeed. The small Muslim community grew from strength to strength until they were able to stand on their own resources and greatly to augment the resources of their hosts as well. It is goodness that produces strength and prosperity, and God holds the keys of the treasures of man's well-being. It is not for God's enemies to dole out or withhold the unbounded treasures of God.

May disperse (and quit Medina)."
But to God belong
The treasures of the heavens
And the earth; but
The Hypocrites understand not.

8. They say, "If we sars
Return to Medina, surely
The more honourable (element)
Will expel therefrom the meaner "
But honour belongs to God
And His Apostle, and
To the Believers; but
The Hypocrites know not.

$475. Words of this import were spoken by 'Abdullah ibn Ubai, the leader of the Medina Hypocrites, to or about the Exiles, in the course of the expedition against the Band Muşlaig in the court hor fifth year of the Hypa. He had hopes of leadership which were disappointed by the coming to Medina of a man far greater than he. So he arrogated to himself and his clique the title of 'the more honourable (element)' and sightingly spoke of the Emigrants as the "meaner" element that had intruded from outside.

S176. Riches and human resources of all kinds are but fleeting sources of enjoyment. They should not turn away the good man from his devotion to God. "Remembrance of God" includes every alt of service and goodness, every kind thought and kind deed, for this is the service and secrifice which God requires of us. If we fail in this, the loss is our own, not any one clse's: for it stunts our own spiritual growth.

9477. "Substance" or "Sustenance", in every sense, literal and metaphonical. Whatever good we enjoy comes from God, and it is our duty to use some of it in the service of others, for that is Charity and the service of God. Every unselfish act is Charity. And we must not postipone our good resolutions to the future. Death may come suddenly on us, and we cannot then be allowed to plead for more time. Every present moment calls urgently for its good deep.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LXIV (Tagābun).

This is the eighth of the short Medina Süras, each dealing with a special aspect of the life of the Community.

The special aspect spoken of here is the mutual gain and loss of Good and Evil, contrasted in this life and in the Hereafter.

It is an early Medina Sura, of the year 1 of the Hijra or possibly even of the Meccan period just before the Hijrat. (See n. 5494 below).

Summary:—Both the Unbelievers and the Believers were created by the One True God, Who created all and knows all: why should Unbelief and Evil exult in worldly gain when their loss will be as manifest in the Hereafter as will be the gains of the Believers? (Lxiv. 1-18. and C. 243).

C. 243.—The self-same God created all men.

(Ixiv. 1-18) If some do good and others evil,

And ye wonder how the good do suffer

And the evil thrive, remember the Final Goal, when true adjustments will

Be made. The Gainers here will be
The Losers there, and the Losers Gainers.

Some of this exchange you will see
Even here, in this life, for Unbelievers

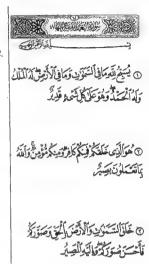

Who deny the Hereafter; but in the Hereafter,
Full account and true adjustment
Of good and ill will follow before
The Judgment-Seat: nay, Good will get
More than its full reward: for God
Is Bounteous, Merciful, Michty, Wise.

Sûra LXIV.

Tagabun, or Mutual Loss and Gain.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. Me hatever is
  In the heavens and
  On earth, doth declare **
  The Praises and Glory
  Of God: to Him belongs
  Dominion, and to Him belongs
  Praise: and He has power
  Over all things.
- 2. It is He Who has
  Created you; and of you
  Are some that are
  Unbelievers, and some **so*
  That are Bellevers:
  And God sees well
  All that ye do,
- 3. He has created the heavens
  And the earth
  In just proportions,
  And has given you shape,
  And made your shapes
  Beautiful: and to Him
  Is the final Goal, ***

5479. Cf. Ixii. 1, and n. 5449. All things by their very existence proclaim the Glory and the Praises of God. He has dominion over all things, but He uses His dominion for just and praiseworthy ends. He has power over all things: therefore He can combine justice with mercy, and His Plan and Purpose cannot be frustrated by the existence of Evil along with Good in His Kingdom.

5480. It is not that He does not see Rebellion and Evil, nor that He cannot punish them. He created all things pure and good, and if evil crept in by the grant of a limited free-will by Him, it is not unforeseen: it is in His wise and universal Plan, for giving man a chance of rising higher and ever higher.

5481. Cf. x1. 64, and n. 4440: also vii. 11 and n. 996. In addition to the beauty and grandeur of all God's Creation, He has endowed man with special aptitudes, faculties and capacities, and special excellencies which raise him at his best to the postion of God's vicegerent on earth. "Beautiful" also includes the idea of "adapted to the ends for which they were created".

$482. "The fixel Goal": not only of mankind, but of all things created, whether material or in the realm of ideas and events. All things return to God: as they do we their origin from Him, so is the return or destination of all of them to God.

4. He knows what is
In the heavens
And on earth;
And He knows what sus
Ye conceal and what
Ye reveal: yea, God
Knows well the (secrets)
Of (all) hearts.

- 5. Imas not the story
  Reached you, of those Who rejected Faith aforetime?
  So they tasted the evil
  Result of their conduct;
  And they had
  A grievous Penalty,
- 6. That was because there Came to them apostles With Clear Signs, But they said: "Shall (mere) human beings also." Direct us?" So they rejected (The Message) and turned away, But God can do without (them): And God is also." Free of all needs, Worthy of all praise.
- 7. Mehe Unbelievers think That they will not be

بَشَامُ مِنْ الْسَكَمُونِ وَالْارْضِ وَيَهَا الْمَا الْسُكُونِ وَالْارْضِ وَيَهَا الْمَا اللّهِ اللّهُ اللّهِ اللّهُ الللللللّهُ اللللّهُ الللّهُ الللللّهُ اللللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ الللّهُ

5483 Not only does He create and develop and sustain all things; but all thoughts, motives, feelings, ideas, and events are known to Him. Therefore we must not imagine that, if some evil seems to go unpunished, it is not known to Him or has escaped His notice. His Plan is was and good in its fullest compass: sometimes we do not see its wisdom and goodness because we see only a broken fragment of it, as our own intelligence is narrow.

5484, "The evil result of their conduct" begins to manifest itself in this very life, either in external events, or in internal restlessness and agonies of conscience. But its culminating force will be seen in the "grievous Penalty" of the Hereafter.

5485 This is referred to in a more expanded form in xiv. 9-11, which see.

5486. Their obedience is not necessary to God, nor will their rejection of Truth affect he validity of Truth or injure the progress of Truth. God is free of all needs or dependence on any circumstance whatever. He sends His Message for the good of mankind, and it is man who suffers by genoring, rejectling, or opposing it.

5187. In other wouls, they think that there is no (titure life, and no responsibility for our actions beyond what we see in the present life. If that were true, all the profits of traind and regions, which remain unpunished in this world—and many do remain unpunished in this world—will remain with the wicked; and all the losses and pain suffered by integrity and uphtenusees, if they find a commensation in this life, will beer find any compensation. This would be an old result in a world of justice. We are taught that this is not time,—that it is certain that it behaves will be refressed in a better former world; that there will be a resurrection of what we call the dead; and that on that occasion the full import of all we did with be made plant to us, and our moral and sputtual responsibility will be (title enforced.)

5489. The Day of Judgment will truly be "a Day of Mutual Loss and Gato", as the title of this Day of Mutual Loss and Gato", as the title of this Bar underates. 5492 What we consider calamities may be blessings in disguise. Pain in the body is often a signal of something wrong, which we can cure by remedial measures. So in the moral and spiritual world, we should in all circumstances hold firmly to the faith that nothing happens without God's knowledge and leave; and therefore there must be some justice and wisdom according to His great universal Plan. Our duty is to find out our own shortcomings and remedy them. If we try to do so in all sincerity of heart, God will give us guidance.

5493. The Apostle comes to guide and teach, not to force and compel. The Apostle's teaching is clear and unambiguous, and it is open and free to all. Cf. also v. 95.

And your children are (some That are) enemies to 5194 Yourselves: so beware Of them! But if ye Forgive and overlook.5495. And cover up (their faults). Verily God is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful.

15. Your riches and your children May be but a trial: 5176 But in the Presence of God. Is the highest Reward.

16. So fear God 3187 As much as ve can: Listen and obey: And spend in charity For the benefit of Your own soul- 5198 And those saved from

The covetousness of their own

وأطبعه أوأنفيقه انحترا

5494. In some cases the demands of families, i.e., wife and children may conflict with a man's moral and spiritual convictions and duties. In such cases he must guard against the abandonment of his convictions, duties, and ideals to their requests or desires. But he must not treat them harshly. He must make reasonable provision for them, and if they persist in opposing his clear duties and convictions, he must forgive them and not expose them to shame or ridicule, while at the same time holding on to his clear duty. Such cases occurred when godly men undertook exile from their native city of Mecca to follow the Faith in Medina. In some cases their families murmured, but all came right in the end.

1559

5495. For the different words for "forgiveness" see n. 110 to ii. 109.

5496. Children may be a "trial" in many senses; (1) their different ways of looking at things may cause you to reflect, and to turn to the highest things of eternal importance; (2) their relationship with you and with each other may confront you with problems far more complicated than those in separate individual lives, and thus become a test of your own strength of character and sense of responsibility; (3) their conflict with your ideals (see n 5494 above) may vex your spirit, but may at the same time search out your fidelity to God; and (4) their affection for you and your affection for them, may be a source of strength for you if it is pure, just as it may be a danger if it is based on selfish or unworthy motives. So also riches and worldly goods have their advantages as well as dangers.

5497. "Fear God" combined with "as much as you can" obviously means; "lead lives of selfrestraint and righteousness": the usual meaning of Tagera; see n. 26 to ii. 2,

5498. Charity is meant to help and do good to other people who need it. But it has the highest subjective value for the person who gives it. Like mercy "it blesseth him that gives and him that takes". It purifies the giver's soul: the affection that he pours out is for his own spiritual benefit and progress. Cf. Coleridge: "He prayeth best who loveth best all things both great and small, for the Great God Who loveth us, Who made and loveth all ".

5500. Cf. ii, 245 and n. 276 Our Charity or Love is called a loan to God, which not only increases our credit account manifold, but obtains for us the forgiveness of our sins, and the capacity for increased sorvice in the future.

5501, Cf, xiv. 5, n. 1877; and xxxv. 30, n. 3917. God's appreciation of our service or our love goes far deeper than its intrinsic merits or its specific expression on our side. His reward is beyond our deserts, and passes over our defects. He judges by our motives, which He can read through and through see next verse.

5502. God's Appreciation and Forbearing Kindness can reach so far beyond our merits, because (1) His universal knowledge comprehends hidden motives, which others cannot see in us; (2) His power is so great that He can afford to reward even the unworthy; and (3) His Wisdom is so great hat He can turn even our weakness into our strength.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LXV (Talāa)

This is the ninth of the ten short Medina Sūras dealing with the social life of the Community. The aspect dealt with here is Divorce, and the necessity of precautions to guard against its abuse. The relations of the sexes are an important factor in the social life of the Community, and this and the following Sūra deal with certain aspects of it. "Of all things permitted by Law", said the Prophet, "divorce is the most hateful in the sight of God". (Abū Da-ād, Sunan, xiii 3). While the sanctity of marriage is the essential basis of family life, the incompatibility of individuals and the weaknesses of human nature require certain outlets and safeguards if that sanctity is not to be made into a fetish et the expense of human life. That is why the question of Divorce is in this Sūra linked with the question of insolent impiety and its punishment.

The date is somewhere about A.H. 6, but the chronology has no significance.

Summary.—Provision to be made for women in case of Divorce; insolent implety always leads to punishment (lav. 1-12, and C, 244).

C. 244.—Guard well your truth and pure integrity (lay 1-12.) In sex relations. Keep the tie

Of marriage sacred: but where it must Be dissolved, use all precautions, to ensure Justice to 'he weeker party and protect The interests of unborn or new-born lixt As well as social decency; and close not To the last the doar of reconciliation.
God's Laws must be obeyed: 'tis man's Own loss if he is deaf to the Voice Which teaches him, or blind to the Light Which guides him. God's universe Of beauty and wonder stands strong in wisdom: Let man but ture himself thereto.

Sing LXV.

Talaa, or Divorce.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

1. Prophet 'When ye Do divorce won en 5001 Divorce them at their Prescribed periods. 5000 And count (accurately) Their prescribed periods: And fear God your Lord: 5506 And turn them not out Of their houses, nor shall They (themselves) leave, 5507 Except in case they are Guilty of some open lewdness. Those are limits Set by God: and any Who transgresses the limits Of God, does verily Wrong his (own) soul: Thou knowest not if 5503 Note that in the first instance the Prophet is himself addressed individually, as the Teacher and representative of the Community. Then the actual directions; "when ye......": are addressed to the Community collectively.

5504 "Of all things permitted by law, Divorce is the most hateful in the sight of God": see Introduction to this SBra. The general directions and limitations of Divorce may be studied in it. 228-232, 236-237, 244, and notes; also iv, 35.

5505. 'Iddat, as a technical term in divorce law, is explained in n. 254 to ii. 228. Its general mening is "a prescribed period": in that general sense it is used in ii. 185 for a prescribed period for fasting.

$506. The prescribed period (see last note) is in the interests of the wife, of the husband, of an unborn child (if there is anu), and of sex laws in nature, and therefore the elementary dicates of refined human society. In English Law the six months' interval between the decree sixt and the decree absolute in divorce attains the same purpose in a round-about way. The Commentators suggest that the divorce should not be pronounced during the courses. Read with ii. 222, this implies that any incipient differences between husband and wife should not be forced to an issue at a time when sex is least attractive and almost repulsive. Everything should be done to strengthen the social and spiritual aspects of marriage and keep down stray impulses of animal instinct. The partles are to thisk seriously in a mood of piety, keeping the fear of God in their minds.

$50?. As laken treats the married woman as a full juristic personality in every sense of the term a married woman has a right, in the married state, to a house or apartment of her own. And a house or apartment implies the reasonable expenses for its upkeep and for her own and her children's maintenance. And this is obligatory not only in the married state, but during the 'iddat, which is necessarily a most trying period for the woman. During this period she must not only not be turned out, but it is not decent for her to leave of her own accord, lest the chances of reconciliation should be dimnished: see the next note.

Perchance God will Bring about thereafter Some new situation 5005

- 2. Thus when they fulfil Their term appointed. Either take them back On equitable terms 600 Or part with them On equitable terms: And take for witness Two persons from among you. Endued with justice, And establish the evidence sole (As) before God. Such Is the admonition given To him who believes In God and the Last Day. And for those who fear God, He (ever) prepares 4511 A way out,
- 3. And He provides for him From (sources) he never Could imagine. And if Any one puts his trust In God, sufficient is (God) For him. For God wil!

5508. A reconciliation is possible, and is indeed recommended at every stage. The first serious differences between the parties are to be submitted to a family council on which both sides are represented (iv. 33); divorce is not to be pronounced when mutual physical attraction is at an ebb (n. 5500); when it is pronounced, there should be a period of probationary waiting; dower has to be paid and due provision has to be made for many things on equitable terms; every facility has to be given for reconciliation till the last moment, and impediments are provided against hasty impulses leading to rupture. "They hissert in oil perhance God will be sing about therefore some more structures."

5509, Cf. ii, 231. Everything should be done fairly and squarely, and all interests should be safeguarded.

5510. Publicity and the establishment of proper evidence ensure that no one will act unjustly or selfusly. All should remember that these are matters of serious import, affecting our most intimate lives, and therefore our position in the spiritual kingdom.

5511. In these very delicate and difficult matters, the wisdom of jurists provides a less satisfactory solution than a sincere desire to be just and true, which is described as the "fear of God". Where such a desire exits. God often provides a solution in the most unexpected ways or from the most unexpected quarters; e.g., the worst enemies may be reconciled, or the cry or the smile of an infant baby may heal seemingly irreparable injuries or unite hearts seemingly alienated for ever. And Paths is followed at once by a psychological feeling of rest for the troubled spirit.

5512. Our anger and our impatience have to be __:bed __Our friends and our mates or associates may seem to us ever so weak and unreasonable, and the circumstances may be ever so disheartening; yet we must trust in God. How ian we measure our own weakness or perhaps blundness? He knows all. His universal Purpose is always good ___ His Will must be accomplished, and we should wish for its accomplishment. His ordering of the universe observes a due, just, and perfect proportion.

5513 Cf. ii 228. For normal women, the 'iddal is the three monthly courses after separation: if there are no courses or if the courses are in doubt, it is three calendar months. By that time it will be clear whether there is pregnance: if there is, the waiting period is till after edilivery.

5514, Cf. n. 5511 above. If there is a true and sincero desire to obey the Will of God and do right, the difficulties will vanish, and these delicate matters will be settled for the greatest happiness of all.

5315. God's ordinance is nothing arbitrary. It is to help us, and to lead us on to our highest good, temnoral and spiritual. If we obey God His wisdom will not only solve our difficulties, but it will remove other ills that we may have, subjective and objective. Each objective has objective and objective and help and use us to more and more luscious pastures. With each step higher, our position becomes more and more sure and our reward more and more precious.

5516. Cf. n. 5507 above. A selfish man, because he has divorced his wife, may, in the probationary period before the divorce becomes absolute, treat her with contumely, and while giving her residence and maintenance, may so restrict it as to make her life mirerable. This is forbidden. She must be provided on the same scale as liet is according to his statius in life. There is still hope of reconciliation, and if not, yet the parting must be honourable.

5517. If there is pregnancy, a sacred third life comes on the scene, for which there is added responsibility (perhaps added hope of reconciliation) for both parents. In any case no separation is possible until after the child is born. Even after borth, if no reconciliation between parents is possible, yet for the nursing of the child and for its welfare the care of the mother remains the duty of the father, and there must be mutual counsel between him and the mother in all truth and sincerity.

5518 "If ye find yourselves in difficulties": e g., if the mother's milk fails, or if her health fails, or if any circumstance arises which bars the natural course of the mother nursing her own child. There may be psychological difficulties also.

5519. That is, the father must stand all expenses, without cutting down the reasonable allowance to which the mother is entitled in the circumstances.

5520. We must trust in God, and do whatever is possible for us in the interests of the young life for which we are responsible. We must not be frightened by difficulties. God will give us relief and provide a solution if we act with honest integrity. Cf. xciv. 5-6.

5521. Insolent implety consists not only in the breach of the rites of religion. Even more vital is the defiance of the laws of nature which God has made for us. These laws, for us human beings include those which relate to our fellow-beings in society, to whom kindness and consideration form the basis of our social duties. Our duties to our families and our children in intimate matters such as were spoken of in the last Section, are as important as any in our spiritual life. Peoples who forgot the moral law in marriage or family life pershed in this world and will have no future in the Hereafter. The lessons apply not only to individuals but to whole nations or social groups.

- 5522. This refers to the present life; apparently the Hereafter is implied in verse 10 below.
- 5523, See last note,
- 5524. There is no excuse for us to go astray, seeing that God in His infinite Mercy has explained to us His Message by His many Signs around us and clearly hy means of the human Teachers and Apostles whom He has sent for our instruction; see next verse.

5525 Cf. xxiv. 40: the unbelievers' state is "like the depths of darkness in a vast deep ocean, overwhelmed with billow topped by billow, topped by dark clouds; depths of darkness, one above another" Cf ii 257: "God is the Protector of those who have Faith: from the depths of darkness He will lead them forth into light."

$326 "Sava Fernaments". The literal meaning refers to the seven orbits or firmaments that we see clearly marked in the motions of the heavenly bodies in the space around us; see xxiii 17.n, 2876. In poetical imagery there are the seven Planetary spheres, which form the lower heaven or heavens, with higher spheres culminating in the Empyrean, or God's Throne of Majerty: see notes 4035-36 to xxxviii. The mystical meaning refers to it evaluous grades in the spiritual or heavenly kingdom, the number seven being itself a mystical symbol, comprising many and yet forming an indivisible integer, the highest indivisible integer of one digit.

5527. See the last note, about the mystic number seven. As there are grades one above the other in the spiritual kingdom, there are similar grades in our life on this earth. If we take the interal megning.—just as we see the heavenly spheres one above another, over our heads, so we can see that the runst of the earth is built up of geological strata one above another.

5528. But in all spheres of life and Creation, whatever conception we are able to form of them, it is certain that the Command or Law of God runs through them all, for His knowledge and power exhend through all things.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LXVI (Takeim).

This is the tenth and last of the series of short Medina Sūras which began with S. Ivii: see Introduction to that Sūra. The point dealt with here is: how far the turning away from sex or the opposition of one sex against another or a want of harmony between the sexes may injure the higher interests of society.

The date may be taken to be somewhere about A.H. 7.

Summary.—The failings of the weaker sex should not turn away men from normal social life: harmony and mutual confidence should be taught and enforced, and God's blessing will descend on the virtuous even if their lot is cast with the wicked (lawi 1-12, and C. 245).

C. 245.—The relations between the sexes are embittered (lxvi. 1-12)

By misunderstandings and conflicts that produce Unhappiness and misery, personal and social. Harmony and confidence are due between The sexes, not disgust or isolation, which may Please some but cause injustice to others. Respect each other's confidence, and if You fail, repent and make amends. The good man seeks virtue for himself And his family. If Evil is yoked to Good, It must take the fruit of its own deeds; The worldly tie will profit naught; But Good should firmly make a stand And will be saved, for God doth care For all His true devoted Servants.

Stra LXVI.

$529. The Prophet's household was not like other households. The Consurts of Purity were expected to hold a higher standard in behaviour and reticence than ordinary women, as they had higher work to perform. See in 1706 to xxxiii. 28. But they were human beings after all, and were subject to the weakcosses of their sex, and they sometimes failed. The imprudence of Radinari-Nisha (see n. 2925 to xxiv, 11) once caused serious difficulties: the holy Prophet's mind was sore distressed, and he renounced the sourcey of his wives for some time. This renunciation seems to be referred to her. The situation was none the less difficult for him because she was a daughter of Hadinar Abil Bake, one of the trust and most intimate of his Companions and heutenants. Radinar Umar's daughter Bafa was also sometimes apt to presume on her position, and when the two combined in sectre councils, and discusted mattes and disclosed secrets to each other, they caused much sorrow to the holy Prophet, whose heart was tender and who treated all his family with exemplary painties and affection.

5530. The tender words of admonstron addressed to the Consorts in maxim. 28-34 explain the situation far better than any comments c n express. If the holy Prophet had been a mere husband in the ordinary sense of the term, he could not have held the balance even between his private feelings and his public duties. But he was not an ordinary husband, and he abandoned his renunciation on his realisation of the higher duties with which he was charged, and which required conciliation with firmness

5531. Cf. ii. 224 If your yows prevent you from doing good, or acting rightly, or making peace between persons, you should explate the yow, but not refrain from your good deed.

5312. Who these two consorts were, and what was the matter in confidence which was disclosed, we are not expressly told, but the facts mentioned in n. 5329 above will help us to understand this passage. It is needless to drag in all the petty womanish tittle-takes which some Commentators have conjecturally collected, or the malicious insituations of those who have not understood the saintly greatness of the holy Prophet. The sacred words imply that the matter was of great importance as to the principle involved, but that the details were not of sufficient importance for permanent record. For the lessons to be drawn, see the notes following.

- 4. If ye two turn in repentance shi To Him, your hearts Are indeed so inclined; But if ye back up Each other against him, Truly God is his Protector, And Gabriel, and (every, Righteous one among those Who believe,—and furthermore, shi The angels—will back (him) up.

5333. The moral we have to draw is manifold, (1) If anything is told us in confidence, especially by one at the head of affairs, we must not divulge it to our closest fixend. (2) If such divulgence is made in the most secret whispers, God's Plan is such that it will come to light and espote those guilty of breach of confidence. (3) When the whispered version is compared with the true version and the actual facts, it will be found that the whispered version is in great part untrue, due to the misunderstanding and exaggeration inevitable in the circumstances. (4) The breach of confidence must inevitably infound to the shame of the guilty party, whose surprise only covers a sense of humiliation. See next note.

5314 There are further lessons 15r Both the party betraying confidence and that encouraging the betrayal must purge their conduct by repentance. (6) Frank repentance would be what their hearts and conscience themselves would dictate, and they must not resist such amends on account of selfish obstinacy. (7) If they were to resist frank repentance and amends, they are only abotting each other's wrong, and they cannot prevail against all the spiritual forces which will be ranged on the side of the right.

5535. Do not forget the dual meaning: Immediate, in application to the holy Prophet, and general, being the lesson which we ought all to learn. The holy Prophet could not be injured by any persons doing anything against him, even though they might unconsciously put him in great Jeopardy: for God, the Angel Gabriel (who was the Messenger to him), and the whole Community, would notect him—to say nothing of the army of angels or hidden spiritual forces that always guarded him. Cl. xxxiii. 56. The general lesson for us is that the good man's protection is that of the spiritual forces around him; it is divine protection, against which human weakness or folly will have no nower.

5536 From the case of two in verse 4, we now come to the case of all the Consorts generally, in verse 5. Cl xxxiii 28.30. Their duties and responsibilities were higher than those of other women, and therefore their failure would also be more serious. This is only hypothetical, in order to show us the virtues expected of 4hem: faith and devotion, worship and service, readiness for travel or hypat, whether they were young or old, new to married life or otherwise. From them again the more general application follows—to all women in Islam.

That God will give him

Who believe, who are devout,
Who turn to God in repentance,
Who worship (in humility),

5537. Shiphit; literally, those who travel about for the Faith, renouncing hearth and home; hence those who go on pilgrimage, who last, who deny themselves the ordinary pleasures of life. Note that the spinitual virtues are named in the detecteding order submitting their wills (slam), faith and devotion turning ever to worship and fauth, and performing other rites, or perhaps being content with averticesm. And this applies to all women, maided gifts or women of mature experience who were well-willows or supparated from previous husbands by divorce.

.538. Note how we have been gradually led up in admonition from two Consorts to all consorts, to all women, to all believers, and to all men and women including Unbelievers. We must carefully guard not only our own conduct, but the conduct of our families, and of all who are near and dear to us. For the issues are most serious, and the consequences of a fall are most terrible.

539. "A Firs tobos fuel is Men and Stones." Cf. ii. 24. This is a terrible Fire: not merely like the physical fire which burns wood or charcoal or substances like that, and consumes them. This spiritual Fire will have for its fuel men who do wrong and are as hard-hearted as stones, or stone Idols as symbolical of all the unbending Falsehoods in life.

5540. Cf. lxxiv, 31. We think of the angel nature as goatle and beautiful, but in another aspect perfection includes justice, fidelity, discipline, and the firm execution of duty according to lawful Commands. So, in the attributes of God Himself, Justice and Mercy, Klindness and Correction are not contradictory but complementary. An earthly ruler will be unkind to his loyal subjects if he does not posits evil-does.

5541. This is no hardship or injustice imposed on you. It is all but the fruit of your own deeds; the result of your own deliberate choice.

5512. The opposition of sex against sex, individual or concerted, having them condemned, we are now exhibited to turn to the Light, and to restife that the good and rightcous can retail their integrity even though their mates, in spite of all their example and piecept, remain in evil and sin.

5513. Whatever may have been the faults of the past, unite in good deeds, and abandon petly sectional jealousies, and God will remove your difficulties and distresser, and all the evils from which you suffer. Inteed He will grant you the Bluss of Heaven, and save your form any humiliation which you may have brought on yourselves by your conduct and on the revered Propher and Teacher whose name you professed to take.

5344. See Ivil. 12, and n. 2288. The darkmest of evil will be dispelled, and the Light of God will be realised by them more and more. But even so they will not be content: for they will pray for the least taint of evil to be removed from them, and perfection to be granted to them. In that exalted state they will be within reach of perfection,—nor by their own merits, but by the infinite Mercy and Power of God.

S345. See ix 73, where the same words introduce the argument against the Hypocrites. Here they introduce the argument against wickedness, which, though given the orivilege of association with goodness and piety, persisted in wicked deeds, and in favour of those noble souls, which, though tied to wickedness, retained their purity and integrity. Two examples of each kind are given,—of women, as this Sdra is mainly concerned with women.

5146. Read Noah satory in xi. 36.48. Evidently his contemporary world had got so corrupt that it needed a great Flood to purge it. "None of thy peop: All believe except those who have believed already. So grieve no longer over their evid deeds. But there were evid nose in his own. family. A foolish and undutiful son is mentioned in xi. 42.46. Poor Noah tried to save him and pray for him as one "of his family"; but the answer came: "he is not of thy family; for his conduct is unrighteous". We might expect such a son to have a mother like him, and here we are told that it was so. Noah's wife was also false to the standards of her husband, and perished in this world and in the Hereafter.

5347. The wife of Lū<sub>1</sub> has already been mentioned more?' once. See xi. 81, and n. 1577; vii. 83, and n. 1051; etc. The world around her was wicked, and vi sympathised with and followed that wicked world, rather than her rightous husban. She suffered the fate of her wicked world.

5348 "False to Bath hasheads": not necessaril and conduct. They had the high privilege of the conditional relationship with the noblest spirits of their age: but if they failed to rise to the height of their dignity, their relationship did not rave them. They could not plead that they were the worker of pious husbands. They had to enter field he any other wicked women. These is personal responsibility belong God. One soul cannot claim the ments of another, any more than one pure soul can be injured by association with a corrupt soul. The pure one should keep its purity inter. See the next two examples.

5550. Her spiritual vision was directed to God, rather than to the worldly grandeur of Pharaoh's court. It is probable that her prayer implies a desire for martyrdom, and it may be that she attained her rown of martyrdom.

531]. 'Imrān was traditionally the name of the father of Mary the mother of Jesus: see n. 375 to sit 35. She was besself one of the purest of women, though the Jewa accused her falsely of unchastity: (A. XIX. 272-8).

5552 Cf. xxi. 91. As a virgin she gave hirth to Jesus: xix. 16 29. In xxxii. 9, it is said of Adam's progeny, man, that God. "fashioned him in due proportion, and breathed into him something of His spirit". In xv. 29, similar words are used with reference to Adam. The virgin birth should not therefore be supposed to imply that God was the father of Jesus in the sense in which Greek mythology makes Zeus the father of Apollo by Latona or of Minos by Europa. And yet that is the docture to which the Christian idea of "the only begotten Son of God." leads.

5533 Mary had true faith and testified her faith in the prophet Jesus and in his revelation as well as in the revelations which he came to confirm (and to foreshadow). She was of the company of the Devout of all ages. The fact that Qānitis (devout) is not here in the feminine gender implies that the highest spiritual dignity is independent of sex. And so we close the lesson of this Sūra, that while sex is a fact of our physical existence, the sexes should act in harmony and co-oceration, for in the highest spiritual matters we are all one, "We made her and her son a Sign for all peoples. Verily this Botherhood of yours is a single Brotherhood, and I amyour Lord and Cherisner; therefore serve Me and on other "(xx. 19 92)

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SÜRA LXVII (Mulk).

We have now done fourteen-fifteenths of the Qur-in, and have followed step by step the development of its argument establishing the Ummat or Brotherhood of Islam

There is a logical break here. The remaining fitteenth consists of short spiritual Lyrics, mostly of the Meccan period, dealing mainly with the inner life of man, and in its individual aspects. They may be compared to Hymns or Psalms in other religious literature. But these short Quranic Sūras have a grandeur, a beauty, a mystic meaning, and a force of earnestness under persecution, all their own. With their sources in the sublimest regions of the Empyrean, their light penetrates into the darkest recesses of Life, into the concrete facts which are often mistaken for the whole of Reality, though they are but an insignificant portion and on the surface and feeting. There is much symbolism in language and thought, in describing the sniritual in terms of the things we see and understand.

It is the contrast between the shadows of Reality here and the eternal Reality, between the surface world and the profound inner World, that is urged on our attention here.

This Sura of 30 verses belongs to the Middle Meccan period, just before S. Ixix, and S. Ixx. God is mentioned here by the name Rahmān (Most Gracious), as He is mentioned by the names of Rabb (Lord and Cherisher) and Rahmān (Most Gracious) in S. xix.

C: 246.-Lordship in right and in fact belones (Izvii. 1-30.) To God Most Gracious, Whose Goodness And Glory and Power are writ large On all His Creation. The beauty and order Of the Heavens above us proclaim Him. Then who can reject His Call but those In pitiful delusion? And who can fail To accept, that truly knows himself And the mighty Reality behind him? The earth and the good things thereof are prepared For man by his Gracious Lord, Who guards Him from hourly dangers. Who sustains The wonderful flight of the Birds in mid-air ? Above, and below, and in mid-air can we see His boundless Signs. We know that His Promise Of the Hereafter is true. The spring and source Of the goodness of things is in Him, and will Appear triumphant when the Hour is established.

Sora LXVII.

Mulk, or Dominion,

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- I. Slessed 8531 be He in Whose hands Is Dominion; 8500 And He over all things Hath Power;—

  Is best in deed: 8508
  And He is the Exalted 5508
  In Might, Oft-Forgiving:—

$554. What do we mean when we bless the name of God, or proclaim (in the optative mood) that the whole Creation should bless the name of the Lord? We mean that we recognise and proclaim His beneficence to us; for all increase and happiness is through Him. "In His hands",—In the hands of Him Who also holds Dominion or Power. In our human affairs we sometimes see the separation of Dominion or Power from Goodness or Beneficence: in the divine nature we recignise that there is no separation or antithesis or 3535, Mala: Dominion, Lordship, Sovereignts, the Right to carry out His Will, or to do all that He wills. Power (in the clause following) is the Capacity to carry out His Will, so that nothing can resist or neutralise is. Here is beneficence completely identified with Lordship and Power; and it is exemplified in the verses following. Note that "Mala" here has a different shade.of meaning from Malakali in xxxvi. 38. Both words are from the same root, and I have translated foith by the word "Dominion". But Malakali refers to Lordship in the Invisible World, while Mala to Lordship in the Visible World.

5556. "Created Death and Life." Death is here put before Life, and it is created. Death is therefore not merely a negative state. In ii, 28 we read: "Seeing that ye were without life (literally, dead), and He gave you life; then will He cause you to die, and will again bring you to life; and again to Him will ye return." In liii, 44, again, Death is put before Life. Death, then, is: (1) the state before life began, which may be non-existence or existence in some other form; (2) the state in which Life as we know it ceases, but existence does not cease; a state of Barzabb (axii). 100), or Bartier or Partition, after our visible Death and before Judgment; after that will be the new Life, which we conceive of under the term Eternity.

5557. Creation, therefore, is not in mere sport, or without a purpose with reference to man. The state before our present Life, or the state after, we can scarcely understand. But our present Life is clearly given to enable us to strive by good deeds to reach a nobler state.

5558. Alt this is possible, because God is so Exalted in Might that He can perfectly carry out His Will and Purpose, and that Purpose is Love, Mercy, and Goodness to His creatures.

وَالَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا بِرَيْنِهِمْ

5559. Cf. ixv. 12. and in 5326-27. The heavens as they appear to our sight seem to be arranged in layers one above another, and ancient astronomy accounted for the motions of the heavenly bodies in an elaborate scheme of spheres. What we are concerned with here is the order and beauty of the vast spaces and the marvellous bodies that follow regular laws of motion in those enormious spaces in the visible world. From these we are to form some conception of the vastly greater invisible World, for which we want special sprittual vision.

$500. Reverting to the symbolism of the external or visible world, we are asked to observe and study it again and again, and a minutely as our powers will allow. However closely we observe it, we shall find no flaw in it. Indeed the region of enquiry is so wast and stretches so far beyond our ken, that our eyes, aided with the most powerful telescopes, will confess themselves defeated in trying to penetrate to the ultimate insysteries. We shall find no defect in God's handiwork: it is our own powers that we shall find all to go begond a certain compass.

5561, " Lowest (or nearest) heaven"; see n. 4035 to xxxvii. 6.

So2. The symbolic imagery of the shooting stars has been explained in xv. 16-18, notes 1951-54; and in xxxvii, 6-10, and notes thereon. The symbolism here takes us a step further. You find in the visible heavens perfection and beauty. The lights and the fires you see are holy and beneficient. But if you make fetishes of them, or hand yourselves to evil superstitions of your own imagination, are you not playing with Blazing Fire? Who can define the limits of your Penalty?

5503. We have seen how the fire in the stars can suggest the beauty and order of the external world; and yet, when it meres with resistance and disharmony, it can burn and destroy. So in the moral and soliritual world. What can be a greater sign of evil, disharmony, and rebellion than to reject the Cherisher and Sustainer, on Whom our life depends, and from Whom we receive nothing but goodness? The Punishment, then, is Fire in its flarcest intensity, as typished in the next two 5564. For shahig see n. 1607 to xi. 106. There shahig (sobs) was contrasted with xalfs' (sighs): in the one case it is the drawing in of breath, and in the other the emission of a deep breath. Here the latter process is represented by the verb fära, to swell, to blaze forth, to gush forth. In xi. 40, the verb fära was applied to the gushing forth of the waters of the Flood; here the verb is applied to the blazing forth of the Fire of Punishment. Fireis personified: in its intake it has a facer appeties; in the flames which it throws out, it has a facer aggressiveness. And yet in ultimate result avil meets the same fate, whether typifled by water of fire.

5565, Cf. xxxix. 71, n. 4368 "Every time": it may not be the same angels who are guarding the gates of Hell every time new inmates come in. The pure, innocent angel nature does not know the crookedness of human evil, and is surprised at so many human beings coming in for pusishment; if wonders if no warning was conveyed to men, whereas in fact men have a warning in Clear Signs during all the period of their probation. The Clear Signs come from Revelation, from their own conscience, and from all nature around them.

5566. God's Signs were not only rejected or defied, but their very existence was denied. Nay, more, even their possibility was denied, and alas! righteous people and spiritual Teachers were persecuted or mocked (xxxvi 30). They were called fools or mademe, or men under a delusion.

5567, Man has himself the power given to him to distinguish good from evil, and he is further helped by the teachings of the great Apostles or World Teachers. Where such Teachers do not come into personal contact with an individual or a generation, the true meaning of their teaching can be understood by means of the Reason which God has given to every human soul to judge by. It is failure to follow a man's own lights sincerely that leads to his degradation and destruction.

5568. They will then have passed through the fire of Judgment and will now be in the fire of Punishment. The Reality will not only now be clear to them, but after the questionings of the angels they cannot even pretend to make any excuses. They will freely confess, but that is not repentance, for repentance implies amendment, and the time for repentance and amendment will have long been past.

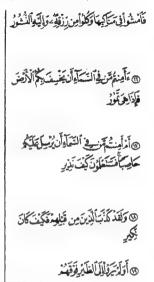

5509. See n. 3902 to xxxv. 18. Read "unsteen" adverbially. To fear the Loyd is to love Him so intensely that you fear to do anything which is against His Will, and you do it because you realise Him intensely in your hearts, though you do not see Him with your bobdily senses. Nors it of any consequences whether other people see your lave or the consequences that flow from your love, for your good deeds are for the love of God and not for show in the eyes of men. Such intensity of love obtains forgiveness for any past, and is indeed rewarded with God's love, which is immeasurably precious beyond any merits you may possess.

5570. He Who creates must necessarily know His own handswork. But leat we should measure His knowledge by such imperfect knowledge as we posses. His knowledge is further characterised as understanding the finest mysteries and being well-acquainted with them (Laff and Khabir): see xxi. 6.5 n. 284.

5571. Zulil is used in il. 71 for an animal trained and tractable; here it is used to qualify the earth, and I have translated 'manageable'. Man has managed to make paths through deserts and over mountains; through tress and seas by means of shups; through the after by means of airways; he has made bridges and tunnels and other means of communication. But this he has only been able to do because God has given him the necessary intelligence and has made the earth tractable to that intelligence.

For you, so traverse Ye through its tracts And enjoy of the Sustenance Which He furnishes: but Unto Him is the Resurrection. 5578

- 16. Do ye feel secure that He Who is in Heaven Will not cause you To be swallowed up <sup>8513</sup> By the earth when it Shakes (as in an earthouake)?
- 17. Or do ye feel secure That He Who is in Heaven Will not send against you A violent tornado <sup>504</sup> (With showers of stones), So that ye shall Know how (terrible) Was My warning?
- 18. But indeed men before them Rejected (My warning): Then how (terrible) was My rejection (of them)? *****
- 19. Do they not observe
  The birds above them.

-5572. In describing God's gifts and mercles and watchful care in this our temporary sojourn on this earth, it is made clear that the ultimate end is the Hereafter. The real Beyond, which is the goal, is the life after the Resurrection.

5573. Cf xvii 68, and n 2263. Also cf, the story of Qartin in xxviii. 76.82. If we feel safe on land, it is because God has made this earth amenable, manageable and serviceable to us (verse 15 above). But if we defy God and break His Law, have we any security, that even this comparatively unimportant safety in a fleeling world will last? Looking at it from a purely physical point of view, have there hot been dreadful earthquakes, typhoons, and tornadoes?

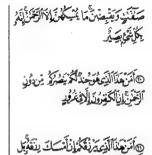

5574. Cf. xvii. 68; and xxiz. 40, n. 3462. Such a violent wind destroyed the wicked Cities which defied 1.0t's warning.

5575. Cf. xxii 42-44, and n. 2822.

5570. The flight of birds is one of the most beautiful and wonderful things in nature. The make and arrangement of their feathers and bones, and their stream-line shapes, from beak to tail, are instances of purposive adaptation. They soar with outstretched wings; they dark about with folded wings; their motions upwards and downwards, as well as their stabilisation in the air, and when they rest on their feet, have given many ideas to man in the science and art of aeronautics. But who taught or gave to birds this wonderful adaptation? None but God, Whose infinite Mercy provides forevery creature just those conditions which are best adapted for its live.

Spreading their wings And folding them in? ***7 None can uphold them Except (God) Most Gracious: Truly it is He That watches over all things.

- 20. Nay, who is there
  That can help you,
  (Even as) an army,
  Besides (God) Most Merciful?
  In nothing but delusion
  Are the Unbelievers.
- 21. Or who is there
  That can provide you way
  With Sustenance if He
  Were to withhold His provision?
  Nay, they obstinately persist
  In insolent impiety
  And flight (from the Truth).
- 22. Is then one who Walks headlong, with his face seed Grovelling, better guided,—Or one who walks see Evenly on a Straight Way?

۞ٲڡۜٙڹۜؿ۬ؽ؋ڮڹٵۼڵؾۼڽؿٲڡٙڵڬٲۺٙؾؿؽ ڛٙڲٵۼڵڝڒڂؙؙؚڡؙ۠؊ؽؽۄ

5577, In the Atabic, there is an artistic touch which it is not possible to reproduce in the translation. $8f$$\tilde{a}$$ (spreading their wings) is in the form of the active participle, suggesting the continuous soams on outspread wings; while yageli\(\tilde{a}\) and $\tilde{c}\) (folding them in) is in the Acrist form, suggesting the spasmodic flapping of wings.

5578. Not the greatest army that man can muster is of any use against the Wrath of God; while the constant watchful care of God is all-in-all to us, and we can never do without it. If the godless wander about in search for blessings otherwise than in the Mercy and Grace of God, they are wandering in vain delusions.

5579. "Sustenance" here, as elsewhere, (e.g., in xvi. 23, n. 2105), refers to all that is necessary to sustain and develop ilie in all its phases, spiritual and mental, as well as physical. God Most Gracious is the Source of all our Sustenance, and if we persist in looking to Vanities for our Sustenance, we are pursuing a mirage, and, if we examine the matter, we are only following obstinate impulses of rebellion and impiety.

5580, Cf. xxvii. 90, and n. 3320. The man of probity is the man who walks evenly on a Straight Walks is feet guided by God's Light and his beart sustained by God's Mercy. The man who chooses evil grovels, with his face down, in paths of Dainess, stumbling on the way, and in constant distrust and fear, the fear of Evil. The two kinds of men are poles apart, although they live on the same acrts, see the same Sizns, and are fed with the same Mercies from God.

5581. Like Abraham trying to guide his unbelieving father: Cf. ziz, 43.

- 23. Say: "It is He Who some Has created you (and made some You grow), and made For you the faculties Of hearing, seeing, Feeling and understanding: Little thanks it is ye give.
- 24. Say: "It is He Who Has multiplied you Through the earth, been And to Him shall ye Be gathered together."
- 25. Phey ask: When will This promise be (fulfilled)?—
  If ye are telling some The truth.
- 26. Say: "As to the knowledge Of the time, it is With God alone: *** I am (sent) only To warn plainly in public."
- At length, when they See it close at hand, the Grieved will be the faces Of the Unbelievers, 5382. The Teacher is asked to draw constant attention to God, the source of all growth and description the Giver of the faculties by which we can judge and attain to higher and higher spiritual dignity. And yet, such is our self-will, we use our faculties for wrong purposes and thus show our ingratitude to God.

'5583. For anshaa see n 923 to vi. 98.

3584. Mankind, from one set of parents, has been multiplied and scattered through the earth. Men have not only multiplied in numbers, but they have developed different languages and characteristics, inner and outer. But they will all be gathered together at the End of Things, when the mischief created by the wrong exercise of man's will will be cancelled, and the Truth of God will reign unlevsrally.

5585. The Unpelievers are sceptical, but they are answered in the next two verses

5586. The Judgment is certain to come. But when it will exactly come, is known to God alone. The Prophet's duty is to proclaim that fact openly and clearly. It is not for him to punish or to hasten the punishment of evil. Gt. xxii 47.1.

$587, "It", s.c., the fulfilment of the promise, the Day of Judgment. When it is actually in sight, then the Unbellevers realise that those whom they used to laugh at for their Faith were in the right, and that they themselves, the sceptics, were terribly in the wrong.

(۱۷) سبورة الملك 1583

And it will be said (To them): "This is (The promise fulfilled), **** Which ye were calling for!"

28. Say: "See ye?—
If God were
To destroy me,
And those with me, xao
Or if He bestows
His Mercy on us,—
Yet who can deliver
The Unbelievers from
A grievous Penalty?"

29. Say: "He is (God)
Most Gracious: we have Believed in Him,
And on Him have we
Put our trust:
So, soon will ye know which (of us) it is
That is in manifest error."

30. Say: "See ye?—
If your stream be
Some morning lost 6001
(In the underground earth),
Who then can supply you
With clear-flowing water?"

تَقِيلُ هَذَا الذِّيَاءُ مَنْ يِهِ مَنْدَعُونَ ٤٤ أَنْ يُتَعَادُنَا هُلَكَنِّيَا لَلْهُ وَمَنْ مَعَى أَوْرَحِمَنَا فَرَ يُونِزُ الْكَوْفِرِينَ مِنْ عَلَامِ أُلِيهِ ٤٤ أَنْ الْكَوْفِرِينَ مِنْ عَلَامِ أَلِيهِ

۞ڡؙٛڶٲؙػڹۛؠؗٛٞڗٳڹٲۻؘۼۜ؆ٙٷٛڲۏڒٵڡٙڽؠٙٳٝؾڲؙؗؠ ۼۣؠۧۅ۪ؠؘػۼڽڹؚ

5588 They had defiantly asked for it. Now that it has come near, and it is too late for repentance, there is "weeping and gnashing of teeth"

5599 The sceptics might say and do say to the righteous: "Ah well! if calamities come, they involve the good with the bad, just as you say that God showers. His mercies on both good and evil!" The answer is: "Don't you worry about us; even supposing we are destroyed, with all who believe with us, is that any consolation to you? Your sins must bring on you suffering, and nothing can ward it off. If we get any sorrows or sufferings, we take them as a mere trial to make us belter, for we believe in God's goodness and we put our trust in Him." See next verse.

5390. See the end of the last note "Our Faith tells us that God will deliver us from all harm if we incerely repent and lead nghteous lives. You, Unbelievers, have no such hope. When the real adjustment of values is established, you will soon see whether we were in the wrong or you!"

550). The Stra is closed with a parable, taken from a vital fact of our physical life, and leading to to the understanding of our spiritual life. In our daily life, what would happen if we woke up some fine, morning to find that the sources and springs of our water-supply had disappeared and gone down into the hollows of the earth? Nothing could save our life. Without water we cannot live, and water-cannot rise above its level, but atways seeks a lower-level. So in spiritual file. Its sources and springs are in the divine wisdom that flows from on, high. God is the real source of that life, as the is of all forms of life. We must seek His Grace and Mercy. We cannot find grace or mercy or blessing from anything lower. His Wisdom and Mercy are like fresh clear-flowing spring-water, not like the muddy murky wisdom and goodness of this lower world which is only relative, and which often hampers-life rather than advances it.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXVIII (Qulam).

This is a very early Meccan revelation. The general Muslim opinion is that a great part of it was second in order of revelation, the first being S. xcvi. (Igras), verses 1-5: see Italia. Chapter 7.

The last Sura having defined the true Reality in contrast with the false standards set up by men this illustrates the theme by an actual historical example. Our holy Prophet was the sanest and wisest of men: those who could not understand him called him mad or possessed. So, in every age, it is the habit of the world to call Truth Falsehood and Wisdom Madness, and, on the other hand, to exalt Selfishness as Planning, and Arrogance as Power. The contrast is shown up between the two kinds of men and their real inner worth.

Summery.—Let the good carry on their work, in spite of the abuse of the Companions of Evil: let all remember God. before Whom all men are on trial (lxviii. 1-33, and C. 247).

True Judgment comes from God, and not from the false standards of men (kwiii, 34-52, and C, 248).

C. 247.—The Pen is the symbol of the permanent Record, (izvin. 1-33.) The written Decree, the perfect Order
In the government of the world. And by that token,
The man of God comes with a Plan
And Guidance that must win against
All detraction. Truth is high above Slander.
But men must be tried sgainst selfshness
And overweening confidence in themselves
Such as would lead them to forget God
And His providence.—like the brothers who built
Castles in the air about their garden
And found it desolate in one night's storm.
But repentance brought them forgiveness:
Thus work the Wrath and the Mercy of God.

Sūra LXVIII.

Qalam, or the Pen, or  $N\overline{u}n$  (see n. 5592).

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. Dun. We By the Pen 5000
  And by the (Record)
  Which (men) write.—
- 2. Thou art not,
  By the grace of thy Lord,
  Mad or possessed. 5644
- 3. Nay, verily for thee Is a Reward unfailing: 5505
- And thou (standest)
   On an exalted standard
   Of character.

5592. Nun is an Abbreviated Letter: see Appendix I at the end of S. ii.

Nun may mean a fish, or an ink-holder, or it may be just the Arabic letter of the alphabet, N, in the last case, it may refer to either or both of the other meanings. Note also that the Arabic rhyme in this Sūra ends in N. The reference to ink would be an appropriate link with the mystic Pen in verse 1. The reference to the fish would be appropriate with reference to the story of Jonah in verse 4.50. Jonahis title is "the Companion of the Fish", (Zun-Non, Xun, 87), as he was, in the story, swallowed by the Fish. The letter N could also symbolically represent Jonah in the Arabic form Yūnis, where the characteristic "Firm Letter" is N.

5993 The mystic Pen and the mystic Record are the symbolical foundations of the Revelation to man. The adjuration by the Pen disposes of the flippant chairer that God's Messenger was mad or possessed. For he spoke words of power, not incoherent, but full of meaning, and through the Record of the Pen, that meaning unfolds itself, in innumerable aspects to countless generations. Muhammad was the living Grace and Mercy of Gud, and his very nature exalted him above abuse and persecution.

594. People usually call any one mad whose standards are different from their own. And madness is believed by superstitious people to be due to demonsteal possession, an idea distinctly in the minds of the New Testament writers; for Luke speaks of a mán from whom the "devils" were cast out, as being then "clothed, and in his right mind" (Luke, viii, 35).

595. Instead of being out of his right mind, the man of God had been raised to a great spiritual d'goity, a reward that was not like an earthly reward that passes away, but one that was in the very core of his being, and would never fail him in any circumstances. He was really granted a nature and character far above the shafts of grief or suffering, slander or persecution.

10. Isn eed not the type
Of despicable man,
Ready with oaths, 600

۞ وَلَانُطِلعُكُلَّ حَلَافِهِ مَّهِينٍ

5596. Though Mussafa's nature caised him above the petty spite of his contemporaries, an appeal is made to their reason and to the logic of events. Was it not his accusers that were really mad? What happened to Walid ibn Mugaira, or Abū Jahl, or Abū Lahab?—and to God's Apostle and those who followed his guidance? The world's history gives the answer. And the appeal is not only to his contemporaries, but for all time.

5597. Men set up false standards of judgment. The right standard is that of God. For His knowledge is complete and all-embracing; He reads hidden motives as well as things that appear before men's sight; and He knows the past history in which the roots of present actions are embedded, as well as the future consequences of present actions.

$598. The enemies of God's truth are sometimes self-deceived. But quite often they have a glimmering of the truth in spite of their desire to shut their eyes. Then they compromise, and they would like the preachers of inconvenient truths to compromise with them. On those terms there would be mutual laudation. This easy path of making the best of both worlds is a real danger or temptation to the best of up, and we must be on ever guard against it if we would really enter into the company of the Righteous who submit their wills to the Will of God. Abū Jahl freely offered impossible compromises to the holy Propher.

5599. The type of each of these hateful qualities is not uncommon, though the combination of all in one man makes him peculiarly despicable, as was Walid ibn Mugaira, who was a ringleader in calumniating our Prophet and who came to an evil end not long after the battle of Badr, in which he received injuries.

5600. It is only liars who swear on all occasions, small or great, because their ordinary word is not believed in. The true man's word, according to the proverb, is as good as his bond.

[S. Exvirt. 11-17.

5001. Besides the self-deceiver and the easy-going man, there is a third type, even more degraded, the same indea of truth of sincertly. He is ready to swear friendship with every ona and fidelity to every cause. But at the same moment he will slander and backbite, and cause misclinif even between good but credidious persons. Evil seems to be his good, and good his evil. He will not only pursue evil courses himself but prevent other people from doing right. When checked, he resorts to violence. In any case, he will instude where he has no right, claiming relationship or power of considerating in crucies which would gladly disown him. He is vain of his wealth or because he has a large following at his beck and call. Religion is to him merely old-fashioned superstition.

5602 "Because" may connect with "heed no!" in verse 10, or with "violent and cruel" in verse 13. In the former case, we construe: "Pay no attention to despicable men of the character described, simply because they happen to have wealth or influence, or much backing in man-power." In the latter case, we construe: "the fellow is violent and cruel, because he is puffed up with his wealth or niches or backing in man-power." In the eyes of God such a man is in any case branded and marked out as a sinner.

5603. God's Signs, by which He calls us, are everywhere—in nature and in dur very heart and soul. In Revelation, every verse is a Sign, for it stands symbolically for far more than it says "Sign" (Ayar) thus becomes a technical term for a verse of the Qurān.

5604, Cf. vi. 25.

$500.6 "Why do the wicked flourish?" is a question asked in all ages. The answer is not simple. It must refer to (1) the choice left to man's will, (2) his moral responsibility, (3) the need of his tuning his will to God's Will, (4) the long-suffering quality of God, which allows the widest possible chance for the operation of (5) His-Mercy, and (6) in the last resort, to the nature of spiritual Punsiment, which is not a merely abrupt or arbitrary act, but a long, gradual process, in which there is room for repentance at every stage. All these points are illustrated in the remarkable Parable of the People of the Garden, which also illustrates the greed, selfishniess, and hevel dissenses of man, as well as his tendency to throw the blame on others if he can but think of a scapegoat. All these foolies are shown, but the Mercy of God is boundless, and even after the worst suns and punishments, there may be hope of an even better orchard than the one lost, if only the repentance is true, and there is complete surrender to God's Will. But if, in spite of all this, there is no surrender of the will, then, indeed, the punishment in the Hereafter is something incomparably greater than the little calaimties in the Parable.

5607. We must always remember, in all our plans, that they depend for their success on how far they accord with God's Will and Plan. His universal Will is supreme over all affairs. These foolish men had a secret plan to defraud the poor of their just rights, but they were put into a position where they could not do so. In trying to frustrate others, they were themselves frustrated.

5608. It was a terrible storm that blew down and destroyed the fruits and the trees. The whole place was changed out of all recognition 5609. Awaking from sleep, they were not aware that the garden had been destroyed by the storm overnight. They were in their own selfish dreams: by going very early, they thought they could cheat the poor of their share. See next note.

If ye would gather The fruits!

- 23. So they departed, conversing In secret low tones, (saying)—
- 24. "Let not a single indigent 600
  Person break in upon you
  Into the (garden) this day."
- And they opened the morning, Strong in an (unjust) resolve.
- 26. But when they saw

  The (garden), they said:

  "We have surely lost our way: sen
- 27. "Indeed we are shut out (Of the fruits of our labour)!" bus
- 28. Said one of them, More just (than the rest): 5613 "Did I not say to you, "Why not glorify (God)?"
- 29. They said: "Glory
  To our Lord! Verily we Have been doing wrong!"

5610 The poor man has a right in the harvest-whether as a gleaner or as an artisan or a menial in an Eastern village. The rich numbers of the orthard in the Parable wanted to steal a march at an early hour and defeat this right, but their greed was punsibled, so that it led to a greater loss to themselves. They wanted to cheat but had not the courage to face those they cheated, and by being in the field before any one was up, they wanted to make it appear to the world that they were unconscious of any rights they were trampling on.

5011. Their fond dreams were dispelled when they found that the garden had been changed out of all recognition. It was as if they had come to some place other than their own smiling garden. Where they had expected to reap a rich harvest, there was only a howing wildenness. They reflected. Their first thought was of their own personal loss, the loss of their labour and the loss of their capital. They had plotted to keep out others from the fruits: now, as it happened, the loss was their own.

5612, Cf. lvi. 67. Also see last note.

5613. This was not necessarily a righteous man, but there are degrees in guilt. He had warned them, but he had joined in their unjust design.

- 30. Then they turned, one Against another, in reproach. 5616
- 31. They said: "Alas for us! We have indeed transgressed!
- 32. "It may be that our Lord Will give us in exchange A better (garden) than this: For we do turn to Him (In repentance)!" MAID
- 33. Such is the Punishment (In this life); but greater Is the Punishment sons In the Hereafter,— If only they knew!

ا قَالَمْ الْمَعْنَ الْمَعْنَ الْمَعْنَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمَعْنِينَ الْمُعْنِينَ الْمُعْنِينَ الْمُعْنِينَ الْمُعْمِينَ الْمُعْمَدِينَ الْمُعْمَدِينَ الْمُعْمَدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمَدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمَدُونَ الْمُعْمَدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمَدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْمُعِمِدُونَ الْمُعْمِدُونَ الْم

C. 248.—To evil and good there can never be the same (txviii. 34-32) End: no authority can the unjust produce

For their false imaginings. In shame

Will they realise this on the Day when all

Illusions will vanish and they find that the time

For repentance is past. The good man should wait

And should never lose patience, even though

Things go dead against him. Jonah suffered

In agony, but his sincere repentance

Brought him the grace of his Lord, and he Joined the company of the Righteous:

For Truth is firm and unshaken, is calm

And works good, through all God? S. Creation.

3614. When greed or injustice is punished, people are ready to throw the blame on others. In this case, one particular individual may have seen the moral guilt of defying the Will of God and the right of man, but if he shared in the enterprise in the hope of profit, he could not get out of all responsibility.

5615. If the repentance was true, there was hope. For God often turns a great evil to our good. If not true, they only added hypocrisy to their other sins.

The Parable presupposes that the garden came into the possession of selfah men, who were so puffed up with their good fortune that they lorgot God. That meant that they also became harsh to their fellow-creatures. In their arrogance they plotted to get up early and defeat the claims of the poor at harvest time. They found their garden destroyed by a storm. Some reproached others, but those who sincerely repented obtained mercy. The "better garden" may have been the same garden, flourishing in a future season under God's gift of abundance.

5616. Even in this life the punishment for heedless or selfish arrogance and sin comes suddenly when we least expect it. But there is always room for God's Mercy if we sincerely repent. If the Punishment in this life seems to us so stupefying, how much worse will it be in the Hereafter, when the Punishment will not be only for a limited time, and the time for repentance will have passed?

5617. All symbols of delight, expressed in terms of sense, are spiritualized by their being referred to the presence of God. The Garden is a joy, but the joy of this spiritual Gardin is the sense of nearness to God. See also Appendix NII, paragraphs 8 to 16 following 81 Ny, pp. 1466 of See 5618. The spiritual arrogance which rejects faith in Cod is perhaps the worst Sin, because it mades itself intpervious to the Mercy of God, as a bed of clay is impervious to the absorption of water. It sets up its own standards and its own will, but how can it measure or bind the Will of God? It sets up its own feishes,—idols, prests, gods, or godings. The feishes nay be even God-given gills or fractiles, intellect or Science, if pushed up to the position of idols. It they are made tivals to God, question them: Will they solve God's mysteries, or even the mysteries of Life and Soul?

5619. It is clearly against both logic and justice that men of righteousness should have the same End as men of sin. Even in this life, man cannot command whatever he chooses, though he is allowed a limited freedom of choice. How can he expect such a thing under a reign of perfect Justice and Truth?

5620. Nor can the Pagans plead that they have any special Covenants with God which give them a favoured position above other mortals. The "Chosen Race" idea of the Jews is also condemned. It is quite true that a certain race or group, on account of special aptitude may be chosen by God to unhold. His timh and preach it. But this is conditional on their following God's Law. As soon as they become arrogant and selfish, they lose that position. They cannot have a perpetual and unconditional lease till the Day of Judgment.

5621. "Partners" in Godhend; as in the doctrine of the Trinty, or indeed in any form of polytheism. Such a doctrine destroys the cardinal doctrine of the Unity of God,

5022. That is, when all mystery will vanish. The Shin is a Symbol for the most hidden mystery, acit is usually doubly covered, first by the skin, and secondly, by clothing. When it is laid bare, men will be summoned to adoration, not necessarily in words, but by the logic of facts, when the Reality will be fully manifest: the Glory will be too dazzling for the Unbehavers, whose past deliberate refusal, when they had freedom to choose, and yet rejected, will stand in their way, 5623. Their past memories, combined with their present position, will then fill them with a sense of the deepest dismay and humiliation. See last note.

5024 Saliman: whole, in full possession of the power of judgment and will; not constrained, as they now will be, by the Punishment staring them full in the face.

5025 Notice the transition between "Me" and "We" in this verse, and again to "I" and "My" in the next verse. The first person phiral ordinarily used in the holy Qur-an as God's Word, is the plural of respect. In Royal decrees the first person plural is similarly used. When the first person singular is used, it marks some special personal relation, either of Mercy or favours (as in ii, 38 or ii. 150) or of punishment, as here, (Cf. n. 56 to ii, 38), 5626 Cf. vii. 182. We must not be impatient if we see the wicked flourish. It may be that the very appearance of flourishing here may be a part of the Punishment. There may be an eventual punishment by a sort of Cataclysm; but evolutionary punishment is gradual and sure. In any case we cannot see God's Plan, as whole, and it is not for us to question it.

$627, Cf In 40 n $074. It costs the Unbelievers nothing to hear the Preacher, for the Preacher asks for no reward, and indeed suffers for their bienefit. The Preacher need not look even for appreciation or conversions. Missala is addressed in the first instance, but there is always a "universal interpretation. The righteous man asks for no reward for his preaching or example, if the did; the value would be too great for the word to pay for. The Unbelievers behave as if they had the secret of the Unseen, but they are empty triflers, for, if they only tried to formulate spiritual laws, they would fail.

5628. Cf. In 41, n. 5073. The Unseen is certainly not within their knowledge or control. It it were they could clearly write it down for their own guidance or the guidance of others. They should listen to the words of inspiration, sent by the Knower of all things.

56.9. This was Zas-Vār, or Jonah, for whom see n. 2744 to xxi.87 88 Cf. also xxxyii, 139-148 and the noises there. Jonah was asked to preach to the people of Nineveh, a wicked city. He met with hostility and persecution, fled from his enemies, and took a beat. He was caught in a storm and thrown into the sea. He was swallowed by a fish or whale, but be repented in his living prison, and was forgiven. But the people of Nineveh were also forgiven, for they, too, repented. Here is a double altegory of God's mercy and forgiveness, and a command to patience, and complete and joyful submission to the Wull of God.

  Say: "Surely he is possessed!"
- 52. But it is nothing less Than a Message soal To all the worlds.

5630, Cf. xxxvii. 145-146, and n. 4126.

5631. Jonah was chosen by God's Grace and Mercy to be God's Apostle to Nineveh. If in his human fraitly he lost a little patience, he suffered his punishment, but his true and sincere repentance and recognition of God's goodness and mercy restored him from his physical and mental distress, and from the obscuration of the spiritual Light in him.

5632, Cf. iv. 69, n. 596. In the beautiful Fellowship of the Rightrous there is room for all, of every grade of spiritual advancement, from the highest to the most ordinary. But, as in democratic politics every citizen's rights and status have complete recognition, so, in the spiritual Fellowship, the badge of Righteousness is the bond, even though there may be higher degrees of knowledge or experience.

5633. The eyes of evil men look at a good man as if they would "eat him up." or trip him up, or disturb him from his position of stability or firmness. They use all sorts of terms of abuse—" madman" or "one possessed by an evil spirit", and so on. Cf. Izviii. 2 above, and n. 594. But the good man is ummoved, and takes his even course. The Message of God is true and will endure, and it is a Message to all Creation.

5634. This is the extreme autithesis to madness or demoniacal possession. So far from the boly Prophet uttering words disjointed or likely to harm people, he was bringing the Message of true Reality, which was to be the cure of all evil, evil in every kind of world. For the different kinds of worlds see n. 20 to 1. 2.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXIX (Hagga),

This Sūra belongs to the early middle period of Meccan Revelation. The eschatological argument is pressed home: 'the absolute Truth cannot fail; it must prevail; therefore be not lured by false appearances in this life; it is Revelation that points to the sure and certain Reality'.

C. 249.—In this fleeting world few things are what (Itim. 1-32) They seem. What then is sure Reality?

Nations and men in the past assumed

Arrogance and perished because they were unjust,
But that destruction was but a foretaste

Of the Doom to come in the Hereafter, when all

Creation will be on a new plane, and true values

Will be fully established: to the Righteous

Will be Bliss, and to Evil, Punishment.

The Word of Revelation is not a Poet's

Imagination or a Soothsayer's groping

Into the future. It is God's own Message,

Of Mercy to the Righteous, and warning

To those who reject the Truth. Praise

And Glory to the name of God Most High!

Sūra LXIX.

Hagga, or the Sure Reality.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful,

- I. The Sure Reality ! 5655
- 2. What is the Sure Reality?
- 3. And what will make Thee realise what The Sure Reality is?
- 4. Fighe Thamud ****

  And the 'Ad people (Branded) as false

  The Stunning Calamity! ****
- 5. But the Thamud,— They were destroyed By a terrible Storm 5038 Of thunder and lightning!
- 6. And the 'Ad,—seed They were destroyed. By a furious Wind, Exceedingly violent:

۞كَنَّبَ ثَمُودُ وَعَادٌ بَٱلْقَارِعَةِ

۞ فَأَمَا غُودُ فَأَهُلِكُوا بِٱلطَّاغِيةِ

وَأَمْاعَادُ فَأَخُلِكُواْ يَخِيجُ صَرْصَرِعَائِيةٍ

5635. Al-baggar: the sure Truth: the Event that must inevitably come to pass; the state in which all falsehood and pretence will vanish, and the absolute Truth will be laid bare. The questions in the three verses raise an air of mystery. The solution is suggested in what happened to the Thamdd and the 'Ad, and other people of antiquity, who disregarded the Truth of God and came to a violent end, even in this life,—symbolically suggesting the great Catacitysm of the Hereafter, the Day of Doom.

5636 For these two peoples of antiquity, see n. 1043 to vii, 73, and n. 1040 to vii, 65.

5637. Another description of the terrible Day of Judgment. This word  $Q\bar{u}ri'u$  also occurs as the title of S. ci.

5638. The Thamud were addicted to class arrogance. They oppressed the noor. The prophet Salib preached to them, and put forward a wonderful she-camel as asymbol of the rights of the poor, but they ham-strung her. See n 1044 to vii. 73. They were destroyed in a mighty calamity, an earthquake accompanying a terrible thunderstorm.

5639 The 'Ad were an unjust people spoilt by their prosperity. The prophet Hüd preached to them in vain. They were apparently destroyed by a terrible blast of wind. See n 1040 to vii. 65. See also xii. 13-16, n, 4483, and liv. 19, n. 5144.

- 7. He made it rage Against them seven nights And eight days in succession: So that thou couldst see The (whole) people lying Prostrate in its (path), As if they had been Roots of hollow palm-trees <sup>26,10</sup> Tumbled down!
- 8. Then seest thou any
  Of them left surviving? 5611
- And Pharaoh, 5683
   And those before him, 7983
   And the Cities Overthrown, 2646
   Committed habitual Sin,
- And disobeyed (each)
   The apostle of their Lord;
   So He punished them
   With an abundant Penalty.
- We, when the water (Of Noah's Flood) overflowed Beyond its limits,<sup>566</sup> Carried you (mankind), In the floating (Ark), 5640. A graphic simile. Dead men all lying about like hollow trunks of palm-trees, with their roots exposed 1. The 'Ad were reputed to be of a tall stature.

5641. The calamity was thorough. The 'Ad were destroyed, and then the Thamud, and only the tradition of them was left behind. See the references in n 5636.

5642. Pharaoh's Apostle was Moses. See the story in vii, 103-137 and the notes there. Pharaoh was inordinately proud, and his fall was proportionately great; it gradually extended to his dynasty and his people: See Appendix V of S vii, p. 410.

5613. If we follow the sequence of peoples whose sins destroyed them, as mentioned in vit, 59158, we begin with Noah, then have the 'Ad and the Thambd, then the Cities of the Plain, then Middian, then the people whose prophet was Moses (who occupies a central place in the canvas), and then the Pagan Quraish, to whom came the last and greatest of the prophets, our holy Prophet Muhammad. This is the chronological sequence. Here there is no detail, no even complete mention But Noah is alluded to last, and the 'Ad and the Thambd mentioned first, because the latter two belong to Arab tradition, and this is specially addressed to the Pagans of Mecca. Pharaoh is mentioned rather than Moses for the same reason, and any others are "those before Pharaoh's."

5644 The Cities Overthrown . Sodom and Gomorrah, Cities of the Plain, to whom Lot preached: see ix. 70, n. 1330; and vii. 80.84, n. 1049

5615, It was a widespread Flood. Cf. vii. 59-64; also zi. 27-49. Noah was ridiculed for his preparations for the Flood: see zi 38, n. 1531. But God had commanded him to build an Ark, in order that mankind in that region should be saved from perishing in the Flood. But only those of Faith got into the Ark and were saved. As the Ark was built to God's command, God "carried you (mankind) in the floating (Ark)".

- 12. That We might
  Make it a Message see
  Unto you, and that ears
  (That should hear the tale
  And) retain its memory
  Should bear its (lessons)
  In remembrance. see
- 13. When, when one Blast is sounded On the Trumpet, 5548
- 14. And the earth is moved,
  And its mountains, Mis
  And they are crushed to powder
  At one stroke,—
- On that Day Shall the (Great) Event Come to pass,
- And the sky will be Rent asunder, for it will That Day be flimsy,
- 17. And the angels will be On its sides, 5550

إِنْ يَغِنَكُمُ الْكُرُورُ وَيَقِيهَا أَذُنُ وُغِيهَا اللهُ وَالْحَيَةُ اللهُ وَالْحَيْدُ اللهُ
5646. It was a memorial for all time, to show that evil meets with its punishment, but the good are saved by the mercy o God.

5647. Cf. the biblical phrase. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear" (Mart. xt. 15). But the phrase used here has a more complicated import. An ear may hear, but for want of will in the hears the hearst may not wish, for the future or for all time, to retain the memory of the lessons he has heard, even though for the time being he was impressed by it. The penetration of the truth has to be far deeper and subtiler, and this is desired here.

5648. We now come to the Inevitable Event, the Day of Judgment, the thems of this Sura. This is the first Blast referred to in xxxix. 68, n. 4343.

5649. The whole of our visible world, as we now know it, will pass away, and a new world will come into being. The mountains are specially mentioned, because they stand as the type of hardness, size, and durability. They will be "crushed to powder", i.e., lose their form and being at one stroke.

5650. The whole picture is painted in graphic poetical images, to indicate that which cannot be adequately described in words, and which indeed our human faculties with their present limited powers are not ready to comprehend. The heavens will be rent asunder. We imagine the angels to live in the heavens. How shall we picture their state? They will gather round the sides, for the vells which hid the Glory of God will be gone, and that Glory will be the Throne, the symbol of His power and authority, of His justice and truth, 'Cf. also xxxix. 75.

And eight will, that Day, Bear the Throne of the Lord above them.

- 18. 陳hat Day shall ye be Brought to Judgment: Not an act of yours That ye hide will be hidden.
- 19. Then he that will be Given his Record In his right hand 6042 Will say: "Ah here! Read ye my Record!

563). See last note. Angels represent manifestations of divine gloty. The number eight has perhaps no special significance, unless it be with reference to the shape of the "Throne". The Oriental Thione is often octagonal, and its bearers would be one at each corner. Or, lift is a square throne, there might be four bearers, and four in relief at any given time, making eight in all. The whole description is symbolicial, as representing the majesty of God Most High.

5652. Cf. xvii. 71, where the righteous are described as those who are given their record in their right hand at Judgment. In Ivi. 27, 38, and other passages, the righteous are called "Companions of the Right Hand".

5633. The righteous one rejoices that the faith he had during this world's life was fully justified, and is now actually realised before him. He quite understood and believed that good and evil most meet with their due consequences in the Herrafter, however much appearances may have been against it in the life in the lower world, "is the days that are gone."

5654 The symbolism is that of ripe, luscious grapes, hanging low in heavy bunches, so near that they could be gathered and enjoyed in dignified ease. Cf. also lv. 54; lxxvi. 14.

5655. Cf. is. 110: "Whatever good ye send forth for your souls before you, ye shall find it with God: for God sees well all that ye do."

5656. It will be a wholly new world, a new earth and a new heaven, when the blessed might well think with calm relirf of "the days that are gone". Cf. xiv, 48, and n 1925. Even Time and Space will be no more, so that any ideas that we may form here will be found to have become wholly obsoidele by them.

5657. This is in contrast to the righteous ones who will receive their record in their right hand, Cf. Ixix, 19, n. 5652. The righteous are glad when they remember their past: their memory is itself as precious possession. The unjust are in agony when they remember their past. Their memory is itself as greevous punishment.

$658. The death as from this life was but a transition into a new world. They would wish that that death had been the end of all things, but it will not be.

5659. The intensest agony is when the soul loses power over itself, when the personality tries to realise itself in new conditions and cannot: this is life in death.

5660. Perhaps the word for 'bind' should be construed: 'bind his hands round his neck. to remind him that his hands when they were free were closed to all acts of charity and mercy': Cf. xvii. 29, xvii. 29.

5601. The effects of sin are described in words of glowing imagery. (1) "Size him": the first attep of the sinner is that he loses his spiritual liberty, and becomes a slave to passion, prejudice envy, hated, and all the brood of evil. (2) "Bind him": his hands are bound mound his nerk; all his powers and generous impulses are checked and his sympathres are dried up. (3) "Bundans to the Blazing First: he is then consumed in the Flames of Destruction, for which he has made himself fit. (4) "Make him march in a chain": the consequences of sin ramily and extend, and it becomes a long chain, a chain seventy cubits long, that holds him in thrall from not one butt many points of view. "Oh! what a tangled web we weave, when first we practise to deceive!" "Seventy" implies an indefinitely large number as in its. 80.

5662. The grip of sin was fastened a sinners because they forsook God. They ran after their own tusts and worshipp d them, or they ran after God's creatures, ignoring Him Who is the cause and source of all good.

5663. Cf. cvii. 3; lxxxix, 18. The practical result of their rebellion against the God of Mercy was their sympathies dried up. Not only did they not help or feed those in need, but they hindered others from doing so. And they have neither friend nor sympathy (food) in the Hereafter,

<sup>5666.</sup> They wounded many people by their cruelty and injustice in this life. And the symbol of their reward is that they should feed on the corruption that issues from such wounds. Who but a sinner can contemplate such a thine?

565. This is an adjuration in the same form as that which occurs in Ivi. 75, Ixx. 40, xc. 1, and elsewhere. God's Word is the quintessence of Truth. But what if someone doubts whether a particular Message is God's Word communicated through His Apostle, or merely an imaginary take presented by a poet, or a soothsayer's vain prophecy? Then we have to examine it in the light of our highest spiritual faculties. The witness to that Word is what we know in the visible world, in which falsehood in the long run gives place to truth, and what we know in the invisible world, through our highest spiritual faculties. We are asked to examine and test it in both these ways.

5666. Henoured apostle: one that is worthy of honour on account of the purity of his life, and may be relied upon not to invent things but to give the true inner experiences of his soul in Revelation.

5667. A poet draws upon his imagination, and the subjective factor is so strong that though we may learn much from him. we cannot believe as facts the wonderful tales he has to tell. And the poet who is not a Seer is merely a vulgar votary of exaggerations and falsehoods.

568. A soothsayer merely pretends to foretell future events of no profound spiritual consequence. Most of his prophecies are frauds, and none of them 1s meant to teach lessons of real admonition. Such admonition is the work of an honoured apostle.

5669. The right hand is the hand of power and action. Any one who is seized by his right hand is prevented from acting as he wishes or carrying out his purpose. The argument is that if an impostor were to artise, he would soon be found out. He could not carry out his fraud indefinitely. But the men of God, however much they are persecuted, gain more and more power every day, as did the holy Prophet, whose truth, earnestness, sincerity, and love for all, were recognised as his life unfolded tiself.

5670. This would effectually stop the functioning of his life.

5671. The protection which the men of God enjoy in circumstances of danger and difficulty would not be available for impostors.

5672. The Message of God is glad tidings for those who believe in Him and follow His Law, for it is a message of Mercy and Forgiveness through repentance and amendment. But in the case of the wicked it is a cause of sorrow, for it denounces sin and proclaims the punishment of those who do not turn from evil.

5673. All Truth is in itself certain. But as received by men, and understood with reference to mean's psychology, certainty may have certain degrees. There is the probability or certainty resulting from the application of man's power of judgment and his appraisement of evidence. This is 'idmest'yaq's, certainty by reasoning or inference. Then there is the certainty of seeing something with our own eys. "Seeing is believing." This is 'dimety-qeris, certainty by personal inspection, See cit. 5.7 Then, as here, there is the absolute Truth, with no possibility of error of judgment or error of the eye, (which stands for any instrument of sense-perception and any ancillary aids, such as microscopes, etc.). This absolute Truth is the bagge-traphs spoken of here.

5674. As God has given us this absolute Truth through His Revelation, it behaves us to understand it and be grateful to Him. We must celebrate His praises in thought, word and deed,

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA LXX (Ma'ārii).

This is another eschatological Süra closely connected in subject-matter with the last one. Patience and the mystery of Time will show the ways that climb to Heaven. Sin and Goodness must each eventually come to its own.

Chronologically it belongs to the late early or early middle Meccan period, possibly soon after S. lxix.

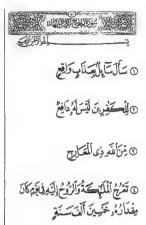

C. 250,-Man can ascend to the Presence of God, (lxx. 1-44.) But by gradual Ways and in process of Time. But what is Time? A Day is as fifty Thousand years, on two different planes. What seems near is far, and what seems far is near. So will be Judgment, when things as we know them Will be transformed completely in a world All new. Evil will come to its own. Whatever its masks in this transitory world, And good will surely reach its goal. The good life is patient, in prayer And well-doing, Faith and the earnest search For the Good Pleasure of God, purity and probity. These are the paths to the Heights and the Gardens Of Bliss. No evil can enter there: For the evil are other ways, leading By steep descent to dark Ignominy!

Stira LXX

Ma'arii, or the Ways of Ascent.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. A questioner asked ****
  About a Penalty
  To befall--
- 2. The Unblievers, The which there is none To ward off.—
- (A Penalty) from God, Lord of the Ways Of Ascent, sorts
- 4. 理he angels and
  The Spirit **** ascend
  Unto Him in a Day *****
  The measure whereof
  Is (as) fifty thousand years:

5675. Any one might ask, When will Judgment come? That question usually implies doubt, The answer is: the mystery of Time is beyond man's ecomprehension. But there is something which touches him closely and concerns his conduct and his future welfare, and that is explained in four propositions. (I) Judgment is sure to come, and none can ward it off; (2) it will exact a dreadful Penalty from Unbelievers, but the righters have nothing to fear; (3) it will be a Penalty from God, the Lord of both Justice and Mercy; it will not be merely a blind calamity of fate; and (4) further we are reminded of another title of God. Lord of the Ways of Ascient? is which means that though He sits high on His Throne of Glory. He is not inaccessible, but in His infinite Mercy has provided ways of ascient to Him; are next note

5676. Ma'arij: stair-ways, ways of ascent. In xbiit, 33, the word is used in its literal sense; "silver staur-ways on which to go up". Here there is a profound spurtual meaning. Can we reach up to God Mort High? In His infinite graze He gives that privilege to angles and spiritual beings, man being such in his highest aspect. But the way is not easy, nor can it be travelled in a day. See the next two notes.

507, Rél; "The Spirit", C, luxviii. 30, "the Spirit and the angels"; and xevii. 4, "the angels and the Spirit". In xvi. 2, we have translated Righ by "inspiration". Some Commentators understand the angel Gabriel by "the Spirit". But I think a more general meaning is possible, and fits the context better. Man is gifted with the Spirit of God: xv. 29. In the spiritual kingdom we are all raised to the light of the Countenance of God, and His Glory transforms us.

5678. But such a glorious transformation is not to be attained without the highest spiritual exertion, and if we measure time as we measure it on the plane of this life, it may take thousands of years. In the spiritual plane it may be just a day or a moment, Cf. XXXII. 4-5, and notes 3632 and 3634.

۞ وَلا يَشْفُلُ حَيْمُ خَيِيمًا

٥ يُجَرُّونَهُ زُيْرُدُ ٱلْجَرِيمُ

5679. The man of God, persecuted and in trouble with the world, should yet hold Patience not the sort of patience which goes with complaints expressed or suppressed, as in the early history of Job, but the sort of patience that is covient with the ordering of God's world, for he believes and knows it to be good, as did the holy Prophet Muhammad. Such a patience is akin to Good Pleasure, for it arises from the purest faith and trust in God.

5680. The men of evil may see the just retribution for their sins so far off that they doubt whether it would ever come. But in God's sight, and on the scale of the Universal Plan, it is quite near; for time as we know it hardly exists in the spiritual world. It may come even in this life; but it is bound to come eventually.

5681. Cf. xviii. 29. (where the wrong-doer will have a driok like melted brass in Hell); and zliv. 43. (where his food will be like molten brass). Here the appearance of the sky is compared to molten brass, or, as some understand it, like the dregs of oil. What is conveyed by the metaphor is that the beautiful blue sky will melt away.

5682. Cf ci 5, where the metaphor of carded wool is used. The mountains which seem to solid will be like flakes of wool driven by the carder's hand.

5683. The world as we know it will have so completely passed away that the landmarks in the heavens and on earth will also have vanished. Not only that, but the human relationships of mind and heart will have been transformed by sin into something ugly and dreadful. The sinners will be so overcome with terror at the realisation of their personal responsibility that they will desert their most infinite triends, and indeed their very sight of each other will add to their agony.

. (۷۰) سورة المعارج

Redeem himself from The Penalty of that Day 3661 By (sacrificing) his children,

- 12. His wife and his brother,
- 13. His kindred who sheltered him.

5684. The sinner will offer his children, his family, his kinsmen, who had sheltered and protected him.—in fact everything on earth that he could—as a ransom for himself. Such would be his selfishness and his agony.

3685. What would not the sinner give for his own deliverance! But nothing could save him. The Fire of Hell would be roaring for him!

5666. It would be a Fire not only burning his body, but reaching right up to his brains and his understanding, and—as is said in civ. 7—his heart and affections also. In other words the Penalty tuplified by the Fire will burn into his immost being.

5687. The analysis of sin is given in four master-strokes, of which the first two refer to the will or psychology of the sinner, and the last two to the use he makes of the good things of this life. (1) Sin begins with turning your back to the Right, refusing to face it squarely, running away from it whether from cowardice or indifference. (2) But Conscience and the sense of Right will try to prevent the flight; the Grace of God will meet the sinner at all conters and try to reclaim him; the hardened sinner will deliberately turn away his face from it, insult it, and reject it. (3) The result of this psychology will be that he will abandon himself to greed, to the collection of riches, and the acquisition of material advantages to which he is not entitled; this may involve hypocray, fraud, and crime. (4) Having acquired the material advantages, the next step will be to keep others out of them, to prevent hoarded wealth from fructifying by circulation, to conceal it from envy or spite. This is the spiritual Rake's Progress.

 And those who hold To the truth of the Day Of Judgment;

5688, Man, according to the Plan of God, was to be in the best of moulds (zer, 4). But in order to fulfil his high destiny-he was given free-will to a limited extent. The wrong use of this free-will makes his nature weak (iv. 29), or hasty (xwi. 11), or impatient, as here. That becomes his nature by his own act, but he is spoken of as so created because of the capacities given to him in his creation.

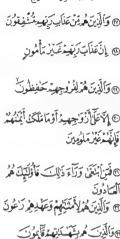

5699. In adversity he complains and gets into despair. In prosperity he becomes arrogant and forgets other people's rights and his own shortcomings. Cf. xli. 49-30.

5690. The description of those devoted to Prayer is given in a number of clauses that follow, introduced by the words. "Those who..." "Devoted to Prayer" is here but another aspect of what is described risewhere as the Faithful and the Righteous. Devotion to prayer does not mean merely a certain number of formal rites or prostrations. It means a complete surrender of one's being to God. This means an earnest approach to and realisation of God's Presence ("steadfastness in Prayer"); acts of practicula and real charity; an attempt to read this life in terms of the Hereafter; the seeking of the Peace of God and avoidance of His displeasure; chastity; probity true and firm witness; and guarding the accrediness of the Presence (verse 34).

5691. See n. 5001 to li. 19. True charity consists in finding out those in real need, whether they ask or not. Most frequently those who ask are idle men who insolently wish to live upon others. But all cases of those who ask should be duly investigated, in case a little limely help may set the erring on the way. But the man with wealth or talent or opportunity has the further responsibility of searching out those in need of his assistance, in order to show that he holds all gifts in trust for the service of his fellow-creatures.

(٧٠) سورة المعارج

- 27. And those who fear 5000
  The displeasure of their Lord,-
- 28. For their Lord's displeasure Is the opposite of Peace And Tranquillity;— 5000
- 29. And those who guard Their chastity,
- 30. Except with their wives
  And the (captives) whom we Their right hands possess,—
  For (then) they are not
  To be blamed.
- 31. But those who trespass
  Beyond this are transgressors;—
- 32. And those who respect
  Their trusts and covenants; ****
- 33. And those who stand firm In their testimonies; 50.00

5692. A true fear of God is the fear of offending against His holy Will and Law, and is therefore akin to the love of God. It proceeds from the realisation that all true peace and tranquility comes from attuning our will to the universal Will, and that sin causes discord, disharmony, and displeasure,—another name for the Wrath of God.

5693. Some would construe this verse: "And their Lord's displeasure is one against which there is no security"; meaning that the punishment of sin may come suddenly at any time, when you least expect it.

5694. Captives of war may be married as such: see iv. 25; but their status is inferior to that of free wives until they are free. This institution of the captives bl war is now obsolete. Such inferiority of status as there was, was in the status of captivity, not in the status of marriage as such, in which there are no degrees, except by local customs, which Islam does not recognise.

5695. For obligations or trusts and covenants, express or implied, see n. 682 to v. 1. They are just as sacred in ordinary everyday life as they are in special spriftual relationships. In addition, our life itself, and such reason and lalents as we possess, as well as our wealth and possessions are trusts, of which we must fulfil the duties punctiliously.

5696. If we know any truth of any kind, to that we must bear witness, as affecting the lives or interests of our fellow-beings.—firmly, not half-heartedly, without fear or favour, even if it causes loss or trouble to us, or if it loses is friends or associates.

5697. Worship or prayer includes honest work, charity, and every good deed. To guard the sacredness of this ideal is to sum up the whole duty of man. We began with "sleadfastness in prayer" in verse 23 above, and after a review of various aspects of the good man's life, close with the sacredness of worship, i.e. living as in the slight of God.

5608, Before thes. The Unbelievers did not believe in a Hereafter. When the Bliss of the Hereafter was described, as in the last verse, they ridiculed it and pretended to be running in for it as in a race. They are here rebuked in the same tone of sancasm.

5699. The animal part of man is nothing to be proud of, and they know it. It is by spiritual effort, and long preparation through a good life that a man can rise above the mere animal part of him to his high dignity as a spiritual being, and his noble destiny in the Herealter.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA LXXI (NUA).

This is another early Meccan Sūra, of which the date has no significance. The theme is that while Good must uphold the standard of Truth and Righteousness, a stage is reached when it must definitely part company with Evil, lest Evil should apread its corruption abroad. This theme is embodied in the prayer of Noah just before the Flood. The story of Noah's agony is almost a Parable for the holy Prophet's persecution in the Meccan period.

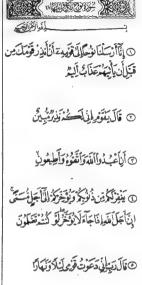

C. 251.—The Prophet's Message, as was that of Noah, (axx. 1-28.) Is a warning against sin, and the Good News of Mercy Through the door of Repentance: for God is loving And long suffering, and His Signs are within us And around us. But the sinners are obstinate: They plot against Righteousness, and place their trust In futile falsehoods. They will be swept away, And the earth will be purged of Evil. Let us Pray for Mercy and Grace for ourselves, For those nearest and dearest to us, And for all who turn in faith to God In all ages and all countries, And amongst all Peoples.

Sura LXXI.

Nuls. or Noah.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. We esent Noah some
  To his People
  (With the Command):
  "Do thou warn thy People
  Before there comes to them
  A grievous Penalty."
- He said: "O my l'eople!
   l am to you
   A Warner, clear and open: 5500
- 3. "That ye should worship God, fear Him, And obey me: ""
- 4. "So He may forgive you Your sins and give you Kespite for a stated Term: For when the Term given By God is accomplished, It cannot be put forward! Stay If ye only knew."
- Ish e said: "O my Lord! I have called to my People Night and day:

5705 Noah's mission is referred to in many places. See specially xi. 25-49 and notes. His contemporaries had completely abandoned the moral law. A purge had to be made, and the great Flood made it. This gives a new starting point in history for Noah's People,—i.e. for the remnant saved in the Ark.

$706. His Warning was to be both clear (i.e. unambiguous) and open (i.e. publicly proclaimed). Both these meanings are implied in Mubin. Cf., Irvii. 26. The meaning of the Warning was obviously that if they had repented, they would have obtained mercy.

3707. Three aspects of man's duty are emphasized: (1) true worship with heart and soul; (2) God-fearing recognition that all evil must lead to self-deterioration and Judgment; (3) hence-repentance and amendment of life, and obedience to good men's counsels.

(۷۱) سورة تــوح

 But my call only Increases (their) flight (From the Right).

7. "And every time I have Called to them, that Thou
Mightest forgive them,
They have (only) thrust
Their fingers into their ears,
Covered themselves up with **10
Their garments, grown obstinate,
And given themselves up
To arrogance.

So I have called to them Aloud;

 Further I have spoken To them in public have And secretly in private,

 "Saying, 'Ask forgiveness From your Lord; For He is Oft-Forgiving; 11. "' He will send rain ""

To you in abundance;

المعلم نيزد هذه عادى الإولاد المناخ المتنافظة التفاقلة في التعلق المتنافظة التنافظة التنافظة التفاقلة المتنافظة التنافظة التناف

@ بُرْسِلاً لَتَمَا يَعَلِيَكُم مِذْ رَارًا

5709. When convincing arguments and warnings are placed before sinners, there are two kinds of accions. Those who are wise receive admonition, repent, and bring forth fruits of repentance, is amend their lives and turn to God. On the other hand, those who are callous to any advice take it up as a reproach, fly farther and farther from righteousness, and shut out more and more the channels through which God's healing Grace can reach them and work for them.

5710. The literal meaning would be that, just as they thrust their fingers into their cars to prevent the voice of the admonisher reaching them, so they covered their hodies with their garments that the light of truth should not prestrate to them, and that they should not even be seen by the Preacher. But there is a further symbolic meaning. "Their garments" are the adornments of vanilies, their evil habits, customs, and traditions, and their ephemeral interests and standards. They drew them closer round them to prevent the higher Light reaching them. They grew obstinate and gave themselves up to the grossest form of selfah arrogance.

5711. Noah used all the resources of the earnest preacher: he dinned the Message of God into their ears; he spoke in public places; and he took individuals into his confidence, and appealed privately to them; but all in vain.

5712. They had perhaps been suffering from drought or famine. If they had taken the message in the right way, the rain would have been a blessing to them. They took it in the wrong way, and the rain was a curse to them, for it flooded the country and drowned the wicked generation. In the larger Plan, it was a blessing all the same; for it purged the world, and gave it a new start, morally and solutivality.

12 "' Give you increase
In wealth and sons;
And bestow on you
Gardens and bestow on you
Rivers (of flowing water). 314

13. "'What is the matter
With you, that ye
Place not your hope
For kindness and long-suffering
In God,—

14. "'Seeing that it is He That has created you In diverse stages?"

15. "See ye not
How God has created
The seven heavens
One above another."

16. "And made the moon A light in their midst, And made the sun As a (Glorious) Lamp?"

 " 'And God has produced You from the earth, Growing'(gradually). ۞ۅؙڬؽۮۮؙڲڔٲۿڗٳۅڗؾؽڹڎۏۼۘۼۘٮڵٲڴۯۼؾؙڬۊ ۉؿۼڡڵڴڴٲڿۯٵ ۞ٵڴڲڵٲڎؽٷڹٙڽڵؽۄۊۼٲٮڰ ۞ۅؘڡٙۮڂٙڵڰڴڒٲڟۄؘۯڰ

5713. Each of these blessings—rain and crops, wealth and man-power, flourishing gardens, and present a streams—are indications of prosperity, and have not only a material but also a spiritual meaning. Note the last point, "rivers of flowing water". The perennial synthings make the prosperity as it were permanent: they indicate a settled population, honest and contented, and enjoying their blessings here on earth as the foretasts of the eternal joys of heaven.

$714. Cf. xrii. 5, and notes 2773-2777; also xxiii. 12-17, and notes 2872-2875. The meaning here may be even wider. Man in his various states exhibits various wonderful qualities or capacities, mental and spiritual, that may be compared with the wonderful workings of nature on the earth and in the heavens. Will he not then be grateful for these Mercies and turn to God, Who created all these marvels ?*

5715. See n. 5559 to igvii. 3.

5716, Cf. xxv. 61, where the sun is referred to as the glorious Lamp of the heavens: "Blessed is the Who made the Constellations in the skies, and placed therein a lamp, and a moon giving light,"

5717. Cf. iii, 37, where the growth of the child Mary the Mother of Jesus is described by the same word habit, ordinarily denoting the growth of plants and trees. The simile is that of a seed sown, that germinates, grows, and dies, and goes back to the earth. In man, there is the further process of the Resurrection. Cf. also xx, 55,

5719. Fijiji implies valley-roads or passes between mountains. Though there are mountain chains on the earth, God's artistry has provided even in such regions, valleys and channels by which men may go about. Mountain roads usually follow the valleys.

5719-A. Sinners always resent it as a reproach that righteous men should speak to them for their own good. They prefer smooth flatterers, and they worship power even though the depositaries of power are selfish men, who neither profit themselves nor profit others by the wealth and man-power that they collect round themselves. They forget that mere material things may be a delusion and a snare unless the moral and spiritual factor behind them senctifies them.

5710. Having got material resources the wicked devise plots to get rid of the righteous whose presence is a raproach to them. For a time their plots may seem tremendous and have the appearance of success, but they can never ordeat Cod's Purpose.

5722. Such Pagan superstitions and cults do not add to human knowledge or human well-being. They only increase error and wrong-doing. For example, how much lewdness resulted from the Greek and Roman Saturnala! And how much lewdness results from riskald Hois songs! This is the natural result, and Noah in his bitterness of spirit prays that God's grace may be cut off from men who hug them to their hearts. They mislead others; let them miss their own mark! See also verse 28 below.

S223. The Punishment of sin seizes the soul from every side and in every form. Water (drowning) indicates death by suffocation, through the nose, ears, eyes, mouth, throat, and lungs. Fire has the opposite effects: it burns the skin, the limbs, the flesh, the brains, the bones, and every part of the body. So the destruction wrought by sin is complete from all points of view. And yet it is not death knowled he a mercular clease from the Penalty, and the soul steeped in sin has closed the gates of God's Mercy on itself. There they will abide, unless and "except as God willeli" (vi. 128). For time and eternity, as we conceive them now, have no meaning in the wholly ew world which the soul enters after death or Judgment.

$724. The Flood was sent in order to purge all sin. The prayer of Noah is not vindictive. It simply means, "Cut off all the roots of sin". See next note,

APPENDIX XIII.

Ancient Forms of Pagan Worship (see laxi. 23, n. 5721).

From prehistoric times man has sought to worship powers of nature, or symbols representing those powers, or idols representing those symbols. In vulgar minds they become debased superstitions, and seem to come into competition with the worship of the one True God.

- 2. The five names mentioned in Ixxi. 23 represent some of the oldest Pagan cults, before the Flood as well as after the Flood, though the names themselves are in the form in which they were worshipped by local Arab tribes. The names of the tribes have been preserved to us by the Commentators, but they are of no more than archieological interest to us now. But the names of the false gods are interesting to us from the point of view of comparative religion, as, under one form or another, such cults still exist in countries which have not accepted the Gospel of Unity, as they have always existed since man turned from his Maker and Sustainer to the worship of created things or invented fancies.
- 3. The names of the five false gods and the symbols under which they were represented were as follows:—

	Pagan god	Shaps		Quality represented
1.	Wadd	410	Man .		Manly Power.
2.	Suwat		Woman .		Mutability, Beauty.
3.	Yagüth		Lion (or Bull)		Brute Strength.
4.	Ya'üq	9.41	Horse		Swiftness.
5.	Nasr	511	Eagle, or Vultur or Falcon.	e,	Sharp Sight, Insight.

It is not clear whether these names are to be connected with true Arabic verbal roots or are merely Arabicised forms of names derived from foreign cults, such as those of Babyloins or Assyria, the region of Noah's Flood. The latter supposition is probable. Even in the case of Wadd (Affection, Love) and Nasr (Eagle), which are good Arabic words, it is doubtful whether they are not, in this connection, translations or corruptions of words denoting foreign cults.

4. In studying ancient comparative mythologies we must never forget the following facts. (1) Men's ideas of God always tend to be anthropomorphic. The qualities which they admire they transfer to their godhead. (2) But fear in primitive man also leads to the transfer of anything mysterious or imagined to be injurious, to the Pantheon. Such things have to be placated in order that they may not injure man. Thus in popular Hinduism the goddess of smail-pox, which causes terror over an ignorant countryside, has to be worshipped, placated, or appeased with sacrifice, (3) This leads to the worship of animals noxious to man, such as serpent-worship, which has prevailed and still prevails in many primitive areas. In ancient Egyptian mythology the Crocodile (so common in the Nile), the Dog, the Bull, and the Ibis were worshipped both literally and symbolically. See Appendix V, p. 409. (4) But as men's knowledge grows, and they observe the wonderful heavenly bodies and their motions. they begin to feel their sublimity, beauty and mystery, and they transfer their worship to the heavenly bodies. The first great astronomers in the ancient world were the Babylonians and Chaldwans. Among them was Abraham's homeland. The allegory of Abraham (vi. 74-82 and notes) points to the importance of the cult of the worship of heavenly bodies and the fallacy in them. "It is those who believe, and confuse not their beliefs with wrong-that are truly in security, for they are on right guidance" (vi. 82). The Sabæan worship of heavenly bodies in Arabia had probably its source in Chaldma (see last paragraph of n. 76 to ii. 62). (5) A further refined step in Paganism is to worship abstractions, to treat concrete things as symbols of abstract qualities which they represent. For example, the planet Saturn with its slow motion was treated as phlegmatic and evil. The planet Mars with its fiery red light was treated as betokening war and havoc and evil, and so on. I piter, with its magnificent golden light, was treated as lucky and benignant to any who came under its influence. Venus became the symbol and the goddess of carnal love. The Pagan Arabs erected Time (Dahr) into a deity, existing from eternity to eternity, and dispensing good and ill fortune to men. The ancient Ægean religion treated the vital principle in the same way, as spontaneous and eternal, and traces of this are found in many religions, ancient and modern. (6) The next step was to reincarnate as it were these qualities in beings of flesh and blood, with lives, feelings, and passions like those of ordinary men and women. and to fill up a confused Pantheon with gods and goddesses that quarrelled, hated, loved. were jealous, and suffered or enjoyed life like human beings. In such a Pantheon there was room for demi-gods and real human heroes that were worshipped as gods. The Greek poets and artists were past masters in carrying out this process, under cover of which they discussed profound human problems with great power. They made religion dramatic. While they gained in humanism, they lost the purer spiritual conceptions which lift the divine world far above the futilities and crimes of this life. Hierarchical Christianity has suffered from this inheritance of the Greek tradition. (7) Where there was a commingling of peoples and cultures, several of these ideas and processes got mixed up together. Gods and goddesses of different origins were identified one with another, e.g. Artemis, the chaste virgin huntress goddess of the Greek Pantheon, was identified with Diana of the Romans, Diana of the Ephesians (representing the teeming life of nature), and Selene the cold moon-goddess. Similarly Diana was identified with the Egyptian Isis, and Diana's twin-brother Apollo (the sun) with the Egyptian Osiris. Forces of nature, animals, trees, qualities, astronomical bodies, and various other factors got mixed up together, and formed a shapeless medley of superstitions, which are all condemned by Islam.

5. To revert to the worship of the heavenly bodies. The countless fixed stars in the firmament occupied always the same relative positions in the heavens, and did not impress the imagination of the ancients like the objects which stood out vividly with mysterious laws of relative motion. A few individual stars did attract the worshippers' attention; e.g. Sirius the Dog.star, the brightest fixed star in the heavens, with a biuish tinge in its light, and Algol the variable star, being Beta of the constellation Person, whose variations can be perceived by the naked eye in two or three nights, becam connected with musy legends, myths, and superstitions. It is probably Sirius that is referred to as the fixed star in the Parable of Abraham (vi. 76). With regard to the hard stars in their myriads, the astronomers turned their fancy to devising Groups or Constitutions. But the moving "stars", or planets, each with its own individual laws of motion, stood out to them personified, each with a motion and therefore will or influence of its own. As they knew and understood them, they were seven in number, vis.; (1) and 1.2) the moon and the sun, the two objects which most closely and indubitably influence the tides, the temperatures, and the life on our planet; (3) and (4) the two overexplanets, Mercury and Venus, which are morning and evening stars, and never ravel far from the sun; and (5), (6), and (7) Mars, Inpiter, and Saturn, the outer duets, whose elongations from the sun on the colliptic can be as wide as possible, The amber seven became itself a mystic number, as explained in n. 5526 to key, 12.

- b. It will be noticed that the sun and the moon and the five planets got its or. It has been also been also been also been and permitted up with many other myths and ideas. In late Roman religion it appears in the story of Apollo, the sun and of the sun and of the moon godder. In ancient Ebypt it appears in the mythor the To Diana the moon of Riche Bye, which sees all things. Further, the eagle, or falcon, eyed, or of Ra or Riche Bye, which sees all things. Further, the eagle, or falcon, or hawk, became itself identified with the sun, with its piercing light. The sun myth mixes itself up with the myth of the Nile and with the cycle of legends connected with Isis and Osiris, who were subsequently identified with the moon and the sun divinities. In Babylon the name Shamash (Arabic, Shams) proclaims the glory of the sun-god corresponding to the Oil-Sumerian Utu or Babbar, while the hymns to Sūrya (the sun) in the Rig-Veda and the culs of Mithra in Persis proclaim the dominance of sun-worship.
- 7. Moon-worship was equally popular in various forms. I have already referred to the classical legends of Apollo and Diana, twin brother and sister, representing the sur and the moon. The Egyptian Khonsu, traversing the sky in a boat, referred to the perman and the moon legends also got mixed up with those about the god of magic 'Cooth, and the lbis. In the Vedic religion of India the moon-god was Soma, the feath, and the name was also applied to the juice which was the drink of the wise. It may be noted that the moon was a male divinity in ancient Semitic religion, and the Arabic word for the moon traumant of the masculine gender. On the other hand, the Arabic word for the sun (sharmer of the feminine gender. The Pagan Arabs evidently looked upon the sun as a god. and the moon as a god.
- i) Of the five planets, perhaps Venus as the evening star and the morning star alternarily impressed itself most on the imagination of astro-mythology. This planet was is different places considered both male and female. In the Bible (Isaiah, xiv. 12), the verifical forward than fallen, O Lucifer, son of the morning! "are understood to refer var Mouning Star is the first instance, and by analogy to the King of Babylon. The: lieve of the Christian Church, on the other hand, transferred the name Lucifer to Satan, the power of evil. Mercury is a less conspicuous planet, and was looked upon as a chile in the family, the father and mother being the moon and the sun, or the sun and the moon (according to the sex attributed to these divinities), or else either the sun or the moon was the father and Venus the mother (the sexes being inter-changeable in the myths). Of the three outer planets, Jupiter is the most conspicuous: indeed, after the sun and the moon, it is the most conspicuous object in the heavens, and was reputed to be beneficent and to bestow good fortune. The sun and the moon being considered in a class apart, Jupiter was considered the father of the planets, and possibly his worship got occasionally mixed up with that of the sun. Mars and Saturn, as has already been stated, were considered malevolent planets, to be feared for the mischief that they might do; for the Pagan Pantheons worshipped powers both of good and evil,

App. XIII.] 1622

9. It is remarkable that the days of the week are named after the seven planets of geocentric astronomy, and if we take them in alternate sequence they indicate the order in which their heavens were arranged with reference to proximity to the earth. The following table represents this grouping:—

Planet	Presiding god or goddess	Day of the week in alternate sequence
Moon	Diana	Snnday
Mercury	Mercury	Tuesday
Venus	Venus	Thursday
The Sun	Apollo	Saturday
Mars	Mars	Monday
Jupiter	Jupiter	Wednesday
Saturn	Saturn	Friday

This alternate sequence is carried into a circle, as the total number is seven, itself a mystic number.

10. These cross-currents and mixtures of nature-worship, astral-worship, heroworship, worship of abstract qualities, etc., resulted in a medley of debasing superstitions which are summed up in the five names, Wadd, Suwa', Yaguth, Ya'uq, and Nasr, as noted in paragraph 3 above. The time of Noah is taken to be the peak of superstition and false worship, and the most ancient cults may thus be symbolically brought under these heads. If Wadd and Suwa' represented Man and Woman, they might well represent the astral-worship of the moon and the sun, or the sun and the moon, or they might represent human self-giorification, the worship of Self as against God, or they might represent the worship of Manly Power and Female Beauty, or other abstract qualities of that kind. On the other hand, it is possible that the worship of Jupiter and Venus itself got mixed up with the worship of the sun-moon pair. One pair being identified with another pair in a Septet, the number seven was reduced to five, and the five (itself a mystic number) might itself represent the seven planets as then worshipped, Further, it may be that Nasr (the vulture, falcon, hawk, or eagle, the Egyptian Horus) also represents a solar myth, mixed up with the cult of the planets. These cross-currents of astro-mythological mixtures of cults are well-known to students of ancient popular religions. If the five names, from another angle of vision, represent qualities, the Wadd-Suwa' pair (Sun-Moon, Jupiter-Venus) would represent manly power and womanly beauty or mutability respectively, and the three remaining ones (paragraph 3) might represent Brute Strength, like that of a Bull or a Lion; Swiftness like that of a Horse or sharpness (of sight or intelligence) like that of a vulture, hawk, or eagle,

11. It may be noted that the five names of deities mentioned here to represent very ancient religious cults are well-chosen. They are not the names of the deities best known in Mecca, but rather those which survived as fragments of very ancient cults among the outlying tribes of Arabia, which were influenced by the cults of Mesopotamia (Noah's country). The Pagan deities best known in the Ka'ba and round about Mecca were Lat, 'Uzza, and Manat. (Manat was also known round Yathrib, which afterwards became Medina.)-See liii, 19-20. They were all female goddesses. Lat almost certainly represents another wave of sun-worship: the sun being feminine in Arabic and in Semitic languages generally. "Lat" may be the original of the Greek "Leto", the mother of Apollo the sun-god (Bacyclobadia of Islam, 1, p. 380). If so, the name was brought in prehistoric times from South Arabia by the great Incense Route (n. 3816 to xxxiv. 18) to the Mediterranean, 'Uzza probably represents the planet Venus. The origin of Manat is not quite clear, but it would not be surprising if it also turned out to be astral. The 360 idols established by the Pagans in the Ka'ba probably represented the 360 days of an inaccurate solar year. This was the actual " modern " Pagan worship as known to the Ouraish contemporary with our Prophet. In sharp contrast to this is mentioned the ancient antediluvian worship under five heads, of which fragments persisted in outlying places, as they still persist in different forms and under different names in all parts of the world where the pure worship of God in unity and truth is not firmly established in the minds and hearts of men.

References: The classical work on Arabian idol-worship is fon al-Kalbi's Kitab-ul-genam, of the late second century of the Hijra. The book is not easily accessible. Our doctors of religion have evinced no interest in the study of ancient cults, or in comparative religion, and most of them had not before them the results of modern archeology. But a modern school of Egyptian archeologists is arising, which takes a great deal of interest in the antiquities of their own country. For astral worship consult Hastings' Encyclopædia of Religion and Elhics, articles on "Sun, Moon, and Stars." as worshipped in different countries. Consult also Sir E. A. Wallis Budge, Gods of the Egyptians. London 1904; A. H. Sayer, Religions of Ancient Egypt and Babylonia, Gifford Lectures, Edinburgh 1902; M. Jastrow, Religion of Babylonia and Assyria, Boston 1898; E. W. Hopkins, Religions of India, London 1896; G. A. Barton, Sketches of Semitic Origins, New York 1902. Any Classical Dictionary would give details of Greek and Roman Mythology. It is curious that the Indus Civilization, which resembles the Second Pre-diluvian Culture of Elam and Mesopotamia, does not clearly disclose any signs of astral worship. But this study is still in its tentative stage. There is tree and animal worship, phallic worship, and the worship of the great Mother-goddess. Animal worship regards strength, courage, virility, or swiftness, as in the Pagan Arabian deities we have been considering, See Sir John Marshall, Mohenjo Dave and the Indus Civilization, 3 vols. London 1931.

Sir J. G. Frazer, in his Adonis, Attis, and Ossers (4th ed., London 1914, Vol. 1, pp. 8-9) refers to Allatis or Eresh-Kigal as "the stern queen of the infernal regions" in Babylonian religion: she was the goddess of the nether regions, of darkness and desolation, as her counterpart is har was the chief goddess of the upper regions, of reproduction and fertility, associated with the planet Yenus.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SÜRA LXXII Jinn).

This is a late Meccan Sūra, of which we can be tolerably certain of the date. It was two years before the Hijtat, when the Prophet, despised and rejected in his native city of Mecca, went to evangelise the lordly men of Taif. They maltreated him and nearly killed him; what caused him even greater pain was the maltreatment of the humble and lowly men who went with him. Tabari has handed down that memorable Prayer of faith and humility which he offered in the midst of his suffering. On his return journey to Mecca, a glorious vision was revealed to him,—hidden spiritual forces working for him,—people not known to him accepting his mission while his own people were still rejecting him. Within two months some strangers from Medina had privately met him and laid the foundations of that Hijrat which was to change the fate of Arabia and the course of world-history.

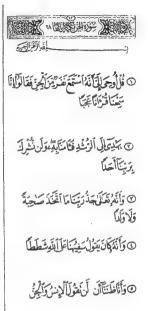

C. 252.-Spiritual Truth finds its lodgment

(laxis, 1-28) In all sorts of unexpected places, and in all sorts Of unexpected ways. The man of God, When most depressed by the buffets of a world Steeped in selfishness, sees a glorious vision: Hidden spiritual forces work for him. Make known the truth in marvellous ways. And proclaim the Goodness and Judgment of God. They reject all Error and lead others to purify Their wills and come to God. Behold! Every place and time, every gift Is meet for the service of God, the One, The True, Whose Word the righteous one Proclaims and must proclaim at all cost. Man's Duty is plain, but in the Kingdom Of God, through God's chosen ones, We rise to higher and higher Mysteries, As may be expedient for us. Yet when Or how our End may be, is not given To man to know : let him but take The Treasures well-guarded, that come to him, And praise the Lord of all Knowledge and Wisdom I Sūra LXXII.

5727. Revelation may be through various channels, and one of the channels may be a vision, by which the Prophet sees and hears events clearly passing before him. This particular vision may be the same as that reterred to more briefly in xiv. 29-3L where see n. 4899. The Jinns had evidently heard of previous revelations, that of Moses (xlvi. 30), and the error of Trinitarian Christianity (ixxii. 3). The people from whom they come have all sorts of good and bad persons, but they are determined to preach the good Message of Unity which they have heard and believed in.

5728. For Jinns, see a, 929 to vi. 100. We may take these to be spirits ordinarily unseen, or people who were strangers in Arabia, but had in their own private way heard and believed in the Gospel of Islam.

5729. The Hofy Qur-an would be to them a wonderful Recital-both in subject-matter and in the circumstance that it had come in Arabia among a pagan and ignorant nation.

5730. They abjure paganism and also the doctrine of a son begotten by God, which would also imply a wife of whom he was begotten. Cf. vi. 101.

Should say aught that is Untrue against God. 8781

- 'Exrue, there were persons Among mankind who took shelter With persons among the Jinns, But they increased them In folly.<sup>5785</sup>

  The secrets of heaven;
  But we found it filled
  With stern guards
  And flaming fires, <sup>8798</sup>
- 9. 'We used, indeed, to sit there In (hidden) stations, to (steal) A hearing; but any Who listens now black Will find a flaming fire Watching him in ambush.

عَلَالْتَوكَذِبَا ۞ وَأَنْهُ رَكَانُ رِجَالُ لُرُنَا لَا يَسِي يَعُودُ وَنَ بِرِجَالِ مِنَ الْجُنِي فَا دُوهُمْ نَعَقَا ۞ وَأَنْهُ مُنْ طَنُوا كُمَا طَلَنَتْ أَنَ لَنَ بَعِنَا اللهُ أَحَدًا ۞ وَأَنْكُ لَمُنْ اللّهَ مَنَا السَمَّا مَ فَوَجَدْ مَهُا مُلِكَ حَرَبُنا مَنْ لِيكًا وَمُنْهُمُا ۞ وَأَنَاكُنَا لَمُعْمُ لِمِنْهُمَا مَقَالِمَةً لِلسَّمْعُ فَنَ يَسْتَقِعَ الْأَنْ يَهُولُهُ فِي الْمُنْ الْمُعْمُ لِمِنْهُمَا وَصَدًا

5731. No one ought to entertain false notions about God. For by joining false gods in our ideas of worship, we degrade our conception of ourselves and the duty we owe to our Creator and Cherisher, to Whom we have to give a final account of life and conduct. If we worship idols or heavenly bodies, or human beings, or any creatures, or false fancies born of self or foolish abstractions, or the lusts and desires of our own hearts, we are not only doing violence to Truth, but we are causing discord in the harmony of the world.

5733. See notes 1931, 1953, and 1954 to xv. 17-18. See also n. 5562 to lxvii. 5. The speakers here have repented of sin and evil; but they recognise that there are evil ones among them, who love steath and prying, but their dark plots will be defeated by vigilant guardians of the Right, whose repulse of the attacks of evil is figured by the shalts of meteoric light in the heavens.

5734. What is the force of "now"? It refers to the early Meccan period of Revelation. It means that whatever excuse there may have been before, for people to it y to seek out the hidden truths of the Unseen World through spirits, there was none now, as the perspicuous Qur-ān had restored the Message of Unity and cleared religion of all the cobwebs, mysteries, and falsehoods with which priestoral and pious fraud had overlaid it. The result is that such seekers after false hidden knowledge in the thing the difference of the priestoral find themselves confronted now by the flaming fire of the Qur-ān, which, like the shafts of meteoric light (see last note), will lie in wait for and inju such priestoraff and black magic in the bud,

They frankly confess that they do not clearly understand whether on the whole as after a uncery to mankind or a punishment for mankind for saking the paths of God. But they well by feel that it must be a blessing if all seek right Guidance.

<sup>5736.</sup> See last note. In any sign lasty know that God's Truth and God's Plan must prevail, and no one can frustrate God's property or except from it. Why not then bring the human will into conformity with it, and find Person as then have found, by the acceptance of Faith?

<sup>5737.</sup> Possibly, from this word's traindards, it may be that a man suffers for his Faith. He may be laughed at, persecuted, and account's hart, "in mind, body, or estate". But he is not perturbed, the takes it all cheerfully, because he knows shat when his full account is made up—real gain against apparent loss,—he is a gainer rathe through a loser. And his Faith tells him that God is a just God, and will never allow him to suffer an empastice, or permit the account of his merit to appear one whit shorter than it is.

<sup>5738.</sup> Any one who responds to true cluidance, and submits his will to God, finds that he makes rapid progress in the path of right conduct and right life. He gets more and more assurance that his destination is the Garden of Pilico.

5739. An unjust life carries its own condemnation. It does no good to itself or to any one else. It bears no fruit. It becomes merely fuel for the Fire of Punishment.

5740. Rain: literally, water: stands for all kinds of blessings, material, moral, and spiritual. Among the spiritual blessings, as the insight into higher things, which results from our will and endeavour to stand firm on the right Way, the natural, inoria, and spiritual Law established by God. All blessings come by way of trial: the more we have, the more is expected of us. A man of gifts, talents, or insight is expected to show a higher standard of love and unselfshness than one less grited, just as a rich man is expected to give more in charry! than a poor man.

5741. To remember God is to realise His presence, auknowledge His Goodness, and accept His guidance. If we fail to do so, by deliberately turning away, He will withdraw His Grace, and that will be a severe Penalty indeed.

5742. This is a Meccan Stra, and Marjid must be understood, not in the later technical sense of a Morque, but in the root meaning, of any place, or occasion of worship or humble prostration in the service of God, or any limbs or faculties or accessories used in such worship, e.g., hands and feet, lips and voice, understanding or organisation. A number of meanings therefore follow. (1) No place of worship whatever should be used for the worship of any other but the time God. The Karba was then full of idols, but the idols and their votarius; were usurpers. (2) Worship should not be mixed up with vain objects, but should be reserved for the sincers service of God. (3) All our gifts are for God's service, which includes the service of His creatures, and not for our vainglory

19. "Yet when the Devotee sits Of God stands forth To invoke Him, they sit just Make round him a dense crowd."

5743. The Devotes of God: the boly Apostic Muhammad.

5744. They. The immediate reference was to the Pagan Quraish who were then in possession of the Kaba and who put all sorts of obstacles and indignities in the way of the holy Prophet for preaching the One True God and denouncing isolo-worship. They used to surround him and mob him and to treat him as if he was guilty of some dreadful crime. But the wider application refers to the habit of the world to make a marked man of any who diverges from the beaten paths of their favourite sins and who pleads earnestly for the cause of Truth and righteousness. They ridicule him; they surround him with jeers and obloquy; and they try to make the physical condition of his tife as difficult for him as possible.

5745. 'Do not suppose that I am going to harm you individually or socially; the very opposite is my wish; but I cannot force you to right conduct; that must depend upon the purification of your own faith and will.'

5746. My mission is from God. 1 cannot choose but obey. He has charged me to deliver the Message, and if I were to disobey him, I would myself be worthy of flis punishment, and no one can save me. From every kind of trouble and difficulty my only refuge is in Him. 1 must proclaim His Message: otherwise I am false to the mission He has entrusted to me.

24. At length, when they

Then will they know
Who it is that is
Weakest in (his) helper
And least important
In point of numbers.

25. Say: "I know not whether The (Punishment) which ye Are promised is near," or Or whether my Lord Will appoint for it A distant term.

26. "He (alone) knows the Unseen, Nor does He make any one Acquainted with his Mysteries,—<sup>874</sup>

5747. When the Hereafter arrives, and true values are restored, they will see clearly that the Promise of God was true, and that death on this earth was not the end of all things. Then they will see that those who were accounted weak on this earth will, in the realm of Reality, be the strong ones; those who seemed to have no following here will have, there, all the great and true ones with them, to help them and welcome them to their own ranks.

5748. The coming of Judgment is certain. But the exact time, relatively to our standards on this earth, no one can tell. God alone knows it. Even a Prophet of God, as such, does not know the Mysteries of the Unseen World, except in so far as they have been revealed to him by God's Revelation. Ct. vi. 50, and notes 857.66.

5740. "Mystery", or the Usasen, has two aspects. The relative Usasen is so with reference to a particular person, because of the intervention of Time, Space, or particular circumstances, For example, I cannot use to-day a house which I saw last year, because it has since been pulled down. Or I cannot in Lahore see the "Gateway of India" in Bombay, atinough any one in Bombay can see it. Or I cannot see the satellites of jupiter with the naked eye, though I can through a telescope. But the Absolute Ussen, the Absolute Mystery, or God's Mystery, is something which no creature can know or see, except in so far as God reveals it to him. And God reveals such things to the extent that is good for men, through His choses sposiles, among whom the greatest is Muhammad, the personified Light of Unity. The exact time of the Hour of Judgment has not been so hown, because we must not wait for it, but live as if it is to be at this minute. See last note and next note, and

And then He makes

5751. There is much mysile doctrine here. Revelation is not a méchanical or material thing. It has to be safeguarded from being distorted or curripted by ignorance, seifshness, or the powers of evil. How can its precious and sublle worth and the spiritual safeguards against its misuse by human folly or the perversity of evil, be expressed in plain human words? We can imagine a very great treasure, which has to be transmitted. To guard it against evily-disposed persons, a strong escort is required, to match in front and behind, so as to protect it from all sides. When it reaches its destination, the encort precents its credentials and an lavoice showing the Treasure being transmitted. Then the distined receiver knows that it has come intact and feels satisfied. So about spiritual Revelation. The spiritual man recognises the credentials and checks the contents on the tablets of his own heart and insight. He has then no doubt that it is a true Message from God, and that those who bring it are the true messengers "of their Lord".

5751-A. They: the band of watchers. In "he may know" it is better to construe "he" to refer to the apostle who receives the Message from the "watchers".

5752. Ahāta; surrounds encompasses, encloses, guards on all sides, keeps under his own possession and control, and does not allow to be corrupted or debased. See last note but one,

5753. In the spiritual Kingdom,—as indeed, in all things,—God's knowledge, wisdom, and Plan comprehend all things, great and small. There is nothing which we do, nothing which happens that is outside His account.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXIII (Muzzammil).

This is one of the earliest Sûras to have been revealed. The first was S. xcvi. 1-5 (lgrad), in the fortieth year of the Prophet's life, say about 12 years before the Hijra. Then there was an interruption (Fatra), of which the duration cannot be exactly ascertained, as there was no external history connected with it. The usual estimate puts it at about six months, but it may have been a year or two years. The years were then counted by the luni-solar calendar: see Appendix xi., p. 1077. The second Sūra in chronological order was probably a great portion of S. lxviii. (Qalam), which came after the Fatra was over. About the same time came this Sūra (say third) and S. lxxiv., which follows (say fourth), and the remainder of xcvi. We may roughly put the date of this Sūra at about 11 to 10 years before the Hijra.

The subject-matter is the significance of Prayer and Humility in spiritual life and the terrible fate of those who reject Faith and Revelation.

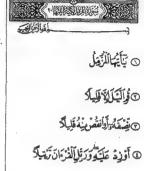

C. 253.—Devote yourself to the service of God
(Ixxiii. 1-20) In the stillness of the night, but not All night. In the world's persecution rely
On God, Who will deal with His enemies fittingly.
Let not God's service be a matter
Of difficulty to you: do all your duties
In whole-hearted remembrance of God,
And ever seek His bountiful Grace.

Stra LXXIII.

Muzzammil, or Folded in Garments.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful.

- 1. thou folded In garments! *****
- 2. Stand (to prayer) by night, But not all night,—985
- 3. Half of it,— Or a little less,
- Or a little more;
   And recite the Qur-ān this
   In slow, measured rhythmic tones.
- Soon shall We send down To thee a weighty Message. *****
- 6. Truly the rising by night Is most potent for governing (The soul), and most suitable For (framing) the Word ***os* (Of Prayer and Praise).

5734. Muzzammii: Some Commentators understand by this, "properly dressed for prayer", or "folded in a theet, as one renouncing the vanities of this world." Muzzammii: some of the tuites of our holy Prophet. But there's a deeper mystic meaning in this and the address. "Thou wrapped up" of the next Sora. Human nature requires warm garments and wrappings to protect the body from cold or heat or rain. But in the spiritual world these wrappings are useless: the soul must stand bare and open before God, in the silence of the night, but not too austerely, as the following verses show.

5755. The Prophet was prone to austerities in the cave of Iliraa, both before and after he received his mission, spending days and rights in prayer and contemplation. See C. 29. Midnight and after-midnight contemplation and p ayers have technically received the name of Tahafjind. See also verse 20 below; also xvii. 79.

3756. At this time there was only S. xcvi., S. Ixvii, and possibly S. Ixxiv, and the opening SGra (Al-Hamd): but the heart of the Apostle had received enlightenment, and that Light was gradually finding expression in the verses of the Qur-An. For us, now, with the whole of the Qur an before us, the injunction is specially necessary. The words of the Qur-An must not be read hastily, merely to get through so much reading. They must be studied, and their deep meaning pondered over. They are themselves so beautiful that they must be lovingly pronounced in tones of rhythmic music.

5757. The Qur-an as completed by degrees, after the Faira (see Introduction to this Sura).

5738. For contemplation, prayer, and praise, what time can be so suitable as the night, when calm and silence prevail, the voices of the market-place are still, and the silent stars pour forth their effoquence to the discerning soul.

.9799. A man of God, as a man, a member of a family, or a citizen, has many ordinary duties to perform; and his work may be made difficult and irksome in protecting those who listen to his preaching and are therefore moiested and persecuted by the world. But while discharging all his ordinary duties, he should work as in the presence of God, and in all matters and at all times retain the sense of God's meanness. His work may be on earth, but his heart is in Heaven.

$760. God is all-in-all. He is not in one place, but in all; and He is Lord of all places. He rush the world. Therefore be not discouraged by the plots or enmity of wicked men. Leave all things to God; trust Him; He is just and will do justice. Only turn away from the unjust, but in a worthy and noble way; i.e., to show them clearly that you do not fear them, but that you leave all affairs in God's hands. If we divide the world into hemispheres from north to south, "East and West" will cover all directions.

5761. Men who enjoy the good things of life have special cause for gratitude to God, Who bestowed them. When they are in the ranks of God's enemies, none but God can adequately deal with them.

3762. The result of sin is the loss of spiritual liberty ("fetters"). The limbs with which a man was intended to move freely about his business in the service of God are tied more and more closely, until they become paralysed, and his will itself becomes degraded.

5763. Another effect of sin is the fire in his being, the confingration in his soul. Evil passions set to the fire talents and capacities in him fall off and are reduced to ashes like time rip a burning house.

5764. Furthermore, the appetite of sin grows with what it feeds on. Unlike a healthy man's food, which passes down his throat, gets assimilated, and yields him nourishment, the sinner's food gets choked in his throat; instead of nourishing him, it causes him pain: instead of satisfying him, it causes the sensation of baulked appetite and the desire for more and more infructuous food!

$765. In general terms, the Penalty of sin may be described as a Penalty Grievous, an Agony, It may come in this very life; but that in the Hereafter is certain! See next verse,

We can also consider punishments from another aspect. The first object of punishment is to protect the inaccent from the depredations of the criminal: we have to bind him. The next object is to produce in his neart the fire of repentance, to consume his seit protectivities and to light his conscience. Where that is not enough, a more drastic punishment for the callous is something which causes him pain in things which ordinarily cause him pleasure, such as food, drink, and the satisfaction of physical needs. People in whom the higher spiritual faculties are dead may perchance be awakened through the lower physical features of their life, which appeal to them. Where this also falls, there is fanily the complete Agony, a type or symbol to terrible to contemplate.

5766. The Judgment is described as a violent commotion which will change the whole face of nature as we know it. Even the hard rock of mountains will be like loose sand running without any cohesion.

5767. Our holy Apostic has to warn his age, i.s. the present age, reclaim it from sin, and be a witness for the righteous and against evil, as Moses did his office in his age. For Pharaoh, his arrogance, and his punishment, see z. 75-92.

576. Pharaoh the earthly king faces Moses the prophet of God. In earthly eyes it was Moses who disobeyed Moses. Pharaoh represented an ancient and mighty kingdom, with a long listory behind it, and a pride in its learning and science, art, organisation, and power. Mosveled a depressed people, hewers of wood and drawers of water. But the might of God was behind him. What became of the wisdom, power, and armies of Pharaoh? They were renr asunder when the day came, and the terror and aurprise must have been the same as if the heavens had been rent asunder, and children's hair had turned grey! But formidable revolutions turn children grey-haired in another way. Nations that were as children became wise before they in their turn decayed, and from similar disobedience to the laws of God. For God's law must stand and be fulfilled when all else is swept away.

5769. If already you deny and disobey God in this life of probation, how can you stand up to the Day of Judgment, the Day of the terrible Reality? That Day is described in two metaphors: (1) It will be a time of such stress that even children will become like hoary-headed men; (2) What we look upon as the eternal sky, ever the same, will be cleft asunder: of, lxxxii I. In other words, the shape of things will be completely altered, both within man and in outer nature, and all true values will be restored. For the Promise of God, in this as in all other respects, cannot but be fulfilled.

5770. This is no empty threat. It is an admonition for your good. If you have the will, voucan at once come for the Grace and Mercy of God, and obtain it. For Repentance and Amendment are the straight Way to the nearness of God.

571. Cf. above, Ixxiii. 24 The Prophet, and a zealous band of his disciples, were often up, invohinds of the night, or a half, or a third, rejecting sleep and giving themselves up to Prayer and Praise and the reading of the Qurân: They are told that this was too severe a tax on them, especially if their health was affected, or they were on a journey, or they were striving, with might and main, in other ways, for the cause of God. Secthel lines following.

5772. The usual meaning taken is that the counting of the exact hours of night and day may not be possible for ordinary people, in order to determine exactly the half, or the third, or the two thirds of a night. The length of the night and the day varies every day of the solar year, and the precise hour of midnight can only be determined by exact observation in clear skies or by chronometers, which is not possible for everyone. But I understand it in a wider meaning. God fixes night and day in due proportions; for rest and work, and according to seasonal variations. For prayer and praise no meticulous observations of that kind are necessary or possible. God's service can be done in many ways as detailed below. But we must give some time to devotion, as may be most easy and convenient to us, in various crucumstances of health, travel, and the performance of various duties,

5773. The reading of the Qur-E: here is almost equivalent to Prayer and religious devotion, This is not to be made into an obsession or a burden. Cf. xx. 2: "We have not sent down the Qur-An to thee to be an occasion for thy distress." We must do it whole-mindedly, but not by formal mechanical computations.

5774. This refers to Jikää. The better opinion is that this particular verse was revealed in Medina, long after the greater part of the Süra. The reference, further on, to canonical Prayers and regular Charity (Zekäi), points to the same conclusion.

5775. Cf. ii. 245, and n. 276, where the meaning of "a Beautiful Loan" is explained. See also Ivii, 18. The "Beautiful Loan" should be that of our own souls. We should expect no returns in kind, for that is not possible. But the reward we shall find with God will be infinitely greater and nobler. Cf. the biblical phrase, "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven" (Matt. vi. 20).

<sup>5776.</sup> Any good that we do raises our own spiritual status and dignity. We must not think that when we speak of God's service or God's Cause, we are doing anything for His benefit; He is independent of all needs whatsoever.

<sup>5777.</sup> This emphasizes the need of God's Grace Whatever good we do, our own merits are comparatively small. God's Grace must lift us up and blog out shortcomings. Even in plety there may be an arrogance which may become a sin. We should always seek God's Mercy in all humility.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXIV (Muddaththir).

This SGra dates from about the same time as the last one. Its subject matter is also similar: Prayer and Praise, and the need of patience in a period of great spiritual stress: the unjust who cause sorrow and suffering now will themselves experience agony in the Hereafter.

C. 254.—The Seer, by devotion and contemplation, (Ixxiv. 1-56.) Prepares himself for the duties of Guide

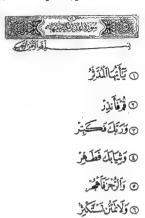

And Leader to mankind : but when there comes The clear Call, he must stand forth And proclaim the Message,-in purity, Unselfish devotion, and batience long-suffering :-To save men from the Distress of the Final Day. . For many there be who glory in a life . Of ease and plenty, arrogant splendour, And the applause of men, who scorn God's Truth And reject the divine. How will they fare When the Judgment comes, and the Penalty? Every Fact in Life's grand Pageant Is but a Portent for the Future. Every soul is in pledge and must Redeem itself by Faith and Prayer, By Charity and earnest care for the Realities Of Life. Bring but the will, and God Will guide,-the Lord of Righteousness, The Lord of Mercy and Forgiveness!

5778. As usual, in these wonderful early mystic verses, there is a triple thread of thought: (1) A particular occasion or person is referred to; (2) a general spiritual lesson is taught; and (3) a more profound mystical reverse is suggested. As to (1), the Prophet was now past the stage of personal contemplation, lying down or sitting in his mantle; he was now to go forth boldly to deliver his Message and publicly proclaim the Lord; his heart had always been purified, but now all his outward doings must be dedicated to God, and conventional respect for ancestral customs or worship must be thrown aside; the work of his Apostleship was the most generous gift that could flow from his personality, but no reward or appreciation was to be expected from his people, but quite the contrary; there would be much call on his patience, but his contentment would arise from the good pleasure of God. As to (2), similar stages arise in a minor degree in the life of every good man, for which the Prophet's life is to be a universal pattern. As to (3), the Sufis understand, by the mantle and outward wrappings, the circumstances of our phenomenal existence, which are necessary to our physical comfort up to a certain stage; but we soon outgrow them, and our inner nature should then holdly proclaim itself; not that it brings any credit or reward with men; the very hope or expectation of such would be inconsistent with our higher nature, which should bear all checks and rejoice in the favour of God.

5779. Possibly, in its immediate application, there is a reference to the dirt and filth which the Pagans used to throw at the Prophet to insult and persecute him.

5780. Rujs or Rijs: abomination: usually understood to refer to idolatry. It is even possible that there was an idol called Rujs. But it has a wider signification, as including a mental state opposed to true worship, a state of doubl or indecision.

5781. The legal and commercial formula is that you give in order to receive. And usually you expect to receive what is worth for an altitle more than you give. The spiritual consideration is that you give, but expect nothing from the receiver. You serve God and God's creatures.

- 7. But, for thy Lord's (Cause), see Be patient and constant!
- 8. Einally, when the trumpet Is sounded.
- 9. That will be-that Day-
- 10. Far from easy For those without Faith.
- The ave Me alone, (to deal) area
   With the (creature) whom
   I created (bare and) alone !—sizes
- 12. To whom I granted Resources in abundance,
- 13. And sons to be By his side!—6785
- 14. To whom I made (Life) smooth and comfortable!
- 15. Yet is he greedy— That I should add (Yet more):—<sup>M87</sup>

5782 Our zeal for God's Cause itself requires that we should not be impatient, and that we should show constancy in our efforts for His Cause. For we have faith, and we know that He is All-Good, All-Wuse, and All-Powerful, and everything will ultimately be right.

5783 The Sinner's course is now shown in contrast to the Seeker's. The Sinner may be selfcomplacent now: but what will be his position when the Reckoning comes? Not easy; indeed a Day of Distress i 5784. The question of Justice and Punishment to men is for God alone. For man at his best can see only one side of truth, and only God is All-Knowing. He alone can judge the limits of Justice and Mercy.

5785 Man's adventitious advantages—wealth, power, position, talents—are not due to his own merits. They are gifts from God, Who created him. In himself he came bare and alone, 5786. The great ones of the earth may have wealth, a large following, sons by their side to defend them and do their bidding, and man-power to help them in their battles. Life may be smooth and agreeable to them. But their responsibility is to God.

5787. The Sinner takes God's gifts as if they were his right. The more he gris, the more is he greedy. Yet to God's Signs and revelations he is wilfully deaf or even openly rebellious. But he is only preparing the way for his own undoing.

<sup>5788 &</sup>quot;A mount of calamities" or disasters: may be understood as a phrase for cumulative disasters in a spiritual sense.

<sup>3790.</sup> The Commentators understand the reference to be to Walld ibn Mugaira, who was a wealthy Sybarite, Pagas to the core, and an inveterate enemy to the holy Prophet. He and AbB Jahl did all they could, from the beginning of the preaching of Islam, to abuse and persecute the Preacher, to run down his docttine, and to injure those who believed in it. But the meaning for us is much wider. There are Wallds in all ages. They cannot understand driven inspiration, and seek to explain its wonderful influence over the lives of men by some such unemeaning formula as "magic". The eternal rhope is to them mere human delusion [

31. And We have set none But angels as guardians
Of the Fire; and We
Have fixed their number

5792 He is in a state in which he neither lives nor dies (Exzwii. 13). Looked at in another way, the things that in a good man are meant to last and grow, are for the slaner destroyed, and no part of his nature is left untouched. The brightness of his very manhood is darkened and extinguished by sin.

. 5793. Who are the Nincteen? And why this number? The nineteen guardians of the Fire are understood symbolically to be angels or faculties of man. Imam Faghruddin Rast refers to a classification of nincteen faculties or powers in man, which if used properly lead to his spiritual advancement, but if misused, lead to his perdition. These faculties or powers may well be compared to angels, for angels are the powers or instruments of action in the spiritual world. The rebellious angels are types of faculties put to wrong use.

5794. Cf. lavi. 6, and n, 5540

There was a great volume of angelology in the religious literature of the People of the Book (Le. the Book and Christians) to whom (among others) an appeal is made in this verse. The Essense, a jewish brotherhood with highly spiritual ideas, to which perhaps the prophet Jesus himself belonged, had an extensive literature of angelology. In the Midrash also, which was a Jewish school of exegens and mystical interpretation, there was much said about angels. The Eastern Christian sexts contemporary with the birth of Isiam had borrowed and developed many of these ideas, and their mystics owed much to the Gnostics and the Persian apocal spite systems. In the New Testament therelation of the angels with Fire is referred to more than once. In Rev. ix 11 we have "the angel of the bottomies spit, whose ramein the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hat his same Apollyon". In Rev. ziv. 18 there is an "angel which had power over fire", and in Rev. xiv. 8 an angel has "power...given unto him to scort hem with fier," In the Old Testament (Daniel vii, 9-10) the essence of all angels is fire; thousand thousands of them issued as a Bery stream from Defore the Ancient of Days, whose "thore was like the fery flame, and His wheels as burning fier."

3793. The mystic significance of numbers is a favourite theme with some writers, but I lay no stress on it. In Christian theology the number of the Beast, 666, in Rev. xiii, 8 has given the so much controversy, and may refer only to the numerical value of the letters in thename of the Roman Emperor Nero, in our own literature I think that we ought to avoid too much insistence on speculative conjectures. But I will note one suggestion for what it is worth. The number is itself an indivisible number, and may be represented by the formula, lives seven plus five. Now seven is a mystic number see Ixv. 12, and n. 526; there are seven heavens, seven gates of Hell (xv. 44), and so on. Five he is a mystic number or layers of the earth (xv. 17), man's atternally perceived world has fourteen layers, and if his subjective world can be counted in five units according to his five senses, the number of slages controlling his conduct may be counted as nineteen.

SECTION 2.

32. Day, verily:
By the Moon, once

® كَلَاوَٱلْفَتَىرِ

5796. There are four classes of people mentioned here. (1) The Muslims will have their faith increased, because they believe that all revelation, symbolic or otherwise, is from God Most Merciful, and all His forces will work in their favour. (2) The People of the Book, those who had received previous revelations of an analogous character, the Jews and Christians, had numerous sects disputing with each other on minute points of doctrine; but they will now, if they believe, find rest from controversies in a broad symbolical understanding of scripture. (3) Those in whose hearts is a disease (see il. 8-10, notes 33-34), the insincer ones, the hypocrites, will only be mystlied, because they believe nothing and have rejected the grace and mercy of God. (4) The Unbelievers have frankly done the same and must suffer similar consequences.

3797. It is a necessary consequence of moral responsibility and freedom of choice in man, that he should be left free to stray if he chooses to do so, in spite of all the warning and the instruction he receives. God's channels of warning and instruction—His spiritual forces—are infinite, as are His powers. No man can know them. But this warning or reminder is addressed to all mankind,

All things are referred to God. But we must not attribute evil to Him. In iv. 79 we are expressly told that the good comes from God, and the evil from ourselves.

3798. An oath in human speech cal in evidence something sacred in the heart of man. In God's Message, also, when delivered in human language, solemn emphasis is indicated by an appeal to something striking among the Signs of God, which will go straight to the human heart which is addressed. In each case the symbol of the appeal has reference to the particular point enforced in the argument. Here we are asked to contemplate three wonderful plenomene, and they lead up to the conclusion in verse 38 (1) The moon, next after the sun, is the most striking luminary to our sight. Its reflected light has for us even a greater mystery than the direct light of the sun, which looks to us hike pure fire. The moon was wonshipped as a deity in times of darkness. But in reality, though she rules the night, her rars are only reflections, and are wanting in warmth and vitality. So every sonly which looks up to a mere creature of God for a sort of vicarious salvation is in spiritual darkness or error; for the true source of spiritual light and life is God, and God alone. For (2) the Night and (3) the Dawn, see the following note.

- Except the Companions Of the Right Hand, 6803

التيلادة أذر التيلادة أذر التيلادة أذر التيلادة أذر التيلادة أذر التيلاد التي

5799. (2) The Njight when it is illuminated by the Moon is light in a sense, but it is really dark and must give place to (3) the Dawn when it comes, as the harbinger of the Sun. So in spirituanters, when every soul realities its own responsibility, it will look less and less to reflected lights, and through the beauty of a dawn-like awakening, will be prepared more and more for the splendour of the light of God Himself, the goal of the Heaven of our decems.

$800. "This is but one," etc. There are numerous Signs of God, of which Judgment is one, and one of the mightiest portents. Or the reference may be to the waning of the Moon, the decline of the might, and the glorious sunrise, as tokens or symbols of the world renewed when the present transitory world, passes a way.

$801. Three interpretations are possible. (1) Those pressing forward may be the Righteous, and those following behind may be the laggards, the Unbelievers, who reject God's love, care, and mercy. (2) Men of two kinds of temporament my be referred to: those who are always in the van and those who are always in the rear. God's Message is open to both. But there may be a danger to both is one case, over-confidence, or hope is wrong things; in the other case, missing great opportunities so that their spiritual lives may be "bound in shallows and in miseries". Extremes should be avoided. (3) Or it may mean that the warning is effective only for those willing to move forwards or backwards, as the case may be, but is lost on the inert or the lethargic. For our moral and spiritual progets, we have in some cases to go forwards, but in some cases we have to retreat from false positions. The hopeless case is that of the obstinate man, whose heart is so dead that he dares not advance to the right or withdray from the wrong.

580. Cf.lii. 21. Man cannot shift his responsibility to vicarious saviours or saints. His redemption depends upon the grace of God, for which he should constantly and whole-heartedly strive by means of right conduct. If he does so he will be redeemed and he will join the Companions of the Right Hand.

$803. Cf. n. 5223 to ivi. 3, and see ivi. 27.38. The Companions of the Right Hand will be the Righteous or the Blessed in the Hereafter. Their grounds of merit will be Prayer, Charity, Earnest-ness, and Faith in God's just Judgment: all of which are within the reach of the humblest Seeker. They are not separate acts or virtues, but are all inter-connected. At Judgment, the pledge of their soul will be redeemed by God's Grace at the Taking of the Account.

3904, Cf. xv. 93, and n. 2018. The Hour that is Certain is usually taken to be Death. But it has also a more general meaning, referring to a state of mind in spiritual progress. If there is no faith, the light of Truth is shut out, or put off from time to time, until a crisis comes when the Truth becomes only too real, but the time for repentance is past, and there is only room for the agony of regrets.

5605. If the Day of Judgment is inevitable, it is strange that men should not heed a plain warning, but on as if they were thoughtless and obstinate assess tampeding from a lips. Instead of heeding the warning, they try to avoid it. They are frightened at God's Worth.

<sup>$60.</sup> Cf. xvii, 91: "Until thou send down to us a book that we could read." The Unabelievers pretend in riducule that they would believe if a special message written on open scrolls and addressed to them severally were brought to them by a miracle! There is a disease in their hearts and understandings. The Teacher's warning is plain, and enough for any reasonable man who has the will to seek God.

<sup>$807.</sup> The Qut-an itself is the admonition—the latest among the revealed Books of God. If man is the will to learn, he will keep the Message always before Him, and God's grace will help him to carry it out in his conduct.

<sup>5808.</sup> Righteousness as well as Forgiveness have their source in God's Will. Man's Righteousness has no meaning except in relation to the universal Will. For Tage's see n. 26 to ii. 2. If we take the word hers in the sense of "the fear of God", the translation would be: " He alone is worthy to be feared, and He alone is entitled to grant Forgiveness."

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SÜRA LXXV (Qiyāmai).

This Sûra belongs to the early Meccan period, but comes chronologically a good deal later than the last two Sûras.

Its subject-matter is the Resurrection, viewed from the point of view of Man, especially unregenerate Man, as he is now, and as he will be then,—his inner and psychological history.

C. 255.—Eschew all Evil: for man was not created (ltxx. 140) Without purpose or without responsibility.

The Day of Account will come, and his own Conscience bears witness that he Must walk straight; for he must face
That Day's Realities. With patience await The unfoldment of God's wise Purpose. Keep The Hereafter ever in view. The faces Of the Blest will beam with brightness and beauty. For the others, Death will be a terror,—For duties neglected and sins committed. Woe unto man that he thinks not now Of God's Purpose and the noble Destiny For which God gave him Life and its Gifts.

Sñra LXXV.

Oivamat, or the Resurrection.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful

- 1. We do call to witness som. The Resurrection Day:
- 2. And I do call to witness The self-reproaching spirit: 0810 (Eschew Evil).
- 3. Poes man think that We Cannot assemble his bones? 8813
- 4. Nay, We are able to put Together in perfect order "The very tips of his fingers. ""
- 5. But man wishes to do Wrong (even) in the time In front of him. 6818
- 6. He questions: "When belt Is the Day of Resurrection?"

5809. Cf. lam. 40, and n. 5700. Here the point to be enforced is understood: I have added it in brackets: "eschew Evil". The appeal is made to two considerations: (I) That every act has to be accounted for, and evil must have its recompense at the Resurrection; and (2) that man's own spirit has a conscience which would reproach him for sin, if he did not suppress that inner voice, 5810. Our doctors postulate three states or stages of the development of the human soul; (1) Ammara (xii 53), which is prone to evil, and, if hot checked and controlled, will lead to perdition; (2) Lawwams, as here, which feels conscious of evil, and resists it, asks for God's grace and pardon after repentance and tries to amend; it hopes to reach salvation; (3) Minimultina (laxxix 27), the highest stage of all, when it achieves full rest and satisfaction. Our second stage may be compared to Conscience, except that in English usage Conscience is a faculty and not a stage in spiritual development.

5811. The Unbelievers' usual cry is: "What! when we are reduced to bones and dust, how can our personality be called to account?" (xvii. 49). The answer is : God has said so, and He will do it; for the death here is not the end of all things.

5812. An idiom for the most delicate parts of his body.

5813. It is bad enough not to repent of past sins. But the evil-doer who rejects a Day of Reckoning and has no conscience wants to go on in his career of sin and jeopardise his future also.

5814. The question is sceptical or derisive He does not believe that there is any chain of consequences in the Hereafter. He does not believe in a Hereafter.

- 8. And the moon is Buried in darkness. *****
- 10. That Day will Man say : "Where is the refuge?"

5815. At the Hour of Judgment the full light and glory of the Lord will shine, and the effulgence will date man's eyes. For the world as we knew it will go to pieces and a new World will come into being.

$816 Not only will man's sight be dazed, but the great luminaries themselves will lose their light. The moon with its present reflected light will then cease to shine. All reflected or relative truth or goodness will sink into nothing before the true and only Reality.

3817. To the moon the sun is the original light, but the sun itself is a created light, and it will sink into nothingness along with the moon. Both will be like empty shells "whose lights are fled, whose glories dead", because the Prototype of all Light now shines in full splendour in a new World. See n. 4344 to xxxix. 69.

5818, All good and bad deeds, positive and negative, i.e. all sins of commission and omission; and the good that a man did and all the eyol that he omitted, all the influence that he radiated before him angail that he left behind him.

5819. Cf. xniv. 24, and n. 2976: "On the Day when their tongues, their hands, and their feet will bear winess against them as to their actions." It is not what a man says about himself, or what others say of him, that determines judgment about him. It is what he is in himself. His own personality betrays him or commends him.

- Once not thy tongue Concerning the (Qur-an) To make haste therewith. 8820
- 17. It is for Us to collect it And to promulgate it:
- 18. But when We have Promulgated it, follow thou Its recital (as promulgated):
- 19. Nay more, it is For us to explain it (And make it clear)
- 20. May, (ye men!)
  But ye love
  The fleeting life, sen
- And leave alone The Hereafter.
- Some faces, that Day, will beam (in brightness And beauty);—
- 23. Looking towards their Lord;

SNO Cf, xx. 114, and n. 2639: "Be not in haste with the Qur-an before its revelation to thee is completed." S lxxv. is an earlier revelation, and the shade of meaning is slightly different. The immediate meaning was that the holy Prophet was to allow the revelation conveyed to him to sink into his mind and heart and not to be impatient about it; God would certainly complete it according to this Plan, and see that it was collected and preserved for men, and not lost; that the inspired one was to follow it and recite it as the inspiration was conveyed to him; and that it carries its own explanation according to the faculties betweet by God on man. The general meaning follows the same lines: we must not be impatient about the inspired Word; we must follow it as made clear to us by the faculties to God.

5811 Cf. xxi. 37 Man loves haste and things of haste. For that reason he pins his faith on transitory things that come and go, and neglects the things of lasting moment, which come slowly, and whose true import will only be fully seen in the Hereafter.

$822. This passage (especially with reference to verses 26-28) would seem to refer to what our Doctors call the Lesser Judgment (Dywment-yo-Sugra), which takes place immediately after death, and not to the Greater or General Judgment, which may be supposed to be referred to in such passages as occur in S. Ivi. There are other passages referring to the Lesser Judgment immediately after death s.g. vii 37. etc. If I understand aright, the punishment of sin takes place in three ways: (1) it may take place in this very life, but this may be deferred, to give the sonner respite; (2) it may be an agony immediately after death, with the Partition or Bergabl (xiii. 100) separating the sinner from the final Resurrection; and (3) in the final Resurrection, when the whole of the present order gives place to a wholly new World; xiv. 48.

S825. When the soul has departed, the legs of the dead body are placed together in position. In preparation for the intes preliminary to the bursal. Say (iterally, leg) may also be taken metaphorically to mean a calamity: calamity will be joined to calamity for the poor departed sinner's soul, as his life-story in this world is now done. Willy-nilly, he will now have to go before the Throne of Judgment.

<sup>5826.</sup> His indictment in this and the succeeding verse consists of four counts; (1) he neglected prayer; (2) he neglected charity; (3) he rejected Truth; and (4) he turned away. In taxiv, 43-6, the four counts are: (1) neglecting prayer; (2) neglecting charity; (3) talking vanities; (4) denying the Day of Judgment; see n. 5803- Nos. (1) and (2) are identical in both places, and Nos. (3) and (4) are analogous. Rejecting the truth is equivalent to talking vanities and making an alliance with falsehoods. Denying the Day of Judgment means behaving as if no account was to be given of our actions, i.e. turning away from right conduct. An additional touch is found here in verse 33. See next note.

- 32. But on the contrary, He rejected Truth And turned away!

  Then did (God) make

5827. Conceit or arrogance is the root-cause of most Evil. By that cause fell lblis : see ii. 34.

5828. Sudan: has many implications: (1) uncontrolled, free to do what he likes; (2) without any moral responsibility; not accountable for his actions; (3) without a purpose, useless; (4) forsaken.

$229. Cf. xxii. 5, where the argument is developed in greater detail. The briefer argument here may be stated thus. His lowly animal origin makes him no higher than a brute; his fectal development is still that of a brute animal; then at some stage come human limbs and shape; the divine spirit is poured into him, and he is fashioned in due proportion for his higher destiny. In spite of that the mystery of sex remains in his nature; we are living souls, yet men and women. God Who creates these wonders,—has He not the power to bring the dead to life at the Resurrection?

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA LXXVI (Dahr). .

The revelation of this Sura was probably in the early Meccan period, with the possible exception of some verses, but its date has no significance.

Its theme is the contrast between the two classes of men, those who choose good and those who choose evil, with special reference to the former.

The title of the Sûra recalls a Pagan Arab idea, which personified Time as existing spontaneously from eternity to eternity and responsible for the misery or the happiness of mankind. In xlv. 24 we read: "They say...'nothing but Time an destroy us'." This attitude is of course wrong. Time is a created thing: it has its mysteries, but it is no more eternal than matter. It is also relative to our conceptions and not absolute, as Einstein has proved. It is only God Who is Self Subsisting, Eternal from the beginning and Eternal to the end, the absolute Existence and Reality, We must not transfer His attributes to any figurents of our imagination.

This defication of Time (Dahr) as against a living personal God has given rise to the term dahriya, as applied to an atheist or a materialist.

The whole of the Sura is full of the highest symbolism, as is generally the case with Maccan Suras, and this should always be remembered in their interpretation.

C. 256.—Man was evolved out of nothing, and through low ([mxvl. 1-31.) Beginnings; but he was given Insight
And Understanding. God showed him the Way;
And if man doth wilfully reject the Right,
Man but chooses Chains and Yokes and a Blazing Fire within his own soul. Not so
The Devotess of Right: they attain
The Mystic Fountain of Kafür!
For, purely out of love for God,
They do good to God's Creatures, and serve them.
The Light of Beauty and Joy will be
On them. In full felicity and honour
Will they live in the garden of Delights, and share
In the Banquet—the Presence and Glory Divine!

The Righteous are patient in Constant Devotion: God's Way is open to all: whoseever Has the Will, may attain to the Perfect Goat. 1655

- 3. We showed him the Way:
  Whether he be grateful
  Or ungrateful (rests **
  On his will).
- 4. For the Rejecters We have prepared

3830. The undoubted fact is mentioned in the form of a question, to get the assent of man. It is certain that the physical world existed long before man was ever heard of ormentioned, as geological records prove. It is also true that the spiritual world existed long before man came on the scene: see it. 30-31. Man is here taken in a generic sense.

$83). Dahr is Time as a whole, or for a long period. Time used to be defined by the Pagan Araha, as explained in the Introduction to this $0ra. An analogy can be found in the Greek ideas connected with Chronos or Kronos, themselves a blend of different myths. Kronos (or Time); they said, was the father of Zeus himself.

$832. Mingled: the female ovum has to be fertilized with the male sperm before a new animal ran be born. Man as an animal has this humble origin. But he has been given the gift of certain faculties of receiving instruction (typide by Hearing) and of intellectual and spinitual insight (typide by Sight). His life has therefore a meaning: with a certain amount of free will, he is to be God's vicegenent on earth (it. 30). But he must be trained and tried, and that is the whole problem of human life.

$833. Besides the gift of the faculties, Man has been shown the Way by means of Revelation, through men of the highest spiritual standing. If he is grateful, he will accept Guidance, be of the Righteous, and join the company of the Blessed. If not, he rejects his destiny, puts chains round himself, thus losing his freedom yoker round himself, thus burdening himself with sin, and gets into the Blazing Fire of Puolshment, which scorches his inmost being. See next verse. His choice rests on his will.

5834. There is deep mystic symbolism here. All sin or wrong-doing binds the sinner in a chain of causes and effects, in which he loses his native liberty. It puts the yokes of custom. confirmed habits, and superstitions, which lie like a load on his spirit and choke his finer instincts. It lights the fire of passion, hate, spite, envy, and despair, from which it is difficult to except to the refreshing waters of the Mercy of God. These refreshing waters of the Mercy of God. These refreshing waters on the Mercy of God. These refreshing waters on the maturally to the fighteous: see east note.

$333. Kafar is literally Camphor. Symbolically it represents a fountain in the Realms of Bliss. It is a seasoning added to the Cup of pure, beatific Wine, which causes no intextication(lvi. 18-19), but stands for all that is wholesome, agreeable, and refreshing. Camphor is cool and refreshing, and is given as a soothing tonic in Eastern medicine. In minute doses its odour and flavour are also agreeable.

5835. They: i.e. the Righteous: they are known in the present life by the virtues symbolically described in verses 7-10, and in the life of the Hereafter they will enjoy the Bliss symbolically described in verses 11-22.

5837. Cf. xxii. 189. The vows must be vows of spiritual service, which of course includes service to humanity, such as is mentioned in the next verse. They are Devotees of God, and they must perform all vows and contracts (v, 1 and n. 682). Vows of the Pagan sort, savouring of a sort of "bribe" to the Delity, are not approved.

5838. That is, they prepare for the Judgment to come, where the effects of Sin will not be transitory but far-reaching.

$839, The ceptive: when taken inequally, it refers to the old state of things when captives of war had to earn their own food, or their own redemption; even ordinary prisoners in jail for criminal offences often starved unless food was provided for them by private friends or from their own earnings. But there is a further symbolic meaning, which applies to the indigent, the orphans, and the captives, wit, those who nave nor so in a spiritual sense: those who have no mental or moral resources, or have no one to look after them, or are held down in social or moral or economic captivity. They hunger for spiritual food, or perhaps their appetite is deadened, but the Righteous understand and supply their real needs. It has also been held that "captives" include dumb animals who are under subjection to man; they must be properly fed, housed, and looked after; and the righteous man does not forget them.

- 9. (Saving), "We feed you For the sake of God alone : No reward do we desire From you, nor thanks. 5810
- 10. "We only fear a Day Of distressful Wrath From the side of our Lord." MIT
- 11. But God will deliver Them from the evil Of that Day, and will Shed over them a Light steel Of Beauty and A (blissful) lov.
- 12. And because they were Patient and constant, He will Reward them with a Garden And (garments of) silk. 8643
- 13. Reclining in the (Garden) On raised thrones. 4814 They will see there neither The sun's (excessive hea) Nor (the moon's) excessive cold. bear
- 14. And the shades of the (Garden) Will come low over then And the bunches (of fruit). There, will hang low In humility. 5845

5840. These words need not be actually uttered. They express the true motives of prous and unpretentious Charity.

5841. It is a Day of Wrath for sin and evil. But the truly righteous are not self-righteous. They have the fear of God in their minds; they know they are human, and they fear lest they should be found wanting in the sight of God. But God in His Mercy gives them a bountiful Reward.

5842. Cf. 1xxv. 22-23.

5843. Cf. xxii 23,

5844. Cf. xviii. 31,

5845. The sun and the moon as we know them will be no longer there. It will be a new world on a different plane. But to give us an idea of comfort we recall the excessive heat of the sun especially in tropical climates, and the excessive cold of the moon especially in northern climates, and we negative them both. That is, the temperature metaphorically will be just that delightful one that is most agreeable to our sensations as we know them now. The moon is not mentioned, but Zamharir (excessive cold) is sometimes used for the moon.

5846. Without sun and moon there will of course be no shade in the literal sense of the word. But for full comfort in the metaphor, there will be sheltering shade for rest and change from whatever light there be. But the whole idea in the metaphor here is that of humility. Even the shadows show humility: cf. xiii. 15. So does the fruit in hanging low for man. Man has now reached the height of his dignity.

5847. Cf. xliii. 71, where "dishes and goblets of gold" are mentioned. As the whole thing is symbolical, gold or silver, or crystal does not matter. The idea conveyed is that of rarity, preciousness, and spotless solendour.

- $848. That is, silver polished and white, and shining like crystal,
- 1849. Cf. above, Lxxvi. 56, and n. 3835, where the Cup of Käfer (Camphor) was mantioned for coniness and referehment to the Rightous, who had just passed the great Event of Judgment. The second stage is symbolised by verses 12-14, when they enter the Garden in Garments of Silk, and find that their former humility in the probationary life is rewarded with high honour in the new world they have entered. The third stage is in verses 15-21, where they settle down in Bliss, with Garments of fine silk and heavy brocades, with Ornaments and Jevels, with an ordered Feast of set service, and the Cup of Zafajabi. This word luterally means Ginger. In Eastern medicine Ginger is administered to give warmth to the body and sest to the taste. Metaphorically, this is appropriate for the Royal Feast which is now figured forth.

$850. This Iduntain Salsabil brings us another metaphorical idea. The word literally means:

"See the Way". The Way is now open to the presence of the Most High. The Banquet is spread.

Get thyself ready. It is a "Realm Magnificent" (were 20) in a new spiritual world.

5851. Cf. lvi. 17, and n. 5231,

5852. Pearls for beauty and splendour: scallered, because they are moving to and fro all round the Banquet.

SS54. This would seem to be the culmination of the honour which the Blessed receive at the Royal and Divine Banquer. The Wine Pure and Holy is the Sight, metaphorically, in Suff language, of the Face and Eyes of God. The words in the next verse express the sort of speech which will make the Guest a denizen of Heaves).

$855. The Qurân was being revealed stage by stage as the occasion demanded, and at the date of this Stra it was still one of the earlier stages. Persecution, abuse, and false charges were being levelled against the man of God, but he is bidden to stand firm and do his duty. In a minor degree this applies to all of us who suffer in the cause of Truth.

355. Three methods of Prayer and Devotion are mentioned: (1) to remember and celebrate the holy name of God always: (2) to spend a part of the night in humbis prostrasion: and (3) to glorify Him in the long hours of a weary night of waiting and watching. As to (1). "morning and evening" means all the waiting hours of our life, but in the special hours of morning and evening, the physical world without us, and the inner world without us, combine to make us specially receptive of spiritual influences. "Name" has a mystic meaning. The "name" of God includes Hig attributes, as a clocked golden casker might include priceless levels. Any one may carry the casker, twen though he may not be worthy to handle the jewels. If he carries the casker, he is in potential possession of the jewels, and he hopes some time to gift the key which opens the jewels of him. So the tyro, who celebrates the holy name of God, hopes some day to see the "Face" of God and be blessed with the privilege of provainthy to the Person. For (2) and (1) see east note.

S877. See last note. (2) Humble prostration to God means some visible mode or symbol of dedication. That is best done at might, when the soul, free from worldly occupations, is alone with its God. (3) The weary hours of a long night are no longer weary, but become full of meaning when we isin in concert with the whole Creation, which glorifies God: 19ti, 1.

5858. Finding life: Cf. lxxv. 20. They: the immediate reference was to the Pagan Quraish; the general reference is to the Unbelievers of all ages. They reject, or at least put away the thought of, a Hereafter, a Day that will be hard, for the easy pleasures of a feeting life, 5859. God has not only created men, but "made their joints strong", i.e. given them the power and strength to withstand the temptations of Evil and stand firmly in the Path of Right.

3860. If, in spite of God's loving care, any particular men or group of men, misuse their powers or williuly disobey God's Law, God will set them aside, and substitute others in their place, with like powers. God's gifts are free, but let no one think that he can monopolise them or misuse them without being called to answer for the trust. And the man of God must not be discouraged by the whole world being at some moment completely against him. God can in a moment make a complete change. Either the same men that fought against him will be his zealous adherents, or another generation will spring up, which will carry the flag of Righteousness to victory. God's Will and Plan work in their own good time.

5861. Man in himself is weak; he must seek God's Grace; without it he can do nothing; with it he can do all. For God knows all things, and His wisdom comprehends the good of all.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA LXXVII (Mursalat).

This Sara belongs to the early Meccan period, somewhere near to S. lxxv. (Qiyāmat). The theme is somewhat similar. It denounces the horrors of the Hereatter, for those who rejected Truth. The refrain, "Ah woe, that Day, to the Rejecters of Truth!" which occurs ten times in its fifty verses, or, on an average, once in every five verses, indicates the leitmotif.

C. 257.—The winds in the world of nature are types
(Ixzvil. 1-50.) Of God's Bounty and Power: they gently bring
The beneficent rain, and when roused to wrath,
They clean the world and wipe out Infection.
So works God's Revelation, in sunshine
And storm. It will root out Evil, and restore
True values at Judgment. Truly terrible
Will be that Day for the evil ones.
It will be a Day of Sorting out:
Ah woe, that Day, to the Rejecters of Truth!
Will man not learn from his own little story,
Or from nature around him? The Blazing Fire
Will be indeed an enveloping Punishment.
How dreadful the contrast with the Bliss of the Righteous!
Learn, ve. therefore. Humility, and approach

Learn, ye, therefore, Humility, and approach
God's Throne in Repentance and Earnest Endeavour.

Mursalat, or Those Sent Forth.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful.

- By the (Winds) Sent Forth and One after another (To man's profit);
- Which then blow violently In tempestuous Gusts, 8665
- And scatter (things)Far and wide;
- Then separate them, One from another,

٥ فَٱلْعَظِيفَاتِ عَصْفًا

وَالنَّايْسُرَيْدِ نَشُرًا

قَالْفَنْرِقَانِ فَرُقاً

5863. This highly mystical Sūra begins with an appeal to five things, as pointing to the substantive statement in verse 7, that the Day of Justice and Judgment is bound to come, and we must prepare for 1t. It is difficult to translate, but easy to understand, if we remember that a triple thread of allegory runs through this passage (verses 1-7). The five things or phases, which will be presently considered in detail, refer to (a) Winds in the physical world, (b) Angels in the apritual world, and (c) Prophets in the human world, connecting it with the aplitual world.

566, Understanding the reference to Winds, we can see that they are powerful factors in the government of the physical world. (I) They come gently as harbingers of the blessings of rain and fertility (xv. 22; xxx. 48); but (2) they can come as violent tornadoes, uprooting and destroying (ii. 41-42); (3) they can scatter seeds far and wide, and (4) they can separate chaff from grain, or clear the air from epidemics; and (5) they literally carry sound, and therefore Messages, and metaphorically they are instrumental in making God's Revelation accessible to hearers, whether by way of justification or repentance for the Penitent, or warning for unrespentant Sinners. All these things point to the power and goodness of God, and we are asked to believe that His promise of Mercy and Justice in the Hereafter is indeed true.

Cf. this passage with li, 1-6 ($\vec{a}\vec{a}\vec{a}\vec{a}\vec{a}\vec{b}\) with which it has many affinities, 3865. If we understand the reference to be, not to Winds, but to Angels, they are agencies in the spiritual world, which carry out similar functions, changing and revolutionising the face of the world, (1) They come softly, on beneficent errands of Mercy; (2) they are charged with the mission of punishment and destruction for sin. as in the case of the two angels who came to Lql (xv. 37-66); (3) they distribute God's Mercies, as the Winds distribute good seeds; (4) they cot out the good from the revil among men; and (3) they are the agency through which God's Messages and Revelations are conveyed to the Prophets (see No. 5 in the last note).

11. And when the apostles Are (all) appointed a time (To collect);————————————————————————————————————		٥ كاذا الرُسُلُ أَفِينَة

5866. If we understand the reference to Prophets or Messengers of God, or the verses of Revelation which would be particularly appropriate for verses 5-6, we also get a satisfactory solution of the Allegory. (1) The Prophets have followed one another in a series: the verses of the Qur-An came, one after another as needed; in both cases it was for man's spiritual profit; (2) they caused great situstubance in a spiritually decadent world; they pulled down evil institutions root and branch, and substituted new ones; (3) they proclaimed their truths far and wide, without fear and without favour; (4) through them were sorted out men of Faith and rebels against God's Law; and (5) they gave a Message, through which just men were justified through repentance, and evil men were warned of

12. For what Day are these (Portents) deferred?

Some Commentators take one or other of these allegories, and some apply one allegory to a few of these verses, and another to another few. In my opinion the Allegory is wide enough to comprehend all the meanings which I have sker and. I wish a translation could do justice to those marvellously tense sentences in the original.

S867. Now, in four verses (8-11), we are told, again allegorically, though we can take them literally if we like, the things that will bappen in those last days. The lost roof the stars will become dim; in fact they will disappear: cf. lxxxii. 2, and lxxxii. 2, The leaven's canopy will be torn asunder: cf. lxxxii. 1, and lxxiii. 18. The mountains will be uprooted and fly about like dust: cf. lxp. 14; lxxxii. 3; etc. All the old landmarks of the physical world as we know it will be swept away.

$568. The Resurrection will be established. In the world which will then have passed away, inspired Prophets had been sent in succession at different times to all nations. Now they will be gathered together in one place before the Judgment-seak to bear witness as to the righteous or the evil ones within their respective soberes of work. Cf. xxix. 69.

$899. C/. XXXVI. 21 and n. 4047; also xiv. 40, and n. 4718. That will be the Day of Judgment or Day of Decision. Good will then be completely separated from Evil. And the men who rejected Trith and forunshed on Falsehood will find that in the world of Realties they will be abilitied nowhere. Hence the refrain of this $0ra, "Ah woe, that Day, to the Rejecters of Truth!" It sounds the a direct on Sia.

$370 God's Law is always the same. Sin or corruption prepares its own destruction. It was so with the generation of \(^1\)-only \(^1\)-only tradition at was so with the 'Ad and the ThamBd. In our own day we see relies of prehistoric cruitsairons. In Egyph Mesopotamas, the Indus Yalley, and the Egean: these were men of wonderful skill and resource, but they went under. If our generations, which pride themselves on their science and skill, desert God's Law, they will be certain to meet the same fate.

5871. Cf. xxxii. 8. n. 3638. Man is ashamed of the process of physical creation, by which he comes into being. Yet he is arrogant in life and neglectful of the Future.

5873. The period roughly of nine months and ten days is subject to many adjustments. In fact throughout our pre-natal as well as post-natal life there are wonderful and nicely-balanced adjustments of which we are ourselves unconscious. Should we not turn in love and gratitude to God our Creator?

5874. Perhaps the life in the womb, in relation to the life after birth, is an allegory for our probationary life on earth in relation to the eternal Life to come. Perhaps, also, our state when we are buried in the tomb suggests an allegory to the life in the womb, in relation to the life in the Hereafter.

5875. What a wonderful parable! The earth is a place where death and life, decay and growth and decay, green grass, stubble, and fuel, corruption and purification jostle together,—one often leading to the other. The drama which we see with our own eyes in this world should enable us to appreciate the wonders in the spiritual world where the despised and rejected receive the highest honour, Lozarus rests in Abraham's bosom, and the Phardob is led in chains for his arrogance and his sie.

3876. See n. 2038 to swi. 13. The solid mountains are frequently referred to: cf. ziii. 3. The parable here is that the mountains are of hard, solid rock, and yet they act as sponges to collect, store up, and filter sweet and wholesome water, which on account of their altitude they are able to distribute by gravity to the lower, dry land by means of rivers or aprings. Any one who has seen the parched Meccar valleys and the delicious springs in the mountains around, or the Zubaida Canal, which is the main source of Meccar water-supply, will appreciate the apriness of the metaphor, but it applies to any country, though not to so striking a degree. If the wisdom and power of God can do such things before your eyes, how can you reject His teaching of a still more wonderful future Like?

$877. The Sinners, instead of reposing in cool shades, will only see the blazing Fire. The only shadow they will see will be that of Smoke, ascending in three columns, right, left, and above, i.e., completely enveloping them. But it will give no comfort or coolness. On the contrary, it will contain huge sparks. The triple column may be explained in allegory by the black stain they three on their life by the misuse of their faculties—converting Love into Hate, Understanding into Superstition and Folly, and Spiritual Insight into Worldly Greed. The Blaze of their Sins is cumulative: the columns of smoke show the kinds of sin, as, in the physical lire, different kinds of fuel give different kinds of fuel give different kinds of smoke show the kinds of sin, as, in the physical lire, different kinds of fuel give different 5878 Qayr; Fort, big building, palace. An alternative reading is Qayar, plural of Qayarst (-sa), meaning bundles of wood used for fuel: Ibn 'Abbās apad Buighārī. I almost prefer this latter reading.

5879. The yellow sparks flying swiftly one after another suggest a string of camels marching swiftly, such as the Arabs of Nejd and central Arabia are so proud of. There is a double allegory, it refers not only to the colour and the rapid succession of sparks, but to the vanity of worldy pride, as much as to say: "your fine yellow camels in which you took such pride in the world are but sparks that By away and even sting you in the Hereafter!" Smoke with sparks may also assume fantastic shapes like long-secked camels.

۞ وَيْلُ يَوْمَهِ ذِ لِلْهُكَذِينَ

وَالْمُنْقِينَ فِي ظِلْلَا وَعُيُودٍ

5880. They will be dumblounded; i.e. (when read with the next verse) they will not be in a position to put forward any valid defence or plea. Facts will speak too plainly against them. They might perversely try to deny false worship: vi 73: but their own tongues and limbs will bear witness against them: xxiv 24. Nor does the fighting out or settling of doctrinal disputes in the Hereafter (xxxix 31) amount to putting forward pleas in defence.

$881. We may suppose this as spoken primarily to the Quraish who were plotting against the Prophet. You may use all your wisdom and that of your ancestors, but you will not be able to defeat God or His Plan. See next verse.

$882. The plots against the holy Prophet were plots against God's Truth, and therefore against God. Can any one hope to profit by such plots? Can any one defeat God's Plan and Purpose? Let them try. They will only rum themselves, as the Pagan leaders did. There can only be pity for such men. What will be their state in the Hereafter? "Ah woo, that Day, to the Rejectars of God's Truth!"

5883. This is in contrast to the triple shade of smoke and sin for the sinners, which neither gives them coolness nor protects them from the Blazing Fire. In mystic lore the Shades and Springs of Heaven are also interpreted allegorically. The Shade, i.e. Covering, of God's Good Pleasure, will be the greatest Boon of all, and the Spring of God's Love will be inexhaustible.

5884, Fruits: see n. 4671 to xiiii, 73, where the allegorical meaning of "fruit" and "eating" is explained.

5885. The fruits of righteomeres are contentment in this life and the supreme Bliss in the next.

.4886. "Eat" is of course symbolical of having the good things of life in this world. It may be that they are only given for a trial. Because their minds and winhes run to wrong things, the opportunities for wrong are multiplied, as the impetus for good or for evil increases progressively. They are asked to believe and repent. But if they do not, they are to be pitted, even for the good things of this life, for they will come to an evil End of the Hereafter.

5887. Prostration is a symbol of humility and a desire to get neater to God by Prayer and a good life. Those who refuse to adopt this Path are to be pitied: how will they fare at Judgment?

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA LXXVIII (Nabag).

This beautiful Meccan Sura is not quite so early as the last (S. İxxvii) nor quite so late as S. Ixxvi, but nearer in time to the latter.

It sets forth God's loving care in a fine nature-passage, and deduces from it the Promise of the Future, when Evil will be destroyed and Good will come to its own; and invites all who have the will, to seek refuge with their Lord.

C. 258.—The Great News for man, in his spiritual Destiny, (1xxviii, 140) Is the Judgment to come, the Day of Sorting Out. Do not the Power, the Goodness, and the Justice Of God reveal themselves in all nature?—

The Panorama around us, the voice in our souls, And the harmony between heaven and earth?

That Day is sure to arrive at its time Appointed, when behold I the present order Will pass away. Then will the Fruits Of Evil appear, and the Fruits of Righteousness. God's blessings will be more than the merits of men; But who can argue with the Fountain of Grace?

And who can prevent the course of Justice?

Let us then, before it becomes too late, Betake ourselves to our Lord Most Gracious!

5809 Great News; usually understond to mean the News or Message of the Resultection or the Hereniter, about which there were various schools of thought among the Jews and Christians and other nations. There is practically nothing about the Resurrection in the Old Testament, and the Jewish sect of Sadduces even in the time of Christ denied the Resurrection altogether. The Pagan denis of a future lite—if any—varied from place to place and from time to time. Even in 0 - early Christian Church, as we learn from Paul's First Episite to the Corinthians, there were contentions in that little community (I Corinthians, i. 11), and some definitely denied the resurrection of the dead (b, xv. 12).

Great News may also be translated Great Message or a Message Supreme as I have translated at xxxviii 67. In that case it would refer to the Qur-an, or the Message of Revelation, or the ... dage of the Holy Prophet, about which there was great contention in those days. At this Morage also lays great stress on the Day of Judgment and the Resurrection, the practical result is greater mode of interpretation amounts to the same

S80.1 See in 2018 to xvi. 15. Cf. also xiii. 3 and xv. 19. The spacious expanse of the earth may be compared to a carpet, to which the mountains may metaphorically be supposed to act as pegs. The Signs of God are thus enumerated: the great panorama of outer nature (verses £7): the creation of Main in pairs, with the succession of rest and work fitting in with the succession of right and day (verses ±11); the firmments above, with their splendid lights (verses ±12.1); and this touck and rain and abundant harvests, which knit sky and earth and man together (verses ±4-16). These point to God, and God's Message points to the Future Life.

Just as a covering protects us from exposure to cold in heat, so this covering gives as spiritual respite from the buffets of the material world, and from the tring activates of one now name rections. The rest in sleep (in verse it) is supplemented by the covering of the night with which we are provided by God.

3002, "Substitute" in English only partly covers the idea of maßk, which includes every kind of life activity. The Day is specially illuminated, so unit the figure of speech, in order that these life-activities of all kinds may be fully exercised.

Can you not then believe that a Creation who does this will sort out Good and Evil on an appointed Day with real justice and power?

5896, Cf. xxxviii, 21, n. 4047, and xxxvi, 59, n. 4005 (end). The Day of Judgment is the Day of Sorting Out, as between Good and Evil.

S897 The angel charged with the sounding of the Trumpet is Israill. It will herald judgment, U.f. 1, 20; also xxxix, 68, and n, 4343; and ixix, 13, n, 5648

5898. A sign that the present order of things will have ceased to exist, and a new world will have come into being. Such a figure applies to the heavens in this verse and to the earth in the next verse. The mystery of what is beyond the beavens will have vanished through the doors which will then be opened. The solid mountains, as we suppose them to be, will have vanished like an unsubstantial mrage.

3899 Hell, the embodiment of evil, is lying in wait like an ambush for every one. We should be on our guard. For the transgressors, those who have wilfully rehelled against God, it will be a definite destination, from which there is no return, except, it may be, after ages, ie unless God so wills: Cf. v. 128, and n. 951.

5902. It was not isolated acts, but a continued course of evil conduct; they repudiated the moral and apritual responsibility for their lives; and they impudently called Truth itself by false names and distaliated God's Signs, which were vouchsafed for their instruction. These are not mere impressions; these are hard facts "preserved on record", so that every deed can have its due weight in making up the account.

5903. Just as there is a progressive deterioration in the sinner's soul when he surrenders himself to evil so there is a progressive increase in the Penalty which be suffers.

5901, This is true Salvation. It is not only safety and felicity, but the attainment of the final tool, the supreme Achievement, the Fulfalment of the highest in human nature, the salisfaction of the true and pipte desires of the heart,—seeing the "Face of God" See 4,4733 to tall 57.

$905. The supreme Arbievement, or the Fuldiment of the Heart's Desires, spoken of in the last verse, is now described in three symbols (verses 32-34), as further explained by two negatives (verse $32-34), as further explained by two negatives (verse $35.). The first symbol is the enclosed Fruit-Garden, and the symbol taken for the furth is the Grape. As shown in paragraphs 8-10 of Appendix XII following $5. liv, the Garden in its many aspects is the most (requent symbol adopted for Blits. Here the symbolism is further particularised. The most carefully-tended Garden is a Fruit-Garden, with walls all round to protect it, and the most characteristic fruit mentioned here is the luscious Grape, both because it is a Fruit, and because it yields wine—the pure Wine of divine Love.

الله التَّمَّنُ وَمَنَ وَالْأَمْنِ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا الْتَمَّلِ الْمُلَالِمُ الْمُثَلِّ الْمُثَلِّ

3906. The second symbol is Companions of Equal Age, Maidens or Virgins, symbols of purity, grace, beauty, innocence, truth, and sympathy. See paragraph 12 of Appendix XII. The feminine itself here symbolises these qualities, and such will be the Companions for those who have been in this world either women or men, for there are no separate beavens for them. The stress here is laid on "Equal Age", for only by that symbol can complete sympathy and understanding be figured. As heaven will be "beyond the flight of Time, beyond the reign of Death", age or youth has no meaning there except as tokens of temperaments, tastes, and feelings, all of which will have their sarred Fulliment.

5907. The third symbol, the Cup, takes us: partly to the Grapes mentioned in verse 32 and partly to the Springs or Kivers mentioned with the Garden in so many places. See paragraphs 10 and 43 of Appendix NI Full to the Brim brings to our mind the unbounded Bounty of Garden.

9008. The explanation of the three symbols is made further clear by the two negatives. (I) There will be notationed to a same usually associated on this earth with pleasant Gardens Companions of equal age, or generous Cups flowing in Assemblies. (2) There will be no Untrith or Falsebood, Insurcenty or Hollowness there. Everything will be on a plane of absolute Truth and Reality.

5009. The Recompense is not exactly a Reward in proportion to merit, but is rather a Gift or a Pounty from the Merciful,—a Gift most amply sufficient to satisfy all desire on that plane of purity. See paragraphs 3-6 of Appendix XII for a discussion of the decirine of Rewards and Punishments "A Gift (amply) sufficient" might almost be translated: a liberal and bountiful gift. Cf the phrase, Ariff in askaba-me-gave generously, or hountifully.

9910. No one has the right or the power to argue with God about the Gifts which He may begin on His devotees beyond their deserts, (verse 36 above) or about the Penalty which His justice may inflict for sin or wrong-doing. He is high above all Creation. But He is also Most Gracious. Therefore He may permit special Dignitaries, of honour in His eyes, to plead for sinners, but they will only plead in truth and righteousness; see verse 38 below. *

5911. The Spirit: see n. 3677 to lxx. 4. Some Commentators understand by "the Spirit" the angel Gabriel as he is charged specially with bringing Messages to human apostles: see xxi. 193, n. 3224. Or perhaps hermay be considered the chief of the angels. But it is batter to take a wider meaning,—the souls of men collectively as they rise to the Iudement-Seat of God.

5912. See n. 5910 above. No one has the right to speak before the Judgment-Sent; but certain great Dignitaries may be given permission to plead for mercy for sinners, and they will only so plead if the mercy is not nugatory of God's universal justice.

5913. Cf. lxix. 1 and n. 5635. Judgment is sure to come, and Truth will then be free from all veils. Why should not man, therefore, now in this life of probation, turn back to God, and understand and do His Will?

sold. Is judgment very near? Yes. There are three stages of judgment. (1) Many of our since and wrong-doings find their penalty in this very life. It may not be an open or striking event, but it corrodes the soul and conscience all the time. Let us therefore turn back to God in repentance and ask for forgiveness. (2) Where the Penalty is not actually perceived or is not visible in this life, Death is considered the Less'r Judgment for each individuals out: see n. 5872 to 1xxv. 22. Death may come to anyone at any time, and we must all be ready for it. (3) Then there is the final Judgment, when the whole of the present order passes away, and there is a New World. Time as we know it will not exist. Fifty thousand years as we recken now will be but as a Day ixx. 4. According to those standards even this Final Judgment is quite near, and we must prepare for it. For it will be too late then for repentance.

S915. The Unbeliever, the Rejecter of God, will then find himself in a world of absolute Resility, in which there will be no place for him. He will neither live nor die: xx. 78. He will wish that he could be reduced to nothingness, but even that would not be possible.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SERA LXXIX (Nazi'at).

This is also an early Meccan S0ra, of about the same date as the last, and deals with the mystic theme of Judgment from the point of view of Pride and its Fall. The parable of Pharaoh occupies a central place in the argument: for he said, "I am your Lord Most High", and perished with his followers.

C. 259.—Never can Evil escape God's order
(1xxiz. 146.)

And law: His angels are ever present

To bring the wicked to their bearings

And they ever strive and press forward to bring

Comfort, succour, and God's Mercy to those

Who seek it. Then will come the Day

When the proud shall be humbled, though they

Deny the coming Judgment. What happened

To Pharaoh? He flouted God's Message specially

Sent to him, and arrogantly proclaimed:

"I am your Lord Most High!" He perished

In this life and will answer for his deeds in the next.

But can ye not see, O men, the mighty Works of God in the heavens and on earth?—
The darksome splendour of the Night with its Stars,
And the daylight splendour of the Sun?—
How the earth, with its spacious expanse and its mountains,
Yields moisture and pasture, and feeds and sustains
Men and cattle, through God's wise Providence?
Ah! transgress not all bounds and earn not the Fire
Of Punishment, but fear God and His Judgment,
And prepare for the Garden of Perpetual Bliss.
Delay not! The Judgment is sure, and it's nigh!

50b. The beginning of this Suca muy be compared with the beginning of S, Exvit. A transfar's task in such passages is extremely difficult. He has to do with highly mystical symbols expressed in elliptical language withbit for mysticism, and he has to render them in another language with words of previous meltiligible to readers. It is therefore necessary for him to put in part of the Commentary in the Translation in such cases.

The evidence of Bve things is here invoked in verses 1—5, in order to lead to the conclusion in verse 6 and those following. On it we treat verses 3-3 as three stages of the same thing, there are three things to be considered in five stages. What are they? And what is the conclusion? See the following notes,

5917. There is much difference of opinion among the Commentators as to the five things or beings mentioned in these verses. I follow the gineral opinion in my interpretation, which is that angels are referred to as the agency which in their dealings with mankind show clearly God's Justice. Power, and Mercs, which again point to the Judgment to come, as a certainty which none can evade. The first point, referred to in this vises, is that the souls of the wicked are fourth to part with their material body at death, but their will will not count: their souls will be wrenched out into apother world. Who will then deay Resurrection and Judgment?

5018. The second point is that hi contrast with the wicked, the souls of the blessed will be drawn out gently to their new life. They will be ready for it. In fact drawn for them will be a release from the grosser incidents of bodily sense. To them the approach of Judgment will be welcome.

agolo. At all times there are errands of mercy and blessing and errands of justice, which the agoles are prompt to execute by order of God. There are three features of this, thus giving the thard, fourth, and thit points, (3) Their movement is compared to that of gliding or swimming (sebban). In xx. 30 this verb is applied to the motion of the celestial bodies; they all "swim along, seath in its rounded course." (5 Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice: "There's not an orb which thou behold'st, But in his motion like an angel sings, Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins." (4) In hurrying on their errands the angels press forth as in a race. (5) And thus they promptly execute the orders of their Lond.

5970. The evidence of the wonderful working of the spiritual world having been invoked in the first five verses, the conclusion is now drawn and stated. It is certain that one great Day to be taken in a spiritual sense as the Day of Account), the whole world as we now see it in our lower life will be in violent revolution. It will be like an earthquake destroying all land-marks. But that will affect only things subject to change: they will suffer violent convulsions us a preliminary to their disappearance. But God and His davue order will not change: His "Face" abideth for ever, full of Majesty, Bounty, and Honour (b. 27).

3921. The Commotion will be repeated again and again in the transitory world, to make way for the new world that will then come into being.

3922. All hearts will be in agritation: those of the blessed ones to see the beginning of the fulfilment of their Lord's Promise; those of the Rejecters of God for fear of His just Judgment.

3023. Similarly all eyes will be cast down: those of the blessed ones in humble modesty, and those of the Rejectors of God, in utter humiliation, sorrow, and shame. For their arrogance and insolence in their probationary fite 9924. The Unbelievers say now. In their arrogance, insolence, and mocking defiance: "Surely death here is the end of all things! When we are dead and buried, and our bones are rotten, how can we be restored again?" They add, "If that were so, then we should indeed be in a turn of dreadful luck! Instead of gaining by the Resurrection, we should be in terrible loss (with our rotten bones!" They mean this in bitting mockers. But there will indeed be an Account taken, and they will indeed be an a terrible loss, for they will go to perdition!

Others think it was the miracle of the rod that became a "snake active in motion": see xx. 20, n. 2549, These were among the Greater Signs: xx. 23. in xvii, 101 there is a reference to nine Clear Signs given to Moses, and these are specified in detail in n. 1991 to vii, 133. The fract is, there were many Signs given, "openly self-explained," but Pharanoh and his men "were steeped in arrogance,— a people given to sin "(vii. 133). The pre-eminently Great Sign was therefore the fact of Moses being sent to Pharaoh, which subsequently converted the majcians and the more learned Egyptians to the true God (xx. 70-73), though Pharaoh and his Chiefs resisted and suffered for their sins. The mystics understand by the "Great Sign" the Power of God as enshrined in his mystic Name, which none may know but the adepts in spiritual lore.

Can man then remain exempt from his responsibility for his deeds, endowed as he is with a will. or deav the Day of Sorting Out, which is the Day of Judgment?

5936. Its of course refers to the starry heaven. Both the Night and the Day have each its own beauty and its utility for man, as has been frequently pointed out in the Qur-an. The night is a period of darkness, but it has all oit is splendours of light in the moon, or the planets Jupiter or Venus, or stars like Strius or the Milky Way. These countless lights of night have their own beauty, and by day there is the splendour of the sun for us, which in Creation as a whole, is just one of countless stars.

5939. See n. 2038 to xvi. 15. The "eternal hills" are the main reservoirs for the storage and gradual distribution of water, the very basis for the life of man and beast,

5940. This clause I construe to apply to verses 30, 31, and 32 above. Everything on earth has, by God's bountiful providence, been arranged to subserve the use and convenience of man and the lower life which depends upon him. The intermediary between God's providence and the actual use made of God's other gifts is man's own intelligence and initiative, which are also gifts of God,

5044. The abiding Punishment will be for those who had wilfully and pensistently rebelled against God, "transgressing all bounds", and had given themselves up to the vanities and lusts of this lower life. This Punishment will not touch those who had repented and been forgiven, nor those guilty, through human frailty, of minor sins, whose deeds will be weighed in the balance against their good deeds: cit. 6.

3945. The contrast is complete and parallel: the persistent rebels against God's Law, who preferred the lower life, are to dwell in the Fire of Punishment, while those who humbly feared the punishment of sin and believing in their Lord's warnings, restrained their lower desires, will dwell in the Garden. ### INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXX ('Abasa).

This is an early Meccan Sūra, and is connected with an incident which reflects the highest honour on the Prophet's sincerity in the Revelations that were vouchsafed to him even if they seemed to reprove him for some natural and human zeal that led him to a false step in his mission according to his own high standards.

He was once deeply and earnestly engaged in trying to explain the holy Qur-an to Pagan Quraish leaders, when he was interrupted by a bind man, 'Abdullah ibn Umm-i-Maktum, one who was also poor, so that no one took any notice of him. He wanted to learn the Qur-an. The holy Prophet naturally disliked the interruption and showed impatience. Perhaps the poor man's feelings were hurt. But he whose gentle heart ever sympathised with the poor and the afflicted, got new Light from above, and without the least hesitation published this revelation, which forms part of the sacred scripture of Islam, as described in verses 13-16. And the Prophet always afterwards held the man in hich bonour.

The incident was only a passing incident, but after explaining the eternal principles of revelation, the Sûra recapitulates the Mercies of God to man, and the consequences of a good or a wicked life here, as seen in the spiritual world to come, in the Hersefter.

C. 260.—Men not blest with the good things of this life (Ixxx. 2-42.) May yet be earnest seekers of Truth

And Purity, and deserve as much attention as those Who seem to wield some influence, yet who In their pride are self-sufficient. God's Message is universal: all have a right fo hear it. Held high in honour, kept Pure and holy, it should be writ By none but good and honourable men.

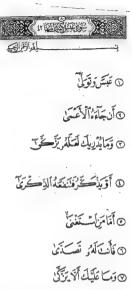

God's Grace is showered on man not less
For his inner growth than in his outward
Life. There must be a final Reckoning,
When each soul must stand on its own past Record:
The faces, then, of the Blest will beam
With Joy and Light, while the Doers of Iniquity
Will hide in Dust and Shame and Darkness.

Stra LXXX.

'Abasa, or He Frowned.

- 2. Because there came to him The blind man (interrupting).

- 5. As to one who regards Himself as self-sufficient, *****
- 6. To him dost thou attend;
- Though it is no blame To thee if he grow not <sup>3033</sup> (In spiritual understanding).

5950. See the Introduction to this S@ra for the incident to which this refers. The lesson is that neither spiritual worth nor the prespect of effective spiritual guidance is to be measured by a man's position in life. The poor, or the blind, the hall, or the maimed, may be more susceptible to the teaching of God's Word than men who are apparently gifted, but who suffer from arrogance and self-sufficiency.

3951. It may be that the poor blind man might, on account of his will to team, be more likely to grow in his own spiritual development or to profit by any lessons faught to him even in reproof than a self-sufficient leader. In fact it was so. For the blind man became a true and sincere Muslim and lived to become a governor of Madma:

5952. Such a one would be a Pagan Quraish leader, whom the holy Prophet was anxious to get into his fold, in order that the work of preaching God's Message might be facilitated. But such a Message works first amongst the simple and lowly, the poor and despised folk, and the mighty ones of the earth only come in when the stream unsees in with irresistible force.

5933 God's Message is for all, but if the great ones arroganity keep back from it, it is no fault of the Preacher, so long as he has proclaimed the Message. He should attend to all, and specially to the humble and lowly. S. LEXX. 8-17.1

5954. The fear in the blind man's heart may have been two-fold. (1) He was humble and God-fearing, not arrogant and self-sufficient; (2) being poor and blind, he feared to intrude; yet his earnest desire to learn the Qur-an made him hold, and he came, perhaps unseasonably, but was yet worthy of encouragement, because of the purity of his heart.

5955; God's Message is a universal Message, from which no one is to be excluded,—rich or poor, of young, great or lowly, learned or ignorant. If anyone had the spiritual craving that needed stifaction, he was to be given precedence if there was to be any question of pracedence at all.

5936, At the time this S0ra was revealed, there were perhaps only about 42 or 45 S0ras in the hands of the Muslims. But it was sufficient body of Revelation of high sphittual value, to which the description given here could be amplied. It was held in the highest himour; its place in the hearts of Muslims was more exalted, than that of anything else; as God's Word, it was pure and sacred; and those who transcribed it were men who were honourable, just and pious. The legend that the early S0ras were not carefully written down and preserved in books is a pure invention. The recreasions made later in the time of the first and the third Khalifas were merely to preserve the purity and safeguard the arrangement of the text, at a time when the expansion of Islam among non-Arabic-speaking peoples made such precautions necessary.

5937. Cf. laxvi. 2, and n. 5832. The origin of man as an animal is lowly indeed. But what further faculties and capacilities has not 50d granted to man? Besides his animal body, in which also he shares in all the blessings which God has bestowed on the rest of His Creation, man has been granted divine gifts which entitle him to be called the Vicegerent of God on earth: ii. 30, He has a will; he has spiritual parception; he is capable of divine love; he can control nature within cretain limits, and subject nature's forces to his own use. And he has been given the power of judgment, so that he can avoid excess and defect, and follow the middle path. And that path, as well as all that is necessary for his life in its manifold aspects, has been made easy for him.

5958. Cf. xx. 55. Death is an invitable event after the brief life on this earth, but it is also in a sense a blessing,—a release from the imperfections of this world, a close of the probationary period, after which will down the full Reality. "The Grace" may be understood to be the period between physical death and immortal Life, whatever may be the mode of disposal of the dead body. This intermediate period is the Barash or Particles or see n. 290 to xxiii. 101.

5959. Though all these blessings and stages have been provided by God's Grace for the good of man, yet unregenerate man fails in carrying out the purpose of his creation and life.

3960. After a reference to man's inner history, there is now a reference to just one item in his 'doubter life, his cool : and it is shown how the forces of heaven and earth unite by God's Command to serve man and his dependants, "for use and convenience to you and your cattle" (verse 32 bricw). If that is the case with just one item, food, how much more comprehensive is God's beanchence when the whole of man's needs are considered!

$967. Cf. lxx, 10-14. No friend will ask after a friend that Day. On the contrary the sinner will desire to save himself at the expense even of his own family and benefactors.

5908. The dust on the faces of the sinners will be in contrast to the beaming light on the faces of the righteous; and the blackness in contrast to the "laughing, rejoicing" faces of the righteous. But the dust also suggests that being Rejecters of God, their faces and reyes and faculties were choked in dust, and the blackness suggests that being Boers of Iniquity they had no part or to in Purity or Light. Another contrast may possibly be deduced: the humble and lowly may be "in the dust" in this life, and the arrogant sinners in sunshine, but the roles will be reversed at Judgment.

INTRODUCTION TO SURA LXXXI (Talwir).

This is quite an early Meccan Sūra, perhaps the sixth or seventh in chronological order. It opens with a series of highly mystical metaphors suggesting the break-up of the world as we know it (verses 1-13) and the enforcement of complete personal responsibility for each soul (verse 14). Then there is a mystical passage showing how the Quranic Revelation was true, and revealed through the angel Gabriel, and not merely a rhapsody from one possessed. Revelation is given for man's spiritual guidance (verses 14-29).

Comparable with this Sura are the Suras laxxii and laxxiv which may be read with this.

Summary

C. 261.—How can the soul's self-conviction be fitly (IRRM: 1-29.) Expressed, except by types of tremendous Cataclysms in nature, and still more by tremendous Searchings in the heart of man? These want Deep pondering. When once the spiritual Dawn Has "breathed away" the Darkness of the Night.

The Vision Glorious clears all doubts, And brings us face to face with Truth.

The highest Archangel in heaven is sent By God to bring these truths to men Through their Apostle. God's Grace flows freely: We have but to tune our Will to His,—The ever-loving Righteous God.

- 3. When the mountains vanish (Like a mirage): 5073
- 4. When the she-camels. Ten months with young. A: e left untended: 5973
- 5. When the wild beasts Are herded together

5969. Verses I to 13 are conditional clauses, and the substantive clause is in verse 14. The time will come when nature's processes as we know them will cease to function, and the soul will only then know by self conviction the results of its actions. With reference to an individual soul, its resurrection is its supreme crisis: the whole world of sense, and even of imagination and reason. melts away, and its whole spiritual scroll is laid bare before it.

5970. The conditional clauses are twelve, in two groups of six. The first six affect the puter or physical life of man; the last six, his inmost spiritual life. Let us take them one by one. (1). The biggest factor affecting us in the external physical World is the light, heat, and perhaps electric or magnetic energy of the sun. The sun is the source of all the light, heat, and energy, and indeed the source and support of all the physical life that we know. It is the biggest factor and yet most remote from us in our solar system. Yet the sources of our inner spiritual life will be greater and more lasting, for they will survive it. The sun as the centre of our solar system also stands as a symbol of the present order of things. The physical forces, as defined in Newton's laws of Matter and Attraction, will also break up with the break-up of the sun.

Is folded up; is folded up, or twisted up, like a sheet or a garment.

5971, (2) Next after the sun, we can derive faint lights from the innumerable stars in the firmament. For all the ages of which we have any record, these stars have remained fixed. Nothing can be more fixed; yet they can and will fail.

5972, Cf. luxviii, 20. (3) On our own earth the mountains—the "eternal hills "-seem the most striking examples of stability; yet they will be swept away like a mirage, as if they had never existed,

5973. (4) The type of Arab property, as well as the type of the Arab pet, was the camel, and the most precious camel was the she-camel just about to be delivered of her young. She would in normal times be most sedulously cared for. But when all our landmarks of this life vanish, even she would be left untended. Nothing would then be as it is now.

5974 (5) In the present world, the wild animals fear each other, and they all fear man and normally keep away from human habitations. But when this order passes away, the lion will lie down with the lamb, and there will be scarcely any differentiation between human habitations and the wilds of the forests.

Are laid open : 1076

5975. See iii. 6 and n. 5041. (6) The oceans, which now keep their bounds, wilturge and boil over, and overwhelm all landmarks. At present the waters seem to have reached their fixed and normal levels, but the whole equilibrium will then be disturbed. Such will be the complete wreck of this transitory world, at the approach of the dawn of the permanent Reality. But these are physical supposed, but the wholes, relating to the outer nature surrounding the physical nature of man. The remaining six, viz, the 7th to the 12th, describe the ordering of the new spiritual World, from which all present seeming incongruities will be removed.

5978. (9) The Scrolls recording the deeds of men, good or bad, will then be laid open before all. Cf. I. 17.18, n. 4954; also ixxxii. 11-12. In the present phenomenal world, things may be concealed; but in the spiritual world of absolute Reality, every secret is opened out, good or had. The whole tale of acts, omissions, motives, imponderable spiritual hurt, neglect, or help will be laid bare.

- 12. When the Blazing Fire **** Is kindled to fierce heat:
- 13. And when the Garden son Is brought near :- 5961
- 14. (Then) shall each soul know What it has put forward. 5083
- 15. So verily I call see To witness the Planets-That recede.

@ وَإِذَا ٱلسَّنَّاءُ كُشِطَتْ

5979. The Warld on High: literally, the Sky, or Heaven as standing for both the Blazing Fire and the Garden, the Home of the Hereafter. (10) The soul's spiritual Sky-the things it held high or sacred-will be stripped of the thin blue that gave rest-and partly illusion-to its spiritual eye in this world of illusions. Just as when an animal is skinned, its real flesh and blood and inner organs become visible, without any outer coating to hold them together, so the inmost state of the spiritual world will then become plain.

5980. (11) Then will burn the inner Hell .-- an intense realisation of spiritual anguish, wome than the forcest fire

5981. (12) The last of the Metaphors, the Garden of Bliss-the Light of God's Face (xcii, 20)will come in sight, -- not yet attained, but visible, or "brought near". For the scales have fallen from the eyes, and the soul knows itself.

5982. In Eastern literature, especially in religious allegory, there are usually more meanings than one, entolded in each other. They must be understood, if the reader wishes to get the full sense of the passage. This applies specially to the Qur-an. The parallel meaning, favoured by the Stiffs. take the first six physical facts (verses 1-6) also as allegorical. (1) As the sun is the centre of the solar system, so our lower self is the centre of our ordinary motives and desires; the light of that self must be darkened to make room for the Reality. (2) The minor light of the stars is our ordinary human wisdom; this must be dropped before we get spiritual vision. (3) Our worldly ambitions are the mountains, which must vanish similarly. (4) Greed and love of gain are the camels big with young; that must be left untended. (5) Our passions are the wild animals that must be tamed. (6) The oceans of divine grace must boil over and cover our whole being. All this must occur at any point of time, even to an individual in this life when God's Glory shines on him.

Another interpretation would be to apply it to the Lesser Judgment, when the soul passes out of this physical body, see lxxv. 22, n. 5822; lxxviii. 40, n. 5914; and lxxix, 14, n. 5926

5983. This is the conclusion. It is only on such conditions that the soul reaches its full realisation. Put forward : cf. " the Deeds which his hands have sent forth." in [xxviii. 40.

5984. Cf. lvi. 75, n 5258, for the witness that the heavenly bodies bear symbolically to the power. beauty, and goodness of God, in sending His Revelation. See n. 5798 to laxiv. 32, for the significance of an adjuration in the Qur-an.

5985. The appeal here is made to three things, the Planets, the Night, and the Dawn. (1) The Planets have a retrograde and a forward motion, and, during occultation, hide or disappear behind the sun or moon, or are otherwise invisible or appear stationary. They behave differently from the millions of stars around them. Yet they are not mere erratic bodies, but obey definite laws, and evidence the power and wisdom of God.

5996. How the Night gradually declines after its height at midnight! It seems gradually to steal away, and as Dawn approaches, to merge into Day. So a soul in spiritual darkness gradually awakes to its spiritual Dawn through Revelation.

"5987. The slow "breathing out "of the darkness by the Dawn, shows us, by beautiful imagery, that these mysterious operations, of which people in their ignorance are frightened if they have to do with darkness, are ceally beneficent operations of God. They have nothing to do with evil spirits, or witches, or magic. For three questions were actually raised about the holy Prophet's Ministry by the ignorant. (I) Did his wonderful works come from himself and not from God? (2) Was he possessed of an evil spirit? In other words, was he mad? For that was the theory of madness then current. (3) Was he a soothsayer, or necromancer, or magician? For he had virtues, powers, and eloquence, so extraordinary that they could not understand him.

5988. They are told here that all their three theories were foolish. The Revelation was really from God. Their wonder should cease if they observe the daily mirarles worked round them in nature. The bringer of God's Message was the angel Gabriel, and not an evil spirit.

5989. Not only was the bringer of the Revelation, Gabriel, an honourable Messenger, incapable of deceit, but he had, in the angelic kingdom, rank and authority before God's Throne, and he could convey an authoritative divine Message. He was, like the holy Apostle, faithful to his trust; and therefore there could be no question of the Message being delivered in any other way than exactly according to the divine Will and Purpose. These epithets could apply to the Prophet himself, but in view of verse 23 below, it is best to understand them of Gabriel.

5900. After describing the credentials of the Archangel Gabriel, the Text now appeals to the people to consider their own "Companion", the Prophet, who had been bern among them and had lived with them, and was known to be an honourable, ruthful, and trustworthy man. If Gabriel was the one who brought the Message to him, then there was no question of demoniacal possessoin. And the Prophet had seen him in his inspired vision "in the clear horkon"

5992, Such would be the words of a soothsayer, guarded, ambiguous, and misleading. Here everything was clear, sane, true, and under divine inspiration.

The rite of throwing stones in the valley of Mina at the close of the Meccan Pilgrinuage (see n. 417 (i) to u. 197) suggests symbolically that the Pilgrin emphatically, definitly, and finally rejects all Evil.

5994. It has been shown that this is no word of a mortal, but that it is full of divine wisdom; that its teaching is not that of a madman, but same to the core and in accordance with human needs; that it freely and clearly directs you to the right Path and forbids you the Path of evil. Why then he sitate? Accept the divine Grace; repent of your sins; and come to the higher Life.

5995. It is not meant for one class or race; it is universal, and is addressed to all the Worlds. For the meaning of "Worlds", see n. 20 to i. 2.

God is the Cherisher of the Worlds, Lord of Grace and Mercy, and His galance is open to all who higher the will to profit by it, But that will must be exercised in conformity with God's Will (verse 29). Such conformity is Islam. Verse 28 points to human free-will and responsibility; verse 29 to its linguistations. Both extremes, viz.: cast-iron Determinism and voides of Chaotic Free-will, are condepended.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SÜRA LXXXII (Inflär).

In subject-matter this Sura is cognate to the last, though the best authorities consider it a good deal later in chronology in the early Meccan Period.

Its argument is subject to the threefold interpretation mentioned in n. 5982 to lxxxi. 13, viz., as referring (1) to the final Day of Judgment, (2) to the Lesser Judgment, on an individual's death, and (3) to the awakening of the Inner Light in the soul at any time, that being considered as Death to the Falsities of this life and a Re-birth to the true spiritual Reality.

C. 262.— How fixed is the order holding together (IRENII. 1-19)

This material universe above and below us?

Yet it must give way before the vast

Unfathomed Truth in which man will see

His past and his future in true perspective.

To God he owes his life and all

Its blessings: will he not see

That the Future depends on Right and Justice?

Righteousness must come to its own,

And so must Discord and Rebellion.

The Day must come when Discord

Must finally cease, and the Peace of God

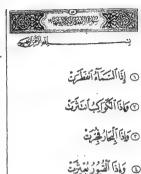

And His Command are all insul!

- 2. When the Stars Are scattered; *****
- 3. When the Oceans
  Are suffered to burst forth: 6000
- 4. And when the Graves
  Are turned upside down; ---

3997. Cf. the passage lxxxi. 1-14 and notes. For the three parallel interpretations, see the Introduction to this Sfora. There are four conditional clauses here, and the substantive clause is inverse. S. 16, Xxxxi., there were 12 conditional clauses, and the conclusion was similar, but not expressed in precisely the same terms. See lxxxii. 5n. 6002 below. The literal interpretation would be that the physical world as we seer in now will be destroyed before the final Day of Judgment, establishing the true spiritual Reality. If the four clauses are interpreted metaphorically (see notes 9096.6001), we have a reference to the Lesser Judgment, the individual dawn of the true Reality at Death. If we interpret by the SBII method, the spiritual crisis may occur to any soul at any moment when these metaphorical events occur.

3998. Cf. | Intiti. 18, n. 3769. In the literal meaning, the beautiful blue sky overhead, which we take for granted in susshine and storm, will be shattered to pieces before the new Sprittual. World is established. Metaphorically, the partition which seems at present to divide things divine from this phenomenal world has to be shattered before each soul knows the inner Reality about itself.

5999. Cf. laxxi. 2, where the word for "stars" (Nujam) is different and the verb is different. Najam has reference to brightness, and the verb "losing their lustre" was appropriate there, to show the opposite of a fixed sold here) has more the meaning of a star as fixed in a constellation; and the opposite of a fixed and definite order is "scattered", the verb used here. In fact, throughout this passage, the dominating idea is the disturbance of order and symmetry. The metaphor behind the scattering of the constellations is that in the present order of things we see many things associated together, ag, rank with honour, wealth with comfort, etc. In the new Spiritual World this will be seen to have been merely fortunate.

6000. Cf. LXXLi. 6, "when the oceans boil over with a swell". Here, "are suffered to burst forth; represses the end of the present order of things. This shap, be in two ways, interpreted intensity: (1) The barrier which keeps within their respective bounds; the various streams of a salt and fresh water to 2.0. n. 1858 will be removed; (2) the Ocean will oversighed the whole Globe. Figuratively, the different streams of knowledge, great and small, will be levelled down: for only one Knowledge, the Light Divine, will hold the field.

6001. This item is not mentioned in Ixxxi.1-14. Here it is introduced to show that the whole order of things will be so reversed that even Death will not be Death. We think there is tranquility in Death; but there will be no tranquility. Literally, and figuratively, Death will be the beginning of a new Life. What we think to be Death will bring forth Life.

(٨٢) سورة الانفطار

6002. Sent Forward and kept back: may mean: the deeds of commission and omission in this life. Or the Arabic words may also be translated: sent prepara and left behind: te, the spiritual possibilities which it sent forward for its other life, and the physical things on which it prided itself in this life, but which it had to leave hehind in this life. Or else, the things it put first and the things it put first and the class hall be first ".

The first shall be last and the lest shall be first ".

6003, Cf. xv. 29. God not only created man, but fashioned him in due proportions, giving him extraordinary capacities, and the means wherewith he can fulfil his high destiny.

6004. See n. 834 to vi. 1. Having given a limited free-will, He gave us a just bias through our reason and our spiritual faculties. If we err, it is our will that is at fault.

6005. By "Form" (Sarat) here I understand the general shape of things in which any given personality is placed, including his physical and social environments, his gifts of mind and spirit, and all that goes to make up his outer and inner life. The Grace of God is shown in all these things, for His Will is formed from perfect knowledge, wisdom, and goodness.

000. The goodness and mercies of God, and His constant watchful care of all His creatures should make men grateful, instead of which they turn away from the Right and deny the Day of Sorting Out, the Day when every action performed here will find its fulfillment in just reward or punishment.

6007. Besides the faculties given to man to guide him, and the Form and Personality through which he can rise by stages to the Presence of God, there are spiritual agencies around him to help and protect him, and to note down his Record, so that perfect justice may be done to him at the end. For these Guardian Angels, see 1. 17-18, and n. 4934. The Record is of course figurative. For man's own good, so that perfect justice may be done. God's own knowledge is perfect, and independent of Records.

6008. I understand this relative clause to govern "the Fire", i.e., the Punishment. It will be possible and passible, to give the Sinner every chance of repentance and amendment. But once the period of probation is past, it will be irrevocable. There will be in oging back from it. By inference, the Righteous may individually reach some stage of Biss at once, possibly in this life, possibly after death, though the 1 and Judgment will be the general and complete cessation of this fleeting world and the creation of the world of Elernity.

6009. From our ordinary experiences of this file, we can form no conception of the Final Judgment. We can speak of Rewards and Pointhimens, the Fruits of Actions, the Resurrection and the Fribinal the Restoration of True Variety, the Elimination of all Wong, and a hundred other plirases. They might serve to introduce our minds vaguely to a new World, of which they cannot possibly form any indequate conception under present conditions. The question is repeated in verse. T-18 to emphasize this difficults, and a simple answer so suggested, as explained in the next note.

6010. The answer is suggested by a negative proposition: 'No soil shall have power to do aught for a notice.' This is fall of meaning. Personal responsibility will be fully enforced. In this world we fill or pend on one another proximately, though our ultimate dependence is always on food, now and for ever. But here a father helps a son forward; husbard and wife influence each other's estimacy because the institutions may hold large masseof mankind under their grip; Lisboard and evil may seem to fourth for a time, because a certain amount of limited free-will have been granted to man. This jedich will be all over then. The good and the pure will have been so perfected that their wills will be in complete consenance with God's Universal Will. The Command, thenceforgood, will be wholly will God.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXXIII (Talfif).

This Sura is close in time to the last one and the next one.

It condemns all fraud—in daily dealings, as well as and especially in matters of Religion and the higher spiritual Life.

601. "Fraud" must here be taken in a widely general sense. It covers giving short measure or short weight, but it covers much more than that. The next two verses make it clear that it is the spirit of injustice that is condemented,—giving too little and asking too much. This may be shown in commercial dealings, where a man exacts a higher standard in his own favour than he is willing to connected as against him. In dimensior or social matters an individual or group may ask for homour, or respect, or services which he or they are not willing to give on their side in similar circumstances, it is worst than one-sided selfshiness: for it is double injustice. But it is worst fall in Irelignon or spiritual life: with what face can a man ask for Mercy or Love from God when he is unwilling to give it to his fellow-men? I one aspect this is a statement of the Golden Rule, 'To a syou would be done by'. Put it is more completely expressed. You must give in full what is due firem you whether you expect or with to receive full consideration from the other side or not 6012. Legal and social sanctions against Fraud riepend for their efficacy on whether there e a chance of being found out. Moral and religious sent-citios are of a different kind, "Do you wo, to degrade your own nature?" "Do you not consider that there is a Pay of Account before a Judge Whenknows all, and Who safeguards all interests, for the 1st Hand and Cheesslee' of the Wollds? Whether other people know anything about your wrong or not, you are guilty before Cach.

6013. This is a word from the same root as Sijn, a Prison. It rhymes with and is contrasted with IIIIsjin in verse 18 below. It is therefore understood by many Commentators to be a place, a Prisco or a Dungeon in which the Wicked are confined pending their appearance before the Judgment-9-at. The mention of the Inscribed Register in verse 9 below may imply that Sijin is the name of the Register of Black Deeds, though verse 9 may be elliptical and may only describe the place by the significance of its contents.

6014. If we take Sijjin to be the Register itself, and not the place where it is kept, the Register itself is a sort of Prison for those who do wrong. It is inscribed buly that no one is omitted whought to be there, and for every entry there is a complete record, so that there is no excape for the sinner. Of course we must not understand a material Register, made up of paper or parchment and written with pen and ink. The whole description is figurative of the in-scapable record which in creates; every detail, of motive, manner, occasion, etc., contributes to include and the record when the contribution of the contribution of the second of the contribution of the second of the contribution of the second of the contribution of the second of the contribution of the second of the contribution of the second of the contribution of the second of the second of the contribution of the second of Instead, the Fire of Punishment will be to them the only reality which they will perceive.

60). "Histor: the oblique form of the nominative "Historia, which occurs in the next verse. It is in contrast to the Sylfia which occurs in verse Talvie, where see in 6013. Literally, it means the 'High Places', but it is prod ably not the same as the 'Heigh Sides', mentioned in it. 46. Nor need we necessarily identify it with tip—"dyellings on high" [[swifii]] mentioned in xxxiv, 37, Applying the reasoning pratialle to that which we applied to Sylfia, we may interpret it as the Place where is ke<sub>1</sub>4 the Register of the Righteous.

6020. This repeats verse 9 above, where see n. 6014. But the Register is of the opposite kind, that of the Nighteous. It contains every detail of the Righteous. But this is all to be understood in a metaphorical sense.

60:1. See lvi. 11, n. 5227; also n. 5223. Those Neatest to God will be witnesses to this Righteous Record; or as it may also be rendered, they will be present at the Record, and watch this Record, Metaphonically, the highest spiritual dignitaries are always helping and assisting at the piling up of the good record of every soul that strives for good, lowever humble in rank that soul may by.

6024. The Wine will be of the utmost purity and flavour, so precious that it will be protected with a sail, and the seal it itself will be of the costly material of musk, which is most highly esteemed in the East for its perfume. Perhaps a better interpretation of the "seal" is to take it as implying the final effect of the drink: just as a seal closes a document, so the seal of the drink will be the final effect of the drink i just as a seal closes a document, so the seal of the drink will be the final effect of the delicious perfume and flavour of musk, heightening the enjoyment and helping in the digestion. The physical effect is metaphorical of the spiritual purity of Bliss,

6025. If you understand true and lasting values, this is the kind of pure Bliss to aspire for, and not the fleeting enjoyments of this world, which always leave a sting behind, 6026. Taskm literally inducates height, fulness, opulence. Here it is the name of a heavenly Pountain, whose drink is superior to that of the Purest Wine. It is the nectar drunk by Those Nearest to God (n 5227 to 1vl. 11), the highest in spiritual cagnity; but a flavour of it will be given to all, according to their spiritual capacity. See Appendix XII, passgraph 13, towards the end; also n. 3835 to lxxvi, 5 (Kößer Yountain), and n. 3899 to lxxvi, 17/18 (Selgeb).

<sup>6027.</sup> The wicked laugh at the righteous in this world in many ways: (1) They inwardly laugh at their Faith, because they feel themselves so superior. (2) In public places, when the righteous pass, they wink at each other and insult them. (3) In their own houses they run them down. (4) Whenever and wherever they see them, they reproach them with being fools who have lost their way, when the boot is really on the other leg. In the Hercafter all these tricks and falsehoods will be shown for what they are, and the tables will be reversed.

<sup>6028.</sup> But the wicked critics of the Righteous have no call in any case to sit in judgment over them. Who set them as Keepers or guardians over the Righteous? Let them look to their own condition and future first.

<sup>6029.</sup> The tables will then be reversed, and he laughs best who laughs last.

<sup>6030.</sup> A repetition of verse 23 above, but with a different shade of meaning. The Righteous on their Thrones of Dignity will be able to see all the true values restored in their own favour: but they will also see something else: they will also see the arrogant braggarts brought low, who brought about their own downfall by their own actions.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXXIV (Inshigāq).

Chronologically this Sūra is closely connected with the last one. In subjectmatter it resembles more S. lxxxii. and lxxxi., with which it may be compared.

By a number of mystic metaphors it is shown that the present phenomenal order will not last, and God's full Judgment will certainly be established: man should therefore strive for that World of Eternity and True Values.

C. 264.—All mysteries, fair or shrouded in gloom, (Ixxxiv. 1-25.) Will vanish when the full Reality

Or the Moon's ever-changing light, man's life
Never rests here below, but travels ever onwards

And reach the Heights, to reap a Reward
That will never fail through all eternity I

  And becomes (clean) empty,

6031. The passing away of this world of sense to make way for a new World of Reality is here indicated by two Facts, which are themselves Symbols for a complete revolution in our whole knowledge and experience. At the beginning of S. ixxxii, and S. ixxxii, other Symbols were used, to lead up to the arguments there advanced. Here the two Symbols are: (1) the Sky being rent assunder and giving up its secrets, and (2) the Earth being flattened out from the globe it is, and giving up its secrets. See the following notes:

6032. We may think that the heavens we see above us,—high and sacred, seemingly vast and limitless, eternal and timeless—are not created matter. But they are. And thay remain just so long as God will is too, and not a moment longer. As soon as His Command issues for their dissolution, they will obey and vanish, and all their mystery will be emptied out. And it must necessarily be so; their very nature as created beings requires that they must hearken to the voice of their Creator, even to the extent of their own extinction.

6033. The Earth is a globe, enclosing within it many secrets and mysteries—gold and diamonds in its mines, heat and magnetic forces in its entrails, and the bodies of countless generations of men buried within its soil. At its dissolution all these contents will be disgorged; it will lose its shape as a globe, and cease to exist.

A more mystic meaning lies behind the ordinary meaning of the vanishing of the heavens and the earth as we see them. Our ideas of them—their subjective contents with reference to ourselves will also lose all shape and form and vanish before the eternal verifies.

6034. See n. 6032. We think the earth so solid and real. All our nembhable things dissolve into the earth. But the earth itself will dissolve into a truer Reality.

6035. The substantive clause, to follow the two conditional clauses preceding, may be filled up from the suggestion contained in lxxxii, 5.

<sup>6036.</sup> This life is ever full of toil and misery, if looked at as empty of the Eternal Hope which Residention gives us. Hence the literature of presimism in poetry and philosophy, which thinking minds have poured forth in all ages, when that Hope was obscured to them. "Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought." "To each his suffering; all are men condemned alike to groan!" It is the noblest men that have to "scorn delights and live laborious days" in this life. The good suffer on account of their very goodness; the evil on account of their Evil. But the balance will be set right in the end. Those that weet hall be made to rejoice, and those that went about thoughtlessly rejoicing, shall be made to weep for their folly. They will all go to their account with God and meet Him before His Throne of Judgment

<sup>· 6037.</sup> Right Hand: Cf. avii. 71. These will be the fortunate ones, who spent their lives in goodness and truth: for them the account will be made easy; for even after the balancing, they will receive more than their merits deserve, on account of the infinite grace and mercy of God.

<sup>6040.</sup> The wicked will cry for death and annihilation: but they will neither live nor die: xx. 74.
6041. The tables are now turned. His self-complacence and self-conceit in his lower life will now give place to weeping and gnashing of teeth! C.f., n. 6036 above.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXXV (Buruj).

This is one of the earlier Meccan Suras, chronologically cognate with S. xci.

The subject-matter is the persecution of God's votaries. God watches over His own, and will deal with the enemies of Truth as He dealt with them in the past.

C. 265.—Woe to those who persecute Truth!

(Ixxxv. 1-22) They are being watched by mighty Eyes;

They will have to answer when the Judgment comes;

And a clear Record will witness against them.

Are they cruel to men because of their Faith?

The Fire they use will be turned against them.

For God is strong, and will subdue

The mightiest foes. Be warned, and learn

From His gracious Message, preserved through all Time!

(٨٥) سورة البروج

6051. Here is an appeal to three mystic symbols in verses 1-3, and the substantive proposition is in verses 4.8, a denunciation of wicked persecutors of the votaries of God, persecutors who burnt righteous men at the stake for their Faith. The three mystic Symbols are: (1) the Glonous Sky, with the broad belt of the Constellations marking the twelve Signs of the Zodiac; (2) the Day of Judgment, when all evil will be punished; and (3) certain Persons that will be witnesses, and certain Persons or things that will be the subjects of the witness. See the notes following.

6052. See n. 1950 to xy. 16. The Stars of the Zodiac as well as of other Constellations are like the eyes of the Night. It may be that crimes are committed in the darkness of the night (literally or metaphorically). But countless eyes (metaphorically) are watching all the time, and every author of evil will be brought to book.

6053 The Day of Judgment, when the Sinner will have to give an account of every deed, open or hidden, is not merely a matter of speculation. It is definitely promised in revelation, and will inevitably come to pass. Whe then to the Sinners for their crimes.

6054 The literal meaning is clear, but its metaphorical application has been explained in a variety of ways by different Commentators. 'The words are fairly comprehensive, and should, I think, be understood in connection with Judgment. There the Witnesses may be : (1) the Prophets (iii. 81); God Himself (iii. 81, and x. 61); the Recording Angels (L21); the Sinner's own misused limbs (xxiv. 24); his record of deeds (xvii 14); or the Sinner himself (xvii 14). The subject of the witness may be the deed or crime, or the Sinner against whom the testimony cries out. The appeal to these things means that the Sinner cannot possibly escape the consequences of his crime. He should repent, seek God's Mercy, and amend his life,

6055. Who were the makers of the pit of fire in which they burnt people for their Faith? The words are perfectly general, and we need not search for particular names, except by way of illustration. In ancient history, and in Mediaval Europe, many lives were sacrificed at the stake because the victims did not conform to the established religion. In Arab tradition there is the story of Abraham: Nimrud tries to burn him to death, but on account of Abraham's Faith, the fire became "a means of safety for Abraham": xxi. 69, and n. 2725. Another case cited is that of Zu-Nuwas. the last Bimyarite King of Yemen, by religion a lew, who persecuted the Christians of Najran and is said to have burnt them at the stake. He seems to have lived in the latter half of the sixth Christian century, in the generation immediately preceding the Prophet's birth in 570 A.D. While the words are perfectly general, a reference is suggested to the persecution to which the early Muslims were subjected by the Pagan Quraish. Among other cruelties, they were stripped, and their skins were exposed to 'b, purning rays of the Arabian summer sun.

6056. The persecutors sat calmly to gloat over the agonies of their victims in the well-fed fire.

603. In contrast to the real, all-embracing, and eternal power of God, what are the forces of man at their best? Two examples are mentioned. (I) Pharaoh was a proud monarch of a powerful kingdom, with resources and organisation, material, moral, and intellectual, as good as any in the world. When he pitted himself against God's Prophet, he and his forces were destroyed. See Exix. 15-26. (2) The Thamdd were great builders, and had a high standard of material civilization, But they delied the law of God and perished. See vii, 73-79, and n. 1043.

6064. In spite of the great examples of the past, by which human might and skill were shown to have availed nothing when the law of God was broken, the unbelievers persist (in all ages) in defying that law. But God will know how to deal with them.

6065. God encompasses every thing. But the wicked will find themselves defeated not only in conditions that they foresee, but from all sorts of unexpected directions, perhaps from behind them, i.e., from the very people or circumstances which in their blindness, they despised or thought of as helping them.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXXVI (Tarig).

This Sūra also belongs to the early Meccan period, perhaps not far removed from the last Sūra.

Its subject matter is the protection afforded to every soil in the darkest period of its spiritual history. The physical nature of man may be insignificant, but the soul given to him by God must win a glorious Future in the end.

C. 266.—Through the datkest night comes the penetrating light (txxxvl. 1-17.)

Of a glorious Star. Such is the power

Of Revelation: it protects and guides the erring.

For what is man? But a creature of flesh

And bones! But God by His Power doth raise

Man's state to s Life Beyond (—when lo!

All things hidden will be made plain.

Man's help will then be but the Word

Of God, which none can thwart. So wait

With gentle natience—for His Decision.

Stra LXXXVI

Taria, or The Night-Visitant,

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- And the Night-Visitant (Therein):
- 2. And what will explain to thee What the Night-Visitant is ?-
- (It is) the Star Of piercing brightness;
- There is no soul but has A protector over it. 6069
- 2 ow let man but think From what he is created!
- He is created from A drop emitted—6000
- 7. Proceeding from between
  The backbone and the ribs: 6071

وَالنَّمَاءِ وَالظَارِقِ

وَمَّا أَذْرَبْكَ مَا ٱلظَّارِقُ

النَّهُ أَلْنَاقِبُ

٠ إِنْ كُلُّهُ مِنْ إِنَّا عَلَيْهَا حَافِظُ

۞ فَلْيَنْظُرِ إِلْإِنْسَانُ مِنْمُخُلِقَ

ى خُلِقَ مِن مَّاءِ مَافِيْ

﴿ يَغْرُجُ مِنْ يَيْنِ الصَّلْبِ وَالتَّرْآبِ

6087. The appeal here is to a single mystic Symbol, viz: the Sky with its Night-Visitant; and the substantive proposition is in verse 4: "There is no you but has a protector ore it." In the last Stra. we considered the persecution of God's votaries, and how God protects there. Here the same theme is presented in another aspect. In the darkest sky shines out most brilliantly the light of the most brilliant star. So in the night of spiritual darkness—whether through ignorance or distress—shines the glorious star of God's Revelation. By the same token the man of Faith and Truth has pothing to fear, God will protect His own.

6088. This is explained in verse 3 below. The "Star of piercing brightness" is understood by some to be the Morning Star, by others to be the planet Saturn, by others again to be Sirius, or the Pleiado or sheoting stars. I think it is best to take the "Star" in the collective or generic sense, for stars shine on every night in the year, and their piercing brightness is most noticeable on the darkest night.

6069. If man has a true spiritual understanding, he has nothing to be afraid of. He is protected by God in many ways that he does not even know. He may be an insignificant creature as a mere animal, but his soul raises him to a dignity above other creation. And all sorts of divine forces guard and protect him.

6070. See n 5832 to lazvi, 2. See also last note.

6071. A man's seed is the quintessence of his body. It is therefore said metaphorically to proceed from his loins, i.e. from his back between the hip-bones and his ribs. His back-bone is the source and symbol of his strength and personality. In the spinal cord and in the bran is the directive energy of the central nervous system, and this directs all action, organic and psychic, The spinal cord is continuous with the Medulla Oblogata in the brain.

6072. The Creator who can mingle the forces of psychic and physical muscular action in the creation of man, as explained in the last note, can surely give a new life after physical death here, and restore man's personality in the new world that will open out in the Hereafter.

© وَمَا هُوَ مَا لَمُكَ لَ

From Evil): 6076

14. It is not a thing

6073. In that new world, all our actions, motives, thoughts, and imaginings of this life, however secret, will be brought into the open, and tested by the standards of absolute Truth, and not by false standards of custom, prejudice, or partiality. In that severe test, any adventitious advantages of this life will have no strength or force whatever, and cannot help in any way.

6074. The Firmament above is always the same, and yet it performs its diurnal round, smoothly and punctually. So does God's Revelation show forth the Truth, which like a circle is ever true to its centre,—which is ever the same, though it revolves through the changing circumstances of our present life.

6075. The earth seems hard, but springs can gush forth and vegetables sprout through it and make it green and soft. So is Truth: hard perhaps to mortals, but through the fertilising agency of Revelation, it allows our inner personality to sprout and blossom forth.

6076. See the last two notes. Revelation—God's Truth—can pierce through the hardest crusts, and ever lead us back to the centre and goal of our spiritual life: for it separates Good from Evil definitely. It is not mere play or amusement, any more than the Sky or the Earth is. It helps us in the highest issues of our life.

17. Therefore grant a delay To the unbelievers: Give respite to them Gently (for awhile).

<sup>6977.</sup> Though God in His Mercy has provided a piercing light to penetrate our spiritual darkness, and made our beings responsive to the growth of spiritual understanding, just as the hard earth is responsive to the sprouting of a seed or the gushing of a stream, yet there are evil, nurgenerate men who plot and scheme against the beneficent purpose of God. But their plots will be of no avail, and God's Purpose will prevail. It happened so with the Quraish who wanted to thwart the growth of Islam. It will be so in all ages.

<sup>6078.</sup> Makara is applied both to plotting with an evil purpose and planning with a good purpose. Cf. iii, 34, and n. "And the unbelievers plotted and planned, and God too planned, and the best of planners is God."

<sup>6079.</sup> Gentle forbearance with Evil shows our trust in God and God's Plan: for it can never be frustrated. This does not mean that we should assist or compromise with evil, or fail to put it down where we have the power. It means patience and humility where we have no visible power to prevent Evil.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA LXXXVII (A'la).

This is one of the earliest of the Meccan Sūras, being usually placed eighth in chronological order, and immediately after S. lxxxi.

The argument is that God has made man capable of progress by ordered steps, and by His Revelation will lead him still higher to purification and perfection.

C. 267.—Wonderful are the ways of God
(Ixxxvii. 1-19.)

In creation, and the love with which
He guides His creatures' destinies,
Gives them the means by which to strive
For maturity by ordered steps, and reach
The end most fitted for their natures.
His Law is just and easy, and His Grace
Is ever ready to help: let us look
To the Eternal Goal, with hearts and souls
Of Purity, and glorify His nama:
For in this changing, fleeting world,
His Word is always true, and will remain,
Through all the ares, ever the same.

Stira LXXXVII.

A'la, or The Most High.

In the name of God, Most Gracious.

Most Merciful.

- 1. Clorify the name
  Of thy Guardian-Lord (Most High,
- Who hath created, 6001 And further, given Order and proportion;
- Who hath ordained laws. out And granted guidance;
- And Who bringeth out <sup>663</sup>
   The (green and luscious) pasture,
- And then doth make it (But) swarthy stubble.
- 6. By degrees shall We Teach thee to declare 6084

6080. The word "Lord" by itself is an inadequate rendering here for Rabb. For it implies cherishing, guarding from harm, sustaining, granting all the means and opportunities of development. See, n. 20 to i. 2. For shortness, netherow "Guardian-Lord" will be sufficient in the Text.

6081. The story of Creation is wonderful and continuous. There are several processes which we contemplate in glorifying God's name. First, ile brings, us into being. Secondly, He endows us with forms and faculties exactly suited to what is expected of us, and to the environments in which our life will be east, giving to everything due order and proportion.

6082. Thirdly, He has ordained laws and decrees, by which we can develop outselves and fit ourselves into His whole scheme of evolution for all His Creation. He has measured exactly the needs of all, and given us instancts and physical and psychical predispositions which fit into His decrees. Fourthly, Hogaves us guidance, so that we are not the sport of mechanical laws. Our reason and our will are executed, that we may enach the higher deshipy of man.

6083. Fifthly, after maturity comes decay But even in that decay, as when green pasture turns to stubble, we subserve other ends. In so lar as we are animals, we share these processes with other forms of material Creation, animal, vegetable, and even nuneral, which all have their appointed laws of growth and decay. But man's higher destine is referred to in whosequent verses.

6084. The soul, as it reaches the Light of God, makes gradual progress, hkc a man going from darkness into light. So the Qur-an was revealed by stages. So all revelation from God comes by stages.

As usual, there are two parallel meanings: (1) that connected with the occasion of direct inspiration to the holy Prophet; and (2) the more general Message to makind for all time. Everyone who understands the Message must declare it, in words, and still more, in his conduct.

(The Message), so thou Shalt not forget, 6085

- 7. Except as God wills: "000
  For He knoweth
  What is manifest
  And what is hidden.
- 8. And We will make it Easy for thee (to follow) The simple (Path). *****
- Therefore give admonition In case the admonition forms Profits (the hearer).
- 10. The admonition will be received By those who fear (God):
- But it will be avoided By those most unfortunate ones,
- 12. Who will enter The Great Fire.

©إلاّ مَا شَانَّا أَلَفَذَ إِنَّهُ بِعَلَمُ ٱلْجَهْرَ وَمَا يَغْنَى

۞ وَنْهَيْرِكَ لِلْيُسْرَىٰ

٥ فَذَكِيِّرُ إِن نَّفَعَتِ الذِّكْرَىٰ

٠ سَبَذُكُ مَن يَغِسْنَى

@ وَيَعْبَنُّهُمَّا ٱلأَشْقَ

® ٱلْذَى يَسْلَ النَّادَ ٱلْحُنْبَىٰ

6085. The particular occasion was an assurance to the Prophet, that though he was unlettered, the Message given to him would be preserved in his heart and in the hearts of men. The more general sense is that mankind, having once seized great spiritual truths, will hold fast to them, except as qualified in the following verse.

6086. There can be no question of this having any reterence to the abrogation of any verses of the Quran. Por this Sūra is one of the earliest revealed, being placed about eighth according to the most accepted chronological order. While the basic principles of God's Law remain the same, its form, expression, and application have varied from time to time, e.g., from Moses to Jesus, and from Jasus to Muhammad. It is one of the beneficent mercies of God that we should forget some things of the past, lest our minds become confused and our development is retarded. Besides, God knows what is manifest and what is hidden, and His Will and Plan work with supreme wisdom and goodness.

6087. The Path of Islam is simple and easy. It depends on no abstruse mysteries or self-mortifications, but on straight and manly conduct in accordance with the laws of man's nature as implanted in him by God (xxx. 30). On the other hand, spiritual perfection may be most difficult, for it involves complete surrender on our part to God in all our affairs, thoughts, and desires : but after that surrender God's Grace will make our path easy.

6088. This is not so strong as the Biblical phrase, "Cast not pearls before swine" (Matt. vii. 6). The cases where admonition does produce spritual profit and where it does not, are mentioned below in verses 10 and 11-31 respectively. God's Message should be proclaimed to all; but particular and personal admonitions are also due to those who attend and in whose hearts is the fear of God; in the case of those who run away from it and dishonour it, such particular and personal admonition is useless. They are the unfortunate once who prepare their own ruin.

6089 The Great Fire is the final Penalty of Disaster in the Hereafter, as contrasted with the minor Penalties or Disasters from which all evil suffers from within in this very life.

6090. A terrible picture of those who ruin their whole future by evil lives here below. They introduce a discord into Creation, while life should be one great universal concord. And their past introduces a base of their own will. They are not even like the dry swarthy stubble mentioned in verse 5 above, which grew naturally out of the luscious pasture, for they have grown harmful, in defance of their own nature. "Fitther dis even like": Cf. xx. 74.

6091, Prosper; in the highest and spiritual sense; attain to Bliss or Salvation; as opposed to "enter the Fire".

6092. The first process in godliness is to cleanse ourselves in body, mind, and soul. Then we shall be in a fit state to see and proclaim the Glory of God. That leads us to our actual absorption in Praise and Prayer.

603. The law of righteousness and godliness is not a new law, nor are the vanity and short duration of this world preached here for the first time. But spiritual truths have to be renewed and relterated again and again.

6994. No Book of Abraham has come down to us. But the Old Testament recognises that Abraham was a prophet (Gen. xx. 7). There is a book in Greek, which has been translated by Mr. G. H. Box, called the Testament of Abraham (published by the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, London, 1927). It seems to be a Greek translation of a Mebrew original. The Greek Text was probably written in the second Christian century, in Expyt, but in its present form it probably goes back only to the 9th or 10th Century, It was popular among the Christians. Perhaps the Jewish Midrash also refers to a Testament of Abraham.

6095. The original Revelation of Moses, of which the present Pentateuch is a surviving recension. See Appendix II., p. 282.

The present Gospels do not come under the definition of the "earliest" Books. Nor could they be called "Books of Jesus": they were written not by him, but about him, and long after his death.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SÜRA LXXXVIII (Gashiva).

This is a late Sura of the early Meccan period, perhaps close in date to S. lii. Its subject-matter is the contract between the destinies of the Good and the Evil in the Hereafter,—on the Day when the true balance will be restored: the Signs of God even in this life should remind us of the Day of Account, for God is good and just, and His creation is for a just Purpose.

C. 268.—Have you heard of that Tremendous Day (IXXXVIII. 1-26) When the Good from the Evil will be separated?

There will be Souls that Day will burn And grovel in the blazing Fire of Wrath! No Food can fill their Hunger: no Drink, Alas, can slake their fierce Thirst!

There will be Souls that Day will shout With Joy to the glory of their Lord! Their past Endeavour will now be Achievement. Reised high on Thrones of Dignity they Will be Guests at the sumptuous Feast of Bliss.

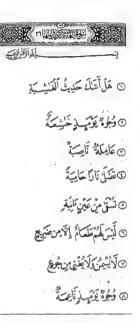

Let man but look at his dominion o'er
The beasts of the field, or his glorious Canopy
Of stars, or the 'Eternal Hills that feed'.
His streams, or the wide expanse of Mother
Earth that nurtures him, and he
Will see the ordered Plan of God.
To Him must he return and give account!
Let him, then, learn his Lesson and live!

6096, Gāshīya: the thing or event that overshadows or overwhelms, that covers over os makes people lose their senses. In xii. 107, it is described as the "covering veil of the Wrath of God"-where see n. 1790. The Day of Judgment is indicated, as the Event of overwhelming importance, in which all our petty differences of this imperfect world are covered over and overwhelmed in a new world op perfect justice and truth.

6097, Cf. lxxv, 22, 24.

6098, On the faces of the wicked will appear the hard labour and consequent fatigue of the task they will have in battling against the fierce Fire which their own Deeds will have kindled, 6099. The root-meaning implies again the idea of humiliation. Metaphorically, it is understood to be a plant, bitter and thomy, loathsome in smell and appearance, which will neither give fattening nourishment to the body nor in any way satisfy the burning pangs of hunger,—a fit plant for Hell, like Zaqqim (vi. 3; or xvii. 60, a. 2250).

17. Do they not look At the Camels, 6103 How they are made ?-

٠ لِسَعْيِهَا رَاضِيَةٌ ٥٥ يَخَنَية عَالِيّة ® فيعالية الأمرية

6100. Notice the parallelism in contrast, between the fate of the Wicked and that of the Righteous. In the one case there was humiliation in their faces; in the other, there is iov; where there was labour and weariness in warding off the Fire, there is instead a healthy Striving, which is itself pleasurable -- a Striving which is a pleasant consequence of the spiritual Endeavour in the earthly life, which may have brought trouble or persecution from without, but which brought inward peace and satisfaction.

6101. The most important point is their inward state of joy and satisfaction, mentioned in verses 8-9. Now are mentioned metaphors of outer things of bliss, the chief of which is the Garden : see Appendix XIL. following S. liv. The Garden is in contrast to the Fire. Its chief beauty will be that they will hear there nothing unbecoming, or foolish, or vain. It will be a Garden on high, in all senses, -fit for the best, highest, and noblest.

6102. Instead of the boiling hot spring (verse 5) there will be a bubbling spring of sparkling water. Instead of the grovelling and grumbling in the place of Wrath, there will be Thrones of Dignity, with all the accompaniments of a brilliant Assembly.

6103 In case men neglect the Hereafter as of no account, they are asked to contemplate four things, which they can see in every-day life, and which are full of meaning, high design, and the goodness of God to man. The first mentioned is the domesticated animal, which for Arab countries is par excellence the Camel What a wonderful structure has this Ship of the Desert? He can store water in his stomach for days. He can live on dry and thorny desert shrubs. His limbs are adapted to his life. He can carry men and goods. His flesh can be eaten Camel's hair can be used in weaving. And withal, he is so gentle! Who can sing his praises enough?

6104. The second thing they should consider is the noble blue vault high above them.—with the air and moon, the stars and planets, and other heavenly bodies. This scene is full of beauty and magnificence, design and order, planness and hystery. And yet we receive our light and warmth from the sun, and what would our physical lives be without these influences that come from such enormous distances?

605 From every-day utility and affection in the Camel, to the utility in grandeur in the heavens above us, we hast two instances touching our individual as well as our social lives. In the third instance, in the Mountains, we come to the utility to human kind generally in the services the Mountains perform in storing water, in moderating climate, and in various other ways which it is the business of Physical Geography to investigate and desynder.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA LXXXIX (Fojr).

This is one of the earliest of the Sūras to be revealed,—probably within the first ten in chronological order.

Its mystic meaning is suggested by contrasts,—contrasts in nature and in man's long history. Thus does it enforce the lesson of Faith in the Hereafter to "those who understand". Man's history and legendary lore show that greatness does not last and the proudest are brought low. For enforcing moral and spiritual truths, the strictest history is no better than legend. Indeed all artistic history is legend, for it is written from a special point of view.

Man is easily cowed by contrasts in his own fortunes, and yet he does not learn from them the lesson of forbearance and kindness to others, and the final elevation of goodness in the Hereafter. When all the things on which his mind and heart are set on this earth shall be crushed to nothingness, he will see the real glory and power, love and beauty, of God, for these are the light of the Garden of Paradise.

C. 269.—Man is apt to forget the contrasts

In nature and life, and all that they mean
In his spiritual growth. Perchance his mind
Is so absorbed in what he sees,
That he doubts the vast Realities
He does not see. The Present makes Him blind to the Past and to the Future
Fooled by glory, he fears not a fall;
And baulked in disaster, he gives up Hope
And sometimes Faith. Let him study
Nature and History, and restore his Faith:
Realising the Sure Event, the Hereafter,
Let him find his fullest fulfilment
In the service and the good-oleasure of God I

Sura LXXXIX.

Fair, or The Break of Day.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Mercifu

- I. By the Break of Day; 6100
- 2. By the Nights twice five; 6109
- 3. By the Even And Odd (contrasted); *****
- And by the Night<sup>611</sup>
   When it passeth away;—

6108. Four striking contrasts are mentioned, to show God's Power and Justice, and appeal to "those who understand". The first is the glory and mystery of the Break of Day. It just succeeds the deepest dark of the Night, when the first rays of light break through. Pew people except those actually in personal touch with nature can feel its compelling power. In respect both of beauty and terror, of hope and inspiration, of suddenness and continuing increase of light and joy, this "holy time" of night may well stand as the type of spiritual awakening from darkness to Faith, from Death to Resurrection.

ol 09. By the Ten Nights are usually understood the first ten nights of $\pi^{\text{u}}\clining \text{d}_2\clining_1$, the sacred season of plagranage. From the most ancient times Mecca as was the centre of Arab plagranage. The story of Abraham is intimately connected with it: see ii. 125-127 and notes, also n. 217 to ii. 197. In times of Paganism various supersitions were introduced, which Islam swept away. Islam also purified the rites and ceremones, giving them new meaning. The ten days specially devoted to the $\pi_{\text{d}}\text{i} introduce a striking contrast in the life ol Mecca and of the pligims. Mecca, from being a quiet secluded city, is then thronged with thousands of pligims from all parts of the world. They discard their ordinary dess—representing every kind of costume—to the simple and ordinary \( \lambda_{\text{i}}\text{i} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{c} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{o} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text{o} \text{i} \text{i} \text{o} \text{o} \text{o} \text{i} \text{o} \text

610. The contrast between even and odd forms the subject of learned argument among those who deal with the mystic properties of numbers. In any case, even and odd follow each other in regular succession: each is independent, and yet neither is self-sufficient. In ultimate analysis every even number is a pair of odd ones. And all things go in pairs: see xxxx. 36, and n. 3981. In the animal world pairs are but two individuals, and yet each is a complement of the other. Both abstract and concrete things are often understood in contrast with their opposites. Why should we not in spiritual matters, understand this life better with reference to the Hereafter, and why should we disbelieve in the Hereafter simply because we cannot conceive of anything different from our present lite?

6111. That is, the last part of the night, just before full day-light. Note the gradations in spiritual awakening, and their symbols: first, the turn of the night, when just the first rays of day-light break through; secondly, the social and institutional rites of religion, like those during the ten nights of Pilgrimage; thirdly, when the usual contrast between the Here and Hereafter vanishes, and we can see heaven even here; and lastly, when this world vanishes, the full light of Day arrives, and we see Reality face to face.

6112. All these mystic Symbols draw our attention, like solerin adjustions in speech, to the profoundest mystery of our inner life, wir. how from utter depths of darkness-ingicinate or even degradation—God's wonderful Light or Revelation can lead us by contrast into the most beautiful sunshine of a glorious spritual Day. But the contrast suggests also the opposite process as a corollary,—how resistance to God's light would destroy us utterly, converting our greatness or glory to perdition as happened with the peoples of Arab antiquity, the "Ad and the Thamdo, and the type of the powerful but arrogant and godless monarch, the Pharanh of Egypt. Like a man with a bounded horizon, the average man does not undestand these long-range mysteries of life, and we have need to pray that we may be of "those who understand"

6113. For the 'Ad see n. 1040 to vii' 65. 'They seem to have possessed an ancient civilisation, which succumbed when they persistently broke God', iaw.

6115. This tract of southern Arabia was once very prosperous (Arabia Felix) and contains ruins and inscriptions. It has always been an object of great interest to the Arabia. In the time of Mu'awnya some precious stones were found among the runs in this locality. Quite recently, a bronze lion's head and a bronze piece of gutter with a Sabraan inscription, found in Najtan, have been described in the British Misseam Quarterly, vol. XI, No. 4, Sept. 1931.

6116. For the Thamüd see n. 1043 to vi. 73. Their civilisation shows traces of Egyptian, Synthesis, and (later) Greek and Roman influences. They built fine temples, tombs, and buildings-out out of the solid rock. The cult of the goddess Likt flourished among them.

6117. For "Lord of Stakes", see xxxviii 12. n. 4160. For Pharaoh's arrogânce and his fall, see xx. 43, 78-79. The three examples given, the 'Ad, the Thamad, and Pharaoh, show has neither nations nor individuals, however mighte, prosperous, or firmly established they may be, can live if they transgress the Law of God. The Law of God, which is also the law of the higher nature which He has bestowed on us, made them in the first place great and glorious: when they fell from it and "heaped mischiel", they were swept away.

 17. Pay, nay! But ye 6121 Honour not the orphans!

6118. Even though God's purishment is delayed, it is not to be supposed that Fle does not see all thing. He is like a Guardian on a watch-tower defending His Law, and protecting the weak and innocent with His mighty arm. God's providence is ever vigilant: His punishment of evil-doers is a form of justice to the weak and the righteous whom they oppress. It is part of the signification of His title is Rebb (Cherisher).

6119. Contrast with God's justice and watchful care, man's selfishness and pettiness. God tries us both by prosperity and adversity: in the one we should show humility and kindness; and in the other, patience and faith. On the contrary, we get puffed up in prosperity and depressed in adversity, putting false values on this world's goods.

6120. Subsistence, in both the literal and the figurative sense. God provides for all, but people complain if the provision is measured and restricted to their needs, circumstances, and antecedents, and does not come up to their desires or expectations, or is different from that given to people in quite different circumstances.

6121 Even at our own valuation, if we are favoured with superfluities, do we think of the father less children, or the struggling poor? On the contrary, too many men are but ready to embezzle the helpless orphan's inheritance, and to waste their own substance in worthless-riot instead of supplying the people's real needs.

6123. Inheritance is abused in two ways. (1) Guardians and trustees for the inheritance of the inheritance o

6124. Our attention is now called to the Day of Reckoning. Whether we failed to respect the rights of the helpless here or actually suppressed those rights in our mad love for the good things of this life, we shall have to answer in the realm of Reality. This solid earth, which we imagine to be so real, will crumble to powder like dust before the real Presence, manifested in glory.

6125 The Retribution will at last come, and we shall realise it in our inmost being, all the illusions of this freting world having been swept away. Then we shall remember, and wish, too late, that we had repented. Why not repent now? Why not bring forth the fruits of repentance now, as a preparation for the Hereafter?

6126. "Chastisement" in this verse and the "binding in bonds" in the next verse are two distinct phases of the Penalty. "Chastisement" involves pain and agony, such as cannot be imagined injwhere else, or from any other cource, for it unobes our similar cannot be compared with anything our bodies may suffer or others may uffer. "Bonds "mply confinement, want of freedom, the closing of a door which was once open but which we deliberately passed by. We see that others accepted in faith and entered that door. This shutting out of what might have been is worse than any other bonds or confinement, we can imagine, and may be worse than actual chastisement.

6127. The righteous enter into their inheritance and receive their welcome with a title that desires freedom from all pain, so now, doubt, struggle, disappointment, passion, and even further desire at ter, in peace; in a state of complete satisfaction.

In Vuslim theology, this stage of the soul is the final stage of bilss. The unregenerate human soul, that seeks its satisfaction in the lower earthly desires, is the ...Immāri (xii. 53). The self-reproaching soul that feels conscious of son and resists it is the I articoma (txxx, 2, and 0, 5810).

6128. Note that Evil finds itself isolated, and clies out in lonely agony (verse 24), while Good receives a warm welcome from the Lord of Goodness Hinself,—also that it is the soul which enters heaven and not the gross body which perishes.

6129. The chmax of the whole is: "Enter My Heaven!" Men may have imagined all kinds of heaven before, and many types and symbols are used in the sacred Word itself: see Appendix XII, after S. liv. But nothing can express, the icality itself better than "My Heaven"—God's own Heaven! May we reach it through God's grace!

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA XC (Balad).

This is an early Meccan revelation, and refers to the mystic relation (by divine sanction) of the holy Prophet with the city of Mecca. He was born in that City, which had already been sacred for ages before. He was nurtured in that City and had (to use a modern phrase) the freedom of that City, belonging, as he did, to the noble family which held the government of its sacred percincts in its hands. But he was an orphan, and orphans in his day had a poor time. But his mind was turned to things divine. He protested against the prevailing idolatry and sin, and his parent City persecuted him and cast him out. He made another City, Yathrib, his own: it became the Madinat-un-Nabi, the City of the Prophet, and it has ever since been called Madina. We can speak of Madina as the Prophet's child. But the Prophet ever cherished in his heart the love of his parent City of Mecca, and in the fulness of time was received in triumph there. He purified it from all idols and abominations, re-established the worship of the One True God, overthrew the purse-proud selfish autocracy, restored the sway of the righteous (people of the Right Hand), the liberty of the slave, and the rights of the poor and downtrodden. What a wonderful career centring round a City? It becomes a symbol of the world's spiritual history.

C. 270.—The Prophet's own City persecuted him.

(xc. 1-20) Honoured by his nativity, it sought to slay him:

Yet he loved it and purged it of all that was wrong.

What toil and struggle did it not involve?

Man is made for toil and struggle:

Let him not boast of ease and wealth.

He will be called to account for all his doings.

Let him use his God-given faculities, and tread

The steep path that leads to Heaven's Heights:

The steep thereto are Love, unselfish Love,

Given freely to God's creatures—all those

In need—and Faith in God, and Patience

Joined with self-restraint and kindness.

- 3. And (the mystic ties of) Parent and Child; -- 6134
- 4. Verily We have created Man into toil and struggle. 6133
- 5. Minketh he, that none Hath power over him? 8134

- 6130. The appeal to the mystic ties between the holy Prophet and his parent. City of Mecca has been explained in the Introduction to this Sira. It is a symbol of man's own history. Man is born for tool and struggle, and this is the substantive proposition in verse 4 below, which this appeal leads up to.
- 631. Hillus: an inhabitant, a man with lawful rights, a man freed from such obligations as would attach to a stranger to the city, a freeman in a wider sense than the technical sense to which the word is restricted in modern usage. The Prophet should have been honoured in his native city. He was actually being persecuted. He should have been loved, as a parent loves a child. Actually his life was being sought, and those who believed in him were under a ban. But time was to show that he was to come frumphant to his native city after having made. Medina sacred by his life and work.
- 6132. A parent loves a child ordinarily: the father is proud and the mother, in spite of ther birth, pains, experiences supreme joy when the child is born. But in abnormal circumstances there may be misunderstandings, even hatred between parent and child. So Mecca cast out her most glorious son, but it was only for a time. Mecca was sound the heart; only her power had been usurped by an ignorant autocracy which passed away, and Mecca was to receive back her glory at the hands of the son whom she had rejected but whom she welcomed back later. And Mecca retains for all time her scarce character as the centre of Islam.
- 6133. Cf. "Man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward" [lob, v. 7]; "For all his 'days are sorrows, and his travall grief" (Ecclesiastes, ii, 23). Man's life is full of sorrow and vexation; but our text has a different shade of meaning; man is born to strive and struggle' and if he suffers from hardships, he must exercise patience, for God will make his way smooth for him (lxv, 7; xciv 5-6). On the other hand no man should boast of worldly goods or worldly prosperity (see verses $7 below).
- 6134. See the end of last note. If a man has wealth, influence, or power, he should not behave as if it is to last for ever, or as if he has no responsibility for his acts and can do what he likes. All his gifts and advantages are given to him for trial. God, Who bestowed them on him, can take them away, and will do so if man fails in his trial.

bilds. The man who feels no responsibility and thinks that he can do what he likes in his forgets he responsibility to God. He boasts of his wealth and scatters it about, flunking that he can thus purchase the support of the world. For a time he may. But a rude awakening must come soon, for he bases his bopes on unsubstantial things. Or it he spends his substance on self-indulgence, he is weakening himself and putting himself into soarses that must destroy him.

bib. God watches him, and sees all his acts and motives, and all the secret springs of his tollies. But lest he should think the higher spiritual forces too remote for him, let him look within himself and use the faculties which God has given him. See the next verses following.

0137. The eyes give us the faculty of seeing, and may be taken in both the literal and the inetaphornal sense. In the same way the tongue gives us the faculty of tasting in both senses. Along with the lips, it also enables us to speak, to ask for information and seek guidance, and to celebrate the pisses of God.

61.8. The two highways of life are :(1) the steep and difficult path of virtue, which is further dearribed in the verses following, and (2) the casy path of vire and the rejection of God, referred to in verses 19-20 below. God has given us not only the faculties implied in the eyes, the tongue, and the lips, but also given us the judgment by which we can choose our way; and He has sent us. Teachers and Guides, with Revelation, to show us the judt and difficult way.

0139. In spite of the faculties with which God has endowed man and the guidance which He has given him, man has been remiss. By no means has be been eager to follow the steep and difficult path which is for his own spiritual good. Cf. Mart. vii. 14: "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeful unto life, and few there be that find it".

The difficult path of virtue is defined as the path of charity or unselfish love, and three specific instances are given for our understanding; erg. (1) freeing the bondman, (2) feeding the oripian, and (3) feeding the indigent down in the dust. As regards the bondman, we are to understand not only a reference to legal slavery, which happily is extinct in all clytiled lands, but many other kinds of slavery which floorish especially in advanced societies. There is political slavery, industrial slavery, and social slavery. There is the slavery of conventions, of ignorance, and opposition. There is slavery to wealth or passions or power. The good man tries to liberate hirra and women from all kinds of slavery, often at great danger to himself. But he bigins by first liberating himself!

6141. Feed those who need it, both literally and figuratively; but do so especially when there is provided or familie, literal or figurative, i.e., when or where the sources of sustenance, physical, moral, or sorriual, are cut off.

6142. All orphans should be fed and helped. But ordinary orphans will come under the indigent in verse to below. The orphans related to us have a special claim on us. They should be near and then to us, and it charity begins at home, they have the first claim on us.

6143. Persons down in the dust can only be helped from motives of pure charity, because nothing can be experted of them—neither praise nor advertisement nor any other advantage to the helper. Such help is help indeed. But there may be various degrees, and the help will be suited to the needs.

614.4. Such practical chanty and love will be the acid test of Faith and the teaching of all virtues. The virtues are summed up under the names of Patience (the Arabic word includes constancy and self-restraint) and compassionate kindness. Not only will they be the test by which the sincerity of their Faith will be judged; they will be the fruit which their Faith will constantly produce.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA XCI (Shams).

This is one of the early Meccan revelations. Beginning with a fine nature passage, and leading up to man's need of realising his spiritual responsibility, it ends with a warning of the terrible consequences for those who fear not the Hereafter.

C. 271—All nature around us and her pageants,

1xci 1-15) And the soul of man withio, proclaim
The goodness of God. God gave the soul
The power of choice and the sense of Right
And Wrong. Let man keep it pure and attain
Salvation,—soil it with sin and reach
Perdition. Inordinate wrong-doing ruined
The Thamūd. They defied God's sacred Law
And His prophet, and went to Destruction for their crime,

Shams, or The Sun.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful

- 1. By the Sun 610 And his (glorious) splendour;
- 2. By the Moon 6148
  As she follows him;
- 3. By the Day as it 61.9 Shows up (the Sun's) glory;
- 4. By the Night as it Conceals it;
- 5. By the Firmament 6390
  And its (wonderful) structure; 6151

- 6147. Six types are taken in three pairs, from God's mighty works in nature, as tokens or evidence of God's providence and the contrasts in His sublime creation, which yet conduce to cosmic harmony (verses 1-6). Then (verses 1-8) the soul of man, with internal order and proportion in its capacities and faculties, as made by God, is appealed to as having been endowed with the power of discriminating between right and wrong. Then the conclusion is stated in verses 9-10, that man's success or failure, prosperity or bankruptcy, would depend upon his keeping that soul pure or his corrupting it.
- 6148. The first pair is the glorious sun, the source of our light, and physical life, and the moon with follows or acts as second to the sin for illuminating our world. The moon, when she is in the sky with the sun, is pale and inconspicuous; in the sun's absence she shines with reflected light and may metaphorically be called the sun's vicegerent. So with Revelation and the great Propheis who brought it; and the minor Teachers who derive their light reflected, or perhaps doubly reflected, from the original source.
- 6149. The next contrasted pair consists, not of luminaries, but conditions, or periods of time, Day and Night. The Day reveals the sun's glory and the Night conceals at from our sight. So there may be contrasts in our subjective reception of divine light, but it is there, working all the time, and must reappear in its own good time.
- 6130. The next contrasted pair is the wonderful firmament on high, and the earth below our feet, stretching away to our wide horizons. The sky gives us rain, and the he earth gives us food. Yet both work together: for the rain is moisture sucked up from the earth, and the food cannot grow without the heat and warmth of the sun. There are many other contrasts under this head; yet they all point to unity.
- 6151. The mā magadriya in Arabic, in this and the subsequent clauses, is best translated in English by nouns. Thus what would literally be "and the (wonderful) making or construction of it' or "the fact of its (wonderful) construction" is, idiomatically, "its (wonderful) structure." "The (wide) spreading out" of the earth is rendered "its (wide) expanse," and so on.

6. By the Earth And its (wide) expanse:

- By the Soul, And the proportion and order Given to it; <sup>8152</sup>
- 8. And its enlightenment As to its wrong And its right:--
- 9. Truly he succeeds That purifies it,
- 10. And he fails
  That corrupts it ! 6931
- Fighe Thamud (people) Rejected (their prophet) Through their inordinate Wrong-doing. 5134
- Behold, the most wicked Man among them was Deputed (for impiety).<sup>6135</sup>
- 13. But the apostle of God 6156
  Said to them: "It is

وَالْأَرْضِ وَمَا طَحْهَا

 وَاللَّهِ وَمَا سَوْمَا

 وَاللَّهِ اللَّهِ اللَّهُ اللَّاللَّ اللَّلَّاللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّاللَّاللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللّ

۞ كَذَبُّكُ ثَمُودُ بِطَغُوبَهِ ۗ

@إذِ الْبَعَثَ أَشْقَهَا

٣ فَقَالَ لَمُنْ رَبَسُولُ اللَّهِ

&#x27;6132. God makes the soul, and gives it order, proportion, and relative perfection, in urder to dasp it for the particular circum-lances in which it has to live its file. Cf., xxxii. 9. See also 120 to ii. 117. He breathes into it an understanding of what is sin, implety, wrong-doing und what is plety and right conduct, in the special circumstances in which it may be placed. This is the thost precious gift of all to man, the faculty of distinguishing between right and wrong. After the six external evidences mentioned in verses 1-6 above, this internal evidence of God's goodness is mentioned as the greatest of all. By these various tokens man should learn that his success, his prosperity, his salvation depends on himself,—on his keeping his soul pure as God made it; and his failure, his decline, his perfittion depends on his soiligh his soul by choosing evil.

<sup>6533.</sup> This is the core of the S0ra, and it is illustrated by a reference to the story of the Thamud in the following verses,

<sup>6134.</sup> The allusion to the story of the Thamdd will be understood by a reference to vir 73-79; see specially n. 1044. Their prophet was $31ib, but he had to deal with an arrogant people, who oppressed the poor and denied them their rights of watering and pasture for their cattle.

<sup>6155</sup> The proplet §Allip nade a certain she-camel a Sign or Symbol, a test case "This shecamel of God is a Sign unto you; so leave her to graze in God's rarth and let her come to no harm, or ye shall be seized with a grievrous punsthment" (vil. 73). But they plotted to kill her and sent the most wicked man among them to dare and do that deed of impiety It was probably when she came to dishk at the stream that she was hamstrung and killed. See xvi. 155, and liv, 27.

14. Then they rejected him (As a false prophet), And they hamstrung her. 6157 So their Lord, on account Of their crime, obliterated Their traces and made them Equal (in destruction, High and low) ® فَكَذَّبُوهُ فَعَقَرُوهَا فَدَمَّدَمَ عَلَيْهِيهُ رَبُّهُمُ بِدَنِهِهِمْ فَتَوَّيْهَا

15. And for Him 4158
Is no fear
Of its consequences.

@وَلَا يَخَافُ عُفْبَكُمَا

6157. The man who was deputed to do the impious deed of hamstringing the she-camel had of course the sympathy and co-operation of the whole people. Only he was more daring than the rest.

618. This verse has been variously construed. I follow the general opinion in referring the pronoun "Him" to "their Lord" in the last verse and the pronoun "its" to the Punishment that was meted out to all, high and low, equally. In that case the meaning would be: God decreed the total destruction of the Thamid it in the case of creatures any such destruction might cause a loss to them, and they might fear the consequences of such loss or destruction, but God has created and can create at will, and there can be no question of any such apprehension in His case. An alternative view is that "him" refers to the prophet Sglih) mentioned in verse 13. Then the interpretation would be: Sglih had no fear of the consequences for himself; he had warned the wicked according to his commission; he was saved by God's mercy as a Just and righteous man, and he left them with regrets (vii. 79). Yet another alternative refers "him" to the wicked man (mentioned in verse 12) who hamstrung the she-came i: he feared not the consequences of his deep (mentioned in verse 12) who hamstrung the she-came i: he feared not the consequences of his deep (mentioned in verse 12)

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA XCII (Lail).

This was one of the first Sūras to be revealed,— within the first ten; and may be placed in date close to S. lxxxix and S. xciii. Note that in all these three Sūras the mystery and the contrast as between Night and Day are appealed to for the consolation of man in his spiritual yearning. Here we are told to strive our utmost towards God, and He will give us every help and satisfaction.

C. 272 .- When we consider God's wonderful Creation. (xcii. 1-21.) We see many mysteries-many opposites-Many differences: the succession of nights And days, the creation of male and female. Can we wonder at the differences In the nature and objectives of man? He is endowed with Will, and he must strive For the Right through all his diverse paths. For the righteous the way is made the smoother For bliss; for the arrogant crooked will. The way is the smoother for Misery. But God's guidance is always nigh, If man will choose it. And what Is the goal for those who choose aright?-The sight of the Face of God Most High : For that indeed is happiness supreme.

Sūra XCII.

Lail, or The Night.

In the name of God. Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. By the Night as it Concerls (the light); 6159
- 2. By the Day as it.
  Appears in glory;
- By (the mystery of) 6160
   The creation of male And female;—6161
- 4. Verily, (the ends) ye Strive for are diverse. 6162
- So he who gives (In charity) and fears (God),
- And (in all sincerity)
   Testifies to the Best,—6163

6159. The evidence of three things is invoked, viz. Night. Day, and the mistery of Sex, and the conclusion is stated in verre 4, that men's aims are diverse. But similarly there are contrasts in nature. What contrast can be greater than between Night and Day? When the Night spreads her veil, the sun's light is hidden, but not lost. The sun is in his place all the time, and will come forth in all his glory again in his own good time Cf. xc. 13, and n. 619. Man pureting diverse aims may find, owing to his own position. God's light obscured from him for a time, but he must strive hard to put himself in a position to reach it in all its glory.

6160. Mā masdarīya as in xci. 5-7; see there n 6151.

6161. The mystery of the sexes runs through all life. There is attraction between upposites; each performs its own functions, having special characters, primary and secondary, within limited spheres, and yet both have common characteristics in many-other spheres. Each is independable to the other. Love in its noblest sense is the type of heavenly love and the highest good; in its debasement it leads to the lowest sins and the worst crimes. Here, then, striving is necessary for the highest good.

6162. There are wide contrasts in the nature and aims of men. These may be broadly divided into two classes, good and evil. As night replaces lay on account of certain relative positions, but does not annihilate it, so evil may for a time obscure good, but cannot blot it out. Again, night in, certain circumstances is g. for rest) is a blessing; so retain things, which may seem evils to us, may be really blessings in disquise. Whatever our aims or positions, we must seek the highest truth from the light of God. Considering these contrasts, do not be surprised or depressed. Nien's immediate aims may be different. The duty of all is to seek the one true Light.

6163 The good are distinguished here by three signs: (1) large-hearted sacrifices for God and men; 2 fear of Cod, which shows itself in righteous conduct, for Tagus (see n, 26 to ii, 2 includes just action as well as a mental state; and (3) truth and sincerity in ever recognising and supporting all that is morally beautiful, for Busn is the good as well as the beautiful.

f S. xCII. 7-13.

7. We will indeed Make smooth for him The path to Bliss. 5166

- 8. But he who is A greedy miser And thinks himself Self-sufficient.
- 9. And gives the lie To the Best,—6103
- We will indeed Make smooth for him The Path to Misery;
- Nor will his wealth Profit him when he Falls headlong (into the Pit).
- 12. We erily We take 6187 Upon Ourselves to guide,
- And verily unto Us .
   (Belong) the End And the Beginning.

(٩٢) سورة الليل 1747

﴿ فَتُنْفَيْشِرُهُ وِلِلْيُسْرَىٰ

٥ وَأَمَا مَنْ بَعِيلَ وَاسْلَغْنَىٰ

٣ وَكَذَبَ بِالْحُسْنَى

٤ فَسَنْيَتِينَ وَ لِلْعُسْرَى

@ وَمَا يُغْنِي عَنْهُ مَاللَّهُ وَ إِذَا مَرَدَى

٣ إِذْ عَلَيْنَا ٱلْمُدَىٰ

@ وَاذَ لَنَا لَلْآخِرَةَ وَٱلْأُولَ

6164. So far from there being any hardship in a good life, the righteous will enjoy their life more and more, and God will make their path smoother and smoother until they reach eventual Bliss.

616.5. The evil are distinguished here by three signs: (1) selfsh greed and denial of other people's rights: (2) arrogance and self-sufficiency (xevi. 6-7); and (3) knowingly distinouring Truth out of spite, or seeing ugliness where there is beauty. Such men's downward progress gathers momentum as they go, and their end can be nothing but Misery Where will be their hoasted wealth and cossessions, or their Self-condidence?

6166. Wealth amassed in this world will be of no use at the Day of Final Judgment, nor will any meterial advantages of this life bring profit by themselves in the spiritual world. What will count will be a life of truth and righteourness, and of goodness to all the creatures of God.

618. God in His infinite mercy has provided full guidance to His creatures. All through His creation there are sign-posts indicating the right way. To man He has given the five senses of perception, with mental and spiritual faculties for co-ordinating his physical perceptions and leading him higher and higher in thought and feeling. He has besides sent inspired men for further teaching and guidance.

6168 In the End man will return to God, and even from the beginning of man's life God's mercles and loving rare surround hum. In the probationary period of man's life, he has a neasure of free-will, and he is experied to use if in such a way as to bring his whole being into harmony with the universal Will and Law. For he will have to answer for the right use of his talents and opportunities. If man's will has any meaning, he has the choice of accepting God's guidance or rejecting it, and in the latter case he must take the consequences. Hence the warning of the future "Fire" in the next verse.

(٩٢) سبورة الليل

- 14. Alcherefore do I warn you Of a Fire blazing fiercely.:
- 15. None shall reach it 6149 But those most unfortunate ones
- 16. Who give the lie to Truth And turn their backs.
- 17. But those most devoted To God shall be 6170 Removed far from it -
- 18. Those who spend their wealth 5171 For increase in self-purification. 6172
- 19. And have in their minds No favour from anyone For which a reward Is expected in return. 6173

® وَمَا لِأَحَدِ عِندُهُ مِن نِعْمَهُ ثُحْبَيَّ

6169. The Fire of Punishment will not reach any except those who have deliberately sinned ngainst their conscience and rejected God's Truth. The term used for them is "Asha" (superlative degree). Cf. lxxxvii. 11. The corresponding idea in Christian theology is expressed, in the following sentence. "All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men" (Matt, xii, 31).

" None shall reach it but those ........"; the sinners of a lesser degree than the Ashqa, though they may suffer a lighter punishment in Hell, will not suffer from the "Fire blazing fiercely",

- 6170. "Those most devoted to God": the Alog, the God-fearing men who live lives of purity, and seek only for the "Face of their Lord Most High" See the verses following.
- 6171. The spending may be for charity, or for good works, such as advancing the cause of knowledge or science, or supporting ideals, etc. "Wealth" must be understood not only for money or material goods, but also for any advantage or opportunity which a man happens to enjoy, and which he can place at the service of others.
- 6172. The Arabic root word saks implies both increase and purification, and both meanings may be understood to be implied here. Wealth (understood both literally and metaphorically) is not for selfish enjoyment or idle show. It is held on trust. It may be a trial in itself, from which a man who emerges successfully is a man all the purer in his life; and even if he was a good man before, his proper use of his wealth increases his position and dignity in the moral and spiritual world.
- 6173. The good man does not give in charity or do his good deeds with the motive that he is returning someone else's favour and compensating and rewarding someone for some service done to him or expecting some reward in return for his own good deed; the sole motive in his mind is that he desires the Countenance or Good Pleasure of God Most High. This "Countenance" or "Fare" (Arabic, Wajh) implies good pleasure or approval; but it implies something more. It also means the Cause,-either the "final cause" or the "efficient cause" of Aristotelian philosophy. For the Atqu would refer everything, backwards in origin and forwards in destiny, to God. God is the source of their goodness, as well as its goal or purpose.

<sup>6174.</sup> The definition of Righteousness, Charity, or Self-sacrifice, becomes thus highly spiritualised. The Aifa are so completely identified with God's Will that everything else is blotted out to them. What would seem to be sacrifice from other points of view becomes their own highest pleasure and satisfartion—the "heaven" of the enlightened man. Every virtuous man will have his own bliss, for there are degrees in virtue and bliss. This supreme bliss is the portion—not the prize—of supreme virtue.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA XCIII (Dhuhā).

This Sara is close in date to Saras laxxix and acti, and the imagery drawn from the contrast of Night and Day is common to all three. In this Sara the vicinsitudes of human life are referred to, and a message of hope and consolation is given to man's soul from God's past mercies, and he is bidden to pursue the path of goodness and proclaim the bounties of God. This is the general meaning. In particular, the Sara seems to have been revealed in a dark period in the outer life of the holy Prophet, when a man of less resolute will might have been discouraged. But the Prophet is told to hold the present of less account than the glorious Hereafter which awaited him like the glorious morning after a night of stillness and gloom. The Hereafter was, not only in the Future Life, but in his later life on this earth, full of victory and satisfaction.

C. 273.—What an example we have in the Prophet's life!

(aciii. 1-11.) When moments of inspiration were still,

His soul yet felt the power of that stillness,

Like one who prays by night and waits

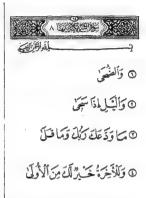

Like one who prays by night and waits
For the dawn, knowing how the light grows brighter
Every hour till noon, and well content
That night and morn and the hours succeeding
Are but steps to the plenary splendour of noon.
He was content and consoled in the thought that God
Had bestowed His loving care on him
In the past, and so the future was sure.
He followed the Light Divine,—to help
The helpless, to attend with patience to the call
Of those in need, and to rehearse and proclaim
And share the boundless Bounties of God!

- 2. And by the Night 6176
  When it is still.—
- 3. Thy Guardian-Lord Hath not forsaken thee, 8178 Nor is He displeased. 8178
- 4. And verily the hereafter Will be better for thee Than the present. 6179

6175. The full morning light of the sun, when his splendour shines forth in contrast with the night which has passed. Cf. xci. 1. The growing hours of morning light, from sunive to noon, are the true type of the growth of spiritual life and work, while the stillness of the night is, to those who know, only a preparation for it. We are not to imagine that the stillness or quiescence of the night is, wasted, or means stagnation in our spiritual life. The stillness may seem lonely, but we are not alone, nor forsaken by God. Nor is such preparation, without immediate visible results, a sign of God's displeasure.

6176, Cf, xcii. 1-2. There Night is mentioned first, and Day second, to enforce the lesson of contrasts: the veil of the night naturally comes first before the splendour of daylight is revealed. Here the argument is different: the growing hours of morning light are the main thing and are mentioned first; while the hours of preparation and quiescence, which are subord rate, come second.

617. As usual, there is the particular assurance to the holy Prophet, and the general assurance to mankind: see the Introduction to this Sūra. The early years of the Prophet's ministry might well have seemed blank. After inspiration there were days and periods of waiting. A sense of loneliness might well have weighed on his mind. His own tribe of the Quraish jeered at him, aunted and threatened him, and slandered and persecuted him as well as those who believed in him. But his faith was never shaken, not even to the extent of that cry of agony of Jesus: "My God! why hast Thou forsaken me?": (Mark, xvi. 34). Much less did it enter the Prophet's mind to think that God was anapy with him, as the taunts of his enemies suggested.

6178. See last note. The more general meaning is similar. To the man who prepares for spiritual work and spiritual growth the chief thing is typified by the growing hours of the morning. He should not be discouraged, nor overcome with a sense of loneliness in his early struggles or difficulties. The end will crown his work. God's care is always around him. If unsympathetic or hostile critics laugh at him or teauth him with being "mad" or "old-fashioned" or "ploughing his lonely turnow", his steady faith will uphold him. He will never believe that his earnest and sincere devotion to God, whatever be its results in this word, can be anything but pleasing to God.

61.79. To the truly devout man, each succeeding moment is better than the one preceding it. In this sense the "hereafter" refers not only to the Future Life after death, but also to "the soul of goodness in things" in this very life. For even though some outward trappings of this shadow-world may be wanting, his soul is filled with more and more satisfaction as he goes on.

 وَوَجَدَدُ لَا مَنْ اللهِ فَلَمَدَىٰ
 وَوَجَدُدُ لَا عَلَيْلِا فَأَغْنَىٰ

6180. God's good pleasure is sure when we serve Him. But we are assured that even our feelings of doubt and suffering will vanish, and we shall have a sense of complete satisfaction, contentment, 2 and active leasure when our will is identified with the Will of God.

6181. Judge the future from the past. God has been good to you in your fast experience: trust to His goodness in the future also. Again, there is a particular and a general meaning. Three facts are taken from the holy Propher's outer life by way of illustration. Metaphorically they also apply to us. And further, the outer facts are themselves types for the spiritual life. See notes below.

6182. (I) There is the case of the orphan, literally and figuratively. Our holy Prophet was himself an orphan. His father 'Abdullah died young before the child was born, leaving no property. The Prophet's mother Amina was in alling health, and he was chiefly brought up by his nurse Balima. His mother herself died when he was only six years old. His aged grandfather 'Abdul Muţalib treated him as his own son, but died two years later. Thereafter his uncle Abd Tâlb treated him as his own son. He was thus an orphan in more senses than one, and yet the love he received from each one of these persons was greater than ordinary parental love. Each one of us is an orphan in some sense or another, and yet someone's love and shelter come to us by the grace of God. In the spiritual world there is no father or mother; our very first sustenance and shelter must come from the grace of God.

6183. (2) The holy Prophet was born in the midst of the idolatry and polytherism of Merca, in a family which was the custodian of this false worship. He wandered in quest of Unity and found it by the guidance of God. There is no implication whatever of sin or error on his part. But we may err and find ourselves wandering in mazes of error, in thought, motive, or understanding: we must pay for God's grace ever to give us guidance.

The Arabic root dealla has various shades of meaning. In i. 7, I have translated it by the verb "stray". In liii. 2 the Prophet is defended from the charge of being "astray" or straying, Im mind, In xii. 8 and xii. 95 Jacob's sons use the word for their aged father, to suggest that he was senile and wandering in mind. In xxxii. 10 it is used of the dead, and I have translated "hidden and lost" (in the earth).

6184. (3) The holy Prophet inherited no wealth and was poor. The true, pure, and sincere love of Khadha not only taised him above want, but made him independent of worldly need sin his later life, enabling him to devote his whole time to the service of God. So do we all find ourselves in some want or another, which, if we work whole-heartedly and sincerely, is supplied to us by the grace of God. When we have found the Wav, it is a laborious task to climb up in our poverty of spiritual equipment: God will give us spiritual riches in love and knowledge.

11. But the Bounty

6183. Verses 9-11 carry on, to a step further, the triple argument of verses 6R as explained in the preceding notes. The Prophet treated all orphans with tender affection and respect, setting an example to his contemporaries, who frequently took advantage of the helpless position of orphans and in any case looked upon them as subordinate creatures to be represed and kept in their place such an attitude is common in all ages. Helpless creatures to depth, on the contrary, to be treated as sacred trusts, whether they are orphans, or dependants, or creatures of any kind unable to assert themselves, either through age, sex, social rank, artificial conditions, or any cause whatever

6186. Then there are the people who come with petitions,—who have to ask for something. They may be genuine beggars asking for financial help, or ignorant people asking for knowledge, or timing people asking for some lead or encouragement. The common attutude is to scorn them or repulse them. The scorn may be shown even when alms or assistance is given to them. Such an attitude is wrong. Charity is of no moral value without sympathy and love. Nor six tharity to give to idle sturdy professional beggars, for show or to get rid of them. They are mere parasites on society. Every petition should be examined and judged on its ments.

6187. Besides the petitioners, who ask for help, there is the case of those who do not ask but are nevertheless poor—poor but contented in worldly goods, or poor in knowledge or resources and not even knowing that they are poor. It you are bountfully endowed by God, your duty is to make that Bounty spread far and wide. Proclaim it and share it, as the boly Prophet always did. Spinitually we all belong to one of these three classes in one sense or another,—orphans, petitioners, and victims of poverty. We all receive God's grace and guidance in some degree or other, We all owe it as a duty to our fellow-men to be kind and helpful to those less endowed in any respect than ourselves.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY SÜRA XCIV (Inshirāh).

This short Sūra gives a message of hope and encouragement in a time of darkness and difficulty. It was revealed to the holy Prophet soon after the last Sūra (Dhuhā), whose argument it supplements.

C. 274.—The Prophet's mind and heart had indeed (xciv. 1-8.) Been expanded and purified; the burden Which pressed on his soul had been removed; And his name exalted in this world and the next. For the righteous man there is no trouble But is linked with ease and joy: he must strive At every stage, and look to God Alone as the goal of all his hopes.

Stira XCIV.

Inshirals or The Expansion

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1 Enave We not Expanded thee thy breast?—61*
- 2. And removed from thee Thy burden 6149
- 3. The which did gall Thy back? --
- 4 And raised high the esteem (In which) thou (art held)? 6190
- So, verily, With every difficulty, There is relief: 6191
- Verily, with every difficulty There is relief.

6188. Cf. the prayer of Moses in xx. 25. The breast is symbolically the seat of knowledge and the highest feelings of love and affection, the treasure-house in which are stored the jewels of that quality of human character which approaches nearest to the divine. The holy Prophet's human nature had been purified, expanded, and elevated, so that he became a Mercy to all Creation Such a nature could afford to ignore the lower motives of ordinary humanity which caused shameful attacks to be made on him. Its strength and courage could also bear the burden of the gailing work which it had to do in denouncing sin, subduing it, and protecting God's creatures from its oppression.

6189. See last note. It is indeed a grievous and galling burden for a man to fight single-handed against sin. But God sends His grace and aid, and that burden is removed, or converted into joy and triumph in the service of the One True God.

6190. The Prophet's virtues, the magnanimity of his character, and his love for mankind were fully recognised even in his lifetime, and his name stands highest among the heroic leaders of mankind. The phrase used here is more comprehensive in meaning than that used for various prophets in xxxviv 119 etc.: "We left this blessing for them among generations to come in later times".

6191. This verse is repealed for exist emphasis. Whatever difficulties or troubles are encountered by men, God always provides a solution a way out, a relief, a way to lead to ease and happiness, if we only follow this Path and show our Faith by patience and well-doing. The solution or relief does not merely come ofter the Difficulty it is a provided with it. I understand the definite article in al-way in a generic sense, and translate: "every-difficulty", in xxii, 7, I have translated Yurr as Bliss, and in xxii, 10, Yur as Musery.

<sup>6192.</sup> When thou art free: or when thou art relieved. The words understood may be from thy immediate task, that of preaching to men, denouncing sin, and encouraging risk-redusess; or, from the difficulties that conformed thee. When that happens, that gloser field finish the labours of the man of God. It is only one step to them. He has constants—and insistently to go on. When there is rest from the task of instructing the world, the constants—with the spiritual kingdom continues, and indeed it becomes more intimate and concentration.

<sup>6193.</sup> The kingdom of God is everything. Other things are incidental, and really do not matter. We have a success, may be a means to an end, but it may also be a hindrance to true spiritual greatness—God is the goal of the righteous man's whole attention and desire

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SÜRA XCV (Tin).

This is also a very early Sura. It appeals to the most sacred symbols to show that God created man in the lest of moulds, but that man is capable of the utmost degradation unless he has Faith and leads a good life. In subject-matter this Sura closely resembles S. ciii.

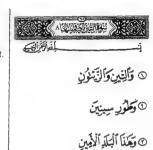

C. 275.—Nature and history and the Light of Revelation, (xev. 1-8.) Through the ages, show that man,
Created by God in the best of moulds,
Can yet fall to the lowest depths, unless
He lives a life of faith and rightecusness.
Then will be reach his goal: if not,
He must stand his Judgment—none can doubt—
Before the wisest and justest of Judges.

Stra XCV.

Tin. or The Fig.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- 1. By the Fig 6194
  And the Olive, 6195
- 2. And the Mount Of Sinai, 6196
- And this City 6199 Of security, — 6198

6194. The substantive proposition is in verses 4-8, and it is clinched by an appeal to four sacred symbols, viz., the Fig. the Olive, Mount Sinai, and the sacred City of Mecca. About the precise interpretation of the first two symbols, and esperially of the symbol of the Fig. there is much difference of opinion. If we take the Fig literally to refer to the fruit or the tree, it can stand as a symbol of man's destiny is many ways. Under cultivation it can be one of the fines; most delicious, and most wholesome fruits in existence: in its wild state, it is nothing but tiny seeds, and is insioid, and often full of worms and maggots. So man at his best has a noble destiny: at his worst, he is 'the lowest of the low'. Christ is said to have cursed a fig tree for having only leaves, and not producing fruit (Malt. zxi. 18-0), enforcing the same lesson. There is also a parable of the fig tree in Malt xxiv 32.35. See also the parable of the good and evil figs in Jeremiah, xxiv 1-10. But see a figs helps.

6196. This was the Mountain on which the Law was given to Moses. See xix 32, and n. 2504. The Law was given, and the glory of God was made visible. But did Israel faithfully obey the Law there: ter?

0197. "This City of security" is undoubtedly Mecca. Even in Pagan times its sacred character was respected, and no fighting was allowed in its territory. But the same City, with all its sacred associations, persecuted the greatest of the Prophets and gave itself up for a time to idolatry and sin, thus presenting the contrast of the best and the worst.

6108. Having dis-ussed the four symbols in detail, let us consider them together. It is clear that they refer to God's Light or Revelation, which offers man the highest destiny if he will foliow the Way. Merca stands for Islam, Sinai for Israel, and the Mount of Olives for Christ's original and pure Message. It has been suggested that the Fig stands for the Ficus Indita, the Bo-tree, under which Gautama Buddha obtained Nirvana. I heritate to adopt the suggestion, but if accepted it would cover pristine Buddhism and the ancient Vedic religions from which it was an offshort. In this way all the great religions of the world would be indicated. But even if we refer the Fig and the Olive to the symbolism in their fruit, and not to any particular religion, the contrast of Best and Worst in days's destiny remains, and that is the main thing.

6199. Taquism: mould, symmetry, form, nature, constitution. There is no fault in God's creation. To,man God gave the purest and best nature, and man's duty is to preserve the pattern on which God has made him: xxxx. 30. But by making him His vicegerent, God exalted him in posse even higher than the angels, for the angels had to make obeisance to him (ii, 30-34, and n. 48). But man's position as vicegerent also gives him will and discretion, and if he uses them wrongly he falls even lower than the beasts. See next note.

6200 This verse should be read with the next. If man rebels against God, and follows after evil, he will be abased to the lowest; ossible position. For Judgment is sure. Those who use their faculties arigh, and follow God's Law will reach the high and noble destiny intended for them. This reward will not be temporary, but unfailing.

6201. Thee may refer to the hole Prophet, or to rian collectively. ### INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA XCVI (Igras, or 'Alag).

Verses 1-5 of this Sūra were the first direct Revelation to the holy Prophet.

The circumstances, material and psychical, in which they came, are described in

C. 28-30, which should be referred to

After that there was an interval or break (Fatra), extending over some months or perhaps over a year. S. Ixviii. is usually considered to have been the next revelation in point of time. But the remainder of this Sūra (xcvi. 6-19) came soon after the Fatra, and that portion is joined on to the first five verses containing the command to preach, because it explains the chief obstacle to the delivery of the message to man, riz.: man's own obstinacy, vanity, and insolence.

C. 276.—Noble is the mission of the Prophet, selected (2cv. 1-19)

To proclaim the Message of God, the Lord And Cherisher of all His Creation, Whose measureless Bounties include the instruction of man In new and ever new knowledge. But alsa For man! he fancies himself self-sufficient, Turns away from the Path, and misleads others. But nothing is hidden from God. He will bring All untruth and sin and rebellion to Judgment, And subdue all evil. The righteous bow In adoration to God, and draw closer to Him.

 وَقَدْ وَرَبَّكَ الْأَحْدَرُمُ

٥ ٱلْذَى عَلَمَ الْمِلْسَلَمِ

6203. Igrae may mean "read", or "recite or rehearse", or "proclaim atoud", the object understood being God's Message. For an account of the circumstances in which this first revelation—the divine commission to preach and proclaim God's Message came to the holy Prophet, in the cave of Biraa, see C. 27-31. In worldly letters he was unversed, but with spiritual knowledge his mind and soul ware filled, and now had come the time when he must stand forth to the world and declare his mission.

6.54. The declaration or proclamation was to be in the name of God the Creator. It was not or any personal benefit to the Prophet: to him there was to come bitter persocution, sorrow, and suffering. It was the call of Go. for the benefit of erring humanity. God is mentioned by his title of they Lord and Cherisher", to establish a direct nexus between the source of the Message and the one nutlier-sed. The Message was not merely an abstract proposition, of philosophy, but the direct concrite message of a personal God to the creatures whom 'He loves 'and cherishes, "Tay" addressed to the Prophet is 'appropriatie in two ways: (1) he was in direct contact with the divine Messaneur (Gabriel) and Him Who sent the Messaneur (Gabriel) and Him Who sent the Message; (2) he represented the whole of humanity, in a fully-sense than that in which Christ Jesus is the "Son Of Man".

62.) Cf. xxiii. 34. The lowly origin of the animal in man is contrasted with the high destiny offered cham in his intellectual, moral, and spiritual nature by his "most hountiful" Creator. No know order is withheld from man. On the contrary, through the faculties freely given to him, he acquired it in such measure as outstrips his immediate undentanding, and leads him ever to strive for news and newser measure.

deth The symbol of a permanent revelation is the mystic Pen and the mystic Record. See n. 5500 to laviii 1.

The Arabic words for "reach" and "knowledge" are from the same root. It is impossible to proof an in a Translation the complete orchestral harmony of the words for "read", "teach", "prin which, implies reading, writing, books, study, research, "knowledge, "(including science, self bit with date, spiritual understanding, and "proclaim", an alternative meaning of the word for to it. This proclaiming or reading, implies not only the duty of biazoning forth God's message, as go it with the prophetic office, but also the duty of promulgation and wide dissemination of the Trull 1; ill who read and understand it. The comprehensive meaning of a war arefers not only to a partite dar person and occasion but also gives a universal direction. And this kind of comprehensive meaning, as we have seen, turns throughout the Qui-affice from those who will understand.

6207. God teaches us new knowledge at every given moment Individuals learn more and more day by day; nations and humanily at large learn fresh knowledge at every stage This is even more noticeable and important in the spiritual world.

6209. All our knowledge and capacities come as gifts from God. But man, in his inordinate varity and insolence, mistakes God's gifts for his own achievements. The gifts may be strength or beauty, wealth, position, or power, or the more subtle gifts of knowledge or talents in individuals,—in Science, or Ari, or Government, or Organisation for mankind in general.

6209. Man is not self-sufficient, either as an individual, or in his collective capacity. If he arrogates God's gifts to himself, he is reminded—backwards, of his lowly physical origin (from a drop of animal matter), and forwards, of his responsibility and final return to God.

6210. The words may be applied generally to perverse humanity, which seeks not only to rebel against God's Law, but also to prevent others from following it. There may however be a reference here to AbD Jahl, an inverterate enemy of Islam, who used in its early days to insuit and persecute the holy Prophet and those who followed his teaching. He used, in particular, to use shameful methods to prevent the Prophet from going to the Ka's for devotions, and forbid any who came under his influence, from offering prayers or perferming devotions. He was arrogant and purse-proud and mell his end in the battle of Bad?

6/11. Mans insolence leads to two results: (1) self-destruction through self-inisteading; (2) a lalse example of false guidance to others. The righteous man must therefore test human example or human guidance by the question, "I sthere God's guidance behind it?" And visible light would be thrown on it by the question, "Does it lead to righteousness?" A flouting of God and God's Truth answers the first question in the negative, and conduct which turns back from the sternal principles of Right answers the second

But they could not, all combined, resist the onward march of the divine mission, though they did all they could to check it.

<sup>6215.</sup> All the combined forces of evil, though they may have worldly appearances in their favour, and thought they may seem to be successful for a time, cannot stand against God. He has but to command. His forces of punishment to exert themselves, and they will subdue evil, protect God's votaries and justify the faith for which the votaries suffer.

<sup>6216</sup> The righteous man has no fear. He can disregard all the forces of evil that are brought against him. But he must fear humility: that is his defence. He will bow down in adoration to food. He nuish have the will to bring himself closer to God. For God is always close to him,—rloser to him than his life blood in the jugular vein (l. 16). Man's humility and adoration remove him from being an insolent rebel on the one hand and, on the other, prepare his will to realise his nearness to God.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA XCVII (Qadr).

The chronology of this Sura has no significance. It is probably Meccan, though some hold that it was revealed in Medina.

The subject-matter is the mystic Night of Power (or Honour), in which Revelation comes down to a benighted world,—it may be to the wonderful Cosmos of an individual—and transforms the conflict of wrong-doing into Peace and Harmony—through the agency of the angelic host, representing the spiritual powers of the Mercy of God.

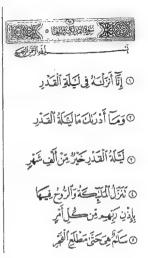

C. 277.—Blessed indeed is the Night of Power!—
(xevii. 1-5.) When the Mercy of God's Revelation breaks through
The darkness of the human soul!
All the Powers, of the world divine,
Speed on their mystic Message of Mercy,
By God's command, and bless every nook
And corner of the heart! All jars
Are stilled in the reign supreme of Peace,
Until this mortal night gives place
To the glorious day of an immortal world!

- 5. Peace! . . . This Until the rise of Morn! 6230

6:17 Cf xiiv. 3 and n. 4670. Literalists refer to some particular night in the calendar, but there is no agreement as to which it is. The 23rd, 25th or 27th night of Romadhān, as well as other nights, have been suggested See, however, the Introduction to the Sox. It is best to take this in the mystic sense, which also accords with verse 3 below, which says that the Night of Power is better than a thousand Months—48 transcends 1 me: [or it is God's Power dispelling the Darkness of Ignorance, by his Revealation, in severy kind of affair.

61/8. "A thousand" must be taken in an indefinite sense, as denoting a very long period of time,  $C_1$  notes 1632 and 1634 to xxxii. 45, and in 56/8 to 1xx 4. This does not refer to our tideas of time, but to "timeless Time". One moment of ealightenment under God's Light is better than thousands of months or years of animal life, and such a moment converts the night of darkness into a period of spiritual glory.

6219. The Spirit: usually understood to be the angel Cabriel, the Spirit of Inspiration. But names are hardly necessary in the mystic world. See n. 5677 to [xx. 4]

6220. When the Night of spiritual darkness is dissipated by the glory of God, a wonderful Peare and a series of Security onse in the snul. And this lasts on until this life closes, and the glorious Day of the new spiritual world dawns, when everything will be on a different plane, and the chequered inghts and days of this world will be even less than a dream.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA XCVIII (Baiyina).

This Sūra was probably an early Medina Sūra, or possibly a late Meccan Sūra.

In subject-matter it carries forward the argument of the last Sura. The mystic night of revelation is indeed blessed: but those who reject Truth are impervious te God's Message, however clear may be the evidence in support of it.

C. 278.—But those who reject the light of Truth xeviii. 1-8.)

Are obstinate. Why should they persist In evil ways when the Clear Evidence Has come before them? The straight Religion Is simple: to adore with a pure heart The God of Truth, to draw nigh to Him In Prayer sincere, and to serve Our fellow-creatures in charity and love. To do aught else is to fail from Grace.

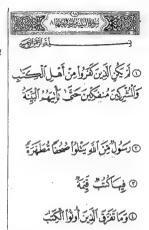

But Faith and Good Life lead straight to the Goal,—The beauteous Gardens of Bliss Eternal,
And the mutual good pleasure of the Soul in her Lord.

621. The People of the Book immediately referred to are the Jews and the Chastama, who had received scriptures in the same line of prophery in which came our holy Prophet. Their scriptures should have prepared them for the advent of the greatest and last of the Prophets. For the Jewshisciptures promised to the Jews, cousins or brethern to the Arabs, a prophet like Moses: "The Lord thy God will raise up unto the a Prophet from the andst, of thee, of thy brethern, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken" (Deut, xviii, 15), And Christ, promised a Comforter (John, xv. 16; xv. 26; and xv. 7; see my n. 543 to 1st. 6) almost by name. The People of the Book fell from the true, straight, and standaud religion, into devious ways, and would not come to the true Path until (they sand) they were convinced by the arrival of the promised Prophet. Earn either promised Prophet came in the person of Mulpammad, they rejected him, because they, really did not seek for Truth but only followed their own fancies and desure.

622. The Polytheists, the Pagans, had not previously believed in any scriptures. But yet, when clear evidence came to them, they should have believed. Yet they rejected the holy Prophet because they were not really searching for Truth, but were only following their own fancies and desires.

6223. The Clear Evidence was the holy Prophet himself, his life, his personality, and his teaching.

6227. Yet, when the clear evidence came in Islam, they jessive it, And what is this standard and straight Religion, free of all ambiguity, and free of all casual tights and ceremonles? They are summed up in three elemal principles, as explained in the next verse and the next note.

6228. The three eternal principles of Religion are: (1) sincere devotron to God (2) Prayer and Praise as drawing man nearer to God and to the spiritual world; and (3) the service of God's creatures by deeds of practical charity.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA XCIX (Zileāi).

This Sura is close in date to the last: it is generally referred to the early Medina period, though it may possibly be of the late Meccan period.

It refers to the tremendous convulsion and uprooting which will take place when the present order of the world is dissolved and the new spiritual world of Justice and Truth takes its place. The symbol used is that of an earthquake which will shake our present material and phenomenal world to its very four dations. The mystic words in which the earthquake is described are remarkable for both power and graphic aptness. With that shaking all hidden mysteries will be brought to light.

C. 279.—The Hour of Judgment must needs be heralded (xcix. 1-8)

By a mighty Convulsion: the Earth will give up Her secrets and tell her tale of all Man's doings: men will march in companies And clearly see the inwardness

Of all their Deeds: not an atom of Good Or Evil done, but will be shown

In the final Account of men convinced.

Stira XCIX.

Zilaal, or The Convulsion.

In the name of God, Most Gracious,
Most Merciful.

- 1. Then the Earth is Shaken to her (utmost)
  - convulsion, "21
- And the Earth throws up Her burdens (from within), 6:36
- And man cries (distressed):
   What is the matter with her? 420
- 4. On that Day will she Declare her tidings:
- For that thy Lord will Have given her inspiration. 6136
- On that Day will men Proceed in companies sorted out, 5239

6235. To the ordinary human observer a violent earthquake is a terrifying phenomenon, in its suddenness, in its mysterious origin, and in its power to destroy and uproot the strongest buildings and to bring up 'strange materials from the bowels of the earth. The Overwhelming Event (S. Ixxxviii) which ushers in the Judgment will be a bigger and more far-reaching convulsion than any earthquakes that we know. And yet the incidents of earthquakes may give us some idea of that supreme world-shaking Event.

6236. An earthqunke, if accompanied by a volcanic eruption, throws up enormous boulders and lava from beneath the crust of the earth. They are shrown up as if they were a burden to the Earth personified. They may be all kinds of minerals, or treasures buried for secrecy. So in the great and final Convulsion, the drad who had been buried and forgotten will use; matters and motives which had been secretly hidden and metaphorically buried will be done in the full glare of absolute Truth.

6237. The puzzled agony suffered by the victims of a violent earthquake is as nothing compared to the experience of the new and wonderful world which will then open out to the gaze of man.

6238. The present order may be personified as the earth. It will pass away, but the Deeds dome therein, even the most secret, will be brought to the full light of day. And this will be because God will give the Command, the inspiration or Word, by which alone all events do proceed. The "inspiration" is the Command or direction conveyed by instruction breathed into the Earth personified; she is directed to tell the whole story of what she knows. Cf. xvi. 68, n. 2007.

6239. In this world good and evil are mixed together. But then they will be sorted out, and each grade of good and evil will be sorted out. So they will proceed in companies to receive judgment. And they will be shown the exact import of everything that they had thought, said, or done, in this life of probation, however they may have concealed or misinterpreted it in this life. Everything will be considered it asking, the account, and the account will convince the persons concerned themselves.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY . STRA C ('Adivar)

This is one of the earlier Meccan Suras. In the depth of its mystery and the rhythm and sublimity of its language and symbolism, it may be compared with S. laxix. Its subject-matter is the irresistible nature of spiritual power and knowledge, contrasted with unregenerate man's ingratitude, pettiness, helplessness, and ignorance.

C. 280 .- There are those that fight, with eager charge, (c 1-11) The hosts of evil, and storm its citadel. But unregenerate Man shows less Than gratitude for God's most gracious Bounties : his life bears witness to his treason

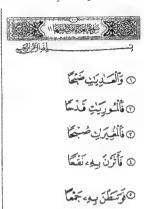

And his greed. God's knowledge is all-embracing All things hidden will be laid hare at Judgment.

- 4. And raise the dust In clouds the while, 624
- 5. And penetrate forthwith Into the midst (of the foe) En masse; - 6445

624. The substantive proposition is in verses 6.6 below, and the metaphors and symbols enforcing the lesson are in verses 1.5 bere. These symbols have at least three layers of mystic meaning; (I) Look at the chargers (marse or swift camels) panting for war on behalf of their masters. Off they go, striking fire with their hooks by night at the behest of their inders; they puth home the charge in the morning chivalrously giving the enemy the benefit of daylight; and regardless of flashing step of the warpons of their enemies they boldly benefit at lein the midst of their (e.e., risking their lives for the Cause. (3) The whole conflict, fighting, and victory, may be applied to spiritual warfare against those who are caught and overwhelmed in the camp of Evil.

6242. With their hoofs. If we suppose the march to be in the dead of night, the sparks of fire would be still more conspicuous.

6243. We may suppose a surprise attack, but yet a chivalrous attack by daylight. The foe is pluntshed through his own lethargy and unpreparedness, apart from the strength, fire, and spirit of the forces of righteousness.

words, and deeds,—by forgetting or denying God and His goodness, by misusing. His gifts, or by injustice to His creatures. He is in this respect worse than the war-horse that risks his life in the service of his master.

6247. Man himself, by his conduct, proves the charge of treason against himself

6248. What an evil choice he makes in committing treason against this own Benefactor by going after the petry baubles of this world's wealth of fleeting gains?

Instead of being closely hidden or blotted out—as they will have been from the consciousness of mankind,—they will stand out as from the consciousness of God, which is all-embracing and never suffers from sleep or fatigue.

6250 God's knowledge is full and vigilant at all times. But on that day it will reveal to men secrets which they, had long forgotten; for the Book of their Deeds will be made manifest at Judgment.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CI (Al-Ogri'a).

This Meccan Sura describes the Judgment Day as the Day of Clamour, when men will be distracted and the landmarks of this world will be lost, but every deed will be weighed in a just balance, and find its real value and setting.

C. 281.—How will the senses of man stand the Noise
(cr. 1-11.) And Clamour of the great Day of Account,
Whereon this life's old landmarks will vanish,
And men will be helpless like scattered moths?
Nay, but a Balance of Justice will weigh
And appraise all Deeds: and those whose good
Will show substance and weight will achieve a Life
Of good pleasure and satisfaction, while those Whose good will be light will find themselves,
Alas, in & Dazing Pit of Ponishment.

6231. The Day of Noise and Clamour is the Day of Judgment, when the whole of the present order of things will be overthrown with a tremendous convulsion. Cf. n. 6235 to xcix. I, and n. 6096 to Ixxxviii. All our present landmarks will be lost. If will be a stunning experience to begin with, but it will maugurate a new world of true and permanent values, in which every human deed will have its true and just consequences, as if weighed in the balance. See verses 6-II below.

n32. Moths are frail light things. To ree them scattered about ma violent storm gives some idea of the confusion, distress, and helplessness in which men will be at first overwhelmed on the Day of Account. Old memories will be like a book almost blotted out. New hopes will be vague in a new world just rising on the horizon. But it will be a perfectly just world, and no good action will be lost and no evil one but will have its compensating value estimated.

t.253. Cf. n. 5082 to lxx. 9. The mountains are solid things, which seem as if nothing could move them. But in that tremendous cataclysm they will be scattered about like flakes of teased or carded wool. This is a metaphor to show that what we consider very substantial in this life will be as an arry nothing in the opiniual world.

6254. The Balance is of course figurative. The Good Deeds will be weighed and appraised, The appraisement will be of the nicest and justest kind: for it will take into account motives, temptations, provocations, surrounding conditions, antercedents, subsequent amends, and all possible connected circumstances. Against them, presumably, will be deeds of the opposite kind, appraised in the same way. If the good predominates, the judgment will be in the man's favour, and he will be ushered into a life of good pleasure and satisfar .o: This will of course be on another plane.

Of good pleasure and satisfaction. 4255

8. But he whose Balance (of good deeds) Will be (found) light.—

To thee what this is?

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CII (Takathur).

This probably early Meccan Sura gives a warning against acquisitiveness, i.e. the passion for piling up quantities or numbers, whether in the good things of this world, or in man-power or in other forms of megalomania, which leave no time or opportunity for pursuing the higher things of life.

C. 282.—Be not engrossed in things ephemeral,

(cii 1.8) To the neglect of higher things in life.

Life is but short, and Death will soon claim you.

Oh that men would only learn,

Before it is too late, the serious

Issues of the higher life! They must

Taste the consequences of their neglect.

For every good enjoyed they must

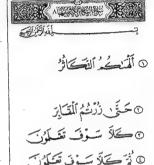

In the Hereafter give a strict account.

6257. Acquisitiveness, that is, the passion for seeking an increase in wealth, position, the number of deherents or followers or supporters, mass production and mass organisation, may affect an individual as such, or it may affect who societies or nations. Other people's example of rivalivi such things may aggravate the situation. Up to a certain point it may be good and necessary. But when it becomes inordinate and monopolises attention, it leaves no time for higher things in life, and a clear warning is here sounded from a spiritual point of view. Man may be engrossed in these things till death approaches, and he looks back on a wasted life, as far as the higher things are concerned.

6258. That is, until the time comes when you must lie down in the graves and leave the pump and corcumstance of an empty life. The true Reality will then appear before you. Why not try to strve for a little understanding of that Reality in this very life?

6339. Three kinds of yequi (certainty of knowledge) are described in n. 5073 to lxix 51. The first is certainty of mind or inference mentioned here: we hear from someone, or we infer from something we know: This refers to our own state of mind. If we instruct our minds in this way, we should value the deeper things of life better, and not waste all our time in ephenical things. But if we do not use our reasoning faculties now, we shall yet see with our own eyes the Penalty for our sins. It will be certainty of sight. We shall see Hell. See hext verse. But the absolute retrainty of assured Truth is that described in 18xx, 51. That is not liable to any human error or mys hological defect.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CHI ('Ast).

This early Meccan Sera refers to the testimony of Time through the Ages. All history shows that Evil came to an evil end. But Time is always in favour of those who have Faith, live clean and pure lives, and know how to wait, in patience and constancy. Cf. the theme of S. xcv.

C. 283.—Waste not, nor misuse, your life. Time
(ciii 1-3.) Through the Ages bears witness that nothing remains
But Faith and Good Deeds, and the teaching of Truth
And the teaching of Patience and Constancy.
But for these, Man against Time is in loss |

Sūra CIII.

'Aşr, or Time through the Ages.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful,

- 1. By (the Token of)
  Time (through the Ages), 6362
- 2. Verily Man Is in loss, 5253
- Except such as have Faith, And do righteous deeds, 6061
   And (join together) 6005
   In the mutual teaching Of Truth, and of Patience and Constancy.

622. 'Agr may mean: (1) Time through the Ages or long periods, in which case it comes near to the abstractidea of Time. Dair, which was sometimes defined by the Pagar Arabs (see Introduction to S. Ixxvi); (2) or the late afternon, from which the '4yr canonical prayer takes is name (see n. 27) to fi. 239). A mystic use of both these ideas is understood here. An appeal is made to Time as one of the creations of God, of which everyone knows something but of which no one can fully explain the exact significance. Time searches out and destroys everything material. No one in secular interature has expressed the tyranny of "never-resting Time" better than Shakespase in his Sonnets. For example, see Sonnets 5 ("never resting Time"), 12 ("Nothing 'gainst Time's setythe can make defence"), and 64 ("When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced The rich proud cost of outworn buried age"). If we merely run a race against Time, we shall lose. It is the spiritual part of us that conquers Time. See verse 1 below. For the "afternoon" ideas see next not do see next not can see the second of outworn buried age").

6263 If life be considered under the metaphor of a business bargain, man, by merely attending to his material gains, will lose. When he makes up his day's account in the alternoon, it will show a loss. It will only show profit if he has Faith, leads a good life, and contributes to social welfare by directing and encouraging other people on the Path of Truth and Constancy.

6264 Faith is his armour, which wards off the wounds of the material world; and his righteous life is his positive contribution to spiritual ascent.

6265. If he lived only for himself, he would not fulfil his whole duty. Whatever good he has, especially in moral and spiritual life, he must spread among his bethren, so that they may see the Truth and stand by it in patient hope and unshaken constancy amidst all the storm and stress of outer life. For he and they will then have attained Peace within.

APPENDIX XIV.

Oaths and Adjurations in the Qur-an.

- An oath is an invocation of the name of God or of some person or object held sacred by the person using the invocation, to witness the truth of a solemn affirmation and to emphasize that affirmation.
- An adjuration is a solemn appeal to a person or persons to do some act or to believe some important statement by the evidence of something great or sublime or remarkable or out of the ordinary.
- 3. On these subjects as thus defined, let us review the teaching of the holy Qur-an.
- 4. Among the Pagan Arabs the use of oaths became so common that it almost ceased to have any solemn meaning. On the other hand, when they wanted to suppress the rights of women or do some unjust acts, they would resort to an oath to do so, and then plead that they were bound by their oath when pressure was brought to bear on them to desist from their injustice. Thus, they doubly dishonoured oaths: they took the name of God lightly, and on the other hand, they made an oath an excuse for not doing what was right and just. It is much to be feared that our own contemporaries are not free from such forms of disrespect to God.
- 5. Such practices are condemned in the strongest terms in the Qur-an.
  "Make not God's name an excuse in your oaths against doing good, or acting rightly, or making peace between persons" (ii. 224). Perjury is condemned as deception which hurts both the deceiver and the deceived. "Take not your oaths to practise deception between yourselves, with the result that someone's foot may slip after it was firmly planted, and ye may have to taste the evil consequences of having hindered men from the Path of God, and a mighty Wrath descend on you"
  (xvi. 94). See also iii. 77. You must not only fulfil your oaths, but you must fulfil all covenants, express or implied, and all your obligations of every kind, without reference to an oath: v. I, n. 682.
- 6. Considering the harm caused by thoughtless oaths, in which there was no intention to deceive or to do wrong, it is provided that they may be expisted for. "God will not call you to account for what is futile in your oaths, but He will call you to account for your deliberate oaths: for expiation feed ten indigent persons...or clothe them, or give a slave his freedom. If that is beyond your means, fast for three days. That is the expiation for the oaths ye have sworn. But keep to your oaths "V. 92). See also ii. 225 and lxvi. 2.
- 7. Some examples may be cited of the false oaths which were used for deception. The Hypocrites, "in whose hearts is a disease", "swore their strongest oaths by God " that they would be with the Muslims, but treachery was in their hearts (v. 55-56). See also xxiv. 53. On the other hand, the oath of Joseph's wicked brethren, " By God!", in speaking to their tather, (xii. S5), seems to be a mere expletive, used lightly, and therefore worthy of condemnation.

8. In passages like the following, the oath seems to be emphatic and solemn as in a court of law : - xir 66 By Joseph's brethren, at Jacob's request.

xii, 73 By Joseph's brethren, to the Egyptians.

By Abraham, to the Polytheists. xxi. 57

xxvi. 97 By the denizens of Hell, when they realise their wrong, xxxvii. 56

By the righteous one in heaven, when he realises the great danger he escaped in life. xxxviii, 82 By the Power of Evil, who solemnly swears by the power of God.

By the denizens of Hell, when they realise the Truth. xlvi. 34

9. In the following passages addressed by God to men, an appeal is made to man's realisation of God's own greatness, goodness, and glory, or God's special relationship to man as Creator, Cherisher, and Protector, to teach him the lesson of truth and right conduct. In English phrase it might be rendered : " As I am thy Lord God, believe in Me and follow My Word."

... " By thy Lord " (they can have no real faith until ... ). lv. 65

xv. 92 " By thy Lord " (We will call them to account).

" By God " (ye shall be called to account). xvi. 56 ...

xvi. 63 " By God " (We sent apostles).

" By thy Lord " (We shall gather them together). xix. 68

xxxiv. 3 ... " By my Lord" (said by the Prophet to assure men of the coming of the Hour of Judgment)

lxiv. 7 Do.

li. 23 ... " By the Lord of heaven and earth " (this is the very Truth). See also lxx. 40 (paragraph 12 below).

10. Another way in which an appeal is made to men is by the evidence of the life of the holy Prophet, whose truth and purity were known to them, or by the holv Our-ën, whose wonderful power over men's hearts was a miracle which they witnessed before their eyes :-

xv. 72 ... " By thy life " (to enforce the lesson of the unspeakable crime of Lot's people).

xxxvi. 2 .. "By the Qur-an. (to show the Prophet's inspiration). Full of Wisdom " xxxviii. 1 ... "By the Qur-an, (to show the error of the Unbeliev-Full of admonition ' era).

" By the Book that Makes (to show that Revelation is reasonxliii. 2 able and conformable to truth). things clear "

vliv 2 Dec Do

1.3 " By the Glorious Our-an " to quell the wonder of the ignorant).

- 11. Now we come to the great mystic passages in the Meccan Suras, in which men are adjured to turn to the wonders of the spiritual world by striking phrases full of sublimity, full of mystery, full of symbolism, and using the wonders of the heavens and the earth by way of illustration. They are the despair of the translator, because the words used are widely comprehensive, with little that is precise in them. There are layers upon layers of meaning, and only the profoundest spiritual experience can probe their depths. An attempt has been made in the notes to analyse and explain some of their meanings. All that we can do here is to bring them together into juxtaposition, to help the earnest student. They may be divided into three categories: (1) those introduced by the words "La uysimu" (I do swear or I do call to witness), (2) those introduced by the particle wa, which is the general form of adjuration, and (3) those, mainly concerned with the Judgment to come, which are introduced by the adverb " isa " (when:
- 12. La Uusimu (with the first person singular) implies that special attention is drawn to something by a personal and beneficent God, and an appeal is made to His creatures .-

lvi. " The setting of the stars." Other glories may set, but not the glory of Revelation.

"The ruddy glow of sunset, lxxxiv. 16-18 the Night, the Moon." "This City (of Mecca) and Man must travel from stage to stage.

mystic ties."

Man is created for toil and struggle. but God has given him guidance.

13. The great mystic Symbols or Signs, introduced by the particle wa, by which man is adjured to turn to the higher life, are rich in suggestive imagery, which loses part of its charm by any attempt at precise definition :-

... " By those who range themselves in ranks ". xxxvii. 1

" By the (Winds) that scatter broadcast " etc. li. 1-4

... " By the heaven with its numerous Paths " etc. B. . 7

" By the Mount (of Revelation) " etc. lii. 1-6

liji. 1 ... " By the Star when it goes down ".

lxviii. 1 ... " By the Pen and by the Record which men write ".

lxxiv. 32-34 ... " By the Moon, the Night, the Dawn ".

lxxvii. 1-5 .. " By the (Winds) sent forth . (to man's profit)" etc.

laxis. 1-5 "By the (angels) who tear out "etc.

lxxxv. 1-3 ... "By the Sky (displaying) the Zodiacal Signs " etc.

lxxxvi. 1 "By the Sky and the Night-Visitant (therein)".
lxxxvi. 11-12 ..... "By the Firmament which returns (in its round), and by the Earth " etc.

Ixxxix. 1-5 ... " By the Break of Day ", etc.

xciii.

xci. 1-8 "By the Sun and its (glorious) splendour, By the Soul..." etc.

xcii. 1-3 ... " By the Night as it conceals (the light);

By the Day as it appears in glory "etc.

1-2 ... "By the Glorious morning Light "etc.

xcv. 1-3 ... "By the Fig and the Olive " etc.

c. 1-5 .. " By the (Steeds) that run with panting breath " etc.

ciii. 1 ... " By (the Token of) Time (through the Ages) ".

14. The great mystic Symbols introduced by the adverb "when" (ist) do not in form belong to the category of Adjurations, but their mystic meaning and imagery bring them within this category. They refer to the end of the present order of things, and the inauguration of the new world of perfect spiritual values, but they need not necessarily be understood in a definite sequence of time such as we know it, for the spiritual world overlaps the material:—

ixxvii. 8-11 ... "When the Stars become dim " etc.

lxxxi. 1-13 ... "When the Sun is folded up " etc.

lxxxii. 1-4 ... "When the Sky is cleft asunder " etc.

Ixxxiv. 1-5 ... "When the Sky is rent asunder" etc. xcix. 1-3 ... "When the Earth is shaken" etc.

15. Every Symbol is connected with the argument of the passage concerned, by way of metaphor or illustration. See n. 5798 to lxxiv. 32. The appropriate meaning suggested is explained in the notes to each passage as it occurs,

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : STIRA CIV (Humaza).

This Meccan Sura condemns all sorts of scandal, backbiting, and selfish hearding of wealth, as destroying the hearts and affections of men.

C. 284.—Woe to the man or woman who deals

out. 1-41 In scandal, in word or act, or by insults

Or suggestions. Woe to the backbiter, e'en

If his tale is true, for the taint is in his motive.

Woe to the miser who blocks up the channels

Of use and service and dams up his wealth.

As if he could remain in possession

For all time! The Fire of Wrath will envelop them

And wither up their hearts and minds, and consume

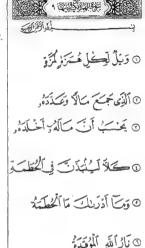

That largeness of life which is the portion of mankind.

- 2. Who pileth up wealth And layeth it by,
- Thinking that his wealth Would make him last For ever!
- By no means! He will Be sure to be thrown into That which Breaks to Pieces. 6399
- 5. And what will explain To thee That which Breaks To Pieces?
- (It is) the Fire
   Of (the Wrath of) God
   Kindled (to a blaze),
- 7. The which doth mount (Right) to the Hearts: 6168

6266. Three vices are here condemned in the strongest terms: (1) scandal-mongering, talking or suggestime evil of men or women by word or insuendo, or behaviour, or minnery, or sarcasm, or insult; (2) detracting from their character behind their backs, even if the things suggested are true, where the motive is evil; (3) pulng up wealth, not for use and service to those who need it, but in miserly hoards, as if such hoards can prolong the miser's life or give him immortality: miserliness is itself a kind of scandal.

6267, Hulama: that which smashes or breaks to pieces: an apt description of the three antisocial vices condemned. For scandal-mongering and backbutung make any sort of cohesion or mutual confidence impossible; and the miser's hoards block up the channels of economic service and charity, and the circulation of good-will among men.

6268. This Fire of Punishment mounts right up to the hearts and minds of such men, and shuts the now of the love of their fellows. "Heart" in Arabic means not only the seat of affection, pity, charity, etc., but also of understanding and intelligent appreciation of things.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CV (Fit).

This early Meccan Sûra refers to an event that happened in the year of the birth of our holy Prophet, say about 570 A.D. Yaman was then under the rule of the Abyssinians (Christiana), who had driven out the Jewish Himyar rulers. Abraha Ashram was the Abyssinian governor or viceroy. Intoxicated with power and fired by religious fanaticism, he led a big expedition against Mecca, intending to destroy by Reha. He had an elephant or elephants in his train. But his sacrilegious intentions were defeated by a miracle. No defence was offered by the custodians of the Ka'ba as the army was too strong for them, but it was believed that a shower of stones, thrown by flocks of birds, destroyed the invading army almost to a man. The stones produced sores and pustules on the skin, which spread like a pestilence.

C. 285.—Let not man be intoxicated with power (cv. 1-5) Or material resources: they cannot defeat The purpose of God. So Abraha Ashram Found to his cost. His sacrilegious attack On the holy Fane of God brought about His own undoing: what seemed but frail Destroyed his mightly hosts in a day!

- Seest <sup>677</sup> thou not How thy Lord dealt With the Companions Of the Elephant? <sup>677</sup>
- 2. Did He not make Their treacherous plan Go astray?
- And He sent against them Flights of Birds, 6224
- Striking them with stones and Of baked clay.
- Then did He make them Like an empty field <sup>872</sup>. Of stalks and straw, (Of which the corn) Has been eaten up. <sup>8273</sup>

0000000000

6270. Seest thou not 3-i a, with thy mental vision. The incident happened in the very year of the holy Prophet's birth, barely two months before it,

6271. These were the troops of Abraha the Abyssinian, who invaded Merca with a large army, in which were some elephants. See Introduction to this Sura, 6272. The miracle consisted in the birds coming in large flights and flinging stones at the army which caused a great pestilence to arise and destroy the whole of Abraha's army.

6273. Stijjit: see n. 1579 to xi. 82. The word also occurs at xv. 74. Stones of baked clay, or hard as baked clay, are part of the miracle in the story.

6274. A field, from which all the corn has been eaten up and only straw with stalks or stubble is ieft, is a field dead and useless. Another possible rendering would be: "like eaten straw and stubble found in the dung of animals". The meaning would be the same, but much more emphatic, 6275, The lesson to be drawn is twofold. For the Pagan Quraish of Alecca it was: 'God will proceed this own; if you persecute the holy Prophet, he is greater than the mere building of the Ka'ba: will not God protect him?' For men in all ages it is: 'a man intoxicated with power can prepare armles and material resources against God's holy Plan; but such a man's plan will be his own undoing; in be gained prevail against God'.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CVI (Ouraish).

This Meccan Sūra may well be considered as a pendant to the last. If the Quraish were fond of Mecca and proud of it, if they profited, by its central position and its guaranteed security, from their caravans of trade and commerce, let them be grateful, adore the One True God, and accept His Message.

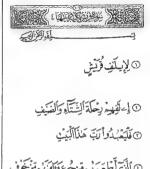

C. 286.—Who gave the Quraish their talents for the arts (evi. 14) Of peace, for trade and commerce, and for journeys South and north at proper seasons, And made their home inviolable in Mecca? Surely they, if any, should adore their Lord And listen to His Message of Unity and Truth.

Stira CVI.

Quraish or The Quraish, (Custodians of the Ka'ba).

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful

- Exor the covenants (Of security and safeguard Enjoyed) by the Quraish, 6276
- 2. Their covenants (covering) journeys By winter and summer,—677
- Let them adore the Lord Of this House, 6278
- Who provides them With food against hunger, 6279 And with security Against fear (of danger), 6280

6276. The Qurasish were the noblest tribe of Arabia, the tribe to which belonged the holy prophet himself. They had the custody of the Karba, the central shrine of Arabia, and their possession of Mecca gave them a triple advantage: (I) they had a commanding indusence over other tribes: (2) their central position facilitated trade and intercourse, which gave them both honour aprofit; and (3) the Mecca territory being by Arabiain custom involoble from the ravages of war and private feuds, they had a secure position, free from frair of danger. This honour and advantage they owed to their position as servants of the sacred shrine of the Karba. They owed it to God. Was it not therefore right and fitting that they should adore the One True God, and listen to His Message of Unity and Purity, brought by His Prophet?

In those days of general insecurity, their prestige as custodians of Mecca enabled them to obtain Covenants of security and safeguard from the rulers of neighbouring countries on all sides—Syna, Persia, Yaman, and Abyssinia—protecting their trade journeys in all seasons.

6277 See last note, especially section (2). On account of their trade journeys to the warmth of Yaman in the winter and the cooler regions of Syria and the north in the summer, the Quraish became practised travellers and merchants, acquired much knowledge of the world and many arts, and perfected their language as a polished medium of literary expression.

6278, The Kaba

6279. Their trade caravans enriched them, and drew people from distant parts to visit Mecca and bring their mer chandise and gifts thither.

6280. Their territory being inviolable, they did not suffer from the dangers of constant warfare nor from private feuds of vengeance or breaches of the peace in their secure homes.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CVII (Majun).

This Sūra—at least the first half of it—belongs to the early Meccan period. The subject-matter is the meaning of true worship, which requires Faith, the practical and helpful love of those in need, and sincerity rather than show in devotion and charity.

C. 287.—What remains if you deny all Faith
(cvn 17) And personal Responsibility? Why then Help the helpless or teach others
Deeds of Charity? Vain were worship
Without heart and soul. What think ye of men
Who make great show, but fail to meet
The simple needs of daily life?

Sora CVIII

Ma'un, or Neighbourly Needs.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merculul

- 1. Seest thou one Who denies the Judgment 6281 (To come)?
- 2. Then such is the (man) Who repulses the orphan (With harshness).
- 3. And encourages not 6282 The feeding of the indigent.
- 4. So woe to the worshippers
- 5. Who are neglectful Of their Prayers, 6263
- 6. Those who (want but)
  To be seen (of men), 5284
- 7. But refuse (to supply) (Even) neighbourly needs. 6285

6281. Din may mean either (1) the Judgment to come, the responsibility in the moral and spiritual world, for all actions done by men, or (2) Faith, Religion, the principles of right and wrong in spiritual matters, which often conflict with selfish desires or predilections. It is men who deny Faith or future responsibility, that treat the helpless with contempt and lead arrogant selfish lives,

6282 The Charity or Love which feeds the indigent at the expense of Self is a noble form of virtue, which is beyond the reach of men who are so callous as even to discourage or furbid or look down upon the virtue of charity or kindness in others.

6283. True worship does not consist in the mere form of prayer, without the heart and mind being earnestly applied to seek the realisation of the presence of God, and to understand and do His holy Will.

6184. Cl. iv 142: "When they stand up to prayer, they stand without earnestness, to be seen of men, but little do they hold God in remembrance" 6285. Hypocrites make a great show of hollowacts of goodness, devotion, and charity. But they fail signally if you test them by little acts of neighbourly help or charity, the thousand little courtesies and kindnesses of daily life, the supply of needs which cost little but mean much.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CVIII (Kauthar).

This very brief early Meccan Sūra sums up in the single mystic word Kauthar (Abundance) the doctrine of spiritual Riches through devotion and sacrifice. The converse also follows: indulgence in hatred means the cutting off of all hope of this life and the Hereafter.

C. 288.—To the man of God, rich in divine

fevul. 1-3.) Blessings, is granted a Fountain unfailing,

That will quench the spiritual thirst of millions.

Turn, then, in devotion and sacrifice to God,

Nor head the venom of Hatred, which destroys

Its own hopes, alss. of the present and the future!

Sūra CVIII.

Kauthar, or Abundance.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Mercuful.

- 1. Mao thee have We Granted the Fount (of Abundance). 6286
- 2. Therefore to thy Lord Turn in Praver And Sacrifice. 6287
- 3. For he who hateth thee,-He will be cut off (From Future Hope).

إِنَّ شَانِئكَ هُوَالْأَبْنَرُ

6286. Kauthar: the heavenly Fountam of unbounded grace and knowledge, mercy and gnodness, truth and wisdom, spiritual power and insight, which was granted to the holy Prophet, the man of God, and in some degree or other, to all men and women who are source devotees of God. That Fountain quenches the highest spiritual thirst of man: it confers overflowing benefits of all kinds. Cf. ii. 269: "And he to whom wisdom is granted receiveth indeed a benefit overflowing." Such a person wants for nothing: worldly pomp and wealth are as dust beneath his feet.

6287. He who grants these blessings is God, and to God alone must we turn in adoration and thanksgiving, and in sacrifice Natr-sacrifice; in a restricted ritual sense, the sacrifice of camela: see n. 2813 to xxii, 26. But the ritual is a mere Symbol Behind it is a deep spiritual meaning; the meat slaughtered feeds the poor, and the slaughter is a symbol of the self-sacrifice in our hearts. "It is not their meat nor their blood, that reaches God; it is your piety that reaches Him" (xxii. 37).

6288. Hatred and spite are not constructive contributions to the work of this world, but its opposites. Abu Jahl and his Pagan confederates vented their personal spite and venom against the holy Prophet by faunting him with the loss of his two infant sons by Khadija, but where were these venomous detractors a few years afterwards, when the divine Light shone more brilliantly than ever? It, was these that were cut off from all future hope, in this world and the next.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SÜRA CIX (Kafirum).

This is another early Meccan Sūra. It defines the right attitude to those who reject Faith: in malters of Truth we can make no compromise, but there is no need to persecute or abuse anyone for his faith or belief.

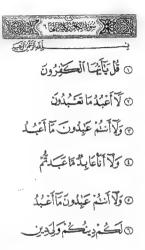

C. 289.—The man of Faith holds fast to his faith, fcir. 1-6) Because he knows it is true. The man Of the world, rejecting Faith, clings hard To worldly interests. Let him mind His worldly interests, but let him not Force his interests on men sincere And true, by favour, force, or fraud.

- 4. And I will not worship That which ye have been Wont to worship.
- Nor will ye worship That which I worship.
- 6. To you be your Way, And to me mine. 6391

6289. Faith is a matter of personal conviction, and does not depend on worldly motives, Worship should depend on pure and sincere Faith, but often does not : for motives of worldly gain. ancestral custom, social conventions or imitative instincts, or a lethargic instinct to shrink from enquiring into the real significance of solemn acts and the motives behind them, reduce a great deal of the world's worship to sin, selfishness, or futility. Symbolic idols may themselves be merely instruments for safeguarding the privileges of a selfish priestly class, or the ambitions, greed, or lust of private individuals. Hence the insistence of Islam and its Teacher on the pure worship of the One True God. The Prophet firmly resisted all appeals to worldly motives, and stood firm to his Message of eternal Unity,

6290. Verses 2-3 describe the conditions as they were at the time when this Sura was revealed, and may be freely paraphrased: 'I am a worshipper of the One True God, the Lord of all, of you as well as of myself; but you on account of your vested interests have not the will to give no your false worship, of idols and self'. Yerses 4-5 describe the psychological reasons: 'I, being a prophet of God, do not and cannot possibly desire to follow your false ancestral ways; and you, as custodians of the false worship, have not the will to give up your ways of worship, which are wrong'. The "will" in the translation represents less the future tense than the will, the desire, the psychological possibility; it tries to reproduce the Arabic noun-agent.

6291. 'I, having been given the Truth, cannot come to your false ways; you, having your vested interests, will not give them up. For your ways the responsibility is yours; I have shown you the Truth. For my ways the responsibility is mine : you have no right to ask me to abandon the Truth. Your persecutions will be vain: the Truth must prevail in the end '. This was the attitude of Faith then; but it is true for all time. Hold fast to Truth, "in scorn of consequence".

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA CX (Navr).

This beautiful Sûra was the last of the Sûras to be revealed as a whole, though the portion of the verse v. 4, "This day have I perfected your religion for you" etc., contains probably the last words of the Qur-an to be revealed.

The date of this Sūra was only a few months before the passing away of the holy Prophet from this world, Rabi I, A.H. 11. The place was either the precincts of Mecca at his Farewell Pilgrimage, Zulhijja, A.H. 10, or Medina after his return from the Farewell Pilgrimage.

   For He is Oft-Returning
   (In Grace and Mercy).

692 The Prophet migrared from Mecca to Medina, a hunted and persecuted man. In Medin all the forces of truth and righteousness rallied round him, and the efforts by the Meccans and their confederates to destroy him and his community recoiled on their own heads. Gradually all the outlying parts of Arabia ranged themselves round his standard, and the bloodless conquest of Mecca was the crown and prize of his patience and constant endeavour. After that, whole tribes and tracts of country gave their adhesion to him collectively, and before his earthly ministry was finished, the soil was prepared for the conquest of the wide world for Islam. What was the lesson to be learnt from this little epitiome of the world's history? Not man's self-gloy, but humility; not power but service; not an appeal to man's selfishness or self-sufficiency, but a realisation of God's Grace and Mercy, and the abundant outpouring of God's Praises in word and conduct.

6293. Every man should humble himself before God, confess his human frailities, and seek. God's grace;—attributing any success that he gets in his work, not to his own merits, but to the goodness and mercy of God. But the Prophet of God had also another duty and privilege,—to pray for grace and forgiveness for his people in case any of them had exulted in their victory or done anything that they should not have done.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SÜRA CX1 (Lahah).

This very early Meccan Sūra, though it referred in the first instance to a particular incident in a cruel and relentless persecution, carries the general lesson that cruelty ultimately ruins itself. The man who rages against holy things is burnt up in his own rage. His hands, which are the instruments of his action, perish, and he perishes himself. No boasted wealth or position will save him. The women, who are made for nobler emotions, may, if they go wrong, feed unholy rage with fiercer fuel—to their own loss. For they may twist the torturing rope round their own neck. It is a common experience that people perish by the very means by which they seek to destroy others.

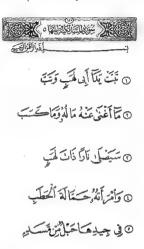

C. 291.-The Chosen One of God, in his earnest (cxi. 1-5.) Desire to proclaim the Message, gathered His kin together to hear and judge With open minds between error and truth. Behold, the fiery " Father of Flame " Blazed up with foul abuse and curses, And said to the holy one : " Perish thou ! " With his hands he took stones and cast them At the holy one's head. Purse-proud he headed Relentless persecution. His wife Laid snares, tied thorns with twisted ropes Of prickly palm-leaf fibre, and strewed them In the holy one's path on darkest nights, For cruel sport! But lo! the curses. Insults, spite, harmed not the Innocent. But hit the wrong-doers themselves And branded them with eternal infamy !

Sura CXL

Lahab, or (the Father of) Flame.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- Perish the hands
   Of the Father of Flame! 6256
   Perish he!
- 2. No profit to him From all his wealth, And all his gains!
- Burnt soon will he be In a Fire Of blazing Flame!
- 4. His wife shall carry
  The (crackling) wood —
  As fuel!—5295
- A twisted rope
   Of palm-leaf fibre
   Round her (own) neck!

6294. Abà. Lahab, "Father of Flame", was the nick-name of an uncle of the holy Prophet, from his flery hot temper and his ruddy complexion. He was one of the most inveterate enemies of early Islam. When the holy Prophet called together the Qurash and his own kith and kin to come and listen to his preaching and his warning against the sins of his people, the "Father of Flame" flared up and cursed the holy Prophet, saying "Perdition to the!" According to the English saying, "the causeless curse will not come". His words were fulle, but his power and strength were equally futile. The star of Islam rose higher and higher every day, and its persecutors dwindled in strength and power. Many of the leaders of persecution perished at Badr, and Abb Lahab himself perished a week after Badr, consumed with grief and his own flery passions. Verse 3 was prophetic of his end in this very life, though it also refers to the Hereafter.

6295. AbB Lahab's wife was a woman of equally passionate spite and cruelty against the screed person of the holy Prophet. She used to tie bundles of thoms with ropes of twisted paim-leaf fibre and carry them and strew them about on dark nights in the paths which the Prophet was expected to take, in order to cause him bodily injury. "To carry firewood" may also be symbolical for carrying tales between people to embroil them. This was also one of her vices. But she was laying up for herself another kind of Fire and another kind of Rope, the Fire of Punishment, and the Rope of Slavery to Evil. Thus does Evil prepare its own fate. This is the general tesson of sustained craft and cruel wrong-doing recoiling on the wrong doer's head. See also Introduction to this Stra.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY : SURA CXII (Ikhlan).

This early Meccan Sūra sums up in a few terse words the Unity of the Godhead—often professed, but frequently mixed up in the popular mind with debasing superstitions.

C. 292.—Keep Faith all pure and undefiled.

(caii. 1-4.) There is God, the One and Only;

Eternal, Free of all needs; on Whom
Depend, to Whom go back, all things;

He hath no son nor father nor partner.

There is no person like unto Him.

S. CXII. 1-4.

1806

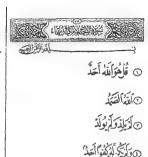

(١١٢) سورة الإخلاص

Stira CXII.

Ikhlas, or Purity (of Faith).

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful,

- 5ay: He is God, 6296
   The One and Only; 6299
- 2. God, the Eternal, Absolute: 6296
- He begetteth not, Nor is He begotten; 6899
- 4. And there is none Like unto Him. 6000

6296. The nature of God is here indicated to us in a few words, such as we can understand. The qualities of God are described in numerous places elsewhere, e.g., in lix. 22-24, hxi. 1, and il. 255. Here we ares pecially taught to avoid the pitfalls into which men and nations have fallen at various times in trying to understand God. The first thing we have to note is that His nature is so sublime, after beyond our limited conceptions, that the best way in which we can realise Him is to feel that He is a Personality. "He", and not a mere abstract conception of philosophy. He is near us; He cares for us; we own our existence to Him. Secondly, He is the One and Only God, the Only One to Whom worship is due; all other things or beings that we can think of are His creatures and in no way comparable to Him. Thirdly, He is Efrensi, without beginning or end, Absolute, not limited by time or place or circumstance, the Reality before which all other things or places are mere pladows or reflections. Fourthly, we must not think of Him as having a son or a father, for that would be to import animal qualities into our conception of Him. Fifthly, He is not like any other person or thing that we know or can imagine: His qualities and nature are unique.

6297. This is to negative the idea of Polytheism, a system in which people believe in gods many and lords many. Such a system is opposed to our truest and profoundest conceptions of life. For Unity in Design, Unity in the fundamental facts of existence, proclaim the Unity of the Mater.

6598, Samad is difficult to translate by one word. I have used two, "Eternal" and "Absolute", The latter implies: (1) that absolute existence can only be predicated of Him; all other existence is temporal or conditional; (2) that He is dependent on no person or things, but all persons or things are dependent on Him, thus negativing the idea of gods and goddesses who ate and drank, wrangled and plotted, depended on the gift sof worshippers, etc.

6299. This is to negative the Christian idea of the godhead, "the Father", "the only-begotten . Son" etc.

6300. This sums up the whole argument and warns us specially against Anthropomorphism, the tendency to conceive of God after our own pattern, an insidious tendency that creeps in at all times and among all peoples.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CXIII (Falag).

This early Meccan S0ra provides the antidote to superstition and fear by teaching us to seek refuge in God from every kind of ill arising from outer nature and from dark and evil plottings and envy on the part of others.

C. 293.—It is God Who brings forth light from darkness, exiii, 15) Life and activity from death, spiritual Enlightenment from ignorance and superstition. Banish fear, and trust His Providence.

No danger, then, from the outer world, No secret plottings from perverted wills, No disturbance of your happiness or good,

Can affect the fortress of your inmost soul.

Süra CXIII.

Falag, or The Dawn.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful

- Say: I seek refuge 6301
  With the Lord of the Dawn, 6902
- 2. From the mischief Of created things; 4300
- 3 From the mischief Of Darkness as it overspreads; 6504
- 4. From the mischief Of those who practise Secret Arts 6305:
- 5. And from the mischief Of the envious one As he practises envy. 6265

6301. In God's created world, there are all kinds of forces and counter-forces, especially those put in motion by heings who have been endowed with some sort of will. The forces of good may be compared to light, and those of evil to darkness. God can cleave the depths of darkness and produce light (vi. 96), and therefore we should cast off fear and take refuge in divine guidance and goodness.

6302. Fillag is the Dawn or Daybreak, the cleaving of darkness and the manifestation of light. This may be understood in various senses: (1) literally, when the darkness of the night is at its worst, rays of light piecre through and produce the dawn; (2) when the darkness of ignorance is at its worst, the light of God pierces through the soul and gives it enlightenment: xxiv. 35; (3) non-existence is darkness, and life and activity may be typized by light. The author and source of all true light is God, and if we seek Him, we are free from ignorance, superstition, fear, and every kind of evil.

6303. See n. 6301 above. Our trust in God is the refuge from every kind of fear and superstition, expensively flow of danger and evil. Three special kinds of mischief are specified in the next three verses, against which our best guard is our trust in God, the Light of the heavens and the earth. They are: (1) physical dangers, typified by darkness, (2) psychical dangers within us, typified by Secret Arts, and (3) psychical dangers from without us, resulting from a perverted will, which seeks to destroy any good that we enjoy.

6304. The darkness of the night, physical darkness, is a good type of physical dangers and difficulties. Many people are afraid of physical darkness, and all are afraid of physical injuries, necidents, and calamities. We should not fear, but having taken reasonable precautions, trust in God.

6305. Those who practise Secret Arts: literally, 'those (feminine) who blow on knots', this having been a favourite form of witchrraft: practised by perverted women. Such secret arts cause psychological terror. They may be what is called black magic, or secret plottings, or the display of false and securetive charms fili. 14), or the spreading of false and secret rumours or slanders to frighten men or deter them from right action. There is fraud in such things, but men are swayed by it. They should east of fear and do their duty.

6306. Malignant envy, translated into action, seeks to destroy the harpiness or the material or spiritual good enjoyed by other people. The best guard against it is trust in God with purity of heart.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY: SURA CXIV (Nas).

This early Meccan Sūra is a pendant to the last Sūra, and concludes the Holy Qur-an, with an appeal to us to trust in God, rather than man, as our sure shield and protection. It warns us specially against the secret whispers of evil within our own hearts.

C: 294. - Insidious Evil lies in wait

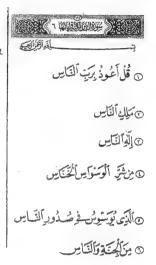

texiv 1.6.) For man, and loves to whisper and withdraw,
Thus testing his will. But man can make
God his sure shield; for God doth care
For him and cherishes him: God is
The heavenly King who gives him laws:
And God is the Goal to which he will Return and be judged. Let man but place
Himself in God's hands, and never can Evil
Touch him in his essential and inner life.

Sûra CXIV.

Nas. or Mankind.

In the name of God, Most Gracious, Most Merciful.

- Say: I seek refuge sky
  With the Lord
  And Cherisher of Mankind, 6308
- 2. The King (or Ruler) Of Mankind.
- 3. The God (or Judge) Of Mankind,—
- 4. From the mischief
  Of the Whisperer (Of Evil), who withdraws
  (After his whisper),—
- 5. (The same) who whispers Into the hearts of Mankind,—
- Among Jinns And among Men.<sup>6340</sup>

6307. The previous Sūra pointed to the necessity of seeking God's protection against external factors which might affect an individual. Here the need of protection from internal factors, mankind being viewed as a whole, is pointed out. For this reason the threefold relation in which man stands to God is mentioned, as explained in the next note.

6308, Man's relation to God may be viewed in three aspects: (I) God is his Lord, Maker, and Cherisher; God sustains him and cares for him; He provides him with all the means for his growth and development, and for his protection against evil; (2) God is his king or ruler; more than any earthly king, God has authority to guide man's conduct, and lead him to ways which will make for his welfare; and He has given him laws; and (3) God is He to Whom mankind must return, to give an account of all their deeds in this life (ii. 156); God will be the Judge; He is the goal of the Hereafter, and the only Being entitled to man's worship at any time. From all these aspects man could and should seek God's protection against evil.

6399. Evil instinuates itself in all sorts of Insidious ways from within so as to sap man's will, which was given to man by God. This power of evil may be Satan or his host of evil ones, or evil men or the evil inclinations within man's own will: for there are "evil ones among men and Jinus, inspiring each other with flowery discourses by way of deception" (vi. 112). They secretly whisper evil and then withdraw, to make their net the more subtle and alluring.

6310. This last clause amplifies the description of the sources from which the whisper of evil may emanate: they may be men whom you may see or invisible spirits of evil working within. See last note. So long as we put ourselves in God's protection, and trust in God, evil cannot really touch us to our essential and inner life.

CONCLUSION

- C. 295.—Thus spake, inspired, our holy Prophet,
  Muhammad, on whom we invoke God's blessings
  For ever and ever;—we who are heirs
  To his teaching, his exemplary life,
  And the golden thread which he inwove
  Into the web of human history.
  In pious retreats he prayed; much thought
  He gave to Life's most obstinate tangles;
  'Gainst odds he strove with might and main;
  Wisely he led; gently he counselled;
  And firmly he subduéd Evil.
- C. 296.-Mantle-clad, 6311 he solved the most baffling Mysteries. His soul would scale The heights of Heaven, yet showered its love On the weak and lowly of this earth. Like a cloud that catches the glory of the Sun. He threw his protecting shade on all. The widow's cry, and the orphan's, found An answer in his heart, as did The cry of Penury and Need. He searched out those who felt no need. Being by pride or ignorance blinded. And he fulfilled their real wants. His last great charge summed up the rule Of spiritual life in linking Faith With one universal Brotherhood. Ah ! ne'er shall we see such life again !
- C. 297.—But his clarion voice still speaks his message.
  His love and wisdom still pour forth
  Without stint the inexhaustible Tressures
  Of God, for whosee'er will bring
  A purified heart to receive them.
  And ne'er did the world, impoverished
  By its own wayward lusts and greed,
  Need those Treasures more than now!

<sup>6311.</sup> An epithet of mystic meaning, applied to the Prophet in the Qur-an. See txxiv. 1, n. 5778. I have in my mind a reminiscence of an Urdu Na't, or Song in praise of the holy Prophet.

- C. 398.-There's still with us much sorrow and sin, Injustice, oppression, wrong, and hate. Still does Arrogance deaden Conscience, Rob struggling souls of e'en the crumbs Of Pity, and make, of loathsome flesh And crumbling dust, fair-seemisk Idols For worship. Still does Ignorance blow A mighty Horn and try to shame True Wisdom. Still do men drive Slaves .--Protesting smoothly the end of Slavery ! Still does Greed devour the substance Of helpless ones within her power. Nav. more .- the fine Individual Voice Is smothered in the raucous din Of Groups and Crowds that madly shout What they call Slogans New,-Old Falsehoods long discredited
- C. 299.—What can we do to nake God's Light
  Shine forth through the Darkness around us?
  We must first let it shine in our own true Selves
  With that Light in the niche of our inmost hearts
  We can walk with steps both firm and sure:
  We can humbly visit the comfortless
  And guide their steps. Not we, but the Light
  Will guide! But oh! the joy of being found
  Worthy to bear the Torch, and to say
  To our brethere: "I too was in Darkness,
  Comfortless, and behold, I have found
  Comfort and lov in the Grace Divine!"
- C. 300.—Thus should we pay the dues of Brotherhood,—
  By walking humbly, side by side,
  In the Ways of the Lord,
  With mutual aid and comfort,
  And heartfelt prayer,
  Backed by action,
  That God's good Purpose
  May be accomplished
  In us all together ?

L'ENVOL

Cowper wrote: "Oars alone can ne'er prevail To reach the distant coast; The breath of heaven must swell the sail, Or all the toil is lost." I praise and glorify the name of God that He has enabled His humble servant to complete in manuscript the work of Interpretation at which he has systematically and unceasingly laboured for the last three years. My manuscript was completed in Lahore on the fourth of April 1937, my sixty-fifth birthday according to the solar calendar, My inner history during these three years has been one of joyful and concentrated exploration, undisturbed by the storms that vexed my outer life. I had not imagined that so much human jealousy, misunderstanding, and painful misrepresentation should pursue one who seeks no worldly gain and pretends to no dogmatic authority. But I have been much consoled by numerous appreciative letters from distant readers. I thank them and wish them to feel that they and I are fellowriders (Arabice, Zamil) on a steed of research in a field that is unlimited in scope and sublime compared to all ordinary knowledge. Such relationship is closer in spirit than ties of blood, or country, or any other joint enterprise whatsoever.

The printer and publisher hope now to bring out the whole completed volumes within two months. I have appended a short Index, which yet is fuller than is to be found in most Quranic Translations. A complete analytical Index, covering the text, notes, and commentary, such as I contemplated in my Preface, will take time to prepare, and will, if there is a demand, be issued as a separate volume at some future time.

And so I take leave of thee, Gentle Reader, and pray for thy spiritual advancement, as I wish thee to pray for mine.

والمسنة مصدرين للأحكام والتشريعات. ثم يختلف إمامان من أنمة الإجباد في تحقيق إحدى المسائل الفرعية أو قاضيان في فصل إحدى الدعارى . ولا يجمل أحده سا المسألة التي اختلف فيها أو الرأي الذي يواء عماداً للدين ، ولا يعتبر الذي يخالف في ذلك خارجاً عن دائرة الدين، بل كلاهما بتمبسع رأيه بما عنده من الدلائل والمراجع إلى أقمى ما يستطيسع ثم يتركه لمرأي المام إن كان رأيه يتملق بجساطه، والقضاء العالي في البلاد إن كان الموضوع يرجع إلى التحكيم ، وانظام الجساعة الإسلامية إن كانت القضية قضية اجتاعية ، فيقبل

وفي الصورة الأخرى: يجري الحلاف حتى في أسس الدين، أو يختار عالم أو متصوف أو مفتت أو بجنار عالم أو متصوف أو مفتت أو جدل أو يقدل الدين الأساسية، أم يحمله بتأويلات بعدة من المسائل الأساسية للدين، ويحسسكم على كل من يخالف في ذلك بخروجه عن دائرة الإسلام، ويشكل من أنصاره عصبة ويقول: إن هذه أمة مسلمة أصية ومن شدة عنها شدة أمة مسلمة أصدة عنها شدة إلى المنار، وينادي صارخا : « عليك الإنضام إلى هذه العصبة إن كنت مسلم والا فلست عسلم » .

والقرآن حينا يدم الإختلاف والتكتل والطائفية والمصيبة يسنم الصورة الثانية . أما الحلاف في الصورة الأولى فنجد له أمثاة عديدة حتى في عهد الذي يتخلق ، وأن منظلة لم يقر منظم المستخد المستخد المشاه عديدة حتى في عهد الذي منظم ، وأن منظم لم يقر منظم و التتحكي والتامل والتحقيق والنحري والتحسس والفهم والفقه في كيان الجماعة الإسلامية . وكان يدلل على أن أصحاب الرأي والكفاءة في الجماعة يولون اهمامهم الكبير للدين والتحسس ماء كم المستخد وأن الجامهم الكبير للدين المنامهم ، وأن كفاداتهم لا تتملس حاولاً لمسائل الحياة من خارج الدين بل تتملسها في على مبادى الدين لمي تعلسها في على مبادى الدين لمي تحافظ على وحديها ، ثم إعطاء أهل العلم وقادة الرأي حريتهم في الإجتهاد والإستنباط والتحقيق في حدود سليمة لكي توفر لنفسها فرص التطور وجوانب التقييدة .

حول الخلاف في تفسير القرآن :

وهنا سؤال آخر يخالج أذهان الناس: القرآن أنحى باللانمة على الذين اختلفوا بعد أن جساءهم الهدى من الله تمالى ، و وقد وقوا في الدين , هذا في جانب ، و في الجانب الآخر قوجا خطفات في تفسير أحكام القرآن و تأويلها لا بين المتأخرين فحسب ، بل بين التابعين ومن تبمهم حتى بسسين الصحابة أنفسهم ، إلى درجة أنك لا تجد آية من آبات القرآن اتفق المسمرون على قول و احسب في تفسيرها ، أليس هؤلاء الناس بستحقون نفس اللوم الذي ورد في القرآن ؟ إذا كان الجواب لا ، فأي اختلاف وأي فرقة تلك التي ينكرها القرآن وبنجى باللانة على أصحابها ؟

هذه قضية متشمة كثيرة الجوانب لا يجيدر بنا في هذا المقام أن نتناو لها بالبحث المسط، وحكم لما يساور ذهن عامة الناس من التمقيد يكفي الإشارة إلى أن القرآن لا يمنع الحلاف الغزيه المنشأء الذي يعتم بين القائمين على تفسير الأحكام والقوانين، بناء على دراساتهم الجديثة المخلصة، بينا هم يلتقون فيا يتملق بنظام الجماعة الإسلامية ، أحسا الحلاف الذي يلمه القرآن فهو الذي نشأ من نفوس ذات هوى وعقول الإسلامية ، وانتهى بسب المطاف إلى التكتل والطائفية المعقوتة والغزاع الداخلي ، وهذان أما الحلاف لا يتجانسان في أصلها ولا يتشابهان في نتائجها فكيف نحكم عليها بحكم واحد . أما الحلاف من النوع الأول فهو جوهر الرقي والتطور وهصدر الحياة ونضارتها ، ولا يسد من أن يرجد في كل مجتمع مكون من أهسل الرأي والفكر ، ووجوده دلي الحيساة والحيوية ، ولا يخسب منه إلا بحسامة المقل ووفرة الذكاء ، بل هم تماثيل خشيبة ودمى لا حياة فيها . وأما الخلاف من الذوع الثاني فيمم جميع أمل الأرض أنسه ما ظهر في كتلة بشرية إلا ومرقها شر محزق وحطمها أشاع تحطم ، فظهوره من أمارات المرض لا من بشائر الصحة ، ولم تكسب أمة من الأمم منه إلا نتائج وخطه وعواقب مؤلة .

ويتجلى ما بين هذين النوعين من الخلاف من فروق في الصورتين التاليتين : في الصورة الأولى: 'يجمع جميم الناس على طاعة الله ورسوله' ويعتقدون في الكتاب فهل من دارس للقرآن يدرسه واضعاً أمام عينيه الخصائص المشار إليهاء ثم يستطيح أن يحسدد لنا مآخذ ببني عليها ظنه في كون النظام الممروض في كتاب الله نظاماً وقتاً وقوماً ؟!

القرآف كتاب مبادىء عامة :

ومن الدارسين لهذا الكتناب من قد ألقي في جمعه كذلك أن هذا الكتاب عبارة عن و مرشدات التوجيهات التفصيلية ، و و دليل للدستور ، ثم إذا انصرف إلى قراءتــــــ
لا يجد فيه أحكامــــــا وأنظمة تفصيلية عن الإجهاع والمدنية والسياسة والإقتصاد وما إلى ذلك ، بل إن الراجبات الهـــامة كالصلاة والزكاة التي يعبد الكتاب ذكرها وبؤكد عليها بشدة لم يدو"ن لها أحكام تفصيلية ، ومثل هذا الأمر يشوش ذهنه ويدفعه إلى التساؤل :

وكل ما ينشأ هنا من تشويش في ذهن الإنسان مرده أن ينيب عن باله إحدى نواحي الحقيقة ، وهي أن الله إعدى نواحي الحقيقة ، وهي أن الله إيزل الكتاب فقط ، بـل أرسل ممه رسوله أيضا ، وأقول على سبيل التمثيل : إذا كان المشروع المقصود هـو وضع تصمع لبناء وتقديم للناس لينشئوا البناء وقق هـنا المتصمع ، ففي هذه الصورة لا بد لنا من تخطيط مطول برشدة إلى كل جزء من أجزاء البناء ، أما إذا ولي أحـد المهندسين من قبل الحكومة ومغه التوجيهات الممارية العامة ، فإن هذا المهندس وهـا شيّده من النوجيهات ، ومن الخطل _إذن-أن عمر أعيننا عن المهندس وهـا شيّده من البناء ، ثم ننشد تفصيلات الجزئيات في التصميم ونشكو نقصه إن لم تجدها فيه .

و كذلك القرآن ؛ ليس هـو بكتاب الجزئيات ؛ بل هو كتاب المبادى، والقواعد الكلية ؛ ومهمته الحقيقية أن يعرض الأسس الفكرية والحلقية للنظام الإسلامي بوضوح ثم يثبتها تثبينا قوياً بكلا الطريقتين : التدليل المقلي والتحريض الماطفي . أما مـا يتملق بالصورة المعلمة الصياة الإسلامية فإنه لا يرشد الإنسان إليا بوضع قوانينو أنظمة تفصيلية عن كل ناحية من نواحي الحياة ؛ بل إنه حداد الحدود الأساسية لكل شعبه من شعب الحياة ، ونصب ممالم جلية في بعض النواحي تشير إلى خطوط عريضة يجب أن تؤسس عليها هذه النواحي وفق مرضاة الله .

نفس الدلائل والحجج التي جاء بها القرآن؟ ألا يجوز أن نستعمل أساوب القرآن فيما يستدل به على إثبات التوحيد في كل زمان ومكان بعد تعديل يسير ؟

إذا كان الجواب نعم فليس من مبرر للقول بأن دعوة القرآن الخسالدة المالمية دعوة آنية ومحلمية استناداً إلى أنها عرضت على قوم بأعينهم في زمن بعينه ، ومسا من فلسفة أو نظام للعيساة أو مذهب من المذاهب عرضت جميع تفصيلاته من الألف إلى الباء في أسلوب نظري بحض ( Abstract ) ولم تتمثل في أوضاع واقعية أو صور حية .

هذا النوع من التجريد لا يمكن أن يرجد في عمالم النظريات ، وإن افترضنا وجوده فإن النظرية التي تمرض على هذه الصورة من التجريد لا تمدر حميراً على الورق ويستحيل أن تلماب في حياة الناس وتتحول إلى نظام عملي .

ثم إذا أريد تمميم حركة عقائدية وخلقية ومدنية على صعيد عالمي فسلا يازم لذلك أيسداً أن تجمل الدعوة عالمية من البداية ، بل المنبج الصحيح الوحيد لذلك هو أن تنشر الحركة ما تدعو إليه من عقائد ونظريات ومبادى، في البلد الذي نشأت فيه ، وأن تقرها في أذهان أناس يعرف القانون بالحركة لفتهم وطبيعتهم وعاداتهم وتقاليدهم ، وأن تطبقها في الحياة العملية وتقيم عليها نظاماً موفقاً للحياة ثم تعرضه على الدنيا كنموذج بحمدًى به .

وبهذا الطريق وحده لتنفت إليهسسا الأسم الأخرى ويستبق إليها أصحاب العقل الراجع والرأي السديد من قلك الأسم ليتلفوها ويسموا الترويجا في بلدانهم ، وعلى هسذا لهبود عرض نظام ما للمقيدة والمهج على أمة دون غيرها بالذيء دي بدء وإن استنفذ هذا المرض كل طاقات التدليل والإحتجاج لإقناع تلك الأمة وتثبيتها – ليس دليلا على كون ذلك النظام قوصاً بحضاً .

والحسائص التي تمسير النظام القوسي من النظام العالمي ، والنظام المؤقت من النظام الحالمي ، والنظام المؤقت من النظام والحالم له بحقوق وعيدات خاصة ، وإما أن يدعو إلى تفضيل شعب على غيره ويطالب له بحقوق وعيدات خاصة ، وإما أن يؤمن بمادىء ونظريات لا تستطيع أن تروج وتزدهر في الشعوب الأخرى ، وعلى المكس من ذلك فسيان النظام العالمي يؤمن بالمساواة بين الناس ويعطي المجمع حقوقهم بدرجة متساوية ، وتكون مبادئه عالمية الصبغة ، عالمية الأهداف والمثل، ثم إن النظام الموقع عبداء على قواعد تفقد قابلتها للعمل بمرور الأيام ، بينا النظام الحالمة تعلية المعملة على جميع الطروف المتطورة .

شيء من أسرار اللغة والبلاغة والمعاني والبيان ؛ إلا أنه يستحيل أن يضن القرآن بالكشف عن حوهزه وروحه أمام ذلك « السالك » .

ووفقاً لنفس المسدأ لا يستطيع الإنسان أن يدرك مغزى أحكام القرآن وتعالمه الحلقة وترجيها اله الله والمساقة والمناقة والمدنية ومبادئه ونظمه في عتلف لواحي الحيساة ما دام لا يطبقها في الحياة، ولا يدرك منزاها فرد يعيش في حل منها في حياته الفردية ولا تدركه أمة تسلك جمع مؤسساتها الإجتاعة مسلكها مخالف منهجا .

القرآن كتاب هداية للبشرية كافة ،

وكل رجل شريفا كان أو وضيعاً يعلم أن الترآن أعلن أنه جاء لهداية النوع البشري بأجمه ، ولكن إذا تناوله أحد ليدرسه برى أنه لا يخاطب إلا من وجده من العرب حين نزوله ، وإذا كان يدبر وجه أحياناً إلى كافة الناس ، فإن معظم مسا يقول برجع إلى ما يختص بدوق العرب وحدهم وبيئتهم وحدهم وتاريخهم وتقاليدهم وحدهم ، والإنسار... حين برى ذلك بيداً يتسامل : إن كان الكتاب الذي أنزل لهداية كافة البشر لماذا يعنى عناية كبيرة بعناصر وقتمة ومحلية وقومية ؟ بل يقع بعض الذي يجهون حقيقة الأمر في شك ويقولون : ربما نزل هذا الكتاب لاستصلاح من يعاصره من العرب ثم حمل فسيها بعد ما لا يختمه من دعوة عالمة وهداية لكافة الناس إلى الأبد .

وأقول الذي أقار هـــذا الاعتراض لا لجرد الاعتراض ، بل أراد معرفة الحقيقة :
ينبغي أن يدرس الكتاب ويخط تحت النصوص التي دعا فيها القرآن إلى عقيدة أو فكرة
ر تصور ؟ أو عرض فيها مبدأ في الأخـــلاق أو قاعدة في الحياة المعلية تختص بالعرب
وحدم ، وتنجصر بحكم الزمان والمكان في حدود لا تتعداها !! أحــا بحرد كونه بخاطب
أناسا عاشوا في زمــان بعينه ، ويتناول ما حولهم من الموجودات كواد للاستشهاد يبغي
عليها دلائل التوحيد ، فهذا وحده لا يكفي لأن يحكم بأن دعوته كانت تختص بزمن مون
الأزمان ونداءه كان موجها إلى قطر دون الأقطار ، وبدلاً من ذلك بلبغي أن يتبين مثير
الاعتراض أن الذي جاء به القرآن في رفضه لمقيدة الشرك يصدق على كل فوع من الشرك

ألا يحسن بنا بعد ذلك أن نلجاً في استصلاح عقائد المشركين في كل عصر يعمسر إلى

إن القرآن ليس يحوي نظريات بحردة وأفكار محضة حسق تدرسه جالساً على الأربكة ثم تفهم جميع مطالبه . كما أنه ليس بكتاب يبعث في اللاهوت فتحل جميع أسراره ومكنوناته في الماهد والزوايا . إن مذا الكتاب ؛ كما قلنا في مستهل المقدمة : كتاب دعوة وحركة ، وبمجرد نزوله أخرج رجلا وادعا دمثاً ، سلم الفطرة كريم الشيم وعبا للسكوت ، من زاوية الإنعزال ، وأوقفه في مواجهة إلمالم الذي كان قد انصرفعن الحق ، وجمله يقارع الباطل ويحارب أثمة الكفر وقادة الفسق ورواد الشلال . إن همذا الكتاب انتزع كل روح معيدة وكل نفس زكية من كل بيت وجمها تحت لواء صاحب المدوة . إن هذا الكتاب أخرج غيظ كل فتأن مفسد وجعله يقاتل أنصار الدعوة ليهلك من هلك عن بيئة ويحيى من حيّ عن بيئة .

إن هـــذا الكتاب هو الذي قام بترجيه الحركة الإسلامية الهائلة خـــلال مدة شلاتة وعشر بن سنة اوالتي بدأت عملها من صرخة فرد واحد وانتهت في نهاية المطاف إلى إقامة الحلاقة الإلهية في الأرض. وهذا الكتاب هو الذي ترلى وضع مخططات الحـــدم ومشاريع البناء في كل مرحلة من المراحل وفي كل خطوة من الخطوات خلال الممركة المديدة الشارية بين الحق والساطل.

إذن فكيف يتأتى لك اليوم أن يتجل لك جميع ما يضم هذا الكتاب من أسرار وحقائق بمجرد أن تمر على حروفه وتنطق بكلماته ، وبدرن أن تنزل إلى ميدان الصراع بمسين الدين والكفر ، وتغبر قدميك في معركة الإسلام والجاهلية وبدون أن يصادفك المرور بمنزل من منازل هذا الكفاح .

لا تستطيع أن تفهم مطالب القرآن ومعانيه البعيدة الفور إلا حين تحكيم هذا الكتاب وتبدأ بالدعوة إلى الله وتخطو جميع خطواتك كا يرجهك و كيفا يعلمك. ومن هنا لا بد أن يستقبلك جميع حسا استقبل حامليه من التجارب والحن: تشاهد مكة والحبشة والطائف ، وقواجه المراحل المهتدة من بدر إلى حتين إلى تبوك ، وتتشابك مسع د أبي جبل ، و « أبي لهب » وتلاقي المنافقين واليهود ، وترى وتختبر كذلك كل السناذج الإسانية الأولين إلى المؤلفة قلوبهم ، فهذا سلوك فريد لا ياثله أي فوع من السالك ، وأحمده و السؤك الوتب أن من منازله تطالمك كان ورور من القرآن تحييطك علما بأن هذا هو المهيط الذي نزلت فيه ، وجاءت فيسمه بكذا من التوجيهات والتمالي . وفي ذلك الحين لا يستبعد أن يفيب عن نظر « السالك »

المثل الإنساني الأعلى الذي يحب القرآن ، وما هو الندوذج الإنساني الذي يكرهه ويبغضه. وتحقيقاً لهذا المطلب يسجئل في مذكرته خصال و الإنسان المطلب يسجئل في مذكرته خصال و الإنسان المطلب ، في نظر القرآن في عود ، وخصال و الإنسان المرفوض ، في نظره في عود مماثل وجباً لوجه . كا يحاول أن يم نوف - كمثل آخر - موجبات نجاح الإنسان و صعادته حسب مقياس الفرآن، والأسباب التي يمتبرها مبعث الهلاك والدمار و مدعاة الخسر أن والشقاء . وأصح طريقة المرقة هذا الطلب أيضا ، بأبعاده الشامعة و تفاصيله الشاملة ، أن يقيم في مذكرته عمودين بماثلين : أحده الموجبات الحسران ، ويسجئل كل ما يصل إليه في هذا الموضوع . وقباساً على ذلك ينبغي له أن يقيد حسب ما ذكرنا جميع تعاليم القرآن الحكيم في كل مسائلة من مسائل الحياة من المقائد والأخسلاق والحقوق والواجبات ، والإجتاع والمدنية ، والإقتصاد والسباسة ، والتشريع ونظام الجماعة ، والحوب والمهادنة ومسا إلى المكن ، لكي يستبين على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شواح المياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل تتكون كل شعبة من شعب الحياة ، ثم على أي شكل المقائد الإسلامية بعد قوصيد هذه الشعب وتكييفها في الإطار العام ،

منهج دراسة مسألة بعينها:

ثم إذا أراد الإنسان أن يتبين وجهة نظر القرآن في مسألة من مسائل إلمياة فيستحسن له أن يطالع ما كتب فيها قديماً وحديثاً بكل إممان ، ويحدد بوضوح ما فحذه المسألة من نواح أساسية ونقاط رئيسية ، ويتمرّف كذلك ما هو مبلغ تفكير الإنسان ومدى مساوص إليه في هذه المسألة عبر التاريخ ، وما هي جوانبها التي تتطلب حلوا ، وها هي النقطة التي لم يستطم التفكير الإنساني تخطيها حق اليوم . وإذا حقق ذلك ، فله أن يدرس القرآن واضعاً أمام عينيه الجوانب التي تتطلب الحلول في هذه المسألة . وبما جرّبته أن الإنسان إذا درس القرآن باحثاً في مسألة من المسأل على نحو ما ذكرت مخانه يفاجاً بالرمود على أسئلته في آيات قد قرأها عشرات المرات من قبل ولم يخطر بباله أن تلك الآيات تمكن فها هذه الردود .

شروط أساسية لدارس القرآن :

ومهما يتخذ الإنسان من التدابير ويستخدم من الوسائل لفهم الفرآن فإنه لا يصل إلى جوهر الفرآن وُروحه كما ينبغي ٬ ما دام هو لا يعمل وقق ما جاء به القرآن . ينلي ذهنه ما أمكن من جميع ما استقر" فيه من قبل من التصورات والنظريات ؛ ربطهره من سائر ما يكنه من الرغيب ته الموالية أو المناوثة ، ثم ينكب" على دراسته بقلب مفتوح وأذن واعدة وقصد تزيه لفهه . أسبا الذين يدرسونه واضعين طائفة من التصورات في أذهانهم مقدما فما يقرؤون بين دفتيه إلا تصوراتهم أنفسهم ، ولا يجدون شيئاً من رائحة القرآن. ولا يصلح هسنذا المنهج لدراسة أي كتاب من الكتب ، فكيف بالقرآن الذي لا يفتح كنوز معانيه أبداً للذين يدرسونه باتباع مثل هذا المنهج .

منهج الدراسة التفسيلية الكاملة :

ثم إن الذي لا ريد من القرآن إلا معرفة إجالية فعسى أن يكفيه دراسته مسرة أو مرتين . أمــا الذي يريد أن يفوص في أعماقه ، ويدرك أسراره فلا بكفيه أن بدرسه أربسم أو خمس مرات ، وعلمه أن يفزع إليه تكسيراراً ومراراً ، ويُقبل على دراسته إنسالًا لا مَلَل فيه ولا كَلُل ؛ وأن بدرسه كل مرة من وجهة جديدة ؛ وأن يأخذ معه - كطالب من الطلبة _ الأدوات اللازمة من الدفاتر والقلم ليسجل مسايمن له من نقاط هامة خلال الدراسة. والذين يرغبون في دراسته على نهج قويم كما قلمنا؛ عليهم أن يستوعبوا قراءته في ختبتين لمجرَّد أن يلم أمامهم نظامه للمقيدة ومنهجه العام الذي يفاضل الدنيا القرآن العامة ويتبينوا التصورات الأصلية التي يقدامها للناس ومعالم نظام الحياة التي ببينها على أساس هذه التصورات . وفي خلال هذه الرحلة المتمة إذا خطر في ذهنهم سؤال فلا مستعجاون الست في شأنه بل يقيَّدونه في مذكرة ، ويواصلون مطالعتهم ملتزمين جانب الصبر والجدُّ ؛ فهم سوف يعثرون غالبًا على الجواب فيما يقبل من الصفحات . وإذا عثروا الأولمة يستأنفون دراسته كجولة ثانية ويكون الصبر حليفهم والتأنى دثارهم . وأقول بناء على تجاربي؛ لا يكون من سؤال إلا وتجدون جوابه ، وما من معضلة إلا وتبلغون حلتها في دراستكم العميقة الثانية . اللهم إلا في الندرة النادرة التي تتقاصر عنها أفهام الرجال .

 جماعة مزالصحابة مجمعها في مصحف واحد، وكتب منه نسيخا كثيرة وز عت علىالأمصار، وبعث مع كل مصحف من برشد الناس إلى قراءاته .

إن المصحف الذي يين أيدينا اليوم هو على طبئي رسم مصحف الصديق الذي نسخ منه عثان - رضي الله عنه - نسخا عديدة تحت إشرافه وقر أن منها في المدن والأمصار. ولا تزال هذه النسخ المهمد عليها محفوظة بعديد من الأماكن في الدنيا . والذي يشك في د تمام حفظ ، الذكر الحكيم فسله أن يشتري نسخة من المصحف الكريم من مكتبة في إفريقية الغربية ويقابله بسياحه مشافية من أحد الحفاظ في ( جاوا ) ، ثم يقابله بسيا في المكتبات الكبيرة في العالم من المصاحف الأوية التي "كتبت في مختلف القرون منذ عهسد المكتبات الكبيرة في العالم من المصاحف الأوية التي "كتبت في مختلف القرون منذ عهسد عنان - وضي الله عنه - إلى يومنا هذا. فإذا وجد فيه فرقاً ولو في كلة من المكامات أو في حركة من الحراث فمن واجبه أن يطلع على الدنيا بهذاه الاكتبات التاريخي الدهش».

والمرتاب أن برتاب في كون القرآن منز لأ من الله تعالى إن شاء. أما كون ما بأيدينا اليوم من القرآن هو عين القرآن بنصة وفصة الذي أنزل على مجمد على أو أو الناس فهذه ظاهرة تاريخية لا مجال الشك والإرتياب فيها . لا تجد شيئاً بما توارثته الدنيا في التاريخ البشري الطويل يكون على مساعليه القرآن من الثبوت القطمي الهتوم . ومن يشك في صحيحة فقد يشك أيضاً في ظهرو الإمبراطورية الرومانية على الأرض المعبورة في عصر من عصور التاريخ ، أو في الحكم المنولي في الهند قبل قرون ، أو في وجود شخصية ونابليون، عصور التاريخ ، أو في الحكم المنولية المنافق من أمارات المنافق في ظواهر تاريخية كهذه ليس من خصائص العلم والمعرفة وإنما هو من أمارات الجهالة والفيادة ،

منهج لدراسة القرآن ،

إن الترآن كتاب برد علىمنها النياض عدد لا يحصى من الناس لأجل عدد لا يمصى من الأغراض . لذلك يتعذر علي أن أقدام للدارس مقترحاتي في صدد دراسسة للمرآن تستهدف تحقيق مطالب وأغراض هذا العدد الهائل من الواردين عليه . ولا يجذبي من هذه الكتل النشرية إلا الذين أشم فيهم رائحة الحرص على فيهم هسذا الكتاب ومعرفة مطالبه وتوجيهاته في شؤون الحياة الإنسانية ومسائلها المقدة . فأحيب أن أهرت هؤلاء منهجا للدرامة القرآن عثم أشاطوهم حل المشكلات والمصاعب التي يواجبها كل دارس بصفة عامة . لأبي بكر – رضي الله عنه – الذي تودد بادى، ذي بده ، فلم يزل عمر براجعه حتى شرح وكان صدر أبي بكر ، وكانت زيد بن ثابت الأنصاري الذي كان من كتاب الذي يمالية وكان يكتب الذي يمالية وكان يكتب الذي يمالية وكان يكتب الذي يمالية وكان يكتب الرستكال هذا الأمر الحظير هي أن يجمع كل ما تركه الذي يهالية من أجزاء مكتوبة في صحف من الرقاع والجلد ونحوها ، ويؤخذ كذلك ما يرجد عنه أي واحد من الصحابة به حسا كتب من القرآن ، ثم يستمان بحفاظ الصحابة في ضبط الحفوظ ، وبناء على شهادة إجاعية من هسنده الوسائل الثلاث وبعد التثبت من عدم وجود أية غلطة في المكتوب والمقروء تسجل لفظة لفظة من القرآن ، وبوجب هنده الطريقة الحكة كتبت نسخة من القرآن في الصحف ، وأودعت عنسد أم المؤمنين حفصة – رضي الله عنها – التي كانت تحفظ القرآن كل في صدرها ، وأذن لعامة المسلمين أن ينسخوا منها أو يقابلوا ما عندهم من المكتوب عليها .

وكانت لفات القبائل في الجسريرة المربية تختلف بعضها عن بعض في القراءات واللجات ثأن اختلافها باختلاف المدن والمديريات في بلادنا ( باكستان ) مع أن لساب جميها واحسد ، أي الاردو أو البنجابي أو البنغاني . والقرآن كان قد نزل بلغة قريش ، ولكن أحيز في أول الأمر القبائل الأخرى أن يقرأ أهل كل قبيلة القرآن بلغتهم وبحسا جرت عليه عاديمسم ، لأن ذلك لا يؤدي إلى اختلاف معان موجبة لاختلاف أحكامه ، بل بذلك يسهل عليهم التلاوة وتلمين فيم العبارة . ولمّا اتسع نطاق الفتوح الإسلامية ، وتمدري العرب صحاريهم القاحلة ، وفتحوا الأقطار الشاسمة من المسام ، ودخلت الأمم الأخرى في دين الله ، واختلط العرب بالمجم ، وتسائرت بذلك الاختلاط لفتهم ، خشي الناس حسدوث أنواع من الفتن او استمر الناس على تلاوة القرآن بلهجاتهم وعاداتهم التي درجوا عليها ، كان يسمع أحدم غيره يقرأ كتاب الله بلغة لم يألفها هـ و فيظنت يحرف القرآن متمداً ، فيكف و وتقتيل معه . أو يتدريج اختلاف الألفاظ والثلاوة إلى فتح باب الشريف والتصحيف أو أن تفسد لفة بعض العرب باختلاطهم معالمهم فيصرفون القرآن على لغتهم الفاسة ويشر هون بديسم كلامه ورونق قواءته .

وحرصاً على إبعاد المسلمين عن تلك الفتن قر"ر عثان – رضي الله عنه – على مشورة من أصحاب الرسول ﷺ ، أن تنسخ المساحف من الصحف المتمد عليها والسق ضبطت في عهد أبي بكر – رضي الله عنه ب ، وتفسير أق في البلاد الإسلامية ويمنع من التداول ما سواه من القرآن المكتوب بقراءة أخرى أو لهجة مخالفة . ففعل عثان ذلك وعهد إلى جبوبيل ينصيمه ، وكان من عادته بياني أنه كما نزلت سورة من سور القرآن كان يدعسو بمض كتابه وكان يأمر بكتابتها ويأمر بوضمها عقب سورة كذا وقبل سورة كذا و كذلك حين بنزل شيء من القرآن و أي آية أو بضع آيات و رام برد جمل سورة مستقلة أمسر الذي يناني بيناني بيناني بيناني بيناني بيناني بيناني بيناني الصادات وغيرها من المناسبات ، ووقق هذا اللترتيب نفسه كان أصحابه الكرام بستظهرون القرآن ويتدارسونه ، ولهذا كان من الثابت تاريخيا أن الدوم الذي أخل لفيسه كن أعمله قبله ألكرام ورئيس الذي أنزل القرآن على قلبه رئيب ، ومرتبه هو الذي أنزله ، والذي أنزل القرآن على قلبه .

تدوين القرآن ،

وبما أن الصاوات كنبت على المسلمين منذ البداية (١) وتعينت قراءة مسا يستر من الفران فيهسا ، فذلك بدأت في المسلمين حركة حفظه في الصدور ، مقرونة بنزوله على صاحب الوحي عليه الصلاة والسلام ، وكلما كان ينزل منه شيء كانوا يتلقونه ويستظهرونه عن ظهر غيب ، ولم ينحصر حفظه بكتابته في المسب وقطع الأدم و كسر الأكتاف (١٦) التي يكتب فيها كتاب الذي يكان يرتسم كذلك بجمود نزوله على العشر ات فالمنات ثم الآلاف فالملابين من الصدور ، ومن هنا ما كان لباطل أن يائيه من بين يديه ولا من خلفه ليفير فيه ولو كلمة .

ولما ظهرت فتنة الردة بعد وفاة النبي بطالة قـام الصحابة رضوان الله عليهم بمارك دامية لقممها وقطع دايرها ، فاستشهد فيها جماعة كبيرة من قراء الصحابة الذين كانوا محفظون القرآن كلت ، الأمر الذي بعث عمر رضي الله عنه على القول بأنه لا ينبغي الإعتاد على صورة واحدة في باب المحافظة على الذكر الحكيم ، بل يجب الإمتام بحقظه في قراطيس الصحف مم حفظه في طيات الصدور ، فذكر حمر - رضي الله عنه - ضرورة هذا الأمر

وكو تواأمــة مستقة ؟ أصبحوا مسؤولين عن متابعة الدعوة ومواصلة الحركة التي سلمها الرسمة من يدرك هؤلاء الرسمة على المراد التي ملها المرسمة على المراد التي يورك مؤلاء المؤمنون ؟ قبل غــــيرهم ؟ واجباتهم ومناهج حياتهم ؟ وأن يعرفوا الفتن والأمراض التي التيت بها أمم الأثنياء فيا مضى ؟ قبل أن يتقدموا بهداية الله إلى البشرية التي ترزح تحت نير الضلال والفواية والإنحواف .

وهناك حقيقة أخرى تتكشف الإنسان إذا ما 'وفتى إلى معرفة أسلوب القرآن ،
وهي أن وضع الآيات المتجانسة في المباحث في موضع واحد لا يرافقه طبيعة هذا الكتنب،
بل من عين ما تقتضيه طبيعته هو أن يجسب القارى، أثناء دراسته القرآن الآيات المكية
- أي التي نزلت في مكة - تتخللها الآيات المدنية - التي نزلت في المدينة - والمواعظ الإبتدائية تحف بها الوصايا النهائية وتعاليم المرحلة الحتامية تواكبها تعاليم المرحلة الإبتدائية ،
وهكذا بفح أمسام عينيه منظر الإسلام الكامل وتخطيطه الشامل مشرقاً متلألئاً بصفة
مستمرة ، ولا يبرز له من واجهة بعينها دون غيرها .

لوجع القرآن على الترتيب الذي نزل عليه لمسيا كان هذا اللارتيب بجدياً ومفهوما المصور التي تلت عهد النبوة ، بدون أن يضاف إلى القرآن تاريخ نزوله و تاريخ الفلروف الني نزل فيها كل جسره من أجزائه كملحق القرآن ، الأمر الذي كان ينافي الغرض الذي شاء الله لأجله أن يدو "ن كلامه و مفقط في مصحف ؛ والله سبعانه وتمالى كان يريد أست يجمع كلامه خالصاً نقياً لا يشوبه شائبة من الزيادات ولا يمازجيه كلام غيره ، "و تسب على ما هو عليه من الإعجاز والإعجاز معنى وصورة ، لتتيسر قراءته لكل فرد من الأقراد : السغير والكري ، في كل زمان ومكان ، في كل حال وواقع ، وليدرك جميع الناس على الأقل سمها اختلفت درجات عقولهم — ماذا يريد الله منهم وماذا لا يريده منهم ، ومن الواضح أن وأضيف إلى القرآن ، تاريخه المطرال وجملت تلاوته أمراً لازما مع تلاوة القرآن الضاع منذا المغرض ،

و مما لا يختلف فيـــه اثنان أن الذين يمترضون على الترتيب الحَالي القرآن يظنون عن سوء فهم أن هذا الكتناب قد أنزل إلى طلبة علم التاريخ وعلم الإجتاع .

و فيما يتعلق بغرتيب الدرآن مجب أن يعرف الدارس كذلك أن الغرتيب الحملي ما قام به الذين جــــاءوا بعد النبي ﷺ ، بل هــــو توقيفي. وضعه النبي ﷺ نفسيه بتوقيف من المرحلة التي هي فيها ولو استفرقت الشهور أو السنين ، وقد تنضجر الطبائع وتسأم الأذن لو بقيت المبارة بعينها تتكرر ، وفي صباغة واحدة تتردد ، لذلك فإن المباحث التي تخص مرحلة من المراحة بعينها تتكرر ، وفي صباغة واحدة تتردد ، لذلك فإن المباحث التي تخص مرحة بن المراحة من المراحة في كل مرحة بن الخاط متكرة وأساليب ناضرة ومحاسن بيانية غضة طرية ، تشتهها الأنفس وتتلقفها القلاب ، وبذلك تصبح كل مرحلة من المراحل متينة القواعد ، محكة الدعاتم ، مستقيمة البناء . ويحب فوق ذلك أن لا يعزب عن البال تلك المهادى، الماصة والقواعد التي تعتمد عليها الدعوة في كل حين من الأحيان وفي كل وضع من الأوضاع منسند الخطوة مها الأولى حتى تأمها وكالها ، بل لا بد من أن تلت إلهها الأنظار في جميع مواحل الدعوة مها كان الحال و وهذا هو السر في شمول جميغ سور القرآن على موضوعات ثابتة ، ولكن في ألهانط متحددة وأساوب متنوع .

فمُسلاك ما يتعلق بعقيدة التوحيد ، وصفات الله ، والآخرة ومسؤوليتها وعذابها و وأبها ، والرخرة ومسؤوليتها وعذابها و وأبها ، والرسالة والإيمان بالكتاب ، وتقوى الله والصبر ، والمصابرة ، والتوكل وما إلى ذلك من حقائق أساسية فإنك لترى القرآن بعيد ذكرها وبردد بيانهسا في جميع سوره المكنة والمدنية ، لأن الحركة لا تستطيع الإخاص عنها أو التساهل فيها في أية مرحلة من مراحلها . ولو كانت هسفه المقائد الأساسية وهنت في نفوس المؤمنين لما تقدمت حركة الإسلام بروحها الصحيحة وطبيعتها النفاة .

كيف رتبت أيات القرآن ،

و إذا سبوت تُحور ما سبق قوله لتوصلت إلى جواب مقدّم على ما يدور في خلاك من من سؤال : لماذا لم يجمع النبي ﷺ القرآن حسب ترتيب نزوله عليه ؟

إن القرآن كان ينزل وفق اللزتيب الذي سارت عليه الدحوة منذ بدئها حق بلغت أوج الكمال ، ويتضح من ذلك أنه لم يكن من الحكة في شيء أن مختسار لتدوين الأجزاء المنزلة نفس اللزتيب الذي كان ملتئماً مع سير الدخوة وتطورها ، بل الأمر كان بحاجة إلى ترتيب جديد يكون أكثر انسجاماً وأشد تجانساً وأدق ارتباطاً مسم الواقع الآني بعد اكتال الدعوة وتسام النعمة ، لأن الخاطين الأولين لهذه اللحوة في بداية أمرها كانوا من يجهدن الإسلام بالكلية ، فلذلك غشام الوسي بأوليات التعلم وبديهات الإعان، ثم لمسا

القرآن كتاب دعوة ومنهج حركة :

ويتضح بميا ذكرنا آنفأ أن القرآن كان نزوله مقترنا بالدعوة وتطورها وسعرها ، فتزلت منه قَطَع غتلفة ؛ نجماً نجماً ؛ وفق حاجات الدعوة المتجددة ومقتضاها الواقعي في كل مراحلياً ومنازلها منذ بدايتها حق اكتالها، وذلك في فنرة استفرقت ثلاثة وعشرين عاماً كاملاً . ومن المدسى إذن أن مثل هـــذا الكتاب يعوزه الترتيب التأليفي من النوع الذي يختاره الطالب في إعداد المحث لأجل الحصول على شهادة الدكتوراه ، كما أن القطم الختلفة الأحجام التي كانت نزلت منسجمة مع تطور الدعوة ، ما كانت تنشر في رسائل وكتبيات ، بـــل كانت تلقى في خطاب من رسول الله ثم تتناقل مشافية وتبلُّخ من فرد لفرد. لذلك ما كانت تصاغ على أساوب التأليف ، بل كانت تعرض في الأساوب الخطابي الذي لا يلسج على منسموال محاضرات الأستاذ في الجامعة ، بل كان يشابه خطبة الداعبة الذي عليه أن يستهدف إثارة المواطف بجانب مناشدته المقول ، وعليه أن يواجه كل نوع من أَنواع العقلمات ؛ وعلمه أن يعمل لمسما تقتضيه دعوته وحركته في ظروف متباينة وأوضاع متضاربة . فمـــن إقرار الدعوة في سويداه القاوب إلى مخاطبة العقول بمختلف النظريات إلى استشارة الفيض من المشاعر ، إلى كسر شوكة المعارضة ، إلى تربية الأتباع وإصلاحهم ؛ إلى نفخ الحماس في نفوسهم ؛ إلى تحويل الأعداء أصدقاء أوفياء ؛ إلى إرغام المنكرين على الإقرار ؛ إلى دحض حجة الجاحدين وقطع دابر نفوذهم الأدبي؛ وما إلى ذلك رأرفق منهج .

ونظراً لكل ذلك؛ فإن الكلمات ( الآيات والسوّر ) التي أنزلها الله على رسوله عليه الله على رسوله عليه الله على يقد في أساوب خطابها على نفس الأساوب الذي يلائم ظروف الله على نفس الأساوب الذي تعيش فيه ؟ ومن هنا لا يحسن بنا أن نطلب منه الأساوب الذي يحسن عاضرات الجامعة ودروسها .

سر التكرار في القرآن :

ومن هنا يتضح وضوح الشمس في رابعة النار ، سر" ترديد بيانات القرآن بكارة ، إذ مما تقتضيه طبيعة الدعوة أن لا تحدّث إلا بما يناسب المرحلة التي تعيش فيها ؛ ومسا دامت تعيش فيهسا لا تتمرض لحديث يخص المراحل المقبلة ، بل تطل تردد حديثها عن دولة مستقة ، وبدأ النصال المسلح من أصحاب الجاهلية القديمة، وبدأت النعوة تواجسه. أمم الأنبياء السالفة — أي الأمة اليهودية والأمة المسيحية — ، كا بدأت تتخلص كذلك من المتافين الذين تسروا إلى الكيان الداخيل للأمسة الإسلامية ، وبعد مقاماة الصراع المنيف والكفاح المديد عشر منوات بلغت الحركة الإسلامية في نهساية المطاف من القوة والسلفان درجة أصبح ممها العرب كلهم خاضعين مستسلين ، واققتحت أمامهما أبواب بث "الدعوة على الصعيد العالمي ، والقيام بحركة إصلاحية عبر الحدود ، وقد اشتملت مذه بها ، ومحقيقاً على عدة مراحل جزئية والمجير الدعوة في كل مرحقة منها حاجات تختص بها ، ومحقيقاً على عدة مراحل جزئية والمجيرة الدعوة في كل مرحقة منها حاجات تختص بها ، ومحقيقاً على عدة مراحل جزئية والماب اللحالات ( الآيات ) ما كان أملوبها يتنوع بتنوع الحاجة ، فروة كان أملوبها أسلوب الخطاب المجليل الرئان المتأجع، يتنوع بنسار علمائيم ، وأخرى أسلوب الأوامر والمرابع الملكية ، وقائنة أملوب دروس المسلم ، وراءة أسلوب تذكير المصلح الناصع ، وجاء فيهما كيف ينشأ المجتمع وتؤسس اللدولة وربي الحداة ، وباي وربية مالم مع المنافين ، وعلى أي لون توطند المعلاقات مع ألمل الكتاب ، وحسادا ليخار من الماقوين ، وعلى أي لون توطند المعافين . مع أمل الكتاب ، وحسادا المخاربين والأقوام المامدين . مع أمل الكتاب ، وحسادا ليخار من الساوك مع الأعداد الحاربين والأقوام المامدين . وكيف تعدأ هذه الجاعة المؤمنة المنظمة نفسها للكتاب عبهة خلافة الله في الأرض .

هذه الكفات أو الآبات كانت تقوم بتوجيه المسلمين وتربيتهم على ما يرام ، وكانت تقوم بتوجيه المسلمين وتربيتهم على ما يرام ، وكانت تقبيهم على ما يطانت المنتهم على المنتهم وانفسهم في التنهم وانفسهم في الانتصار والهزية ، وفي الهنة وتعطيهم دروساً في الأخصائات والسلوك تناسب واقعهم في الانتصار والهزية ، وفي الهنة تصنح منهم جاعة تتوفر فيهم كتاءة ليخلفوا الرسول المنتي بحسن ، ويتابعوا مهمته في الدعوة والإصلاح . هذا في جانب ، وفي الجانب الآخر كانت حسنه ( الآبات ) تخاطب الدعوة والإصلاح . هذا في جانب ، وفي الجانب الآخر كانت حسنه ( الآبات ) تخاطب الذي محرموا من الإيمان من أهل الكتاب والمشركين والكفار والمنافقين ، وتدعوهم إلى المسير وفق حالة كل منهم من الدعوة ، وذلك يوسائل الإنتاع وبالتعويف من وبالقول الذين والمحفظة المسته ، وبالتحويف من عناب الله ، وباستخلاص جوانب العبرة والمطلمة من الأحداث والأوضاع المتضمنة للدروس عائلة الإعذار . وهستذا هو الساتي الماريخي للقرآن المدني .

وكانوا بمرقون قصصها وتاريخها ، ودعوا للاعتبــــار بآثار المؤتفكات التي كانوا بمرون على أنفاضها مصبحين وبمسين أثناء أسفارهم ، وعُرضت عليهم أدلة التوحيد والآخرة المستندة على الآيات التي كانوا بشامدونها في خلق السياوات والآرض واختلاف الليل والنهار ، وكانوا برسم ويشمرون بها في أنفسهم وفي حياتهم في كل آن ، كا بيش لهم بطلان موقف الإشراك بالله والادعاء بالإستقلال المطلق ، وجحود الآخرة والإصرار على اتباع ما وجدوا عليه آباهم ، بدلائل ناصمة تستقر في القلوب وتنفذ إلى الأعماق المعيدة من العقول ، وأزيلت آخر شبه عائفة بأذهانهم عن صحة الدعوة ، وردد" آخــــر اعتراض منهم برد معقول ،

وخلاصة القول أن الجاهلية حوصرت من كل جهة وضيئى عليها خناقها بشكل لم تبتى لها معه أية مكانة في عالم العقل والحصافة والجدية . ثم أفذروا – مع ذلك – بغضب الله وأهوال برم القيامة وعذاب جهتم ، ووشخوا على ما كانوا عليه من رذالة الأخلاق ، ومنهج الحمياة الباطل ، وتقاليد الجاهلية ، ومعاداة الحتى وإبسناء المؤمنين ، وعرضت عليهم المادى، الأساسة للأخسلاق والمدنية التي نشأت عليها حوستنشأ – حضارات صالحة طاهرة في العالم كسبت رضى الله في كل دور من أدوار التاريخ البشرى .

هذه المرحلة نفسها كانت تحتوي على عدة مراحل جزئية ، وفي كل من هذه المراحل ظلت الدعوة تتوسع ويمتد نطاقها ، وبالتابي ظلّ النضال يشتد ، ونار المعارضة تتسمر . وظلت الدعوة تراجبه كل برم شكلا جديداً من المقائد والأفكار وتناضل نوعاً جديداً من الفئات المختلفة في أخلاقها ومواقفها ، ومن ثمّ فان آبات الله كذلك زادت تنوعاً في بحثها وتلوئناً في عرضها ، وهذا هو السياق التاريخي القرآن المكيّ .

الرحلة الثالثة :

مضت على هذه الحركة ثلاثة عشر عاماً تكافح وتجاهد ، وإذا بها تفوز بقر لل هـ في يثرب ( المدينة النورة ) ودعب أتباعها من أنحاء جزيرة العرب إلى هـ ذا المدر / لتكوّن بخمه مستقلاً وتستجمع طاقاتها في مركز واحـــد ، فهاجر النبي عليه وممظم أصحابه الذين انبعوه بإحسان إلى للمينة المنورة ، وبذلك دخلت الدعـــوة. الإسلامية المرحلة المالية :

انقلب الرضع في هــــذه المرحلة رأماً على عقب ؛ فالأمة المسلمة تمكنت من تأسيس

استخدم المعارضون جميع الوسائل والمكايد لقمع هذه الدعوة ؟ قاموا بدعاية كاذبة ؟ وألفوا بدايل من الإنهامات والشبهات والإعتراضات ، وقذفوا الوساوس المنوعة في قلوب الناس ، وحاولوا صد الذي كلوا مجهون أمر النبي عن استاع ما يقوله ، وإنهالوا على الذين المنسوا المنفق ورسوله بألوان من الظلم وأنواع من التنكيل ، وقاطعوم مقاطعة اقتصادية ، ونفسوا عليهم المديش حتى اضطر كثير منهم إلى الهجرة من ديارهم إلى بلاد الحبشة مرتين، وتفسوا عليهم المديشة المدينة المناوشة الشديدة والتي كانت في ازدياد مستمر، بقيت الحركة في انتشار وازدهار ، ولم يمكن بيت من بيوت والتي كانت في ازدياد مستمر، بقيت الحركة في انتشار وازدهار ، ولم يمكن بيت من بيوت أصبح أشقاؤهم وأحقادهم وأبناؤهم وأخواتهم وأزواج أخواتهم يتشمون دين الله ، وليس أصبح أشقاؤهم وأحقادهم وأبناؤهم وأخواتهم وأزواج أخواتهم يشبيله ثم نهضوا يقاتلون ذري قرباهم .

وفي غضون هـذا الصراع العنيف الطويل ، كان الله تعالى ينزل على نبيه بحسب المناسبات واقتضاء الحاجة ، كامات (آيات ) ميناجة في جريانها كالنهر الجاري، وفي قوتها كالفيضان الحائل ، وفي تأثيرها كالنار المشطرمة . وفي هـذه ( الآيات ) أخبر المؤمنون بواجباتهم الإبتدائية ، وبدُّمت فيهـم الوعي الجاعي الحركي ، وعكلتهوا الورع والتقوى ومكارم الأخسلاق وطهارة الساوك ، ولقشوا مناهج تبليغ الدين القيتم وطرق إقامته ، ومُخدوا على مواصلة اللدعوة بوعد غسير مكذوب بالفوز بالجنة التي فيهـا نعيم مقم ، واستحدوا على الجهاد في سبيل الله بصبر واستقامة ومعنوية عالية ، وعبينت قاديهم بشوق والقوف في وجه أعنى عاصفة من المعارضة .

هــــــذا في جانب المؤمنين ، وفي الجانب الآخر أنذر الذين كفروا بالله وتمردوا على رسوله ، وحاربوا دعوته وأعرضوا عن الحق ، بمــا صارت إليه الأمم التي خلت من قبلهم الزمردية من النغم الإلهي في قلوب القوم انطباع السهم في الصدور ، ولتعبل إليها الآذان مستجيبة لترتمها الساحر ، ولتجري الألسن بترديدها لمسا فيها من جمسال الثناسب وحلارة التفسق .

ثم إن هذه الشذور كانت مصطبقة بصبقة الأوضاع الحلية إلى حد كبير ، وإن كان الحديث فيها يدور حول الحقائق الكونية الحالدة ، ولكن الدلائل التي كانت تساق لها ، والشواهد التي كانت تلتقط كلها من والشواهد التي كانت تلتقط كلها من البيئة الجماورة الماأوفة الناس ، قما جاء فيها من التاريخ فهو تاريخهم ، وحسا قص فيها من الأخرداث فهي أحداثهم وتقاليدهم ، وما ذكر فيها من الآثار فهي نما كانوا يشاهدونه بأم أعينهم ، وما رُدّد فيها من القول فهو عن مفاسدهم المقائدية، ومساوئهم الحنائقية ، وعدويهم الإجتاعية ، وذلك لكي تصير هذه الدعوة أوقع في نفوسهم وأقرب إلى أذهانهم .

استفرقت هذه المرحلة الإبتدائية من الدعوة حوالي أربع أو خمس سنوات ٬ وردُّ الفعل الذي ظهر في هذه المرحلة من دعوة النبي ﷺ كان يتجل في ثلاثة أشكال :

١ - آمن جماعة من خيار الناس بهذه الدعوة الكريمة واستمدوا ليكونوا أمسة
 مسلمة

٢ - نهض العدد الكبير من الناس يناوئون هذه الدعوة / إما لجهلهم أو انجرافهم
 وراء الأهواء والأغراض أو ولوعهم بما وجدوا عليه آباءهم .

بدأت هذه الدعوة الجديدة تتمدى حدود مكة وأهلها من قريش وتنتشر في نظاق أوسم نسبياً.

المرحلة الثانية :

ثم بدأت المرحلة الثانية من الدعوة ، وقد نشأ في هذه المرحلة صراع عنيف بسين الحركة الإسلامية وبسين الجاهلية السائدة ، وامتدت سلسلته قرابة ثماني أو تسع منموات ، لا في مكة فحسب أو بين قريش فحسب ، بل كل من كان يريد بقساء الجاهلية الأولى في معظم أقطار جزيرة العرب ، شمَّر عن ساقه وكثَّر عن أنبابه للقضاء على هذه الحركة بما يملك من قوة . بفضّ النظر عن التفاصيل التي لا علاقة لها بالبحث ٬ ولذلك ترى حديثه يدور حــــول « المنعوة » بدون النواء وبكل انزان .

غير أنســه من الصمب على الإنسانُ أن يفهم الأساوب السياني للقرآن وترتيبه وأكثر مباحثه ما دام لا يعرف كيفية نزوله .

مراحل نزول القرآن :

ليس القرآن بكتاب أنزله الله تعالى على محمد ﷺ جلة واحدة ثم أمره بنشره ودعوة الناس إلى ما فيه من منهج خاص للحياة البشرية ، كما أنه ليس بكتاب عرض فيه موضوعه ويحمه الرئيسي على غرار أسلوب التأليف الشائع . ولأجل ذلك لا تجد فيه الترتيب الذي هو من شأن المؤلفات الإنسانية، ولا الأسلوب البياني الذي هو من شأن كتب الدنيا . وهذا الكتاب في حقيقة الأمر من نوع فريد . . .

المرحلة الأولى :

وقصته أن الله تمالى قد اصطفى عبـــداً من عباده في مكة ــ إحدى مدن جزيرة المرب ــ لرسالته ، وأمره أن ببدأ بدعوته في مدينته وفي عشيرته (قريش) ، وقد لقنه التماليم التي لا بد منها الشهروع في هذه المهمة ، وهــذه التماليم الإبتدائية كانت في معظمها تحتوى على ثلاث نواح :

أولاً : تعليم الرسول كيف يعدّ نفسه لتحقيق هــــــذا الأمر الجليل وعلى أي طراز يسمى سعيه .

ثانياً : المعلومات الأولية عن الحق، والرد الإجمالي على ماكان في أذهان الناس الذين يعيشون حوله من مغالطات وأخطاء عن الحق جعلت منهجهم في الحياة في عمى وضلال .

ثالثاً : دعـــوة الناس إلى المنهج الصحيح ٬ وإيضاح مبادى. الأخلاق الرئيسية التي يحتضنها الهدى الإلهي والتي في السِّباعها نجاح الإنسان وسمادته .

كانت هذه المماني الأولية تحتوي على شذور موجزة تناسب مرحلة انطلاق الدعوة في لفتنها الرفيمة ، وفي معانيها السامية ، وفي حلاوتها المتناهية ، وفي تأثيرها البالغ وهي في أطلى درجات الذوق/الأدبي الذي كان يساير مستوى ذوق المحاطب لتنطبح هذه الشذور

موضوع القرآن وبحثه الرئيسي وهدفه :

والآن وقد عرف القارى. و أصل ، القرآن ، يكنه أن يفهم ما هو موضوع هــذا الكتاب ، وما هو مجثه الرئيسي ، وما هو هدفه المنشود :

فحوضوعه «الإنسان» : ما هو مدار نجاحه وسعادته وما هو مدار خسرانه وشقائه.

وبحثه الرئيسي: أن النظريات التي وضعها الإنسان عن نفسه وعن الحياة الدنيا وعن نظام الكون وعسن ذات الإله ، مدفوعا بدراسته السطحية وتقديراته الحيالية وخضوعه لسلطان الأهواء ، ثم المواقف التي اتخذها على أساس تلك النظريات ، فإنها كلها في حقيقتها باطلة ومهلكة للإنسان نفسه من ناحية المصدر ، وإنما الحق هو الذي عليه الله الإنسان حين جمل خليفة له في الأرض . وبموجب ذلك الحق ليس من منهج من المناهج يقوم على الصحة ويتوسئل إلى العاقبة الحسنة إلا المنهج الذي ذكرناه فيا سبق وسميناء : «المنهج الصحيح».

وهدفه : دعوة الإنسان إلى هذا المنهج الصحيح ؛ وتبيان لهدى الله الذي ضلُّ عنه الإنسان بعدم المبالاة ؛ أو شوّهه بدافع من غروره ومكابرته .

والذي يدرس القرآن واضماً هذه النقاط الثلاث الأساسية أمسام عينيه يقبين له بدون ما غيوض ، أن هذا الكتاب لم يحد عن موضوعه وبحثه الرئيسي وهدفه الملشود ، حتى ولا قيد شعرة ، وتجد مباحثه المتوعة تلتئم مع محته الرئيسي الثنام الدرر الملونية الصغيرة والكحيرة في حمط القلادة السندسي ، إنه يحدث عسن الساء كيف صنمت ، وصين الإنسان كيف تحلق أو عن الأمم الخالية وصين الإنسان كيف تحلق أعمل مختلف الأمم وساوكها وعقائدها . إنه يوضع الثمم الخالية والمسائل التي هي وراء الطبيعة . إنسه يتناول أموراً كثيرة غير ما ذكرنا ، لا ليدرس الإنسان علوم الطبيعة أو التاريخ أو القلسفة أو أي فن من الفنون أو أدب من الآداب ، بل لكي يزيل ما عليه الناس من خطأ وسوء فهم عن الحق ، ويقرّز في أذهانهم الحقيقة بل لكي يزيل ما عليه الناس من خطأ وسوء فهم عن الحق من مصير بئيس وعاقبة وخيمة ، ويدعوهم إلى المنهج الذي يلائم الحق وياخذهم إلى جسن الماب ، و فذا السبب نفسه همو ومن كل هذه الأمور إلا أفي أسلوب يتناسب مسمع هدفه ، وإلى حد يلزم له .

٤ – إن الله الذي أعطى الإنسان ذلك الإستقلال المحدود) مندخل بسفة كونه تمال خالقاً - في رد من ضل وغوى من الناس إلى المنهج الصحيح بالفهر واقسر ، كا أن المهم المهة التي منحها الله الإنسان ليعمل في الدنيا بحرية ، لم يكن ليناسبها أن يأخذه ويهلكه بمجرد شقت عصا طاعته واتباعه طريق البغي . ثم إن الله سبحانه وتعالى قد أوجب على نفسه منذ بده الخليقة أن يدبر الإنسان طرق هدايته مع إقرار استقلاله في قترة المهة التي أعطاه إياها ، وتحقيقاً لما أوجبه الله تعالى على نفسه بإرادته المطلقة ، اصطفى الله من النوع المبشري رجالا آمنوا به وابتفوا مرضاته ، واتخذهم معمولين له ، وأرحى إليهم علم الحق، وأن عليهم منهجاً صحيحاً للحياة ، وأمرهم بأن يدعوا الناس إلى الصراط المستقم الذي عدارا عنه .

ه - بعث هؤلاء الرسل إلى مختلف الأمم و مختلف الأقطار ، واستمرت سلسة بعثهم الذي آلفا من السنين ، وكانوا آلافا مؤلفة ، وكانوا على دين واحداً ، ينفس النهج الصحيح الذي علمه الله الإنسان منذ هبط إلى الأرض . وكانوا يتبعون هدياً واحداً ، أي نفس المبادى، الحالمة الله الإنسان في بدايسة الأمر . وكانوا الحالمة المذخلان والمدنية التي قرّرها الله تعالى الإنسان في بدايسة الأمر . وكانوا يوتهم نظتموهم وجعاوهم أمة واحدة ، تلبع أحكام ربّها وتعليم النهج الإلمي في الدنيا ، وتسمى لمنع الناس من خالفة هذا المنهج . وكان رأسل الله قاموا بتحقيق ما أرساوا بسع على وتسمى لمنع الناس من خالفة هذا المنهج . إن رأسل الله قاموا بتحقيق ما أرساوا بسع على أكل وجه ، إلا أن الذي حصل على مدار التاريخ هو أنه لم يلتفت العدد الكثير من الناس والضلال على مر الأيام وكر الليالي ؛ فنهم من ضل عن الحق كل الضلال، ومنهم من مسخ تعالى المثل وحرف الكلم عن مواضعه وكتب فيها بيده .

٣ - وأخبراً بَعَثَ الله محمداً على في أرض العرب بنفس المهمة التي بعث بهدا من سبق. من الأنبياء والرسل ، فكانت دعوته على الكافة الناس عبداً فيهم أتباع الأنبياء الذين خلوا من قبل. كانت مهمته على دعوة الناس كافة إلى المنهج الصحيح ، وتبليفهم هداية الله من جديد ، وجعل من آمنوا بهذه الدعوة أمة واحدة ، تقيم نظام حياتها على هدى من الله ثم تخرج لجداية الدنيا وإصلاحها ، وإن هذا القرآن هو كتاب الدعوة وصفر الهداية الذي أنزله الله تعالى على عمد على هدى وفور ، يهدى به من يشاء من عبده .

هذا العالم؛ فلا تكن في مملكتي هذه حر" اطليقا تركب رأسك ، ولا تكن عبدا لنيري ، فلا أحد غيري يستحق أن تطيمه وتعبده وتخضع أمامه ، وإن الحياة الدنيا التي أعبليت فيها فوجا من الإستقلال إنما هي فائرة امتحان ترجع إلى بعد انتهائها فأفحص ما عملت فيها، وأفصل في أمر كن نجيسح ومن رسب . وأصح منهج تختاره في هذه الدنيا : أن تتخذي بأن الدنيا دار للامتحان ، وأن غرضك الحقيقي هو أن تنجح في الآخرة ، وعليك أرب تما أنزل من هدى ، وأنك تبعير وأنت تشهر تما أنزل من هدى ، وأن تعبير وأنت تشهر تما أن الدنيا دار للامتحان ، وأن غرضك الحقيقي هو أن تنجح في الآخرة ، وعليك أرب وأنت حر في أن تتبعه و فائن تتمتع في الدنيا فحسب بالأمن والاطمئنان ، بمل سأنعم عليك حسين ترجع إلى" بدار اسمها و الجنة ، تجيد فيها نعيما مقيما وراحة أبدية ، عليك حسين ترجع إلى " بدار اسمها و الجنة ، تجيد فيها نعيما مقيما وراحة أبدية ، ولا يسلك عي أن تسلكه سوئل نقرق في الدنيا فحسب ، وبال القساد والقلق والدمار ، بمل حينا تعبر هذا المالم إلى عالم الآخرة سيكون مصيرك إلى هاوية النار، فيها عذاب خالد وألم دائم وغم " أبدى .

٣ - أسكن الله مالك الكون النوع البشري في الأرهن بعد أن نبت فيقرارة نفسه الماني السابقة ؟ كا أنه جل شأنه آتى الإنسان الأولوزوجه - آدم وحواء عليها السلام - هدى من عنده ليتماه ؟ هما وذريتها في الأرض . ولم يخلق الإنسان الأول في حالة الجهل والظلام ؟ بل إن الله سبحانه وتعالى خلق آدم وحواء لمبدآ حياتها في الأرض على حالة من النور والعلم . فكان الإنسان الأول يعرف ما هو الحق ؟ ويعلم ما ينبغي له علمه من قانون للحماة ؛ وكان منهجه في الحياة طاعة الله - أي الإسلام - ؟ ووصى بدوره ذريته بأن لا يطمعوا إلا الله ولا يوقوا إلا وهم مسلمون . إلا أن الإنسان قد حاد عن المنهج الصحيح - أي اللين القيم - في القرون المتعاقبة رويداً رويداً ؟ واتسبع السبل المعوجة والمناهج ما المنجوفة المتضاربة ؟ وضل عن الطريق السوي بعدم المالاة به مرة وجسخه بمحود ومكابرة مرى * فاشرك بالله في ذاته وصفاته ذواتاً عديدة من الساء والأرض ؟ وهمية ومادية بشرية ؟ وخلط أنواعاً من الأوهام وضروباً من النظريات وألواناً من الفلسفات بشرية عنو بسمرية ، وخلط أنواعاً من الأوهام وضروباً من النظريات وألواناً من الفلسفات ولا حصر ؟ ونبذ وراء ظهره مسا قرش ه الله من مادى ء عادلة للأخلاق والمدنية - أو مسخها ؟ ثم وضع كا أوحى له هواه وعصيسته نظماً ومناهج للحياة ملأت أرض الله ظلماً وضاداً وحوراً وشقاه .

ومثار حيرته ليس إلا أنه لم يتملم ما لدراسة القرآن وقهمه من أصول وقواعد ولأنه بدأ يطالع الغرآن ظنا منه أنب يطالع « كتاباً » موضوعه « الدين » ويكون في تصورُه « للكتاب » و « للدن » على مسا يكون في أذهسان عامة الناس من تصورُه الذهني يجسد و « للكتاب » ، بيد أنه حين يواجه في هذا الكتاب ما يختلف عن تصورُه الذهني يجسد لا تأنس إليه ؛ وبظل تبته بين دفق الكتاب لمجزه عن معرفة نقطة الانطلاتي في بحشه ، ويكون مئه في ذلك كتل الذيل الذه بب الذي يهم على وجهه في هروب مدينة كبيرة ، ويكون مئه في ذلك كتل الذيل الذه بب الذي يهم على وجهه في هروب مدينة كبيرة ، ويمكن أن يتفادى هذا الضياع لو أخبر مفدّها بأن الكتاب الذي يريد دراسته هو نسيج وحده في عالم التأليف . وتم و تأليفه » على نمط لم يسمم عليه تأليف الكتب الأخرى ، كما أنه فذ ويد باعتبار موضوعه وبحثه وترتيبه .

فالقالب المام للكتاب كما تتصوره نتيجة دراستك للكتب والمؤلسّفات حسق اليوم لا يستغك في تقهّم هذا الكتاب أبداً ؛ بل يثير الحواجز دون طريقك ؛ وإذا أحببت أن تقهمه ؛ عليك أن "تبعد عن ذهنك كل" ما أثبت فيه من تصورات وقياسات ، وأن تدرك ما لهذا الكتاب من خصائص بديعة ومزايا رائعة

أمسل القرآن :

يجب على قارى، القرآن أن يعرف قبل كل شيء د أصل ، القرآن ، سواء آمن بـــه أو لم يؤمن به ، الأنه ما دام بريد فهم هذا الكتاب فلابد له أن يقبل ابتداء أصله كا ورد وكا بيئته الذي أنزل علمه هذا الكتاب وهو رسول الله عمد ﷺ.

وبكن أن يتضح أصل القرآن في النقاط الآثية :

١- إن الله سبحانه وتعالى خالق هذا الكون ومالكه وحاكمه ، خلق الإنسان في جزء يسمى بـ ( الكوكب الأرضي ع من أجزاء مملكته التي لا نهاية لهسا ، وأودعه قوى المسالم والنفكير والإدراك ، وألهمه تمييز الحبيث من الطيب ، وأعطاه حربة في الإرادة والاختيار ، ومنحه سلطة للتصرف في الأمور كما يشاء ، وخواله نوعاً من الإستقلال ( Autonomy ) واستخلفه في الأرض .

 ٢ - وحينا عبد الله تعالى إلى الإنسان بهذا المنصب الخطير ، أثبت في قرارة نفسه هذه المانى : إنى أنا ربتك ورب هذا العالم ، وإلهك وإله هذا العالم ، وحاكمك وحماكم المتوخاة والبحث الرئيسي فيسم ، وعلى اطلاع بطرائق أساوبه ، وعلى خبرة بمصطلحات لفته وتمطه الحاص في التمبير وأن لا يفيب عن نظره الأوضاع والملابسات التي تكن وراء ألفاظه ونصوصه .

إن عامة الكتب التي ندرسها نجد فيهما الجوانب التي أشرت إليها بكل سهولة ، ولذلك لا نلاقي صعوبة في استكناه أسرارها وباوغ مغزاها ، ولكنا لا نعثر عليها في القرآن بالشكل الذي تعوقاته في غيره من الكتب ، ولذلك إذا بدأ يدرسه أحد منا لعامة الكتب قلن يستطيع التمرف في موضوعه وغايته وبحثه الرئيسي ، وسيسنفرب أسلوب بيانه وطراز تعبسيره ، ويعزب عن نظره الملابسات الكامنة وراه ألذاظه في معظم المواصسير .

ونتيجة لذلك فإنه يحرم من التوصل إلى روح كلام الله ، ورغم استفادته قالمسلا أو كثيراً من لآق، الحكم القرآنية المشرقة المتناثرة ، وبالتالي يضطر إلى الإكتفاء بجفنة من حكم مبعثرة ، وإلى اقتطاف قبضة من زهور متناثرة بدلاً من أن يلم بعلم الكتاب وبعاول فيه ياعه ، بل إن بعض الناس الذين يقمون في شبهات وأخطاء بعد دراسة القرآن ، بعزى سبب ضلالهم إلى أنهم قرأوا القرآن دون سابق إلمسام بالقواعد اللازمة لقهمه فصادفوا المباحث المتنافة المتنافقة في صفحاته ، ولم يظهر لهم مفزى كثير من آياته ، ورأوا العديد من الآيات كأنها جواهر تتلالاً بنور من الحكة الرائية ، ولكنها فيا يبدو غسير المعجمة مع سياق العبارة السابقة واللاحقة . وكثيراً ما قذفهم جهلهم بأساليب القرآن. التعبيرية ، وأغاطه البيانية إلى معان غير مقصودة ، كا وقعوا في ضروب من سوء الفهم لكير من الآيات لأنهم ما عرفوا أسباب نزو لها .

القرآن من أي أنواع الكتب؟ وما هي كيفية نزوله؟ وما هو سر ترتيبه ؟ وما هو المؤضوع الذي يدور حوله كل نقاشه ؟ وما هي الغاية التي يتوخّاها من بحته ؟ ومسا هو المبعث الرئيسي الذي يحوم حوله جميع مسا فيه من مباحث منوعة ومواضيم مختلفة ؟ وأي نون من الاستدلال وأي غط من البيان اختاره التميير عما يهدف إليه .

هذه وأمثالها من الأسئة المهممة إذا وقف الإنسان على الردود عليها في مطلع الأمر ، فإنه يستطيع أن يتفادى كثيراً من المخاطر والمزالق وهو بصدد دراسة القرآن ؛ كما تتوسع في وجهه سُبل فهمه وتدبئره. ومما لا جلاف فيه أن الذي يوبد في القرآن اللارتيب التأليفي المتداول ثم يتخبِّط في صفحاته خبط عشواء إذا لم يبلغ مسا يوبد ، فإن مبعث تخبُّطه أما تقسم المواضيع والمباحث إلى أبراب وفصول فسلا عين له ولا أثر ، وإذا توقش فيه التاريخ لم يناقش على الأساوب السائد لكتابة التاريخ . وإذا سيقت البحوث حسول الفلسفة وما يتصل بأمور ما وراء الطبيعة لم تسبق في مصطلحات تختص ببحوث الفلسفة والمنطقة . وإذا ذكر الإنسان وما في العالم من موجودات لم يذكر على منهج العلوم الطبيعية . وإذا تطرق الموضوع إلى شؤون المدنية أو السياسة أو الإقتصاد أو الإجتاع لم يسلك مسالك علم الإجتاع في البحث والتمحيص . وإذا أتى على ذكر من الأحكام القانونية وأصول التشريع لم يأت بصياغة يعتادها أصحاب التشريع وعلماء التقنين في هسندا المجال . وإذا عرض تعاليمه في الأخلاق واستقامة الساوك رأيته يختار لها النعط الذي يغاير سائر ما "كتيب"

إن الدارس إذا وجد هـــذا وأمثاله على غير ما ألفه من أساليب الكتابة وأنماط البيان ، وعكس ما تمورُده من مناهج التمبير تأخذه الدهشة ويبدأ يستشمر أن هــــذا الكتاب ينقصه الترتيب ويموزه النفسيق ، ويشكس من أوله إلى آخره مجموعة من شدور متنافرة وقطع معشرة مجمعت في عبارات مقـــلمة وحلقات متاسكة .

أمـــا الدارس الذي لم يؤمن بهذا الكتاب ، ولا يريد من دراسته إلا إثارة الشبهات ، فهو يجد في فقدان النرتيب والتنسيق متسماً لإثارة الإعتراضات المنوعة حول الكتماب . وأما المؤمن به والحاضم له فتتجاذبه المواقف والأطوار .

وثالثة يأتي بنتائج غريبة لحماولته إيجــــاد وجوء للتناسق ؛ وذلك باجتهاد شخصي متكلف

ورابعة يستسلم لفكرة و شدور مثنائرة، فتصبح كل آية من آياته معزولة عن السياق العام ، وتمود مسهر حا لايشكار المعانى التي تخالف ما بريده العزيز الحكيم .

أساوب الوحي وأساوب البشر في الكتابة ،

إن الكتب التي ندرسها عامة نجسد أن جميع ما فيها من معاومات وأفكار ودلائل يدور حول موضوع بعينه ، بأساوب تأليفي وبصورة منسجعة ، ولأجسل ذلك فالمدارس المدي ليس له عهد بالقرآن ) إذا أراد أن يدرسه أول مرة في حياته فإغا يتناوله وهو على ظن أنه باعتباره و كتابا ، سيكون على غرار عامة الكتب التي تعور قراءتها ، قد حد موضوعه المنشود ، ثم قسم هذا الموضوع إلى أبواب وفصول . وكذلك يظن هذا الكتاب قد تناول كل شعبة من شعب الحياة الإنسانية على وجه الإستقلال بالبحث والعرض ليسرد ما يتعلق بها من أحكام وتعالم بترتيب متسلسل . إلا أن الدارس إذا بدأ يتصفح هسنذا الكتاب يفاجأ بمكس ما كان يتوقعه ، فيجد أسلوباً لم يألفه من قبل ، إذ أنسه برى فيه المسائل المقائدية والتعالم الحلقية ، والأحكام الشرعية ، والدعوة والنصيحة ، والمسبرة والنقب المتازيخية ، والإشارات إلى آيات الله في الكون . كل ذلك يتكرر بيانه بين حين وحين ، ويبدأ ويعاد بوجوه متباينة وأساليب منوعة ، كا أنه بينا يطرق موضوعاً فإذا بسه يولي وجهه شطر موضوع ثان وثالث ، بل يكون الأمر أغرب من ذلك ، حين يبتدىء موضوعاً ثم يتخاله موضوع تان وثالث ، بل يكون الأمر أغرب من ذلك ، حين يبتدىء موضوعاً ثم يتخاله موضوع تخر بعت عندة ، ورقيد أخرى .
